HISTORY

PORTUGAL,

From the first Ages of the World, to the late great REVOLUTION, under King JOHN IV. in the Year MDCXL.

Written in Spanish,

By Emanuel de Faria y Sousa, Knight of the Order of CHRIST.

Translated, and Continued down to this present Year, 1698.

By Capt. JOHN STEVENS.

LONDÖN,

Printed for W. Rogers and Abel Roper, in Fleetfreet; J. Harris and J. Nicholfon, in LittleBritain; T. Newborough, in St. Paul's ChurchYard; and T. Cockerill, in Pater-Noster-Row, MDCXCVIII.

John Wapall bit of Down How to

RICHARD MINSHULL,

BOURTON,

In the COUNTY of

BUCKS, Esq:

SIR,

Midst that great Variety of Reading, wherewith Learned Men have furnished the World, to the end that each Person may be provided of a Subject suitable to his Genius, there s none so universally pleasing, or, indeed, more more profitable than History. It is a general fort of Learning, fitted for all Capacities; the Meanest are not below, nor the Greatest above it, because it contains nothing so abstruse, that may not be easily comprehended; nor any thing fo trivial, that may not be worth observing. All Arts and Sciences are purchased by much Study and Labour; and, even fo. they are not attained in any Perfection. but by those whom Nature has particularly moulded to receive fuch an Impresfion. History alone delights at once, and instructs; it informs without perplexing the Understanding; it improves, without burthening the Memory; it rectifies, without thwarting the Will; and, in short, it leads away our Affections, without mifinferiour inferiour World is but a perpetual Concarenation of the self-same Revolutions, however surprizingly disguized in the Dress and Methods. Now, to know what paffed fince the Creation, and thence judiciously to inferr what is likely to ensue till the final Confummation; and this not only in one City or Kingdom, but throughout the vast Circumference of the Universe, is a fort of Knowledge that appears to be fomewhat more than Humane; or rather, not far removed from Divine. It is a Knowledge fo important, that God himself did not disdain, for our Benefit. to fill up the greatest part of his Sacred Volume with History, whereof he himself was the Compiler. God himself it was that, through the Mouths of the Prophets, guiding them. The Advantages we reap transmitted down to us the History of the by it are inestimable, in regard we re- Creation, and Restauration of Mankind. ceive a perfect Knowledge of what was the Genealogy of the first Patriarchs, the before us; and are thereby enabled to Acts of the Children of Israel, the Lives make a Judgment of what will be after of their Judges and Kings, and all that is us: For, as the Wise Man, so many Ages Historical in Holy Writ. Nay, to come fince, said, There was nothing new under nearer; What are the Four Gospels, and the Sun; so may we believe there neither the Acts of the Apostles, but the History is in our Times, nor will be in those to of our Blessed Saviour, and those his come: For the Lives and Actions of glorious Followers. Thus the Prophets Men are only a continued Repetition of and Evangelists seem to authorize and those that preceded them; because all this recommend History, they themselves being ing Sacred Historians. Nor is it only on this Religious Foundation, that its Credit is supported: To omit many things that might be urged to testifie its great Value, let us only consider whence it is that we have the Knowledge of our Original, and what it is that has eternized the Memory of Great and Worthy Perfons; and we shall find, it is all due to History alone. To this also must those who now live, and are ambitious of perpetuating their Memory, owe the Transmitting of their Names and Merits to Posterity. To this Kings and Princes are beholding, for the rare Examples it furnishes them with of their Illustrious Predecessors; thereby stirring up their Minds to imitate their Heroick Actions, and become Partakers of their lasting Praises. To this, States-men are obliged, for the politick Presidents it affords them to govern themselves by in all extraordinary Exigencies of State. To this, all accomplished Persons stand indebted for the Ornament of their Discourse, and for the perfecting them in the true Knowledge of the World. And, to conclude, From this, the Generality of Mankind is furnished with Variety of Instances exciting to Vertue, and deterring from Vice. But, though ving a Subject, let this suffice, since it is not to inform, but to obtain a favourable Acceptance, that so much has been said.

The Epistle Dedecatory.

The Epistle Dedicatory.

If then, Sir, the Dignity and Value of History be such as I have represented, well may it merit an Honourable Patronage from Persons of Worth. Empty Titles are not the Worth I mean; those too often are bestowed upon the vilest of Men, and even for submitting to the most infamous of Crimes. That is true Worth, which, being derived from Honourable Ancestors, though without the Addition of gaudy Epithets, is preserved unblemished, and without Stain. To ascend to those the World calls Honours, such as Lordships, Earldoms and Dukedoms, by indirect, scandalous and unjust Means, is rather to descend: To embrace them, offered under those Circumstances, is the Act of an abject, rather than a noble Spirit; and to aim at, and aspire to them through those Means, rather betokens a sordid Pride, than a generous Ambition. Patrons are neither capable of Receiving or Communicating Honour; their Names, in History, are branded with Infamy, not to be covered by all the Sycophant Addresses and Flatteries of a Dedication: And even the Work which feeks Shelter under them, fucks in the Infection of their poysonous Shadow. Malice may. perhaps, endeavour fo to pervert my Words, as if they implied a Reflection upon Great and Honourable Perfons; but it is plain, only Malice can fo mif-interpret my Meaning, as to force it to fuch an invidious Sense. Those who are truly Noble, cannot suffer in the Character of fuch as only mimick their Grandeur; fected, whose Consciences shall accuse and Virulency of our Times bear with them of having aspired to a Counter: feit Nobility, through mean and fordid What you are, and what you merit, nei-Practices.

I most abhor to prefix to my Labours; to recommend your Memory to Postefrom them I fly to your Protection, as rity. to one whom Envy it felf cannot asperse with Want of real Honour, or with af- All that remains, Sir, is, to beg a fafecting that which is not such. If Illu-vourable Acceptance of the Tender I strious Birth and Parentage be Honour, make. It is the entire History of a Kingyours is too well known, to be capable dom, from its first Plantation, to this of receiving any Addition by any thing present Time. The Original was dedicamy Pen can express in its behalf. If a led to a King: The Translation has not,

The Epistle Dedicatory.

plentiful Fortune be the Support and Ori nament of Honour, you have received it from your Ancestors, by a Legal Inheria tance; when others, to raise their Families, found Estates upon Extortion, Fraud and Oppression. But, above all, If Generous Actions and Vertuous Principles be true Honour, none that knows you, is ignorant, how great a Share you possess. Nor would I pass by this so material a Point, without enlarging upon it, but that it will not fuit with your Modesty, to hear your own, though just, and they alone will find themselves af- Commendations: Not will the Malice the Mention of folid and real Praises. ther is, nor will be unknown; it may prove the Subject of an abler Pen, when These, Sir, are the Men, whose Names those who know, shall see a fit Time plentiful hope, so much degenerated, but it may be worthy of you. If you think it fo, I have gained my Point; and shall reap a singular Satisfaction, if it gives you any. I am,

SIR.

Tour most Obedient,

Humble Servant.

John Caball

THE

PREFACE

Ortugal, though a Kingdom of but a small Extent, and which for these latter Tears, has not furnished us with any great subject of History; yet in past Ages, it did so largely extend its Dominions, and raised such admiration throughout Europe, by its wonderful Discoveries and stupendious Conquests, that it is much to be admired, all its past Glories bould be Buried under its present obscurity. Nor is it less to be wondred at, that England, which so lately received from thence a Queen, JOHN STEVENS yet living, should know so little either of her Country, or Progenitors: This, I say, in regard, that till now there has not appeared abroad in the English Tongue any History of that once so samous Kingdom, unless we will reckon as such ome small fragments which at several times rave crept into the World, and which seem raber to stir up our curiosity to know, who those People were, than any ways to satisfy our desire of Knowledge. This fault I conceive must be chiefly imputed to the Portuguese themselves, whose care it ought to have been to deliver to Posterity and Foreigners their own honourable Actions, so methodized, that they might delight in seeing them together reduced into the form of a compleat History. But they, though furnishing so much matter for Authors to employ their Pens, were yet supinely negligent in duly recording and publishing of it. It is true, they had many Writers, who snatched their Actions from utter oblivion, by leaving that piece-meal which ought to have been reduced into one Work; but this was a labour most Men were averse to, as believing it above their strength, because those Writings were partly so voluminous, that it required almost a Man's Age to reduce them to a less compass, and partly so scattered abroad in sundry parts of the Kingdom, that they despaired of ever being able to bring them together.

Emanuel de Faria y Sousa, our Author, was the first that I can find ever undertook to digest and publish to the World, the compleat History of his Country, and give a perfect account of the Actions of his Countrymen in all parts of the World. He not only undertook, but performed it with general applause, not only of the Portuguese who are the subject of his great Enterprize, but even of the Spaniards, in whose Language he Wrote. This his labour was not finished till the Tear 1640. and appeared not in publick till many Tears after. He has observed a strict method of History, without running out into endless Digressions, which only serve to swell Volumes, and are no way material to the subject in hande Being a Portuguese, I cannot affirm him to be altogether impartial, for there is no Man whom the love of his Native Country does not a little sway, yet this can be no exception against him, because, if such, all History would be lyable to the same censure; and besides he was a Man that proposed to himself no interest in flattering the great ones, living always a private retired life, which will plainly appear in that he spares not often to expose the Vices and Enormities of notable Persons for the Sake of their Posterity, and no where extols any, though never so mighty for the hope of pleasing their descendants. But to be short, let the History speak for it self, for my commendation, as being a party too much concerned in it, cannot add much to its Reputation, and yet this I must say, that I cannot at all doubt of its meeting applause, because baving run through the Kingdoms of Spain and Portugal, with a general esteem in its original Language, I cannot be persivaded that the Translation can have so much detracted from its first value, as to render it unacceptable to the judicious lovers of this fort of Learning.

The Preface.

Thus much may suffice as to the History in General, but to descend to particulars, The (a 3) first first Book contains all that hapned in Portugal, from the time it was first peopled by Tubal, the Grandson of Noah, till the time of the famous Viriatus. The second begins with Viriatus, and ends at the Birth of Saviour. The third reaches from the Birth of our Saviour till the Conquest of Spain by the Moors: The fourth from the Moorish Conquest, till the erecting of Portugal into a particular Kingdom, under its first King, Alonso the First, or rather his Father Count Henry. The fifth from the said Count Henry, till King Sancho the second, The fixth from him till King Ferdinand inclufive. The seventh from King John the First, to King John the Second. The eighth from King Emanuel, till Henry the King and Cardinal, and the Governours left by him at his Death. The ninth Book has the lives of the three Philips Kings of Spain and Portugal, till the Tear 1640, where the Author concludes, and the Supplement begins.

Having given this short account of the main History, and named the Supplement, I must not unit to say somewhat in relation to it. Emanual de Faria having concluded, as has been said, just at the Tear 1640, there ensued that very Tear the great Revolution, in which the Portuguese cast off the Dominion of the Spaniards, and set up a King of their own. This enighty work was in a manner done in a day, all places submitting to the new King, and expelling the Spaniards with such success as is caree credible.

The Preface.

credible, but that the thing is still fresh in the memory of many persons living. However. though the Portuguese in so short a time had afferted their Liberty, and cast off the Foreign Toak; yet the consequences of so great an Enterprise, were a continual War for the space of almost Twenty Eight Tears. Now this War is the principal subject of the Supplement, and indeed a matter well worthy to be known, as a most material Fransaction of this Age. Being a thing so remarkable and near our times. I have been very particular in it, and therefore given an exact account of the Transactions of every Tear apart. I have not been sparing of any labour in perusing such Authors as have writ of it, and extracting from them as much as my intended Brevity would permit, and tho' I dehaned to have been much shorter, the variety of accidents is such, that it has obliged me to run it out to a much greater bulk than at. trst I defigned. Neither have I wanted information in many particulars touched in this Supplement, from Persons who were present and Eyewitnesses, to the Actions therein related. Nay one of my Authors, viz. the Count de Ericeyra, who has handled this subject very largely, was not only a Commander in the Army, but also a Councellor of State, and therefore a most sit Man to give an account as well of the Warlike Exploits in the Field, as of the private Transactions at Court. But now to come to the lift part of all, which I call the Conclusion of the History, it is so distinguished from the rest of (a 4)

the Supplement, in regard that therein we look back into several Tears before treated of. This, as is there said, was so ordered to avoid interrupting the series of the War, with the relation of Factions and Animosties at Court. And the Councels and Practises which tended to that extraordinary change, which was made in the Government, in the imprisoning and confining a King for many Tears, being matters meriting a special observation, I thought it better to lay the whole series of them together, so that they may appear at one view, than to interrupt them with other Narrations.

· Monarchies as all other wordly things have their rise and fall, and consequently those which have once been glorious, ought to merit our ea Steem for what they were, no less than these which are now great, are admired for what they are. It is no disgrace to a famous General; that he is grown old and worn out with labours nor ought it to lessen our esteem for a Kingdom, because we see it sunk under the too great Burthen of its undertakings. This has hapned to Portugal, which being of its self but a small Spot of Ground, yet adventured, and that with fuccess, to spread its Conquests into the four parts of the World, to build Cities and Forts among People before unknown to the Europeans, to traffick among Rude and Barbarous Nations, to engage Multitudes, not of naked Indians, but such as had the use of all sorts of Fire-arms, to Preach the Gospel to inhuman Insidels, who had never heard the sacred Name of Christ, and in fine, to People the vast Ocean, if I may for call it, with their Fleets, to pierce through dangers of unknown Seas, and to discover to us the course of the Sun, by tracing his Carrier round this Terrestrial Globe. These are the mighty Actions, which gained Portugal that renown it stood possessed of, and these very exploits have helped to fink it into that obscurity, which now in a manner hides it from us. The greatness of the attempts gained them renown, but their own and their Neighbours boundless avarice proved the bane of all their Glories. Their own, because being but so small a People, they yet set no limits to their desires, but rather stretched forth their greedy hands to catch at all the Riches of the East, and turn them to their peculiar use, without confidering how much easier it has always been found to acquire much, than to preserve what is so unreafonably acquired. It was their Neighbours and varice, as I said, that halfned their ruin, because there was scarce a nation of any consideration in Europe, which did not strive to pluck a. Feather from them, and to gain footing, where fuch mighty prospect of profit appeared; and above all, the Dutch have been the Cormorants that have devoured their Lands, their Metals, and their Spice. Such was the downfall of the Portuguese Nation, raised by their Ambition and Valour to the highest pitch of Honour, and cast down by the Covetousness and Envy of their Neighbours. Nor has the late War, which im volved

The Preface.

volved the greatest part of Europe, contributed less to the obscuring of their Name, for all Mankind being wholly taken up with the thoughts of those that were active, had not leasure to cast an Eye upon a People, that lay happily obscured under the Bleffed cloud of Peace. Tet tho the calm they have of late enjoyed, may have put them by the Honour of any fresh martial Atchievments, an Honour it is their greatest felicity to want; nevertheless their more glorious former Exploits are not worthy to be buried in Oblivion. The Empires of the Assyrians, Persians, Greeks and Romans, have long since perished, and still we read their Actions with Delight and Admiration. The Kingdoms of the Parthians, the Goths, the Huns, and other barbarous Nations, are now no more, and still the remembrance of their Valour, their Victories, and their success is the subject of many Volumes. Portugal still stands an independent Monarchy, and though but the skeleton of what it was, still its former Glories merit to be Recorded, either for what that Kingdom then was, or for what it may possibly be an gain.

But it is high time I look about for fear of transgressing in too long a Preface. Hitherto something has been said concerning the Author, concerning his Works, and concerning the Kingdom he treats of. What now remains is to remove some objections which may be raised by such as would have all Histories as infallible as the Holy Scripture, both as to Time and Actions: This is what all Men may wish, but none ever yet could attain to. He that would read no History, in which there is a fault, may resolve to spare his Eyes, or apply them to some other study. The first thing I find in this Book, which may be carped at, is the account of the first planting this Kingdom, and the Succeeding race of Kings, till the coming in of the Carthaginians. Nothing more can be said in defence hereof, but that all Antiquity at such a distance is obscure, every Nation has laboured to deduce it self from the nearest time to the Flood it could; and what is most, even the Ancient Josephus writes, that Jobel or Tubal, the Grandson of Noah, came into Spain, and other Greek and Latin Authors make mention of Spanish Kings here named; therefore in such a mist of Antiquity, it may be reckoned a great Happiness, that such lights as these can be found to lead us to any part of it that we may rely upon. The next objection will be against many passages of somewhat a latter date; as for example, the strange life of Abidis, the coming of Nebuchadnezer into Spain, and several other things very incredible to those who have not heard of them before. The answer is, That these things, though strange to us are not at all impossible, that they are left to us upon credit of very Authentick Authors, and that if in them there be any thing fabulous, yet that must not blast the Reputation of this History, no more than the English Chronicle ought to be wholly

The Preface.

The Preface. wholly condemned for the far fetcht History of Brutus and his Trojans, or Livy for his Poetical Noursery of Romulus and Remus by a Wolf. What follows till the Birth of our Saviour, and some time after, will not be liable to much censure, by reason there is little in it. but what has been delivered by Roman Writers, who have for the most part passed current in the World; or, if any of them have not. it is no way the Business of this work to vindicate them. After the first Preaching of the Gospel. we shall here and there meet with some account of Miracles wrought, which perhaps, may not sute with all Palates. Most Christians do allow, that the first spreading of Christianity, was wrought with the help of stupendious Wonders, God so ordaining it for the convincing of the hardned Painyms, who being carnally Educated, could never be brought to comprehend the Sacred Doctrine of Christ, unless they had been convinced by the working of some supernatural Operations. Most Christians, I Jay, do allow of this at least in the Infancy of Christianity, and these I believe will not much reflect upon the credit of such as they shall here meet withal; and for those pretended Christians, who cry down all that is not suitable to their own Enthufiastick Notions, it is not material whether they give credit to these things or not, since many of them have had the prophane Impudence with sacrile-gious Tongues and Pens, to endeavour to abolish the use of the Lord's Prayer and Creed; and it is no discredit for a Christian Author to be

The Preface.

disesteemed by those who made so little account of Christ himself, and his Apostles. However. I do not urge this to oblige the believing of all such miraculous Relations, as shall occur in this History; it will appear, I am not over-fond of them my self. Doubtless in all parts of the World, God permitted Miracles to be wrought for his own Glory, and for the Salvation of Souls, but whether the same, or in the same manner, as they are here related, is left to every one to believe or dis-believe at his pleasure. To proceed, there follows for some hundreds of years, after the Redemption of Man, a most obscure and uncertain account of what hapned not only in Portugal, but throughout all Spain. From the total Conquest made by Augustus, till the coming of the Barbarous Goths, Suevians, Vandals, Alans, and the rest, there was for the most part a continual Peace throughout Spain, which being, during that time, a Province subject to the Empire, either yielded no matter worth the Writing, or else wanted Writers to transmit it to Posteri-: ty. The barbarous Nations above mentioned, were so far from the thoughts of recording their own Acts, that their greatest care was to root out and destroy all Learning and Civility; for which reason, their History is transmitted to us so interrupted and imperfect, that scarce any Connection can be found in it. But when these Savage People by the receiving of Chri-Stianity had been somewhat Civilized, and it might have been hoped the Clouds of ignorance would

would have been dispersed, then their griev. ous Sins called upon them a heavy Judgment from Africk, which was an inundation of Moors, who in the space of eight Months, overran all Spain, destroying not only Books, but all Monuments of Antiquity that were then remaining, and driving the miserable Christians into Dens and Caves upon the Mountains; whence afterwards issuing out, they had so much continual employment for the Sword, that none had time to perpetuate with the Pen, what the Sword performed. Hence followed such a profound ignorance in this Kingdom of Portugal, the perpetual Wars taking away all thoughts of Learning, that for many Tears after it had Kings of its own, yet it wanted Writers to perpetuate their Memory.

These are in short the defects of this Hissory, if they may be termed such, since as we have said before, there is none perfect in the World, and those I think are sufficiently answered to satisfy such reasonable persons as will not expect impossibilities. Of the Supplement it will be needless to add more than has been already said, unless it be a word touching the conclusion of it, and in relation to the account there given, of the hard usage of the unfortunate King Alphonso. Tet because I think, as much has been said there, as is requisite to justify what I have Written, I will not tire the Reader's patience, only once for all, assure him.

The Preface.

him, that nothing has been there Writ by me for Favour or Affection, fince I may rather expect to be condemned than rewarded for any thing that seems to vindicate that unhapy Prince. I must confess, I could not without Concern, read a Book published here in the Tear 1677. and Entituled, The Portugal History: Or, a Relation of the Troubles that hapned in the Court of Portugal in the Years 1667. and 1668. For in that Treatife. I find King Alphonso treated in so cruel a manner, that it would afflict the hardest Fieart that has any remorse or consideration for the Majesty of Kings. It was not the imprisoning and dethroning of that poor Prince, which was the hardest part of his Missortunes: this Book I mentioned, and others like it, have yet gone farther, by blasting his Memory to posterity, and representing of him as a Monster, rather than a Man. These enormities I have laboured the best I could, to rectify by giving the truest Character of that Prince I could, and the most impartial account of his Misfortunes. In this part I have made use of other impartial Authors, and also of authentick informations, from such persons as knew that King, and were Witnesses to the whole contrivance of his Deposition and Imprisonment.

Thus much may suffice to inform, not to prepossess the Reader. All Books that appear in publick are exposed to Censure, and sew or none escape it, even the best are not exempted, and therefore I cannot hope this should. But let it take its Chance, there are sundry sorts of tasts among Men, what one likes, another loaths; and even so it falls out in Books, some Men extoll, and others cry them down; this cannot be so unfortunate, as not to please some body. Those who like it, will have their reward in pleasing themselves, and such as are disgusted with it, will have no recompence for their Dissatisfaction.

THE

THE HISTORY OF PORTUGAL

The First BOOK.

CHAP. I.

Of the Dispersion of the People after the Deluge: The Coming of Tubal into Spain: His Life; Death and Burial. The Succession of Iberus, Jubalda, Brigus, Tagus, Gerion, and his Sons.

Fter the World had suffered the just Punish-Noah's ment of its Guilt in the Universal Deluge, the Wrath of Heaven being appealed, and the Elements restored to their first Harmony, the Ark that for the space of a Year had preserved in its Bo less the Hopes of the Propagation of Human Kind on the vast Ocean of the over-slowed Earth, at length server on the top of the samous Mount Ararat, in Armenia Noah coming out, offered Sacrifice to GOD, to incline him to bestow new Bounties and Mercies upon him. His ingreceived a Promise, he descended from that unto the Heighth, to a Plain called Sennaar, at that time to be the same and the sense of the sense of none escape it, even the best are not exempted, and therefore I cannot hope this should. But let it take its Chance, there are sundry sorts of tasts among Men, what one likes, another loaths; and even so it falls out in Books, some Men extoll, and others cry them down; this cannot be so unsertunate, as not to please some body. Those who like it, will have their reward in pleasing themselves, and such as are disgusted with it, will have no recompence for their Dissatisfaction.

THE

THE HISTORY OF PORTUGAL

The First BOOK.

CHAP. I.

Of the Dispersion of the People after the Deluge: The Coming of Tubal into Spain: His Life; Death and Burial. The Succession of Iberus, Jubalda, Brigus, Tagus, Gerion, and his Sons.

Fter the World had suffered the just Punish-Noah's ment of its Guilt in the Universal Deluge, the Blood. Wrath of Heaven being appeased, and the Elements restored to their first Harmony, the Ark that for the space of a Year had preserved in its Bo els the Hopes of the Propagation of Human Kind orne vast Ocean of the over-slowed Earth, at length server on the top of the samous Mount Ararat, in Armenia Noah coming out, offered Sacrifice to GOD, to inclie him to bestow new Bounties and Mercies upon him. Hoing received a Promise, he descended from that unvolume the samous Mount Ararat, at that time Beautiful Sennaar, at that time Elements and Mercies upon him.

The History of PORTUGAL.

covered with Carcases; an horrid Scene of Humane Vanity. Those few Restorers of Mankind, and small Remnant of that wonderful Desolation, cleansed the Place, and laid the Foundation of the first City in the World, after its Destruction. That it was called Saga Albina (as the Rabbies will have it, whom some learned Authors follow) is very uncertain, as are all other Things depending on Humane Faith, which is very fallible, though depending on the Credit of that very Age; much more, when delivered fo long after. The Infallible, as being Divine, Historian clears this Doubt, when he calls it Babel; for this Name belonged to the City before the Erecting of the Tower, which was no more than a part of the other. It is no less uncertain that Araxa, a Daughter of Noah, (according to the same Authors) remained as Sovereign of that City; when the Inhabitants, being grown too numerous, were ob-Earth.

dispersed.

2. It was not fo much their Multitude that obliged them to separate, as the Discord that began to grow among them; and even their Vices; for they all rather chose to follow the Example of their wicked Ancestors, who had fuffered, than to take Warning by their Punishment. Even the Memory of that Chastifement, instead of reclaiming, served only to make them the more guilty: For, after having begged and obtained Mercy from God, they proudly attempted to raise trains. Thus the most favoured Part of the Creation in f the World (not to be too precise in such dark Anti-Heaven and on Earth, both Men and Angels, quair themselves up to Pride and Rebellion. gave themselves up to Pride and Rebellion.

The History of PORTUGAL.

3. Nimrod, Grandson to the wicked Cham, was the The Tower Founder of this fond Structure, which perished before of Babel it could be finished. Wherefore, finding now, that GOD built. needed no other Power against the Machinations of Men, but themselves; and Discord still increasing more than the People, which yet multiplied to Excess. Life being granted for fo long a Term of Years; they concluded there was no Way to escape the Hand of GOD, without they could find out Means to avoid one another; the greatest Grievance being then, to tolerate themselves. This made them resolve to spread themselves farther than the narrow Bounds of the adjacent Provinces, to feek the remote Parts of the Earth, and commit themselves to the Sea, in Vessels made after the Pattern of the Ark. So they marched into distant Countries, and touched remote Shores; still stretching farther and farther, till they had filled the Circumference liged to divide, and spread themselves farther about the of this Terrestrial Globe. The Heads of this first Transmigration were, the Sons of our Second Father, Som, Cham and Japher. Some fay, Afia, Africk and Europe were their three Portions, which were called the Three Parts of the World, till Experience taught us they were but one of the two Continents which divide this Lower World, and may feem to have been divided into three Pasts, in respect to them three.

•4. After these three first Universal Planters had separated themselves, and inhabited the nearer Regions, the Multitude still increasing, their Children thought of Works against Heaven, and brave his Omnipotence, sub-dividing, and travelling to find out some remoter They had the Presumption to believe they could secure Habitations, where every Head of a Family might themselves against another Deluge, without the Asir erect himself a Sovereignty. Among these, Tubal, the Tubal tance of God: And whereas the surest Fence Mortals afth Son of Japher, sailing the Mediterranean, passed lands in have against the just Indignation of the Almighty, is, but of the Mouth of the Streighte; and leaving the Portugal. his Mercy, when humbly sued for; yet they began that Cape formerly called Promontorium Sacrum, now Cape fo famous Fower; which, as it was a Work prodig ous St. Vincent, behind, landed in the most Western Part of for Men in that Infancy of their Reparation, so it rose; and being invited by the Pleasantness of the ved so meer a Northing to GOD, that He made the of Soil, and Sereneness of the Air, founded on the Edge no other Engines to destroy it, but the Tongues on the Sea, not far from the Mouth of Tagus, the City Builders. Hence, many Ages after, sprang that Creek Setubal. Other Countries pretend he first built Cities Fable, Of the Giants desiroyed with Lightning, for a mpt among them; I will not dispute it with them, so I be ing to climb up to Heaven by laying Mountains upon N. cum allowed he came hither. This happen'd about the Year nishing still the Years.

WORD

5. These first Antiquities to most Men seem fabulous, and therefore I will lightly run them over, till those Times that afford us more Light of History; there being no solid Grounds to fix the Credit of what patied before the Time of the Romans and Carthaginians. Only, as for the first Peopling of Spain, by Tubal, we have the Authority of Felephus; who fays, That ef Jobel came the Jobeli, afterwards called Iberi, Celtiberi and Spaniards.

6. The first Form of Government, as the most perfeet, was Monarchical; and that not confined, or re-Strained, as, fince, the Infolence of Subjects has made it; but absolute. There were no Laws to bind the Sovereign, or People; the Will of the Monarch was politive Law. Princes at first studied rather how to main-

Tubal the tain, than enlarge their Dominions. In this manner first King of Tubal governed Spain the Term of an Hundred Years, and then gave them a Form of Law, or rather Advice, in Verse, to be transmitted to Posterity. He also settled a Form of Divine Worship; as knowing, that The Fear of GOD is the Beginning of Wisdom. Tubal having 2009. reigned 155 Years, died, and was buried in that farther

Part of Spain, which, in respect to his Ashes, was called Promontorium Sacrum; and which, for many Ages, the Natives thought it profane to tread: And this Name continued, till the first King of Portugul, Don Alfonse Enriquez, changed it to that of Cape St. Vincent.

7. By the Death of Tubal, the Monarchy of Spain ficond King devolved upon his Son Iberus; of whom, some say, the River Ebro took Name; and Spain, that of Iberia. He invented the Art of Fishing, reigned 37 Years, and 1972. died in the Year 1972. before Christ. Observe always, that the Year one died, the other commenced his Reign.

.8. Jubelus, Jubalda, or Idubeda, Son and Successor to Tubelus Iberus, spent most of his time in the Study of Astrology, the third or Natural Magick, and ended his Days, having reign-King.

ea 64 Years. 1907. 9. Upon the Death of his Father, Brigus took upon Brigus the him the Sovereignty, who built many Towns and For-Journa King treffes which still preserve his Name, as appears in Lacobriga, Conimbriga, Medobriga, Brigancia, and others.

From his erecting so many Castles, it is supposed Castile still retains a Castle for its Arms. He reigned 32 1875. Years.

10. Tagus succeeded his Father Brigus, and bent all Tagus the his Cares to the extending and improving his Dominia fifen King. ons. Hence he was Sirnamed Orma, which fignifies a Building, or Monument. From him the River Tigus took its Name, and in his time the Portuguese began to ffretch themselves through the yet uninhabited Country, and to People and till many at that time waste Mounrains and Valleys. His Reign lasted 29, or 30 Years.

I L. His Successor was Betus, which signifies Happy Betus the er Fortunate. Of him Spain was called Betica, which fixin King. Name is still continued to the Province of Andaluzia, and in the famous River Betis. The Multitude being now greater than Portugal could bear, they spread themselves into Andaluzia, where Berus founded several Towns, the Inhabitants whereof were called Betuli, or Bastuli. Till this time the Portuguese acknowledged one only God, without worshiping Idols, or following other Superstitions, which then were rite in other parts of the World.

12. This was the happy Estate of Lusitania, when Gerion a wicked and vicious Man came out of Africk into com s into Spain, his Name was Gerion, which, in the Chaldean Portugal Tongue, fignifies a Stranger; and with him came others. He durlt not at first enter Lusitania, but fix'd his Abode near it in the Island Erithrea, Ernea, or Junonia, lying in the Western Sea, which in the Year of Grace 580. overflowed it. The Piece of Land called Erithrea (which Name fell afterwards to the Illand of Cadiz) afforded fuch rank Pasture, that the People were obliged at certain times to bleed the Cattle, lest they should die being overflowed with Blood. Garion patting over from thence to the Continent, began to commit Violences, carrying away some Cattle, which the Portuguese, unskilled in Arms, had no way to prevent, but by removing their Habitations. He growing bolder, committed so many Robberies, till he was forced to enlarge his Territory to contain his Flocks, which, in the Infancy of the World, was the greatest Treasure. But being taken with the Delightfulness of the Island, he only watched the Death of Betus, which happened the 31th Year of his Reign.

ces Idola-

13. Girion lost not the Opportunity he had wished comes K. of for, but immediately, upon the Death of Betus, patting Portugal. over into Portugal, and bountifully bestowing upon the Natives what he had got by his Robberies, so far gained upon them, that they suffered him to assume the Title of King. He, to establish his Sovereignty, introduced a new Superstition and Sacrifice never before known to the People; and they, looking upon him as more than Man, took him for their Legislator. All other parts of Spain followed the Example of the Portuguese, and received him as their Sovereign. Of him it is thought the City Girena took its Name. But he having usurped

The History of PORTUGAL.

the Crown, held it like a Tyrant; and the People, feeling the Oppression, wished, but knew not how, to get rid of their unsupportable new Lord.

1794.

Ofiris

Gerion,

and gives the Crown

Sons.

14. The People of Andaluzia meditating how to deliver themselves from this Oppression of the Usurper, and hearing that Osiris victoriously ranged the World, making it his buliness to affift the distressed, gave him an Account of their miserable Condition, worse in the Apprehension of what was like to follow, than even in their prefent Sufferings; for the Dread of what a known Tyrant may do, is a greater Calamity than what he does really act. Ofiris foon accepted the Invitation, and flew with Diligence to the Relief of that Distressed People. Gerien understanding the Danger that threat. ned him, sent before his three Sons, with some chosen comes into Troops, to give a Check to Ofiris, while he came up Spain, kille with the main Body of his Army. The two Hosts met upon the Banks of the River Guadiana, where they charged one another with fuch Fury, that Ofiris was near to his three loting the Honour he had before gained by so many notable Victories. For Gerion and his Sons were brave, and the Lusitanians, though not then used to handle Weapons, were strong of Body, and bore the Brunt with Resolution. But the Fortune of Ospris never failing, and Gerien being flain, his Men despairing of Success, placed all their Hope of Safety in Flight. Osiris used this Victory with such Clemency, (a Quality inherent to fuch as fight for Justice, and do not conquer to tyranize,) that he appeared to the Conquered, rather as a merciful Judge of their Differences, than an haughty and successful Commander; and therefore yielded the Crown of Spain to the three Sons of the Deceased Gerion, who were called Lominii.

15. This was the End of Gerion, fuch will that of all Tyrants be. Some Authors are of Opinion he was flain by Hercules the Grecian; and the reason of this Mistake is, that then the Name of Hercules was rather titular to all Heroes, than peculiar to any one. Gerion was the first in Spain that made Account of any Treafure besides Cattle, discovered Mines of Gold, and taught the Value of it. From the Riches he thus gathered he got the Name of Chryseus or Deabus, which, in the Lybian Language fignifies a Man of Gold, or Lord of great Riches. This Humanity of Osiris, in reltoring the Sons of Gerion to the Crown, fo far gained upon the Portuguese, that in return they gave up their very Souls, receiving the new VVorship which the Idolatrous Ofiris brought among them. Of him they learnt to make their Year but of Four Months, after the manner of the Egyptians; which Custom continued in Spain, till the Romans, having subdued it, reduced the Account to their own Form. Osiris is allowed to have taught the People an easier way of Tilling and Sowing than they used before. Gerion reigned 34 years, and was the first that oppressed and sleeced the People, the Property of Usurpers, who when they do best, treat their Subjects with more Cruelty than Lawful Princes do at worst. Osiris returned to Egypt, leaving behind him some of Osicis To his Companions, who were Are of those called Sce- times into nitæ, and took their Seass near the Mouth of the River Egypt. Guadiana. From them Cape St. Vincent was also called Promontorium Scenticum. This Battle fought between Osirisand Gerion near the place where Tarifa now stands, was the first that ever happened in Spain. Gerion was buried by his Sons in the Island Erithrea, in the same manner as is used at present, and was the first so interred in Spain. Some will have the Family of Oforios to bedescended from Osiris; but that is hard to prove, and no Task of mine.

The History of PORTUGAL.

CHAP. II.

Of the Lominii, Hispalus, Hispanus, Hercules, Italus, Sic-Orus, Sic-Anus, Sic-Celeus, Lusus, Sic-Ulus, Lisias, Licinius, Palatuus, Gargoris, Abidis, Argentorius, and Baucius Capetus, Kings of Lusitania.

1. THE three Gerions, or Lominii, began their Government with such Brotherly Love, and such The Lomiperfect Union, that they gave occasion to the Fable, nii, three Times and luch Sever Ge- That Spain was ruled by a King with three Heads. rion, riign. Such was the Entrance of their Sway, that it seemed they were resolved to preserve with Justice, what their Father had gained with Violence: But it was not long before it appeared they had rather be thought Sons of fuch a Father, than Fathers of their Subjects. They were good no longer, than till they had the Power to be wicked; which was, till Osiris was removed. Then remembring the People of Andaluzia, Aragon and Valencia had been the Cause of their Father's Death, by calling in Osiris, they removed towards those parts, on pretence of Affection, but in reality to wreak their Revenge.

2. Osiris, being basely Murdered by his Brother Typhon, his Son Orus Lyvicus succeeded him, having slain the Murderer. The People of Andaluzia, now again oppressed by the Tyranny of the Lominii, who upon the departure of Osiris, were exercising their revenge on Orus Ly-those their Subjects, sent for and to Orus Lybicus, called bicus, or also Hercules, who speedily came to their relief, as his Hercules, Father had done out of Africk, where he had killed the Spain, kills Giant Anteus, and marched after the Enemy who were Spain, kills received to the Formesses of Luitania and there resolutely the Lomi-retired to the Fattnesses of Lustania, and there resolutely nii, waited his approach. The Lominii had posted themmakes h. felves in a secure place, called formerly Saltus Terceno-Son Hispa-rum: Hercules, seeing them in place almost inaccessible, Jus King. resolved to save his Men, and avoid the hazard of a Battle, by challenging the three Brothers to fight him hand to hand, which he did, and they accepting of it, were all three flain successively. The Portuguese seeing their 1718. Princes flain, began to move to revenge their Death; but Orus making use of perswasions, rather than force, appealed them, and calling the Nobles to him, he made a Sacrifice of Thanksgiving. This done, he advanced as far as the Promontorium Sacrum, where he built a magnificent Temple, wherein the Agyptian Ceremonies taught by the Founder were for many Ages after Religiously observed. The People in acknowledgment for the Benefits, received by Hercules, or rather swayed by fear, joyfully received his Son Hispalus for their King, who continued in Lusitania with many of his Ægyptians.

3. Hispalus was installed 42. Years after the Gerions had begun to Reign, and being peaceably seated on the Throne, his Father Orus Lybicus marched away for Italy. The gentle Government of Hispalus, was the reviving of the hearts of that People after fo many Calamities, but Prosperities are not durable, for he died the 17th Year of his Reign: Among the memorable Customs introduced by him, were those of Burying the Dead, and wearing Mourning for them; what fort of Mourning it was appears not, but that which many Ages after was used till the time of King Emanuel of Portugal. and Ferdinand of Castile was on the lightest occasions rough Canvais, and the deep used for Kings and such like occasions, of the coursest Sack-cloth, and that always White, as is still used in China.

4. Hispanus succeeded his Father Hispalus; and was Proclaimed in the Temple of Hercules with great Ceremony. The Spaniards in those days held it a crime to look upon the fetting Sun, therefore those that lived upon the Coast, used to turn their backs towards it; those who lived near the Promontorium Sacrum, retreated at Night far off from it, believing the Gods spentthe Night there in Sport and Pastimes, not to be seen by Mortal Eyes: Only the Priests and the King on the Night of his inauguration, were permitted to stay on that point of Land, and look towards the West, but as soon as the Sun quite disappeared, they prostrated themselves on the Ground, and then retired to the Temple, where they continued till break of day, when the King returned to the same place, and continued there till the Sun again spread its Beams over all that part of the Country.

Country. Then he returned joyfully to the People, offered Sacrifice, and was thence forward esteemed wifer than all others, as being one that had feen Divine Secrets and Hidden Mysteries. It is a common Opinion among the vulgar, that Hispalis now Sevil, was built by Hispalus, and that the Name Hispania 1169. came from Hispanus, who died when he had Reigned 32 Years, leaving no Islue.

5. Hercules, after the Death of his Grandson Hispa-

Hesperus

Governs nus returned to Spain, which he Governed Nineteen Spain, and Years in Peace with fingular Wisdom and Goodness, Laves the and finding his end draw on, he appointed Hesperus, one of his Officers, his Successor. The Funeral Obsequies being performed, Helperus took upon him the Sove-1650. reignty, but the giddy People being dissatisfied with his Government, revolted from him to his Brother Atlas Italus, who came out of Italy, pretending a right as being the Elder Brother, though neither had any other Title, but the choice of Hercules which was of the Hesperus Younger. By this desertion of the Subjects, Hesperus was eafily deprived of the Crown, and flying into Italy, and Atlas outlived not long his Misfortune. Italus having Reigned in Portugal the space of Ten Years, returned into Italy, leaving the Dominion of Spain to his Son Sichis place. 1618. Orus, during whose Reign the Noise of Arms was not He leaves heard; he left his Name to that River of Catalonia, that to his Son washes the Walls of Lerida, and is now called Segre, but

Sicanus

him.

of him long after called Sicoria, he Reigned 55 Years. 6. Sicanus the Son of Sicorus succeeded his Father; he is reported to have waged War in Italy, and thence them, and to have passed over and conquered Sicily; which, of Sicceleus him, our Author will have to take the Name of Sicania, and he to have Reigned 31 Years. His Son Sicceleus immediately entred upon the Government, and of him also is continued that Romantick Story of going into Italy with an Army, where also he is said to have died in the 44th Year of his Reign, 2453 from the Creation; 797 from the Flood; and 1509 before the 1509. Birth of Christ.

formerly Sicoris, and a great part of that Country was

7. After the Death of Sic-Celeus his Son Lusus was Lufus af proclaimed King, and for the fingular Affection he cends the shewed to the Western part of Spain, where he spent the most of his life, that Country took his Name, being being afterwards called Lusitania. Under this Name was comprehended all the Country between the Rivers Guadiana and Duero; the main Ocean bounded it on the West, and its limits on the East were formed by an imaginary line drawn almost straight from the turning of the River Dueronear Castrominho, down to Guadiana, which River divided it from the Province Betica. Nothing else is recorded of Lusus, but that he reigned 3.3 Years, and dying, left the Kingdom to Siculus, who Siculus being born in Lusitania, preserved the same Affection the mass his Father had done for that Province and People. He King. also is supposed to have passed over into Italy, and to have overthrown the Aborigines, whence failing into Sicity, he subdued that Island, and lest his Name to it.

The History of PORTUGAL.

where he ended his Days, having reigned 61 Years.

8. The Death of Siculus was so much resented by the Spaniards, and particularly the Luftenians, that, he leaving no Heir, they resolved not to submit themselves An interto another King. Above an Hundred Years they lived regnum for at their Liberty, referringall Controversies to the anci- 100 Years. entest Men, and standing to their Decision, till Bacchus Bacchus the Son of Semele, with a numerous Army of fundry in Spain. Nations came into Spain. The Fame of fo mighty an Army terrified the Spaniards, but they were no less delighted with their Luxurious manner of living, all their Martial Exercises being intermixed with Pleasures and Delights. Hence the Sports used to this day in Portugal, called Folias, are supposed to have deduced their Original, which confifts of Dancing, Taboring, and Singing: The Word is either derived from the Latin, Folia, or leaves, because the Bacchanals were so Crowned, or from the Italian, fignifying Madness, which is proper enough to such Divertisements, and to the Fealts of the Bacchanais. .

9. Bacchus finding the Lusitanians, opposed his Command, and cut off many of his Army, retiring to the Mountains after doing the Mischief, employed his Tutor Silenus to work upon them by fair means, which he did so effectually, that they submitted themselves to him, only upon condition he should not use the Name of King, which they would allow to none fince the Death of their beloved King Lusus. However, Bacchus finding them an Ignorant and Credulous People, perswaded them that the Soul of Lusus was transmi-

Cacus

Hèrcules

the The-

Spain o- ..

verthrows

ban in Cacus.

ral.

The History of PORTUGAL. grated unto his Son Lisias, who for the Love they bore made King. him, was returned to Reign over them. This Fiction so took with the People, that they put themselves wholly into his Power, congratulating with themselves the Happiness of having recovered their admired King. Bacchus returned into Italy, and his Son remained pol-fessed of this great part of Europe, which he enjoyed not full Three Years: He dying, the Lusitanians would not admit any other King, but chose for their Commander, one Cacus a bold Fellow, and one of Lisias his chose Gine- Companions; he raising a powerful Army, marched against Palatuus King of Andaiuzia, whom in a Bloody Battle he overthrew, and by that means remained possessed of the greatest part of all Spain; pussed up with this Success, he became Insolent and Cruel, which rendred him Odious to the People.

10. Palatuus, who lay lurking in the Mountains, laid hold of this opportunity, fent fome to found the affections of the Multitude, and finding them well inclined towards him, adventured to raise Forces and march towards Lusitania. At the same time, Hercules the Theban, with the rest of the Argonauts, being by stress of Weather cast ashore in Spain, near the mouth of Guadalquivir, was lovingly received and entertained by Palaruus; this Courrefie obliged him to espouse his Quarrel, and so joyning their Forces, they overthrew the Tyrant Cacus, or Licinius, who fled into Italy, whither presently after Hercules returned. Still the Lucitanians preserved their Liberty as before, as they did whilst Erithreus, whom some call the Son, others the Cousin of Palatuus reigned in the other parts of Spain. Palatuus seems to have Reigned 67 Years, and Gargaris is said to have been his Son, but for this there is no manner of Authority.

11. The Tyranny of Cacus or Licinius, lasted Thirty Six Years, which are to be included in the 70 of Palatuus his Reign, and many more Lusitania remained free from any subjection, being governed only by the Rules of Reason, and some of Tubal's Laws which remained in Verse. It fell out accidentally, that a Man called Gargeris (which formerly fignified a burning Coal or Flame) found a Swarm of Bees in a hollow Oak, and discovering their Honey, taught the use of it to the People. This sweet Discovery was worth a . Crown, 1158. Gargoris finds the use of Honey and its making.

13

Crown; which the Multitude, in Requital for that Benefit, freely bestowed upon him. He was afterwards, by the Latins, called Melicola, for discovering to the Spaniards the Use of Honey. Whilst Gargoris reigned, he had a Daughter got with Child by some Gallant, or, as some thought, by her own Father; for as soon as the Child was born, he caused it to be expo- Abidis exfed to the Wild Beafts: But they, instead of destroy-pifed ; ing, nourished the Infant; of which he being inform- Brought to ed, caused him to be cast into the Sea; and that Ele-Court; ment, milder than the Grandfather, carried it up the Teaches the River Tagus, as far as Santarem, formerly called Scala- yoke Oxen, bis, where it was suckled by a Doe. Of her, being plan and grown up, he took to a natural Swiftness; so that they for that hunted in the Mountains admired to fee in him the Figure of a Man, and the Wildness of a Bealt. Gargoris hearing hereof, and not imagining it was his Grandson, caused him to be taken in a Gin; and being brought before him, he, by known Signs, perceived it was the same he had exposed. His Hatred now turned into Love; he called him Abidis, causing him rous Multitude: He also taught them to yoke Oxen, to plow and fow. 11. Troy being reduced to Ashes, Uhffes, with a part 1120. of the Grecian Fleet, driven by Storms out of the Mouth of the Streights, arrived at length at the Mouth of the River Tagus; and entring, landed; where he found, Ulvifes in already built, a City on the Hill; to which he left his Portugal. Name, which remains to this Day, being called Ulysippo, which is the famous City Lisbon. Here, in Me-to be carefully instructed: And he was so great a Proficient, that it was he who first civilized that barbamory of the Favours received of the Goddels Minerva. he built a stately Temple, and dedicated it to her. Gargoris, upon the News of his Arrival, marched towards him with an Army; but they both meeting, and conferring together, parted Friends: And not to content, Gargoris gave to Ulysses his Daughter, the Mother of Abidis, in Marriage. However, the Greeks committing feveral Infolences in the Country, they became odious to the People, who rifing up in Arms against them, Viy/Jes stole away to Sea, leaving his new Wife.

behind. How long Gargoris reigned, cannot politively be set down; the best Guess that can be given, is, 5%

1105. venty seven Years. At the same time that Ulysses sailed out of Tagus, Diomedes enter'd the River Mino, in the North of Portugal: There he founded a City, which, after the Name of his Father Tideus, he called Tide; and in process of Time, by Corruption, is now called Tuy.

12. The wonderful Abidis succeeded his fortunate Father Gargoris, in the Kingdom of Spain; and, in Gra-Abidis titude to the Mountains, where he was bred, built the reighs. City Santarem; and reigned 35 Years, much beloved 1038. of his Subjects. About this time happen'd that won-A wonder-derful Dearth in Spain, which lasted 26 Months; dufal Dearth. ring which time it never rained. Some there are, who extend this to 40 Years; others, to 30. Such it was, that all the Country became Defart, the Inhabitants either perishing for Want, or fleeing to other Places.

952. Long after this, a Multitude of the Celt.e, the ancient Inhabitants of France, came into the Southern Parts of Portugal, where they built several Towns, and re-edified others, before ruined. They, being mixed, and well united with the Natives, flood them in good stead, when the Phanicians possessed themselves of the Island

Sidonians of Cadiz. Not content with fettling then Clves there, in Spain. they began to incroach upon the People of Andaluzia, and fortified themselves at Sidon, now Medina Sidonia; whence they were expelled by the united Forces of

752. the ancient Natives, and intruding Coltie. Which done, the Lusivanians chose Argantonius for their King, who governed them many Years, with general Applause; some Authors stretching his Life to 140 Years; others, only to 120.

13. The Celtie inhabiting Lusitania, being vastly in-The Celtæ creased, so that the Country they possessed could not Portugal contain them, passed over the River Tagus, with their Flocks and Families, with a Delign to settle along the Sen-Coast; beyond the Promontory of the Moon, now called the Rock of Sintra. Those People fearing their intruding Guests, marched out to oppose them; but being overthrown, were forced to submit to those that came with Intention only to be their Companions. The Turduli, for so those People were called, joining with the Inhabitants of Lisbon, formed another Army; and joining Battel with the Celt.e, gained the Field, but with fuch Loss, that they had no reason to boast of their Victory. Both Parties confidering the Loss suftained, came to an Agreement, and divided the Province betwixt them.

14. The Turduli thought themselves secure after this War with the Celt.e, when a more dangerous Enemy affaulted them. These were a savage Mountainous Peo- The Mountain ple, who having till then, lived upon the Milk of tainous Peotheir Goats, and Wild Fruit, came down to feek a bet- ple defeend ter Country to inhabit; but being defeated, they passed into the the River Tagus: There the Celtae cut off a good Num-Plain. ber of them; which obliged the rest to march along the River Tagus, to the Sea-fide, where, finding no Body to oppose them, they settled themselves: And from them, that Cape near Setuval was called Promontorium

Barbaricum, now Cabo de Espichel.

15. Nabuchadonosor having taken Hierusalem, and sub- Nabuchodued a great part of the then known World, came at donozor last into Spain with his mighty Army, composed of all in Spain. Nations. Having belieged the Island of Cadiz, where the Phanicians inhabited, by Sea and Land, he was driven thence by the united Forces of Spain; and fo, with his whole Army, put to Sea again. He had before over-run the greatest part of Spain; and now departing. left behind him the greatest Plague that ever infested it. Thus was a great Number of Jews, dispersed in several Parts of it; who fixing then, could never fince be rooted out. The Phanicians delivered of the Danger of Nabuchodonofor, refused to pay the Lustranians, whom they had called to their Aid; who offended thereat, demanded more than was their Due. The Controverfie came to be decided by Blows, wherein the Lusitanians were worlded, yet not so discouraged, but that, gathering fresh Forces, they came on again so furiously, that having vanquished their Enemies, they put them all to the Sword, without Mercy. By this Victory they became Masters of the greatest part of Andaluzia; fo that great Numbers of them went over, to inhabit there, calling it Turdetania; where they built many Cities.

16. In the mean while, the Phanicians, thut up in the The Car-Island of Cadiz, craved Aid of the Carebaginians, their thaginiancient Allies, against the Lusitanians, who Lorded it ans come to over all Andaluzia. The Carthaginians were not back-Phoniciward to undertake this Expedition, but Rigging a migh-ans.

The Car-

thagini-

εd.

ty Fleet, sent it to their Relief, under the Command of Mezerbal, a valiant and wife Captain. At their first Landing, in some Skirmishes, our Men found their Valour would not avail against the Africans, without some Martial Discipline: Therefore they made Choice of one Baucius Capetus, (or, as others call him, Bachius Carupus,) a Man of a Gigantick Stature, and great Conduct, for their General. He observing the manner of the Carthaginian Warfare, instructed his Men accordingly. About Break of Day the two Armies joined Battel, with terrible Out-cries, and no less Effusion of Blood. Mezerbal observing his Troops disordered, and giving way, with some chosen Bands renewed the Fight, and made the Victory more bloody than it would have been, had not so great a General commanded: Yet, at last, he was forced to give way, and save his Life by Flight. Baucius having purfued the Enemy, and taken the Spoil of the Field, returned Victorious, and erectans defeated lasting Trophies in the Temples of his Idols. The future Actions of Mezerbal, being the Beginning of the Carthaginian Dominion in Spain, require a new Chap-These Things were done about the Year of the World, 3403; after the Deluge, 1747; which is 559

CHAP. III.

Years before the Birth of Christ.

The Actions of the Carthaginian Governors, Mezerbal, Sappho, Hanno the First, Himilco, Gifgo, Hannibal the First, Hanno the Second, Boodes, Maherbal, Hamilcar Barcinus, Asdrubal, and Hannibal the Second: The Planting of many Colonies; and Beginning of the Roman War.

1. TEzerbal the Carthaginian, though overthrown, L quitted not his Pretensions; but contrived, by Policy to compass what he had failed of by open Force. He began to treat amicably with the Lusitanian Turduli 3

Turduli; and sped so well, that they intrusted him with 559. several Places of Consequence; whereof being once Mezerbal possessed, he began to Lord it over them. This was subdues the Beginning of the African Dominion in Spain. Mean Portugal. while, that barbarous People who inhabited along the Coast of Secuval, invented a new and bloody Sacrifice. which continued for many Years: The Sea cast up a 550. Whale, of a wonderful Bigness; whereat that ignorant People being terrified, and thinking it had been some Sea-God, they killed a Young Man and a Maid, and A barbaleft them by the Whale: The Tide rifing, it carried rous Sacriaway the dead Bodies, which they looked upon as an fice. Acceptance of their Sacrifice, and therefore they every Year after repeated it, even after the Coming of Christ.

2. About the same time 15000 of the Turduli, seeking new Lands to inhabit, passed into the Territories between Cerolico and Trancolo; but finding it difficult to fettle in that wild Country, and among a People to se-ral rude, that they scarce understood one another's Lan-People guage at two Miles distance, they waded over the Ri-plant new ver Coa, and there Peopled all that Country, building Colonies. several Towns The Barbarians of the Coast of Seruval understanding that the Turduli wander'd to find new Seats, they passed over the Tagus, to possess their Lands. Those who were left behind endeavoured to oppose them, but in vain; and finding they looked not after Towns, but lived in the open Fields, they defilted. But the Barbarians, with the same Ease, passed on; and crossing the River Mondego, settled about Viseo, stretching by Degrees to the River Duero. The Greeks also. that inhabited Galicia, attempted to pass the River Minho; but they were repulsed by the People of the Province, with a great Slaughter on both sides. It will not be amiss to give an Hint of the Customs of those People.

he Right Hands, and sometimes the Bodies, of their tanto. memies, taken in War. In the Entrails of the Sacriices they made their Observations of suture Events. In heir Feasts, an He-Goat was a great Dainty; and they lid eat upon Round Tables. Whilst the Dinner lasted, ome played upon Noisy Instruments; and any Guest

3. Their Idols were, Mars and Minerva, for the ob- Customs of mining of Valour and Wisdom. To them they offer'd the Inhabimight rife, and dance. Their Sports were, Wrestling, Running, and Pitching the Bar. The Young Men fung the Praises of those that died in Battel. Their Weapons were Swords and Daggers; and they gave Battel drawn up in close Battalions. Their Apparel, in Times of Peace, was long and wide; and their Hair long. The Women wore Gowns down to the Ground, and Mantles on their Shoulders, which served them for Beds. Their manner of Dancing, was, in a Ring. Marriages were made to please the Bridegroom, not the Father, or Friends: The Portion was, a few Goats: And the Chastity of the Women was such, that Adultery was scarce to be heard of. There were no Physicians among them; But the Sick were fet in a publick Place. and all that paffed by advised what they thought best for them. Criminals were stoned to Death: And all Passengers were obliged to cast a Stone, to compleat the Burial of the dead Body. No Money was used; but all dealt by way of Barrer. They passed Rivers, and fished, in Boats made of one Tree, hollowed, like the Indian Canoes.

48℃.

Sappho the Carting in in gathers Gold in Spain.

4. The People inhabiting between the Rivers Duero and Minno, pailed over into Gallicia; and having, in a bloody Fight, wherein the Women, as well as the Men, shewed exceeding Valour, vanquished the Greeks who possessed that Country, they settled amongst them. Twelve Thousand Spaniards were entertained by the Carthaginians, in their Expedition against Gelon, King of Sicily; but they, and all that Fleet, perished. The Carthaginians then bent their Thoughts upon the Conquest of Spain, whither they sent Sappho General; who gathering much Gold in the Mines, enriched his Country; but was forced to return against those Africans who demanded a certain Tribute, which, they faid, Queen Dido paid at the Foundation of the City. He carried with him 7000 Spanish Foot, and 400 Horse, who did him good Service, and returned home victorious. Sappho being called away, the Carthaginians sent in his Place Hanno and Himilco. Hanno coasting along Spain, landed at Cape St. Vincent, where he shewed great Reverence to the Place, to win the Hearts of the People; and having discovered the Country, and traded with the Inhabitants, returned home. Himilco failed forward to Cape Espichel, where some of his Men landing, to get fresh Provisions, were, for the most part, cut off by the favage People. Thence they continued their Voyage, and ran up the River Tague; where being well received, and furnished with Pilots, they made Cape Cascais, and the Berlings. The Carrhaginians had some Commerce with the Turduli, living between the Rivers Tagus and Duero: and of them had some Information about the Inland Parts. Hamileo continued his Course to the River Mondego, and by Stress of Weather was forced to put into the Vouga, on whose Banks he found a Colony of Greeks; and so continued his Discovery to the River Minho. After founding all the Coast of Lustrania, many of his Ships perished in a Storm; the rest were put into the Port Gaya, so shatter'd, that several of them funk there, but the Men were faved: Part of them put to Sea again with Himilco, who went away to his Brother Gifgo, in Andaluzia: The rest staid. among the Natives, and afterwards founded the City The City Braga in Memory of the River Bragada, in Africk, Braga running through their Country. Some will have this formed by City to be first built, and take its Name of the Gaules, the Carthetalled Braccafi. Hannibal the Elder succeeded Himilco, ginians: in the Government of the Affairs of Spain. He hearing of the new Carthaginian Colony, resolved himself to visit the utmost Point of Europe, or Cape Sr. Vincent; and there founded a City, upon a convenient Bay, which was called Hannibal's Port. 5. After this, the Lusicanians and Andaluzians fell at Variance; for those Turderani who had settled in that several part of the Country, endeavouring to extend their Li-great Batmits to those Plains, which afterwards took Name of tels the Vandals, were opposed by the ancient Inhabitants, and, after much Blood spilt, put to Flight, leaving behind them a rich Booty. But they feeking Revenge, gathered a Multitude of the bordering Lufitani ins . And the Andaluzians, to oppose them, called Hanival, with his Carthaginians, to their Aid. These powerful Armies encountring, fought most obstinately the whole Day, till Night parted them; leaving the Field cover'd with 80000 dead Bodies, among which was Hannibal himself. This to weaken'd the Lusicanians, that those barbarous People living along the Sea-Coall, durst take Arms against them, and overthrew the Ceire, who first offered to withstand them. The Turdetani retiring out of Andaluzia, and joining with the Celta, they fell upon the victorious Barbarians; of whom they made such Havock, that few returned home to carry the News of their Defeat.

The History of PORTUGAE.

Several

ded.

6. The Carthaginians, in their Wars with the Agri-403. gentines, among other Spaniards, used the Aid of 2000 Lusitanians; by whose Valour they destroyed that City. With the like Number they overthrew Dionyjius, the Tyrant of Sicily: But Sickness did what the Sword had not done, for none of those Men returned home. In the mean while, Spain suffered by the indignation of Hea-Dearth and ven; for the Storms and Dearth were fo excellive, that Great the Wild Bealts came out of the Defarts, to the Towns, to look for Shelter and Provender. Hanno the Second came from Carthage, to govern Andaluzia; and landing at Hannibal's Port, in Lusitania, raised 7000 Lusitanians, to subdue the Andaluzians, who had revolted, provoked thereto by the Avarice of their late Governor. Soon after, the Celtie of the Province of Alemejo, their Territories being thronged by the Turdetani who came out of And duzia, resolved to move farther into the Country; and to that purpose made a solemn Sacrifice, and swore ever to continue Friends. Whilst they were busie in that Solemnity, they descried four Sail, which made towards the Shoar; and understood they came from Laconica, in Pelagannesis, seeking some Place to settle in: The Celtre received them into their Society; and they together paffing the Tagus, and coming to the River Mondego, left there a Company of the Lusitanian Turdetani, called Colimbrii, or Columbri, who there fettled a Colony, which, of them, was called Colimbria, now known by the Name of Condeixa the Old: the Ruins which still are to be seen about it, being a Testimony of its former. Grandeur. I et some will have that City to have been built by Hercules Lybicus; others, by the Carrhaginians. The Lusi-Trains four tanians and Greeks going on, they founded Eminium, now Agenda, a great City, and a Bishop's See in the time of the Romans and Goths. They also were the Founders of Talabrica, now Aveyro; of Lavara, of La-

meen, or Laconia, now Lamego; and some other Places, whereof there is now no Memory. The last Place named was built by the Greeks and the Celta, who continuing their Progress, fell at Variance (forgetting the Oath made at their Setting out) in such manner, that in cruel Battle among themselves the greatest part of them perished. Such as remained spread themselves about that Country, and some of them are supposed to be the Founders of Araduca, now Guimaraens.

7. The Lusicanians and Africans about the Port of Hanibal were at Peace, when Boodes came to succeed Hanno the Carthaginian, Commander in Spain. He introduced himself politickly by fair means into the Affecti-The Proons of the People, and they together sacrificed to Her-gress of the cules. Having thus settled Friendship, Boodes, with the Carthagi-Consent of the Natives, built a Town called Lacobriga Spain. in Algarve, now Lagos. After Boodes came Maherbal, who so managed the People, that he became abfolute over all that part, which is now the Kingdom of Algarve; and hearing of the Greatness of the City Elvas, marched thither with a good Body of Men, and by Kindness so won the Hearts of the Inhabitants, that they wholly submitted themselves unto him. Milierbed falling fick here, was told by the Diviners, that there was no way to recover his Health, but building a Temple to the God Cupid, which he did, and recovered. This Temple was fame many Ages after, and the Idol called Endovellieus. Image had its Eyes shut, a Heart in its Mouth, and Wings on its Feet. The Priest when he facrificed to this God stripped himfelf naked, and then put on a loofe Garment which traited on the Ground, his Back and Left Arm remaining naked; then with the Right Hand he ripped up a Lamb. and took out his Heart, which, with the Left Hand, he cast into the Fire.

& The City Tyre being destroyed by Alexander the Great, 15000 of the Inhabitants were lived by the Sidonians who served in his Army. Some of them by means of the Carthaginians came into Lustania, where To Cart they founded a Town which they called Mirtiri, that Mirtiri is, New Tyre, now Mertola. This same Year Gatelus built by the failing from Ezypa with his whole Family, is reported Tyrians. to have landed in Portugal, and it is supposed it was at the City Porto. He had two Sons Iberus and Humeous, the first of them some will have to have sailed into Ireland, and given the Name Hibernia to it; these are meer Suppositions. Some Years after the Greeks between the Rivers Duero and Minho, encreased by the coming of the Celtie and Turdetant, finding their Multitude too great for that Province, by common Consent sent their Sons to find new Seats. Some of them fettled in the Mountains of Asturias, and others along the Banks of the River Erla. The Carthaginians being at War with Pyrrbus Prince of the Epirots, who was possessed of Sicity, drove him thence by the Affistance of the Spanish Auxiliaries, among whom were 2000 Lustanian Celtæ.

The History of PORTUGAL.

o. Hamilear Barcinus, a Man extraordinary well-qualified, was lent from Carthage to promote the Interest of that Commonwealth in Spain. His might y Zeal in the Worship of their Idols endeared him to the People, and the more to oblige them, he refolved to marry a Woman of the Country, by her he had Hannibal the Second by Name, but far the greatest in Renown. His Project of marrying a Lusitanian to gain the Affection of the Natives, was to highly approved of by the Carthagini ins, that returning home he was sent back to finish what he had so well begun. He brought with him his Wife, by whom he had Five Children, Hannibal, Afdrubal, Mago, Hanno, and a Daughter. After he had fettled the Affairs of sindaluzia, he passed thence into Lustrania, intending to make Seminary of Soldiers. Having gathered a might Army, he set forward fo fortunate, that he subdued all the Country from the Streights of Gibraltar to the Pyrinean Mountains. Hanibal, then a Youth, was present at these Exploits, and then learnt his first Military Rudiments. In the mean while the Victories, who fived betwixt the Rivers Duero and Coa, down as far as Tagus, and were ancient Encmies to the Celtse of the Province of Alentejo, and to the Turdetani, confidering that the Flower of these Peo. ple was drawn out under Hamiltar Barcinus, laid hold of this Opportunity, and invaded their Territories. The Celta asked leave of their General to return Home to defend their Country; and he careful of their good Fortune, marched back with them. The Vettones being strengthened with Supplies waited his coming in a convenient place, with a great number of Carts loaded with Wood before them, as if they had been upon the March. Hamiloar admired their Resolution, but understood not the Stratagem. He caused the Celta to give the Charge; but neither their Courage nor Martial Discipline availed them; for the Vectones setting Fire to the Wood, the Oxen being frighted, ran so furiously with the Flaming Carts into the midst of them that they were put into Confusion, notwithstanding their General did all that was possible to restore the Battle. In the heat of the Action he was killed, leaving a bloody Victory to the Vectones. Astrubal his Son-in-law and Hannibal gathering the Relicks of the Army, fell upon the Phocentians, who had affifted the Vectores; but these coming to their Relief, the two Generals were obliged to raise a greater Power, with which they not only subdued the Phocentians, but put all to the Sword that were able to bear Arms. This done, he marched towards the Vectones, who continued to infult the Celta, and fufficiently revenged their Wrongs. But the Celtae not fo satisfied, ceased not to destroy the Enemies Country. This obliged the Vectores to choose one Tagus for their General, under whose Conduct, for some time, they put Afdrubal to his Shifts, till in one Battle he cut off most of their Horse. Thus Tagus was constrained to make Overtures of Peace, which being, admitted and fworn to, Asirubal, contrary to his Oath, made Tagus, and many of his principal Men. Prisoners. They refolving to fell their Lives at a dear rate, put many of the Carthaginians to the Sword; but, in Conclusion, were all foully murdered by Afdrubal. He remained Governour in Spain, and Hanibal went over into Africk.

Tubdues all Spain.

To. The Romans, envying the Fortune of the Carthaginians in Spain, by the Mediation of the People of Marseilles, joined in League with the Sanguntines, and other Cities. This made Hanibal haste back into Spain. where he found his Brother-in-law Asilvubal was dead, Hannibal as he had deferved. For a Slave to that Tagus, whom fettles in he perfidiously slew, stabbed him as he was facrificing, Spainin revenge of his Masters Death. Nor did he afterwards endeavour to escape; but, being put upon the Wrack, bore all his Torments with a Countenance unmoved. Hanibal made it his Buliness to gain the Good Will not only of the Africans, but of the Natives. To this intent he contracted Friendship with one Viriatus (not he that held War fo many Years against the Romans) who was a principal Man, or little Prince among the Celta, of the Province of Alentejo. Next to bind the Andalugians faster, he married a Wife among them, called Himilce, milce, born at Castulon, now a poor Village, known by the Name of Carlona. By her he had his Son Aspar.

The History of PORTUGAL.

Having hus secured his Interest, and gathered a mighty Army from all parts, his next Thought was to break the Peace made some Years before with the Romans. In order to it he resolved to invade Saguntum, a City in League with them. By the way he lubdued the Vocei, and other Nations. From them he marched against the Vectones, who had killed his Father, and laying Siege to Salamanca, so distressed it, that the Inhabitants were forced to buy their Peace. This Accord was broke by the Lusitanians, who getting into the City, violated the Conditions; whereupon the Siege was again continued. At length the Besieged capitulated to depart with only their Apparel, and unarmed. They marched out, but the Women carrying the Weapons under their Garments, and delivering them to the Men, they made.

fuch use of them, that had not Hanibal's Army been so numerous, it had been dubious which fide should have been victorious; but the Multitude overcame Valour.

and most of the Vectores perished. All things succeeding prosperously, Hanibal sets down before Sayuntum with 150000 Foot and 20000 Horses. After a Siege of Eight Monthshe took and destroy'd that City, which made the War between Rome and Carthage to be no more doubted of. Hanibal gathered supplies from all parts and many out of Lusitania; Viriaius, that little King, going in Person with a good Body to accompany him. Asary-bal, Hanibal's Brother, drew together confiderable numbers of those rude F cople between the Rivers Duero and Minho. Nor were the Vectones, with whom his Father and Brother-in-law had fuch cruel Wars, backwards, being most willingly entertained by him for their extraordinary Valour. Balarus a Lusitanian commanded a brave Body of Light Horse.

CHAP. IV.

Hanibal's Actions in Italy, the Romans come into Spain, the Carthaginians expelled thence. The Wars between the Romans and Lusiranians from the Expiration of the Carthaginian Command, till Viriatus began to Sway.

1. Tanibal having subdued Spain, leaves his Bro-Hanibal ther Asirubat there with 12000 African Foot and 2500 Horse; he sends 15000 Spanish Foot and to Italy. 1200 Horse to Carthage, and marches himself over the Pyreneans with 102000 Fighting Men. Five Months he spent, in his long and tiresome march through France, and over the Alps, with the loss of 36000 Men: With the rest he enters Lombardy, forces the Consul Cornelius Scipio, who came to oppose him, to retire to Plansen. cia, and overthrows him, being joyned by T. Sempronius, at the River Trebia, killing 30000 Romans. This done, he passes the Apennine, where with watching and labour, he lost an Eye, and coming to the Lake menus, again Defeats the Roman Army under the Consuls C. Servilius, and C. Flaminius. Quintus Fabius fent against him with a fresh Army, tired him without Fighting; next came the Consuls Emilius Paulus, and Terentius Varro, who through the rashness of the latter, adventuring to give Battle, were totally discomfited with the loss of 50000 of their Men. 2. Whilst Hanibal victoriously traversed the best part of Italy, Gneyus Scipio was fent from Rome into Spain, with him Asdrubal Hanibal's Brother had several Conflicts, and after some fortunate Successes, was forfaken by Fortune, and forced to retire into Lusitania to raile new The Ro-Forces, there he joyned in League with a King called mans come Mandonius, with whose affistance he checked the Pro- into Spain. gress of Scipio. Yet Asdrubal marching with an Army towards tealy, was overthrown by him, and returning again to Lusitania, gathered fresh Forces, with this Power he not only curbed the Romans, but having killed the two Scipio's, Cornelius and Gneius, took most of the Roman Garrisons in Catalonia and Andaluzia. Beusides, the Calamities of the War, Spain laboured under the Miseries of Plague and Famine, which principally raged in Lustrania: After which ensued a general Earth-quake throughout Europe, on the same day the Battle at the Lake Thrasimenus was fought, which tho' so violent, that it ruined many Towns, was not felt by the two Armies that were engaged.

Saguntum de-Frey'd.

CHAP.

The Carthagini-

3. Such was the posture of Affairs in Spain, when Claudius Nero was sent thither from Rome, and after him ans expel- Publius Cornelius Sipio, who was very successful against led by the the Carthaginians. Afdrubal marched with a great pow-Romans. er out of Portugal, to retreive those losses at such time as Massimissa landed with a number of Numidian Horse, and some Elephants to joyn him; all this mighty Multitude was overthrown by the Fortune and Valour of Scipio. Asdrubal thus broke, resolved to march into Italy, to the affiftance of his Brother Hanibal, leaving the Command in Spain to the other Afdrubal, the Son of Gisso, who as he was directed, retired with the Carthaginian Forces into Lusitania, and having made up a body, he broke into Andaluzia, but was there discomfitted by Marcus Sillanus Scipio's Lieutenant. Mago understanding that Afdrubal his Brother, with the whole Army he led into Italy, had been cut off by the Consuls Claudius Nero, and Livius Salinator, and despairing of maintaining the War in Spain, shipped himself with is Forces at Cadiz, and having done much harm along the Ligurian shore, returned to Carthage: Scipio now in Africk, threatning the City Carthage, Hanibal was called home to defend his Country; there having in vain treated of Peace, he was in Battle overthrown, and flying to Prusias King of Bithinia, there Poisoned himfelt, fearing to be delivered up to the Romans.

196. Spain allvid.a by the Romans.

4. When the Africans had for 300 Years lorded it in Spain, they were at length expelled thence and out of Italy by the Romans. The Senate divided Spain into two Provinces under as many Pretors, calling them Citerior and Ulterior; the first lying between the River Ebroand the Pyrencan Mountains, the latter extending from that River to the Ocean. Several of these Pretors being unfliccessful, the Consul Marcus Porcius Cato was fent over with a Consular Army; he gained much among the Lustranians by his Valour and Conduct, as still appears by several Inscriptions on Stone, bearing his Name. Scipio Najica succeeded him in the Command, and had it prolonged to him after the Expiration of his time, with the Title of Propretor: In his time the Celtiberi entring into Arms, perswaded the Lustranians to give the Romans a Divertion in Invading their Province, and by that means forcing them to divide their Forces. Nafica marched first against the Lufitanians, whom overtaking loaded with Booty, and tired with long Marches, after a most bloody Fight, he Discomfitted, taking 124 of their Colours: The next year came into Spain, Marcus Fulvius as Pretor, who twice Descated the Lujitanian Vectones; Encouraged with these Victories, he laid Siege to Toledo, where the Vectones affailings him, were again after a doubtful Fight overthrown. Lucius Emilius Paulus being come Propretor into Spain, the Noise of Arms began to be heard in Portugal; Paulus marching against the Bafferani on a fudden, found the Lustranians upon him; the Battle was furious, infomuch, that had the Day lafted, none of the Romans had escaped to carry the News. But Paulus retiring in the Night, was again the next day affaulted by the victorious Enemy, who purfised him in great disorder, which proved his good Fortune; for he slew of them 20000, and by this Action, humbled the Lusitanians, so that they stirred not in two Years. After which time, on a sudden, they broke out, bearing down all that owned the Roman Government, particularly in Andaiuzia, where the City Afta Regia, for fear of their power, joyned with them. Here Cains Catinius gave the Lusitanians Battle and routed them, but attempting to Scale the Walls of Asta, was himself killed, and the Luftanians joyning with the Celtiberi, appeared again stronger in the Field than before.

5. Caius Culpurnius Pifo, the Pretor, hearing of this great Power, sent to the other Pretor Lucius Quincius The Ro-Crispinus. with all possible speed to joyn him, which mans dehe accordingly performed. Being joyned, they march-feated by ed into the Province of Carpentania, which is about ards. Toledo, where after several Skirmishes, the Spaniards cut off certain Roman Forragers, which the Pretors perceiving, fent speedy succour to them, and by this means, both parties still increasing, at last both Armies joyned Battle, wherein the Romans were put to Flight and lost

5000 Men.

730.

174.

153.

their

The History of PORTUGAL.

5000iMen. Had the Spaniards known how to make use of their Victory, as well as how to obtain it, the Romans might have been expelled Spain; but they, proud of their Success, spent the time in Sports: In the mean while the Pretors gathered their difpersed Forces, and engaged the Spaniards near the River Tagus, gave them such a fatal Overthrow, that 30000 of them were put to the Sword; the Pretors returning to Rome, Triumphed over Lusitania. The Pretorships of Aulus Terentius Varro, and Publius Sempronius Longus, and of Publius Manlius, and Quintus Fulvius Flaccus were not very remarkable; at length Lucius Postumius, and Tiberius Sempronius Longus came into Spain. The first spent two years in War with the Lusitanians, sometimes Victorious, and fometimes Worsted: He understanding that the Vauci joined in League with the Interamnenses, to equal the Romans, with wonderful celerity, entred Lusitania, where finding the Enemy ready to march, he Entrench-to secure himself in his Camp, making a disorderly retreat. Night coming on hindred any further Action. but with the day, Postumius affailing the Lusitanians, put them to flight, 35000 of them being killed this

ed: Then he sent out a Squadron of Horse to Skirmish with the Enemy, who received them so hotly, that the Pretor himself coming out to their relief, he was glad and the day before.

6. The Fortune of Rome and Lusicania continued various, till Marcus Manilius came Prætor; and the Lusitanians, chiefly stirred up by the Bracarenses, began again to make head. These chose for their General one of their Citizens, whom one Author calls Africanus; and another, Apimanus. Under his Conduct they gathered, to a mighty Number; and breaking into the Roman Provinces, they carried all before them. Manilius advanced out of Andaluzia, to meet the Enemy, then loaded with Booty; which Apamanus confidering would be a great Obstacle towards obtaining the Victory, he caused it to be burnt; reserving nothing but the Arms of his Soldiers, and Provision for four Days. The Lusitanians enraged at this Loss of their Plunder, so desperately charged Manilius, that they put him to flight, with the Loss of the greatest part of his Army. Calfurnius Piso being sent from Rome, to retrieve this Disgrace, he increased it with his own Defeat, and the Loss of 6000 Romans. This Victory made the Lusitanians so absolute Masters of the Field. that they wasted all the Country, from the River Guadiana, to the Streights of Gibraltar; and they perswaded the Vectores of Estremadura to join in League with them. Having subdued all the open Country, they next applied themselves to the Taking of Strong Holds, and leaving Garrisons in them, in Imitation of the Romans. Apimanus affaulting the Town of Bluftofenizes, was killed; and the Army wanting such a General, broke up; each Company taking its own Way home.

7. Apimanus being flain, as is before faid, the Lusitanians chose for their General one Casaro, a Man capable of fo great a Trust. He acquitted himself well of it, recruiting the Army with which his Predecessor had been fo often victorious, and invading the Roman Territowies; where he raifed fuch an Alarm, that the Senate of Rome, in great Halte, sent away the Consul, Quintus Fulvius Nobilior, with a great Army, to subdue the Quintus Celtiberi, and particularly the Numantians, whom they Fulvius began to grow jealous of. With Fulvius, came Lucius overthrows Mummius, as Prætor of Hispania Viterior. In his Ar-the Spamy were 15000 Romans, with whom he marched, niards. thinking to oppress C.esaro, loaded with the Booty of Andaluzia. C.esaro, to fave his Prey, retired towards Lusitania. Mummius, who was still at his Heels, at length overtook him at the Ford of Guadiana; and he ordering the Prey, with some Troops of Light-Horse, to be conducted over the River, advanced with another Body to Villaviciosa, and there kept the Prætor in play till they that had carried off the Booty returned: Then he drew out into the Plain, and there began a bloody Battel; but the Lufictions, not able to bear the Force of the R mans, were put to flight; Mummius pursuing them with a mighty bloody Slaughter. C.efaro played all the Parc of a bold Soldier, and a prudent General; fometimes facing his Enemy, and at other times calling upon his Men: At length, what with Intreaties, and The Spawhat with Threats, having formed a Body, he char-niards reged the Rimins, then dispersed, and out of Order, with turn and fuch Gallantry that they were drove back to their rout the Camp, with the Loss of 5000 Men. The Lusitanians Consultaking Heart, and again gathering Strength, affaulted defeated.

The History of PORTUGAL.

their Trenches, and beat them thence, killing 5000 more of them, but not without the Loss of 10000 of their own Men. Cafaro returned to Lusitania, victorious; and Mummius, with 5000 Men, retired to an Eminence, strong by Nature. Thence his Men came down, and defeated some Parties of Lusicanians, who dragged the Colours they had taken in their fight; and several Colours, and part of the Booty was recovered: Cafaro returned, and though he met with great Oppofition, obliged the Enemy to ascend the Mountain for Safety. Then Mummius vowed, if he were victorious. to build a Temple in that Place to Proferpina; and charging the Lufitanians, discomfited them, killing their General Cafaco. In pursuance of his Vow, he there built a Temple to Proferpina, which is supposed to have stood near the new Church of St. James the Apostle, by Villaviciosa, if it be not the same.

8. Whilft Mumnius was bulie in building his Tem? ple, the Lusitanians, nothing dismayed, chose for their General a Citizen of Lubon, called Canchenus. He immediately marched to the City Cunesturgi, (lituate near the Place where the Town of Niebla now stands) where was a Roman Garrison; and in a few Days he made Bimself Master of it, putting many to the Sword, and - exerciling great Cruelty. Proud with this Success. Canchenus marched to the River Guadalquivir, without meeting any Opposition; and thence, in like manner, to Gibraltar, plundering all the Country. Here the Army was divided into two Parts, one defigned to make a Conquest in Mauritania; the other, to expel the Romans out of Andaluzia. Whilst the Former were employed in building Veffels to carry them over the Streights, the Latter marched into the Province: And being come to the City Orelis, (Juppole to be Origuela, among the Bastetani, they found the Enemy encamped, and well fortified, before the Town. The Army being fate down before them, many of the Forces marched out to plunder the neighbouring Villages. Munmius laying hold of this Opportunity, fell upon them, laden with Booty, and killed about 15000 of them; the rest fled into Lusicania, robbing the open Towns as they went. The Lusitanians, who inhabited that part of Estremadura where the Tagus runs into Porrugal, ravaged all the Lands of C file: But Munming, with his usual Celerity, coming upon them, and finding them dispersed, made a mighty Slaughter of them. and so ended his Przetorship with Honour. Marcus Atilius came from Rome, to command in Lusitania, which he found in Arms, and the neighbouring Provinces cruelly invaded. Atilius gave them Battel, and, though they Atilius abehaved themselves with much Bravery, the Romans gain overhad the Victory. Atilius then laid Siege to the City throws Ostraze; and taking it by Assault, left no Creature alive them. that was in it: Nay, the very Stones he so dispersed, that nothing remains of that City, but the Name. This Desolation brought the Lusicanians to treat of Peace; and upon tolerable Conditions, they submitted themselves to the Romans. Many others also followed their Example.

9. This Peace was not lasting; for the Vettones perceiving that Atilius was far from them, they so managed the Affair, that they prevailed with the Lusitanians who lived about Ostraze to violate the League so lately made. Winter hinder'd Atilius from putting a Stop to their Proceedings; and Sergius Galba, his Successor, was now come into Spain: He, jealous of the Power of the Lufitanians, resolved upon a piece of Treachery, which laid an Eternal Blot upon the Honour of Rome. But Actions of whilst the Winter passes, let us see what was done by the Lusites the other half of Canchenus's Army, left at Gibralear, to nians in pass over into Africk. Their first Work was, to pil-Africk. lage and ranfack all the open Country; then laying Siege to Tangier, they soon became Masters of it; but finding little to fatisfie their Avarice, they embarked again, and returned over into Spain. At that time the Conful Lucullus was, with his Army, among the Turdetani, who inhabited along the Coast of the Ocean, from Guadiana to Smill. He immediately marched against them, and killing some, the rest retired to a strong Hill; which the Conful finding to be inaccetable, he laid Siege to them, and they began to be pinched with Hunger: Therefore, in Despair, they came down with fuch Fury, that they broke through the Roman Army, but left many Prisoners behind. Lucullus, after this, pierced into Lustrania, without meeting any Opposition, it being then Winter, when the Remans used not to wage War.

Jist n Zewidand -Spaniards. ain by

Mum-.2E !!!

10. Sergius

Galba go-

10. Sergius Galba, the Prætor, having taken a rich

verns the Booty, returned to Andaluzia. No sooner did the Province. Spring begin to appear, but the Lusitanians, desirous of Revenge, broke into the Roman Province, obliging the Prætor to take the Field sooner than he had designed. He thought to have surprized them, but they received him in good Order, and a bloody Battel enfued. in which the Lusitanians were put to the Rout; Galba pursuing them with more Fury than Discretion: They that fled, observing his Army disordered, taking the Advantage, faced about with such Courage and Fortitude, that the victorious Romans were cut down, only the Prætor, with a few Horse, escaping. Galba gathering 20000 Men, and perceiving the Enemy followed their Husbandry in great Security, he passed the River Guadiana, near Ayamonte, and brought his Army amongst the Turdetani of Algarve, burning all before him. The People being unprovided sued for Peace; which Galba, with a treacherous Design, seemed to anprove of; promising to admit of them as Friends, and to make an equal Distribution of Lands among them: To which purpose they were all appointed three several Places where to meet him, that each Man might receive his Proportion. Accordingly they met in three Valleys, not far distant from one another, but covered by the Mountains that encompassed them. Here Galba, with fair Speeches, perswaded them first to lay down their Arms; which done as was directed, and his Army divided into three parts also, he caused each of them to fall upon one of those Parties of Lusitanians; who being before disarmed, were slaughter'd like Sheep, to the Number of 9000. Amongst the few that escaped was Viriatus, afterwards the Terrour of the Romans; in killing whom, Gaiba had done his Country more Service, than in the Slaughter of all the rest.

CHAP.

The History of PORTUGAL.

CHAP. V.

The Exploits of the Great Viriatus, his several Victories over the Romans, with his last Actions, Death, and place of Burial.

1. THE Renowned Viriatus, who as has been said. escap'd from the Massacre, committed by Galba in the three Vallies, was a Lusitanian without the mixture of any other Nation. Some Authors fay, he was a common Robber, others will have him a Car-Viriatus rier, others a Sheperd, and lastly, others say, he went his Origina through all these mean Employments. Whatsoever nalhe was before, at the time that Galba offered Peace to the Lusitanians, and Murdered so many in Cold Blood, he was one of them that were willing to hearken to his Proposals, and made his escape from the Slaughter. His mind burning with defire of Revenge, as foon as he heard that Galba was departed, hereturned to the place of the Maffacre, where caufing his Companions to thrust their Hands into the yet fresh wounds of some Maidens, they swore by their Souls, not to desist from feeking Revenge as long as they were able to bear Arms. This done, Viriatus ranging throughout Lusitania, stirred up the People, raised a good Body of Men. and breaking into Carpertania destroy'd all as he went, and returned home with a rich Booty. Then he caused his followers to reiterate the Oath they had taken, Sacrificing one of their Prisoners, and a Horse; and so every Man pailing by, thrust his Hand into the Belly of each Sacrifice, vowing to do the like to the Roman Armv.

2. It was now the beginning of the Year, 148 before the coming of Christ, 3114 from the Creation, and 2281 from the Deluge, when the Pretor Marcus Verilius, a Man of known Valour, came to suppress the Tumults in Lusitania. Viriatus with 10000 Fighting Men was entring Andaluzia rather as every Mans Companion, than Commander, as not daring to chastise them; with his Example and good Words, endeavoured to drawback those that scattered to Plunder; but his Men not subject to Command, could not be contained within Bounds, which he Pretor perceiving, he He is mor- he fell upon them, and having killed a greatenumber. find by M. eafily put the rest to flight. Viriatus gathering the re-Vetilius, mains of his scattered Forces, fled to a City near, and there provided to oppose the Enemy: It was not long before the Romans came and affaulted the City, but finding they had fustained great loss, the Pretor resolved to carry it by a long Siege: So far had he prevailed, that fo ne principal Men among the Befieged began to treat of a Surrender, without confulting Viriatus, for as yet. they owned him not for their Superiour. arus understanding there was such a design, but not who were the Managers of it, having in a raging Poflure ran about, and in that manner gathered the Multitude to him, fo efficaciously perswaded them to stand upon their Defence, and to have no Faith in the Remans, that they lifted him upon their Shoulders, and carrying him about the Walls, with loud crys, Proclaimed him their General.

rained

3. The next day after he was proclaimed General, Viriatus drew out 1000 Horse, which was all he had, and facing the Romans made show as if he designed to break through them, which Vetilius the Pretor perceiving, he kept his Men in a readiness to receive him. But Viriatus's defign being only to amuze the Enemy, whilst his Foot escaped out of the City, he continued in the same Polture the greatest part of the day. At length understanding there was no Man lest in the City, all his Foot being got into the Mountains, he stood the Enemies Charge, and kept them in play till Night, when through by-ways he hasted to the City Tribola, whether he had fent his Foot. This Gty stood upon the Coast between the Mouth of Guadiand and Gibraltar, whence may be inferred that the other whence he came, was not far off. Vetilius in the Morning followed Viriatus, who having by the way increased his Forces, lay in wait on the Mountains that hung over a Valley, into which there were two narrow Passes, capable of only three Horsemen going in abreast: Into this place the Romans entred without fear, and turning their Horses to grass, took themselves to their rest. Viriatus giving the Sign to his Men to fall on, the Romans on a fudden found themselves beset on all sides, and being unThe History of PORTUGAL.

armed, were put to the Sword without Mercy. A-Vetilius

mong them dyed the Pretor; his Questor with such as Routed, and escaped the Slaughter, and some Andaluzians, thinking Slain. to Revenge this Disgrace, engaging with Viriatus, lost 10000 Men. The next Year, Viriatus with Fire and Sword ranged all Carpentania as far as Toledo, without meeting any Opposition. Thus was he employed when Caius Plaucius the Roman General, who came to Command in Lusitania with 10000 Foot, and 1200 Horse, thought to have surprized him and his Men, being now mostly dispersed about in burning the Country. Viriatus tho weak, kept the Romans in play still retiring till getting into the Mountains, on a sudden they had lost him. Plaucius sent 4000 Men to purfue and impede his March till he could come up with the rest of the Army; but he turning upon them, cut them all off before the Pretor could Relieve them, and having gained the Ford of Tagus, speedily passed over it, and returned into Lusitania. Viriatus having gathered Strength, encamped in a strong place, now called Pomares, near Evora, whither Plaucius followed him, and was so received, that his whole Army turned their Backs. The Pretor fought with much Brave-Viriatus ry, and with his Example brought back his Men, but defeats all in vain, for they were again put to flight, and Plau- Plaucius.

cius himself, with difficulty escaped.

4. Now was Viriatus mafter of the Field, ranging about Spain, and the Romans flut up in their Garifons, when Claudius Unimanus, a most expert Captain, was fent by the Senate to command in Lusitania: Viriatus H. Over-Marching with a strong Body of Lustranians, the Pre-throws Cl. tor with a mighty Army met him, but foon found Unimahow little confidence was to be placed in a Heartless nus. Multitude, for in the Field of Ourique he was overthrown, scarce any of his Army escaping Death or Bondage. This done, Viriatus returned Victorious into Lusitania. In the mean while Unimanus sent to Cajus Nigidius, the Pretor of the other Province, to give the Enemy a diversion. He entred the Territory of Riba de Coa, and marched along the River destroying all before him. Viriatus with all speed made towards him, and overtook him near to the City Vijeo; where Nigidius in a plain, strongly intrenched himself. There Pirjasus kept him belieged till Hunger foreing him to break

147.

146.

ion:

Ej. spes

145.

Nigidius break out, he with Difficulty escaped, having lost the best part of his Army, and all his Ensigns. About from him, 1000 of those that fled, gathering together, began to plunder the Villages, as they passed; and meeting 300 Lusitanians, laden with Booty, fell upon them; But they were so hotly received, that having lost 300 of their Men, and killed but 70 of the Enemy, they were glad to suffer the rest to march off with their Plunder. Another Body of the Romans, having taken a rich Booty, led 500 Captives away, the one half whereof were Women, who observing that no great Regard was had of them, only their Hands bound behind, in the dead time of the Night they unbound one another, and afterwards the Men; then seizing the Arms of the Romans, buried in Sleep, put most of them to the Sword before they waked; only a few escaped by the Favour of the Night. Next Morning the Victors put the Armour of the Romans upon their Women. Ormia, a modest Lusiranian Woman, being taken by another Party, and long courted by her Keeper to consent to his Luft, she at length seemingly complied; wherewith being delighted, he put himself into her Power; so that she waiting her Opportunity, when he slept, with his own Sword cut off his Head, and carried away both to her Husband, as a Token that she had preserved her Chastity: Which done, not so content, she killed her self before his Face. 5. Caius Lelius, a Man of great Valour, came Præ-tor into Spain; but Authors do not mention any Success he had against Viriatus: Perhaps it was thought enough that he lost nothing. Two Years after, Fabius Emilianus was fent, with a Consular Army of 18000 Men, to put an End to the War. Viriatus, hearing of his coming into Andaluzia, broke into the Roman Province, doing greater Harm than before, and took two Cities, into which he put Garrisons. Fabius, that the Gods might be favourable to his Undertakings, went to offer Sacrifice in the Temple of Hercules, at Cadiz; strictly charging his Officers, upon no Account to stir out of the Camp before his Return. The next Day Viriatus appeared before the Roman Army, at fuch time as certain Foragers were returning, with a Guard; of whom he cut off the greatest part: A good Body of Horse isluing out of the Camp, to relieve their Companions, drove back the Lusitanians to their Main Body: but they were there so fiercely charged, that few of them returned back. Fabius coming from his Sacrifice. stormed that his Orders had been disobeyed. Some Day's Fabius E. after, about Midnight, he marched, in great Silence, milianus two Miles forwards, and surprizing the Lustranian obliges Vi-Camp, obliged Viriatus confusedly to retire to Vecor, a riatus to ftrong Place; where not thinking it fafe to attack him. retire. he marched away to recover the two Cities lately garrison'd by the Lusitanians. The Inhabitants of the Province between Duero and Minho took up Arms against those of Galicia: Lucius Hostilius Mancinus, the Consul, Hostilius Emilianus's Colleague, fearing left they should invade Mancinus the Vaccei and Celtiberi, came so suddenly upon them, overshouses that he, without any Difficulty, overthrew 30000 of 30000 them, killing many, and putting the rest to flight. Spaniards Popilius succeeded Emilianus in the Government of Lusitania, when Viciatus finding himself weak, made some Overtures of Peace deceitfully, for at the same time he flirred up the People about Numantia to make War; and he, in the Territories of Riba de Coa, committed all manner of Cruelties upon the Romans, even upon those that submitted themselves to him. Popilius hast-Popilius ing to their Relief, was in a pitch'd Battel shamefully roused. put to flight, with the Loss of the best of his Army.

The History of PORTUGAL.

6. Viriatus was far enter'd into Castile; but understanding that the new Prætor, Quintus Pompeius, was marching towards Lufitania, he turned back to defend his own Country. The two Armies met near Evora, Viriatus where a bloody Battel was fought; Pompey obtained the putto Higher Victory, and Viriatus fled to the Mountain of Venus: by Pom-Here he gathered new Strength; and encouraging the Pey. Ticii, Vaccei and Beli, who followed him, he marched again to meet the Romans, whom he forced to take Shelter in their Trenches, leaving behind them 27 Enligns, and 4000 Men flain, whereof 500 were Horse. The Prætor thus shut up within his Works, Viriatus enter'd Andaluzia, and summoned Utica, which was kept by a firong Roman Garrison, who answered him with Scorn, calling him Robber. He, the better to compass his Revenge, marched away in great haste, as if he had fled, certain Troops of Horse, sent from the City, pursuing him in the Rear; whom he, without halting, repulled; and so they returned to their Garri140.

Fabius

Spanish

The History of PORTUGAL.

fon: But in the Dead of the Night he marched back; and croining feveral Valleys, diftant from the City, he left his Foot in an Ambuscade, himself, with the Horse. appearing before the City, so that many Morasses lay betwixt him and the Walls, which were impassable to any that knew them not as well as he. At Break of Day, his Party being decried from the Walls, they were supposed to be some Straglers of the Lusitanian Army, and therefore the Garrison sallied out upon them: Viriatus at first withdrawing, as if he had fled. drew them into the Marshes, where, when they were fast stuck, he faced about, and put them all to the Sword. Those of Utica, after this Action, expelled the Roman Garrison, and received one of the Lustranians. Viriatus moving thence, towards the Streights of Gibraltar, wasted the Territories of the Bastetani, Pompey not offering to oppose him.

7. The Conful Quintus Fabius Maximus Servilianus, was fent from Rome, with an Army of 20000 Men, to profecute this War; and Micipia, the African King, came to his Aid, with 10 Elephants, and 300 Numidian Horse. With this Force he murched to Utica, where Viriatus lay; who, after some Skirmishes, his Provision failing, retired into Lustrania, to secure the Harvest. In the mean while, a good Body of his Men, commanded by two noted Captains, called Curius and Apuleyus, broke into Andaluzia. The Conful, with his whole Army, marched towards them; and for the more Expedition, left his Baggage behind him, with a small Guard. The Lustinians informed thereof, took Maximus another Wav; and with a Compass, deceiving the defeate the Conful, plunder'd his Buggage. He turning suddenly upon them, whilst they were busie in robbing a Convoy of Provisions, put them to flight, killing Carius, their Captain, and recovering the Booty. Thence the Conful moving, he took five Towns, Garrison'd by the Lusianians, upon Arricles, which he performed not, turning them over to the Fury of his Soldiers. Viriatus hasted to revenge this Breach of Faith; and being come in fight of the Conful, he drew up his Foot in aSquare Battel, with his Horse on both Wings, but far advanced before the Foot, whom he ordered not to ffir till they faw how the Horse behaved themselves against the Elephants. They charged the Roman Horse, forcing

forcing them to retire to their Elephants; at the fight 139. of which, the Spanish Horse disorderly fled, the Ene- Another my fiercely pursuing: The Foot drew back in good Defeat of Order; and Viriatus perceiving the Enemy's Battel the Robroke in the Pursuit, rallying his Cavalry, he gave such mans. a Charge, that Servilianus, with his Elephants, fled, leaving 6000 Men dead. Soon after this, Servilianus pursuing a Lusitanian Robber, cailed Corroba, belieged him in a strong Place, where Funger forced him to furrender, upon Promise not only of Life, but that his Men should march off with their Arms; yet so, as to fwear, never more to employ them against the Romans, But the Conful, unmindful of his Promife, when he had all the Troop of Robbers, confifting of 500 Men, in his Power, cut off all their Right Hands, except the Captain's.

8. Spring coming on, all Lusitania was full of Warlike Preparations. Viriatus marched against the Conful, who had befieged the City of Erissana; and with wonderful Cunning, made his Way into it; where having well encouraged the Defendants, he fallied out fo furiously, that Servilianus was glad to retire to a Place of Advantage. Here he was to straiten'd, that he made Viriatus Proposals of Peace, which were agreed upon, and Vi-makes riatus allowed a Friend of the People of Reme. This Peace with done, the Armies parted, one into Andaluzia, the other the Rointo Lusitania. One of those who approved of the mans. Peace concluded, was Quintus Servilius Cepio, the Conful's Brother; yet afterwards confidering how diffionourable it was to Rome, he openly blamed his Brother, and by that Means obtained the Confulship, and a numerous Army, to better the Affairs of the Romans in Lusitania. Cepio kept his Designs so private, that the The Peace Liste mians thought of nothing but their Country-Af-broken. fairs. They were awaken'd by the News brought, that the Conful had, by Storm, taken the City of Arfa not far from Sevil. Viriatus was then at Valencia, who immediately marched with fome Troops towards Luftrania. By the Way he reduced Segorbe, which had revolted; when Copio appeared with a mighty Army: He finding himself too weak for so powerful an Army, with his Horse amused them, till his Foot were got into the Mountains. Cepio pursued him, to cut off his Retreat into Portugal. He, as he fled into the Heart of rius, Thur General.

Spain,

Viriatus

killed by

Treachery.

Spain, used excessive Cruelty to all that bore the Roman Name: But finding this turned not to Account, he fent an Ambassador to Cepio, to put him in mind of the Peace, fo folemnly, and fo lately concluded. The Conful having heard the Ambaffadors, and founded their Dispositions, with mighty Promises prevailed upon them to murder Viriatus. Their Names were, Di-Etaleon, Minurus and Aulaus; all three Captains of Note among the Lusitanians. These three having undertaken this base Action, returned, and for some time kept Viriatus in hand with the Hopes of Peace, till, waiting their Opportunity, in the Dead of the Night, they enter'd his Tent, and slew him as he lay asleep. Thence they fled, to give the Conful an Account of what they had done, whose Countenance they found altered; as it generally happens to Traytors, after they have committed the Treaton.

Tal-Pomp.

9. In the Morning, the Lustranians milling their General, they went into his Tent, where finding him dead, the whole Camp was filled with Lamentation; and in Revenge of his Death, they put all the Roman Prisoners to the Sword. To perform his Funeral-Rites with all imaginable Pomp, in the midst of the Field, they raised a valt Pile of Timber, leaving a Place for the Body. The Top of the Pile was adorned with Enfigns, and other Trophies of Arms. Then their Idolatrous Priest going up to the Top, called upon the Ghost of Viriatus; and killing some Captives, with their Blood sprinkled the Arms; which done, he came down, and fet fire to the Pile, which in a Moment confumed the Body. The Funeral-Rites thus performed, the Army chose one Tantalus for their General; but he wanting the Fortune and Conduct of Viriatus, could not fo much as lead back his People into their own Country, Servilius, to gain the Reputation of a merciful Conqueror, was content that the Lusitanians, delivering up their Arms, should be dispersed into several Parts. Viriatus, as to his Person, was of a large Stature, strong Limbs, curled Hair, large Eves broad Eye-brows, a stern Countenance, and a large hooked Nose. As to his Qualities, he was modest, liberal, prudent, of a ready Wit, and quick of Invention. Some of Viriatus's Soldiers gathering up his Ashes, brought them back into his own Country, and buried them, together with his Sword. In the time of King John the III. who reigned from the Year 1521 till 1557. in the Territory of Belas, two Leagues from Lisbon, and in the Lands of Peter Machado Carregueyro, in turning up certain old Ruins, was found a Stone Chest with this Inscription; Hic Jacet Viriatus Lusitanus Dux. In it was found a Sword, on which certain Characters were Engraven: The Prince and many other persons of Note saw it, and Machado offering to fell the Sword, they would give nothing for it, so he gave it to a Friend of his of the Island Madera, and by that means it was loft. The Cheft was broke in pieces, and no part of it remains.

The History of PORTUGAL.

CHAP. VI.

The Actions of the Lusitanians after the Death of Viriatus, from the Tear 133. before Christ till the Tear 80. when Sertorius takes upon him the Command, with his Exploits till the Tear 70.

1. THE Lusitanians not loosing their Courage, 130. though they had lost their General, broke our Tantalus again under their new Commander Tantalus, but not Commands with the same Fortune as before, being easily supprest the Lusised by the Consul Decius Junius Brutus, who reduced tanians. then to fue for Peace. It was granted upon tolerable Conditions, one whereof was, that he should assign them Lands to live upon: These Lands were along the delightful Southern Coast, upon the River Turia, now Guadalaviar, where they built the most famous City Valencia; the foundation whereof is therefore affigned to Brutus the Conful. This Army thus Disbanded, Brutus entred Lusitania, without meeting any opposition, till he came to Eburobricium, a City seated on the Sea-coast near to which now stands the Town of Alfazeyran; the Inhabitants of this place adventured to come out a League from their Walls, and give the Conful Battle. He in the heat of the Fight, vowed he would there build a Temple to Neptune, if he obtain-

Brutus

Conful

takes the City La-

325.

about Brabrica.

The History of PORTUGAL.

ed the Victory; and having without much difficulty overthrown his Enemy, performed his Vow: He laid Siege to the City, and foon was Mafter of it.

2. The next Year, Brutus with his victorious Army, passed over the rapid River Duero, and coming unexpectedly upon the People that inhabited between that River and Minho, made a great flaughter of them. which obliged fuch as could escape to Hy to the Mountains. Thence in Parties they came down, and cut off many of his Men. nav. the very Women showed such Valour, that the Conful was obliged to kill a great number of them; but perceiving the harm was done him from the Mountains, he fell to Burning all the plain Country, with fuch Fury, that the People were glad to beg a Peace, which was easily granted: Thus the Conful was at leafure to Beliege the City Labrica, the Roman the Inhabitants whereof immediately submitted, but no fooner had he turned his back, than they began to fortify themselves, and falling upon such Romans, as were left in their Neighbourhood, cut them in pieces. This News being carried to Brutus, he turned back, and encompating the City, forced the Inhabitants to come out without Arms into the open Field; there taking them into the middle of his Army, and having feverely reproved them for their Perfidiousness, when they expected nothing but present Death, he ordered them to return again to their City, and be more faithful for the future. From that time forward they continued in Subjection, but could not be brought to serve against their own Country,

3. The Roman Army advanced to Braga plundering the Country, but the Citizens fallying out in a good Body, surprized and carried away a Convoy of Provifions that was going to the Camp. Brutus, in revenge, deftroyed all before him, and the Bracarenses more of fended then terrified, marched fix Miles out of the City to give him Battle; the Women here played the part of most valiant Soldiers, and after the Fight had long stood doubtful, the Romans were put to flight: The Bracareases over-secure in their Victory, lay a-He destroys bout the Fields without any Watch, which Brutus imathe Country gining, having rally'd his Forces, he came upon them, and having well revenged his Difgrace with the Death of many, the rest fled to the Shelter of their Walls. He

affaults

affaults the City which the Inhabitants disdaining, the Men sallied out, leaving the Women to guard the Walls; but they resolving not to be out-done by the Men, rushed out after them, and so together repulsed the Romans to their Trenches. This made the Conful give over the Attack, and changing his manner of proceeding, wafled all the Country about; in this manner the Conful came to the River Lina, formerly called Lethe. It was the common Opinion, that those who passed it, forgot their Countries; for which reason, Brutus his Soldiers could not be perswaded to enter the Ford. He to undeceive them, fnatching an Enfign from the Bearer, set Spurs to his Horse and passed over; then calling to his Soldiers, told them many things of Rome, to convince them he had not forgot it, and by this means he perswaded them to venture over the River. The Camponeses who inhabited on the other side, came to hinder their paffage, but were repulfed, and the whole Army gained the farther Bank. The People of Galicia, to the Nar number of 50000, coming to the relief of their Neigh- 60000 Gabours, were by Brutus in their passage over the River licians de-Minho so intirely overthrown, that the greatest part was stroyed. either Drowned, put to the Sword, or made Captives. The loss of this powerful succour so discouraged the Lustranians, that they suffered the victorious Army to range about at pleasure, taking many Towns without the least opposition.

4. The City Cinania stood resolutely upon its Defence, and Brutus offered them Peace if they would buy it. Their Answer was, That their Ancestors had left them their Swords and Valour to maintain their Liberty, not Gold to purchase it: Certain it is, this City was many Years after destroyed by another Power. Brutus, spent two Years in those parts, his Command being still prolong- 122. ed to him, because he was Fortunate: He now stilling himself Conqueror of Galicia and Lustrania, marched against the Inhabitants of the Province of Beira, who be- Brutus ing a fierce Barbarous People, put him to much trouble Conquers in passing Rivers, and piercing the uncouth Mountains, Lusitania till at last coming to a Battle, he was worsted; yet re- and Galicovering again, he obtained a Victory, but at fo dear a cia, and rate, thus he would gladly have been without it with a triumphs rate, that he would gladly have been without it, rather than have sustained such loss. After this, he again pasled over Tagus, and relided three Years in the City Morus, then standing where now the Castle of Almourol is: he ended his Government with fuch Reputation, that the Roman Senate unanimously voted he should triumph over the Lusitanians and Gallicians.

7315

120.

5. Whilst the Proconsul Decius Junius Brutus trium. phed, and Rome wasted with Civil Wars, could not carry on its Foreign Expeditions, the Senate fent Governours, who might supply their want of strength by policy and obliging the Natives. The project proved ineffectual, for a powerful Army broke out of Lufitania, confuming all that stood in its way belonging to the The Lusi-Romans; Caius Marius the Proconsul, who had gained tanians re. Reputation at Numantia, put a stop to this Torrent. He brought not numerous but choice Forces from Rome, are reduced and joyning them to those he found in Spain, marched to repress the fury of the Lusitanians; he worsted them, but they affembling a greater power again, gave him a considerable Deseat: Nevertheless, the Proconsul nothing terrifyed, as being well used to the various Fortunes of War, calling together the Celtiberi, and drawing his old Soldiers out of the Garrisons, in several rencounters, overthrew the Lusitanians in such manner; that for some Years, we have no account of them. After that time of filence, they again began to disturb the Province of Hispania Viterior, so that Calfurnius Piso was sent from Rome against them; it is natural to guess he had no great success, because very soon after Servini Sulpicius Galba was sent to succeed him; neither is it likely that Galba sped much better, for in the Town of Condeixa, there is still an antient Inscription which denotes some hot piece of service, in which Galba lost many Men of Note. His Successor was Quintus Servilius Cepio, Son to him that dishonourably contrived the Death of Viriatus; the particulars of what he did are not known, but fure it was much, fince he was allowed to triumph at Rome. A powerful Roman Army ranged in Lusicania, but with such ill success, that not a Man escaped to carry home the News of their loss.

This fatal stroke produced a quiet Peace for four Years, which ended in a great Victory obtained over the Lusi-L. Corn tanians by Decius Junius Silinus. Yet the vanquished Dolabella gathering new Forces, made a mighty havock in all again sub- the Province of Hispania Ulterior. Lucius Cornelius Dodues them. labella was sent in hast Proconsul from Rome, to remedy this growing Evil. He behaved him felf so prudently, that the Lusit anians were obliged to lay down their Arms, and keep within their own Borders, for which it was granted him to triumph at Rome.

6. All these Calamities were not enough to subdue the Lusitanians, and therefore the Romans designing utterly to extirpate them, sent the Consul Publius Lici-nius Crassus against them. He behaved himself so well.

that he was continued in that Government four Years, that Honour, was the War with the People between the Rivers Duero and Minho. There he had first knowledge of the Islands called Cassierides, which some im-down to the Feet, girt upon the Breast, all of them car-Nations, particularly the Carthaginians, for Hides, and Lead, and Tin, whereof they had great Plenty; still the Proconsul Licinius Crassus, by fair means, drew them to the Roman Friendship. The cruel Wars between Marius and Sylla, hindred the Romans from send-that opportunity, and with a numerous Body breaking into the Roman Provinces, exercised the utmost Cruelty, sparing neither Sex nor Age, and this made the Roman Commanders quit the weaker places, and retire to those of more safety. But in the height of this their torius) who in two great Battles, though with much difficulty, overthrew the Lusitanians; This made them sensible, that they only wanted a General, and therefore pitched upon Sertorius, who was then in Mauritania.

doing incredible harm in the Country, and at last triumphed at Rome: The chief service that acquired him

agine to be those of Bayona in Galicia, and others be-The Islands lieve they were swallowed by the Sea; they were ten in of Bayona Number, one of them only inhabited; the Natives of a in Galicia. fwarthy Complexion, their cloathing a long Gown nied Staves in their hands. They traded with other 87.

ing Supplies into Spain; the Lusicanians took hold of 85.

prosperity, came Caius Annius, (sent by Sylla after Ser- 83.

7. Sertorius was well known in Spain for the share he Sertorius had in the War of Numantia; he was born in Italy a- his Origin. mong the Sabini, of an indifferent Family, neither Great nor Despicable: His first Years he spent in the Schools, the best and last in the Army. Being ill treated at Rome, he fled into Spain, and then into Africk, where in the City of Tangier, he found the body of the Gyant

109.

107.

104.

99.

The History of PORTUGAL.

He comes into Lusi-

His Pra-Eisses. Anteus, and other pieces of Antiquity: Here Ambassa. dors sent from Lusitania found him, and in the Name of the People, invited him to come and Command them. which he immediately accepted, and came over with the Ambassadors. At his first Arrival, he gained the good will of all Men, by his Affability and Bounty. and chose Evora for a place of Arms; when he had taken an Oath of Fidelity of the Lustranians, he visited the Province, accompanied with 700 Horse and 4000 Foot, and with all possible Diligence, provided all Necessaries for War: The Neighbouring People perceiving it, offered him their Service, as did others farther off, moved by their Example. Among them the City Osca, which Tradition will have to be that in Aragon. a strong Place, where Sertorius settled an University: This he did for his own Security rather than the Instruction of the People, that he might there have the principal Youth of the Country together as Hostages; for the fixing of this University Professors of all Sciences, came from Teveral Countries. To strenghten his Enterest the more, he made use of another practice, which is, that having a Hind brought him, he made her fo tame, that she followed him in the Army, amidst the Noise of Arms, and the People admiring thereat, he gave out, it was sent him by the Goddess Diana, to give him advice how to behave himself in the War. When he understood that any of his Captains had gained a Victory, he caused the Hind to be Crown'd with Flowers by him, he entrusted with the Secret, and as foon as let loofe, she would run to him, and he putting his Ear to her Mouth, would discover what he had been told before, saying, Diana gave him that intelligenee by the Mouth of the Hind: This Fraud made the People follow him, as if he were somewhat more than Man.

His Warlike Exploits. 8. Sertorius having thus gained the Affections of the Lusitanians, and secured their Children, as Hostages, at Osca, ventured to take the Field, against the Romans, with only 8000 Men, whereof 5000 were Lusitanians, the rest Italians and Africans. Nine Years he maintained War against Rome, and against sour of its best Generals, who brought over 7000 Horse, and 122000 Foot, besides the Spanish Auxiliaries. His first Exploit, was, the subduing most part of the Province of Carpens tania i

tania; where he found little or no Resistance. Next. he defeated Cota, the Roman Admiral, who kept the Streights of Gibraltar, and hinder'd Supplies from coming to him out of Mauritania. Sailing victorious up the River Guadalquiver, he surprized, at Break of Day. the Roman Army, under the Command of Didius, who lay encamped upon the Banks of the River, and put the greatest part of it to the Sword. Herculeus, one of his Captains, was fent out by him, against Lucius Domitsus, who, by Order of the Consul, Quintus Metellus Pius, destroyed all the Country between Andaluzia and the Pyrenean Mountains. Herculeus pursuing, overtook him in Aragon, where he overthrew his Army, and killed him. The Fame of this Defeat moved Manilius, Proconful of Gallia Novbonensis, to pass the Mountains with a mighty Army of Romans and Gauls, in hopes to gather together the few scatter'd Remnants of Domitius's Army. But the Victor, flushed with his late Success, met him near Lerida, where a most bloody Battel was fought, and Manilius routed, with a terrible Slaughter of the Roman Legions; but, above all, of the French Horse. In the mean while, Sertorius stuck close to Metellus; who perceiving himself to be still upon the Lofing Hand, resolved to alter his Method of Carrying on the War, and laid Seige to Lacebriga, now called Lagos, in the Kingdom of Algarve. Want of Water preffed the Besieged; but Sertorius, with great Rewards, prevailed with 2000 Soldiers to break through the Roman Camp, with each of them a Skin-full of Water. This Supply encouraged the Lacobrigenses, till Sertorius could come to raise the Seige: But Metellus, hearing of his Preparations, marched away, and left it. Want of Provisions forced him to depart: for Sertorius had cut off a Legion that was coming to him, with a Convoy. Metellus marched into Andaluzia, Sertorius keeping close at his Heels, and came to Ofca, where the Lusitanian Youths were, defigning to take that Place; but it was well provided: Besides, the Lusitanian Army being upon his Back, he marched away to Cartagena; and Sertorius returned to Evora. Thus it appears, that Osca, where the University was erected, was not in Arragon, as some will have it; but in Andaluzia. At Evora, Sertorius received Ambassadors from Mithridates, King of Pontus: He proposed to settle Amity, for the subduing of Italy; offered Ships, and asked some Lusitanian Sol. diers: Besides, he offered to Sertorius the whole Dominion of Asia. Sertorius received the Ambassadors with Majesty, promised the Supply of Soldiers, and afterwards sent it. The Ambassadors being dismissed, Ser. torius employed himself in making Provision for the next Campaign, and exercifing his Men; knowing he could not expect long to enjoy Peace.

9. In the mean time came Pompey the Great, from Rome, and was joined by Metellus. Marcus Perpenna came also from Sardinia, with 30 Veterane Troops, to the Assistance of Sertorius. The Lusitanians, encouraged with this Aid, and lying now in fight of the Romans, pressed their General to lead them out to Battel: But he weighing the mighty Power of the Enemy, meditated how to gain some Advantage by Policy. Part of his Army, carried away with Heat, and forgetful of good Discipline, adventured, contrary to his Orders, to charge the Romans, but came off with Dishonour; which nothing displeased Sertorius. Here it was, that he convinced his Men, by the Example of two Horses; One, very lean and poor, he gave to a lufty Young Man, ordering him to pull out the Hair of his Main and Tail; which he attempting to draw out by Handfulls, laboured much, but profited little. The other, being a beautiful, strong Horse, he gave to an ancient Man, for the same purpose; and he plucking Hair by Hair, did that with Ease, which the other could not do with great Pains. Thus, he faid, they were to proceed against the Romans, whom it was impossible at one Stroke to overthrow; but easie to compass at many. Sertorius laid Seige to Laurona, (now Leiria,) 4 Leagues trom Valencia, on the Banks of the River Xucar. Pompey and Metellus came to raise the Seige, but lost 10000 Men in the Attempt; and endeavouring to gain a Rifing Ground, which lay opportunely for putting of supplies in the Town, they found Sertorius had prevented them. Next Pompey deligned to beliege the Lusitanian Army, hemming it in between his own and the Town, but Sertorius having left 6000 Men in Ambush, they attacked him in his approach; so that he was glad to return to his Camp, and look on whilst the City was taken and Burnt. The Roman Army confisted of 1000 Horseand 20000 Foot, but the Lusitanians were 70000 itrong.

The History of PORTUGAL.

This done, Servorius returned victorious to Evora, which Place he fortified with strong Walls, and brought Water to it from several Springs, through a stately Aqueduct. His whole Family, at this time, confifted of an old Nurse, and three Slaves: And though he was Sovereign in Portugal for some Years, he had no House of his own. Now it was, he built one so small, that it would not contain an ordinary Gentleman of our Times. He married at Evora the Daughter of a Noble Citizen, called Firmius Liberius; by whom he had no Children. 10. Spring coming on, Pompey and Metellus drew out of their Winter-Quarters; and marching through Andaluzia, separately strove to recover those Places which Sertorius had Garrison'd. But he, losing no Time, advanced against Pompey, and met him on the Banks of the River Xucar. Pompey resolved to fight, that Metellus might have no Share in the Honour of the Action: And Sertorius thought best to have to do with them apart. Thus agreed, they drew out; Sertorius Sertorius facing Afranius, and Perpenna, Pompey. The Charge worsted by being given, Servorius began to gain upon Afranius; Pompey when understanding that Perpenna gave way to Pompey, and Mehe hasted thither, and presently put the Enemy to tellus. flight. In the mean while, Afranius, encouraging his Men, had almost routed that Wing which Sertorius left near possessed of Victory; but he returning thither, soon restored the Battel. Now had Pompey's Army been entirely cut off, but that Metellus appearing, Serwius stayed his Soldiers from the Pursuit, and said, Hait, halt; for I would have fent this Boy to Rome, well scourged, had not that old Woman snatched him out of my Hands. However, Merellus did not attempt any thing upon the Victors; contenting himself to have saved the flying Army. Sertorius returning to his Camp, missed his Hind, lost in the Hurrey of the Battel, which made him extreamly melancholy: But some time after, certain Country-men bringing him Tidings of her, he ordered them to conceal the Matter; and, at a tertain Time appointed, to turn her loofe: Then caling together his Chief Officers, he told them, The Godes of the Woods had appeared to him, assuring him, that be Hind should return, with Instructions how he should bewe himself. Whilst he was yet talking, the thind, set loose,

The History of PORTUGAL.

loose, came running to him; and laying her Head betwixt his Knees, licked his Hands.

11. It is incredible, how much the whole Army rejoiced at the Return of the Hind: And Sertorius, to make use of that Heat, marched towards Valencia, where Metellus was, wasting the Country. He so hemmed him up in a Plain, that he must either perish, or fight. However, he fent Mummius, with a Party of Horse, to conduct a Convoy of Provisions to him. Sertorius having Notice thereof, marched out by Night; and in the Morning, putting the Guard to the Sword, he took the whole Convoy. Merellus contemning Sertorius, marched to feek him; and Perpenna, after him. Thus they were foon engaged, with such ill Success on the Romans side, that they began to fly. The old Merellus, disdaining to be thus disgraced, did Wonders exceeding his Age, till he fell wounded with Sertorius a Dart: And the Shame of losing their General bring. routed by ing back his Men, they so fiercely charged the Lusita-Metellus. nians, disorder'd in the Pursuit, that they recovered the Day; putting them to the Rout, with great Slaughter. Sertorius did all that Metellus had done before, to stay his Men; but could only stop the victorious Romans, till his Army escaped: Which done, he followed after, to a strong City, Itanding on an Hill. Merellus encompassed the Place, thinking to starve it; but Sertorius had before laid in sufficient Stores. A few Days after, with a Party of Light Horse, he made his Escape, deceiving the Roman Guards, and returned fafe into Lustrania, where he was received with unexpresfible Joy.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

The remaining Actions of Sertorius, from the Tear 70, before the Birth of Christ, till his Death, which was in the Tear 68. What else happen'd in Lusitania, till the Coming of Julius Cæsar; and his Exploits, till the Tear 57, before Christ.

1. THE following Year Sertorius put to Sea with a 70. Fleet, resolving to destroy all the Ships he The Rofound in the Roman Harbours; and in a short time, mans sufscouring the Mediterranean, he did great Harm. This tain great was a great Loss to Pompey and Metellus; but a greater Losses by they sustained by the Means of Herculeius, a Lusicanian Sectorius. Captain, who cut off fix Troops of Horse and a Legion, which, under the Command of Precus Emilianue, were conducting a great Convoy of Provisions. This put the Roman Generals upon taking new Methods; Pompey went away to Navarre, whilit Metellus gave an Account of his Losses to the Senate of Rome, and preffed for confiderable Supplies. They came actordingly; and the two Generals took the Field again. Metellus marching apart from Pompey, near Italica, (which was not far from Sevil,) was met by Herculeius, and so pressed, that he betook himself to a Mountain. The Lusitanian Army lay at the Foot of the Hill, daring the Romans to give Battel. Merellus waiting an Opportunity, took it so aptly, that he killed and made Prisoners 20000 of Herculcius's Army, driving the rest out of the Field; and was so delighted with this great Success, that he caused Images of Victory, as he came into every Town, to be let down artificially, with Garlands of Flowers to crown himself; as also, his Praises to be publickly sung. Servorius immediately marched to feek the Victor, who was on his Way to Catalonia: He did not overtake him, but cut off a Party of Horse that was carrying the News of the Victory, and some of the Prisoners, to Pompey. Herculeius was so much ashamed of his Defeat, that he absconded, and would not be feen; but Sertorius comforted him, and with much Difficulty, prevailed with him to appear again.

The History of PORTUGAL.

2. Sertorius leading a mighty Army against Metellus. who was in the Kingdom of Murcia, by the Way destroyed all the Province of Andaluzia; Metellus retiring to Valencia, where Pompey then was; who fent a Party of Light-Horse, to discover the Strength of Sertorius, and found his Army numerous, and in good Order. He passed the River Guadalaviar, near whose Banks the two Roman Generals lay encamped, on an advantageous high Ground. Both Armies being refolved to give Battel, and being drawn out in order to it, they stopped to see the Event of a single Combat between two Soldiers, who had challenged one another: Pompey's Soldier having killed him of Sertorius, taking off his Helmer to cut off his Head, he found it was his own Brother; whereupon, he immediately killed himself. This strange Accident put off the Battel for that Day; but the next Day after, they engaged with great Resolution; when, in the Heat of the Action, a and Pom-Soldier telling Sertorius that the General of the Horse pey again was killed, he struck him through the Body, that he Sertorius. might not terrifie others with that News: Yet neither this, nor all he could do, was enough to prevent his being put to the Rout, with the Loss of 6000 of his Men. It was no less Grief to Servorius, than the Loss of the Battel, that the City Valencia submitted to the victorious Romans; and much more, when other Places followed the Example of it; amongst which was Guadalaxara. Hither he marched with Speed; but the Inhabitants being fled to a Place almost inaccessible, full of many great Caves, they scoffed at him, asking whether he had Wings to come at them. He tried all Stratagems to reduce them, but nothing succeeded. At length he raised great Heaps of Sand and Dust oppofite to the Mouths of the Caves; and waiting till a strong North Wind blew directly in upon them, caused his Men, with Shovels, to cast up the Sand; which being so shaken, was by the Wind carried into the Caves so violently, that those within, being almost stifled, were glad to cry for Mercy. Sertorius forgave them all, and took nothing from them, but some ne-ceffary Provisions for his Army.

3. This

3. This last Action gained Sertorius great Reputation, as well of Policy to overcome, as of Clemency towards the vanquished; but his Forces being very much broken, some of the principal Romans that followed him, proposed to come to an accommodation with Pompey. Sectorius utterly rejected their Advice, faving. Since the Romans would not treat with him in his Prosperity he would never condescend to fue to them in his Adversity. And that his Actions might sute with his Words. tho' then weak and lately overthrown, hearing that Pampey had distressed Palencia, he hasted to the relief of the Besieged, and without loosing time, he Assaults the Romans, and his Men being much disordered in the Confusion, he was got so far among his Enemies, that his Horse being killed, he had inevitably perished, had not a Body of Lusivanians offered to Sacrifice their own lives for the defence of his. They desperately forced their way to the place where he was Fighting, and taking him into the midst of them, carried him off in fafety. He thus brought back to his Men, To encouraged them with his presence, that they obliged Pompey Herecovers to quit his Camp, and with it his Tents and Engines: and morfis Had not the Night been to near few Remove had offer the Ro-Had not the Night been so near, few Romans had esca-mans. ped, but they under the shelter of it, got away to places of fafety. In the mean while Metelius laid hard Siege to Calaborra, but the victorious Servorius drove him thence by main force, with the Slaughter of 2000 of his Men. and entring the Town, Commended the Fidelity of the Inhabitants. Here he was informed, that Metellus and Pompey joyning their Forces, lay before Ofca or Huesca his University; thither he hasted and Encamped at a small distance from them, so carelesly, that Metelhus forced him to take shelter in the Besieged City in great Confusion, leaving behind him many Armes and Horses, and much Ammunition: This frown of Fortune moved the Romans, who had hitherto followed Sertorius, to conspire against him. Here by the way, it is to be observed, That doubtless there were two Ofca's, since we Read, that before this time, they Fought in Andaluzia near Osca, and now again being in the Territories of Aragon, Sertorius fled to Osca.

4. Perpenna, that Roman who had hitherto so faithfully served Servorius, now tempted by the promised rewards, undertook to kill him: Sortorius himself in fome

some measure forwarded his Design, by putting to death the Sons of many Spaniards, who had revolted from him to the Romans, which rendred him odious to the People, and ministred an opportunity to Perpenna to compass his intended Treachery. Sertorius understan-Sertorius ding there was a Conspiracy against him, gave an ac-Murthered, count thereof to the Lusitanians, who were his Guard. and they immediately put to Death Ten of the Confpirators. None seemed more to commend this Execution, than Perpenna, who as it were, to divert Servorius, invited him to a Supper, whither he, suspecting nothing, went; and; in the height of his Mirth, was killed with 21 Wounds. The first that struck him was a Roman, called Antony: There was no less mourning at his Death among the Lusicanians, than had been for Viriatus, and many killed themselves at his Funeral The Hind that had always followed Servorius, seeing him Dead, finelling to him, and heavily Groaning, at length forbearing all Sustenance, fell down Dead by his side. The Lusitanians gathering his Ashes into an Urne. returned to Evora, where they were Honourably Entombed. The Magistrates of Evora, then the chief Government of Lusitania, consulting how to secure the Common-wealth, resolved not to alter any thing, till they faw what was done by Perpenna, with whom was the greatest part of Sertorius his Army, tho' many had forfaken him, feeing Pompey pressing upon them with a mighty Power.

The History of PORTUGAL.

5. Perpenna failing of the promised Reward of his Treachery from Metellus, was not content to have Murdered his General, unless he also usurped his Command. Therefore calling together the Heads of the Army, after inveighing against the Cruelty and Perfidiousness of Sertorius, he offered himself for their Leader: Many of them before bribed by him, eafily confented, and others feeing Pompey so near, complied with necessity least they should want a Head in that time of Danger. Pompey resolving the first thing he did to make Perpenna an end of Perpenna, accordingly marched hastily towards him, and he nothing Daunted, advanced to meet him: Both Armies being in fight of one another, fell to Fortifying their Camps. The Work ended, they spent the time in Skirmishes before they would ha-Lard a pitched Battle; but Perpenna's Forces decreased much, many by night Deferting, which obliged him to offer the Enemy Battle before he was quite forfaken: Tho' Pompey doubted not of the Victory, yet to make it secure, he laid an Ambush, and retiring, drew Perpenna into the Danger of it. Thus when he thought himself Victorious, he was fallen into the Snare. and immediately put to the Rout; he himself fled, and was as much afraid of his own Men, as of the Enemy. The Romans followed the Chace without giving any Quar-Ho is varter; certain Horsemen carried on with this heat, found que shed by Perpenna among the Shrubs and Bryars. He falling and put to down, begged his Life, affuring them, He would Death, make great Discoveries of principal Men in Rome, who kept Correspondence with Sertorius, which he could prove under their hands. The Captain of those Horse acquainted Pompey therewith, who ordered his Head to be immediately struck off, and those Papers to be brought to him: This being accordingly performed, Men of Note, whom their Conscience accused, were in a great Consternation in Pompey's Army, for that they had secretly favoured Sertorius; But, he fearing the ill confequence of fuch a Discovery, publickly Burnt all those Papers, and so quieted their Apprehenfions.

6. Afranius, a most Valiant Captain, by Pompey's Order, entred Lusitania; but finding the Camponeles were fled to the Mountains, and left all the plain Country Defart, he suspected rather Policy than Fear, had carried them; wherefore he returned to inform Pompey, Pompey and both of them came before the City Caucia, which subdust offered to embrace the Friendship of the Romans, but many plarefused to admit a Garrison. Pompey requested, that ces. whilst they could agree upon Articles, his fick Men might be admitted into the City, which being granted, he sent in a Number of his best Soldiers privately Armed, who being let in, possessed themselves of the Walls, and so the Town was obliged to receive a Garrison, and pay a Sum of Money: With such like Arts. Pompey gained admittance into many Towns of Lusitania: Both Pompey and Afranius laid Siege to Oxama (now Osma) where no fair means prevailing, the place was furiously Battered, then Undermined, and a sufficient Breach being made, it was pertinaciously defended as long as any of the Inhabitants were left alive. They all died œns.

68.

much

57.

fitanians

Plain by 63.

61.

died to the last Man, and Pompey having none left to kill, vented his passion upon the Buildings, leaving the place in a confused heap of Rubbish; then the Army marched to Calaborra, but whilst they lay before it. Metellus sent to Advise Pompey, it concerned him more to return to Rome, than linger the time there: He leaving Afranius to continue the Siege, in his way, laid the Foundation of Pamplona, in Navar, and so went away to Rome, where it was allowed him to Triumph, as he had well deserved. Afranius left at Calaborra, tho' he suffered much by the Weather, it being then Winter, and also for want of Provisions, yet he reduced the Besieg. ed to that extremity, that having eaten all the Leather and Hides in the City, they killed and eat their Wives and Children. Nevertheless, Afranius broke in upon them, and found many Inhabitants looking rather like Ghosts than Men, and many quarters of Women and Children hanging up for Food.

7. The Roman Senate thought the Victories of Pompey and Metellus, had fufficiently secured Spain; therefore they fent thether Publius Piso Pretor, a Man more addicted to Peace than War. He found all things quiet, but after a while, understanding that Warlike preparations were making in several parts of Spain, he sent his Questor Lucius Flaccus, to visit and put all Garrisons into a posture of Desence; in the mean while he gathered an Army of Romans and Andaluzians, and taking the Field in several places, Defeated the Spaniards; but Authors do not mention the particulars. Certain coo Luit is, he vanquished a Body of Lusitanians, that had been plundering the Country and killed 5000 of them. His fuccess was doubtless more considerable, fince it ap-Pub. Pifo. pears he triumphed at Rome. Cneus Piso succeeded Publius, he by his ill Government lost the Affections, not only of the Natives, but of the Romans, and marching into Lusicania, had his Legate cut off by some Light Horse of the Country, none of his Army stirring to rescue him. The next Pretor was Quintus Calidius, who defeated several Parties of Lujiranians, that Plundered the Country; after him came Tubero, who brought with him as his Questor Julius Casar, to whom his future Fortune was foretold at Cadiz; For visiting the Temple of Hercules, and falling afleep in it, he Dreamed that he lay with his Mother. This the South-sayers interpreted interpreted to Denote his becoming Sovereign of Rome. his Mother-Country, which he should deprive of its Antient Liberty. There also seeing the Picture of Alexander the Great, he wept confidering that mighty King had subdued so considerable a part of the World, at that Age which he then was of, and had yet done nothing worthy of Fame. These considerations made him quit 60. his Employment and return to Rome to aim at greater. About this time hapned on the Coast of Galicia and A great Portugal, so terrible an Earthquake, that many Buildings being overthrown, the People fled to the Moun-quake. tains for Safety. The Sea also broke in and drowned feveral places. At Cape St. Vincent, a Mare brought forth a Monster with the Head, Breast, and Fore-feet of a Bull, the Body of a Horse, and the Hind-feet like a Man's: This Monster was thought to foreshew the Calamities that afterwards befell Lusitania.

8. Some Years passed, that the Romans sent no Commander of Note into Spain, which the Lusitanians observing, they broke into Castile with a great Power. putting all the Country to Fire and Sword. The chief among these People were the Herminii, inhabiting the deep Valley and high tops of the Mountain Herminius, now called Serra de Estrella, which crosseth the greatest part of the Kindom of Portugal. The next Julius Cagreat Man that came was Julius Casar; he to spread a sar comes Terror spared none of the Lustranians that ranged in into Lusi-Castile and Andaluzia, but put all to the Sword, which tania. made those that escaped home, give the Alarm to prepare the People for the Storm that threatned them. Cafar over-running all the Province of Alenteio, with his Victorious Army, used the utmost severity; the Andaluzians that followed him, revenging the wrongs before done to them by the Lusitanians; only the inhabitants of the Mountain Herminius perplexed C.efar. Tho' this Mountain, as was faid, runs almost through the Kingdom, the chief habitation of those People was about the place where now stands Haramenha, which is near Portalegre and Marvan. The place of it self was inaccessible, and the People resolute, therefore Casar fent Ambassadors to perswade them to come down and inhabit the plain: they kept these Ambassadors till they had shown them their Weapons, the strength of the Place, and number of the Defendants, and then dismissed them, with assurance that they would trust only to their Weapons and Courage. Cafar disdaining to be Braved by those Mountaineers, to appeale the o. ther Lusitanians, much offended for that his Soldiers had plundered the Temple of the God Endovelicus. caused all that had been taken thence to be restored.

He Subdues the Herminii.

s valt

9. This done, he marched against the Herminii, who were in a readiness to receive him, and found the place much more difficult than it had been represented to him. Understanding that the Herminii had placed their Wives. Children and weak People in a remote place of fafety, he with great Gifts perswaded certain Lusitanians Enemies to the Herminii, to lead a number of Men thro' a private path to that place. Whilst they upon Hands and feet climbed the rough Rocks, he drew out his Army, and began to ascend so as to divert the Defendants from minding those that were fent about. An advanced party was so hotly received by the Mountaineers, that they were forced to quit the attempt, and fly diforderly back to the Camp, Cafar never offering to relieve them for fear of running more Men into the Danger. The Mountaineers, proud of this success, braved the Romans; but Cafar trusting to those he had sent about, regarded them not: The third Night after they fet forward, the Party that was fent to climb the Hill, fell in upon the Old Men, Women and Children, putting many to the Sword. But day appearing, and discovering how few had done that harm, the Women fell upon them, and their Husbands taking the Alarm, quitted the Pass they defended to protect their Wives and Children. Cafar seeing the Pass clear, mounted the Hill till he came to a plain on the fide of it, whilft the Herminii put all those Romans that had climbed the other fide to the Sword. When they thought to return to the place they had quitted, they found Casar possessed of it, wherewith they were so terrified, that tho' they were above him, and might well have defended themselves, they sued for Peace; thereupon he commanded them to go down and inhabit the Plain, keeping 200 of their Women as Hostages.

10. The Fame of this unexpected Conquest made many of the Neighbouring People resolve to quit their Dwellings, and patting the River Duero, feek out new Multitude. places to inhabit, if not more fruitful than their own,

The History of PORTUGAL.

at least more remote from the Enemy. This they did in fuch numbers, that the Province was almost unpeooled; they marched in great Order, fearing the purfuit of the victorious Army, which foon of ertook them. at such time as they had passed over the River most of their Old Men, Women, Children and Baggage, on Planks, Skins blown full of Wind, Mares and Oxen. Casar gave them not leasure to follow their Families. but falling upon them, was so hotly received, that his Army began to give way, till a Veteran Legion coming up, the Battle a long time stood doubtful. Cafar who could not be satisfied to part upon equal Terms, broke himself into the midst of his Enemies with such Reselution, that his Forces following the Example given. soon made him Master of an absolute Victory.

CHAP. VIII.

The remaining Actions of Julius Cæsar, the Coming and Attempts of Cneus and Sextus. the Sons of Pompey the Great, and other Occurrences from the Tear 57. before the Birth of Christ. till the Year 27.

1. Afar concluded his late Victory, had wholly put an end to the Toiles of War in that Province, when he was given to understand that the Her- 57. minii, or Mountaineers revolted again, had put to the Sword the Romans that Quartered about them, and stirring up their Neighbours to do the like, were now afsembled in an infinite Number. He instantly marched The retowards them, and escaped all their Ambushes, being maining forewarned of them: The Lustranians divided them- Actions of felves into two Bodies, each numerous enough to Casfar in maintain a long and dangerous War against a greater Spain. Power than that of the Enemy. The leffer of those Armies was sent towards the Ocean, with all the Women and Children as their Guard. The Roman and Lusitanian Armies meeting, stood a while looking upon one another, till Cafar who never knew what fear was,

56.

Ecceeds

Cæsar.

cinnatus

gave the Signal of Battle, and both fides gave the Charge with extraordinary Fury. Cafar, tho' hard pressed a while, remained Master of the Field, but by reason of the approaching Night, could not do so much Execution as might otherwise have been. The Lusttanians knowing all the Passes of the Country, made their way, and foon joyned those that marched towards the Ocean. Thus the 4th Day they discovered a Peninsula (now called Peniche) into which they all passed: so that when Casar came, there was none behind on the shoar. The distance between the Island and the shoar, is at present above 500 Paces, which at low Water can be forded; Cafar waiting the Ebb. fent an Officer with a choice party to gain a Post from those in the Island, who bravely defended themselves: The Tide returning, the Romans fought up to the middle in Water, and Cafar stood on the Shoar calling upon them. When they would have returned, the Water was so high, that they were forced to land in the Island. where they were all cut off to one Soldier, who tho' Wounded, swam over to the other side. A Spanish Author calls him Sceva, but Dio, names him Publius Scevius: It was hard to gain the Island, without bringing Ships from Cadiz, but hunger began to prick the Multitude who had made no Provision, when they retired into that place. This and the fight of the Ships made them deliver themselves to Casar, barely upon Discretion: He not only forbid any Wrong to be done them in their Persons or Goods, but supplied them with all they wanted, and so dismissed them wholly devoted to him, for this unexpected Clemency. At this time was found that wonderful Horse, which having his Feet like a Man, would afterwards suffer no body but C.efar to mount him, and when he died, C.efar caused him to be Buried, as if it had been a Man, and his Statue in Brass to be set before the Temple of Venus.

2. Cefar having thus with Courtefy, as well as Force subdued Lusitania, departed to Rome to make interest for the Confulship, where we will leave him. Tubero Pub. Cin-left to Govern the Province, as Proprætor, kept it in Peace till the coming of the Proconful Publing Cincinnatus, in whose time the Lusitanians began again to raise Arms, but Authors do not give us any particular Relation of the Event of those Commotions. till the Time of the Prætor, Publius Cornelius Lentulus Spinter. About the same time there marched a mighty Army out of Spain, whereof a confiderable part were Lusitanians: The Gauls, oppressed by Julius Casar. had called them to their Athstance. Publius Crassus, Crassus de-Calar's Legate, overthrew them, killing and taking stroys near Prisoners almost 40000. Whilst this was done in 40000. France, Quintus Cecilius Dentatus, the Prætor in Lusita- Spaniards nia, raised a dangerous War, by endeavouring to carry a great Quantity of Corn out of the Country, which moved the People to take up Arms; but having forced him to retire, and fortifie himself in the Mountain of Venus, (now called Pomares,) near Evora, they came to a Composition, he promising not to carry away the Corn. Quintus Cecilius Metellus was Successor to Dentatus, and governed both Provinces of Spain. The Vectones of Estremadura, and the Vaccei of Old Castile, revolting, he overthrew them; but with so little Loss on their fide, that being recruited, they came upon him. then belieging Clunia, (now Corunna,) and drove him from the Siege: He, in like manner, making up his Forces, returned, and gave them a second Rout. Tubero succeeded Metellus, as Proconsul. He continued the War against the Vectones and Vaccei, and was by them, in Battel overthrown. The Tumults raised by the Vaccei and Vectones, moved the Senate to fend Pom. pey to pacifie the Province: But whilst he prepared to fet forwards with the Grandeur becoming him, three Legates came; one of them was Petreius, whose Province was Lusitania, and the Care of quelling the Vaccei and Vectones: With him joined the People of Beyra, and, together, they forced their Enemies to sue for Peace. After which, Petreius went to the Ailistance of those of the Province of Beyra, against a great Number of the People that came from between the Rivers Duero and Minho, who were going over to fettle among them; and (though with considerable Loss) he secured the Pass, and drove them back.

3. Julius C.efar having drove Pompey out of Rame. was now coming again into Spain: The Legates having Notice thereof, prepared to oppose him; and Petreius joining Afranius, they together made up near 60000 Men, as well Remans as Spaniards. Cafar fent

5 I.

30.

47.

63

expels

Party.

44.

The History of PORTUGAL. his Legate Caius Fabius, to gain the Passes of the Pyre-nean Mountains; which he performed so successfully, that Pompey's Party lying about Lerida, saw Cesar's Co. lours before they had heard of the approach of his Ar-Cafar remy. Soon after came Casar himself, who reduced the turns, and two Legates to that Necessity, that they surrender'd themselves into his Power; he using no other Severity Pompey's towards them, than to order them to lay down their Arms, and depart Spain: And they accordingly went away to Pompey, then raising Forces in the East. This done, Casar returned to Rome, leaving the Government of Portugal and Andaluzia, with the Title of Pro-Prætor, to Quintus Cassius Longinus, a Man naturally cruel, and an Enemy to the Spaniards. He according. ly exercised his Hatred and Avarice, and at last laid Seige to the City Mirobriga, which offered to buy its Liberty; but he fet it at so high a Rate, that they had ving 11 Days granted them to refolve in, chose rather privately to fly away to the Mountains. The Pre-Prætor finding the City empty, followed the Inhabitants, where he took from them all they had before a. ved. The Herminii thus plunder'd, their Number in. creasing, resolved to possess themselves of the Plains along the River Tagus, turning out the ancient Proprietors. A great Number of them were cut off by the > prized in the Night, by their Enemies, almost all of them perished.

in Spain.

4. Cneus and Sextus, the Sons of Pompey the Great, Cneus and came into Spain, invited by the general Consent of the Sextus, the People. The Eldest was declared General at Cartagetwo Sons of na, and set out thence with a good Army, Garrisoning Pompey, all the strong Towns. Sextus Pompeius was left at Cordova. Julius Casar's two Legates, Pedius and Fabius Maximus, observed the Motions of the two Pompeys, and gave Casar an Account of all that passed; and he travelled with all possible Speed into Spain. In the mean time, Philo, a Lusitanian, raised Men, and joined himself to Cneus. The Celerity of C.esar was incredible; yet came he not so soon, but that his Legates were before defeated by Cneus Pompeius, with a mighty Slaughter. The Legates fled to their Camp, where

Citizens of Lubon, as they endeavoured to pass that River: Then the Mountaineers desisting from their sirft

Purpose, encamped about Lubon; but being there sur-

Pompey affaulted them three times, and was as often repulsed: At last he understood they stole away by Night, but in such good Order, that he durst not pursue them; especially, hearing that Casar was come to Saguntum, and that Andaluzia began to mutiny. Understanding that Cafar marched towards Cordova, he directed his Course thither; and to march the lighter, he left all his Sick at Capara. By the Way he laid Siege to Ulia, (now Montemayor;) but it being relieved by Cafar, he removed towards Cordova, 15 Miles distant; where he found his Enemy, expecting that the Towns-People would have delivered the Place to him; but the Vigilancy of Sextus, and the Arrival of Cneus, prevented the Design. Casar thus disappointed, removed, and laid Siege to a strong Place, which Pompey had made his Magazin: It was then called Ategua; and now, Teba the Old. Pompey marched to relieve it; but finding the Besiegers too strong, returned with Speed to Cordova; yet, being sent for by the Besieged, he returned again to Ategua, and sent in some Succour, and Munaous Flaccus, to govern in the City: He, seeing no Hopes to hold out, furrender'd himself and the City to Casar upon Discretion. This so enraged Pompey, that upon light Surmizes he put to Death almost 80 Men of Note; and by this Means made himself odious to all that followed him; whereof, many deserted. 5. In this manner their Affairs went on, till Cafar Cæsar 0and Pompey met at Munda, (now a little Town, called verthrows Monda,) five Leagues distant from Malaga. This Ci- Pompey ty was Garrison'd by Pompey, and in it consisted all his at Munda Hopes; wherefore he lay to secure it with 60000 Men. Hither Cafar came, to engage Pompey; and the Battel began most furiously: Pompey behaved himself logallantly, that C.cfar was once in doubt whether he should not kill himself, as despairing of the Victory: But considering better, he lighted off his Horse; and, hatching a Buckler from a Soldier, ran desperately into the thickest of his Enemies; saying to his own Men, This Day will I end my Life; and you, the War: Thus lay your Arms across, since you have lost all Sense of Shame, and leave me in the hands of two Boys, after you had been victorious over all the Power of Spain. In this manner he broke into the Body of his Enemies, where he had perished, but that his Horse coming in, rescued him, wounding

The History of PORTUGAL.

wounding Pompey on the Shoulder. Yet had not Caelar gained any Advantage, till Rogud, an African King, who followed him with his Troops, affaulted Pompey's Camp. Titus Labienus, a brave Captain, drawing our of the Battel, to oppose Rogud, the whole Army of Pompey thought he had fled, and they immediately took to their Heels; some fled to Munda, others to the Camp, 30000 were slain, whereof 7000 were Lusitanians. Pompey wounded, and overthrown, fled with 150 Lu. sitanians of his Guard, that were left. Being come to Algezira, Publius Calvicius sent him in an Horse-Litter to Cortega; the Inhabitants of which Place would have delivered him to his Enemies, but he escaped in a Gal. lev. Didius, Cafar's Admiral, pursued him so close. that he was forced to fly to Land; where he was hard chased by Cesonius Lento, till, not being able to go farther, he hid himself in a Cave, where he was betrayed by a Servant of his own. Cesonius carried his Head to C.esar, then at Sevil, who caused it to be honourably buried.

6. Many Lustanians who had escaped the Hands of Cesonius, in the Pursuit of Pompey, not knowing what had happen'd, as foon as they perceived the Romans were gone, returned to the Cave to look for him; and finding only the Trunk of the Body, resolved to revenge his Death. Didius the Admiral having left Cesonius, was then Carcening his Vessels on the Shoar, without suspecting any Danger; but one Night the Lufitanians came down upon him in three several Bodies, and firing his Ships, put the Men to the Sword, and the Head of Didius they fent to Philo, their General. As Ioon as Sextus Pompeius, at Cordova, understood the Death of his Brother, he marched out of the City with all his Forces; and joining with the Lusianians that were dispersed thereabouts, he met Cesonius, who beheaded Cneus, and put him to flight. In the mean while, Casar went to take Possession of Cordova; and returning to Sevil, he found Philo, with the Lusitanians, in it; who was forced to fly, after maffacring many of the Citizens. He fled into Lusitania, to raise Forces; where, in the City Lenius, he found Cecilius Niger, with a good Body: Both together got into Sevil, furprizing the Roman Army; but paid for it with the Loss of all their Men. This done, Cafar peirced into Portugal; and with his Clemency towards the con-Cafar conquered People, won their Hearts. At Beja he granted quers the Peace to the Lusitanians; whence that City was after- Lusitaniwards called Pax Julia. Thence, he went to Evora, ans; and which, of his Bounty towards it, took the Name of settling Liberalitas Julia. In like manner, he left his Name to Peace at Beja, calls other Places: Mertola was called Julia Mirtilis; San-that City tarem, before Scalabis, Julium Prasidium; and Lisbon, Pax Julia. Felicitas Julia.

42;

7. Asinius Pollio, a valiant and wise Man, was left Governor of the Provinces of Andaluzia and Lusitania, in C.vfar's Absence. He soon quelled some Troops that ravaged the Country about the Mountains of Algarve. About the same time Sextus Pompeius came out from among the Lacetani, where he had been hid after his Defeat, and was by Niconius Saxo conducted to Hannibal's Port, now Villa-nova de Pertemao, in Aigarve; where he continued in a miserable Condition, till a Ship of Pyrates came into that Place: They, at the In- Sextus stance of Saxo, received him for their Captain; and un-Pompeius derstanding who he was, set out joyfully, and took appears asome Prizes, plundering the Coast, he gathered sain, and Strength; till coming to Cartagena, a whole Roman Le-makes gion joined him, beside many Companies of Spaniards great Com-Cular hearing hereof, sent Carting to crush Paragraph has motions. Cafar hearing hereof, fent Cartina to crush Pompey; but he was himself overthrown. Fompey hearing of the Death of Cafar, gathered all the Power he could, and defeated the Prætor, Asinius Pollio: But being now almost Master of all Spain, he was called away to Rome by the Senate. After some Success at Sea, he was routed by the Triumviri; and flying into Afia, had his Head cut off by Ticius, one of Mark Antony's Commanders. Whilst these Things were doing in the East, all Spain, but particularly Lusitania, suffered much by Great Floods, Storms, Sickness, and several other Calami- Floods, ties. Many that lived near the Coast, thinking to fly Storms and from these Miseries, ran headlong into greater; for, Sieka in breaking in upon the Viccoi of Old Castile, they were Spain. repulsed with great Slaughter, by Cneus Domicius, Legate to Lepidus. Near this fame time, one Billus, who had been Quæstor to Apinion Pollio, fearing to be called Pogud the to Account for his Extortion, fied into Aprick, and African perswaded King Begud to invade Spain. Le took the dvice; and having plunder'd the Coastor Andriugia, On Coasto.

retired

33.

retired with a great Booty, upon the News that the Romans and Spaniards had affembled a great Power against him. Three Years after he returned, but was repulled with Loss, and retired to Tarifa; where having recruited himself, he set Sail for Hannibal's Port, in Lusitania; which being abandoned, he plunder'd, with the Country about it. Not content with this, he turned to Cape St. Vincent; and coming to Setuval, without the least Opposition, ransacked it, putting all he found in the Place to the Sword, and then setting fire to it. Some that fled to the Mountains, gathering more Strength, came down to revenge their Losses on the Mauritanians; but he was then failing up the River of Alcazar, where he robbed and rafed a Temple of the Goddes Salacia. Scarce was he returned to his Ships, when a violent Storm arising, destroyed the greatest part of his Fleet; those few Wretches that escaped the Fury of the Sea by fwimming, being cut in pieces upon the Shoar.

28. The Galiciansoverranth most part of Lusitania.

8. The Inhabitants of the City and Territories of Tuy, in Galicia, passing the River Minho on a sudden, thought to have made themselves Masters of the Lands then possessed by the Bracarenses, and other People, between Duero and Minho. These, though surprized with the unexpected Invasion, gathered in a great Body, and went out to meet the uninvited Guests. Between them passed many Skirmishes; but at last, coming to a Battel, the Interamnenses were overthrown, with great Slaughter. The Victors pursuing their Fortune, without Refistance, passed on to the Banks of the River Duero. The Inhabitarits of the City of Porto, terrified at the Fame of their Success, sent Ambassadors to sue for Peace, and Friendship; putting them in Mind, they were all originally Greeks. This took so well with the conquering Galicians, that they allowed of the Kindred, and so exempted the City of Porto from being plunder'd and burnt, as all others they came at were. But a violent Pestilence raging among the Galicians, so wasted them, that they were obliged to return home, carrying the Contagion with them; so that the Harm they did at home was greater than the Profit of their Expedition.

9. The Bracarenses delivered from the Fear of two terrible Enemies, the Plague, and the Galicians, resolved to be revenged on the People of Porto; for having War bejoined with those of Galicia, only for their own Preser- twist the vation. War being declared, the Aggressors had the People of better; till in one Battel, those of Porto took some Pri- Braga and soners, on whom they exercised their Cruelty. Many Porto. of them they tied to Stakes upon their Walls, and in the fight of their Enemies, shot them for Sport. Moved at this Sight, the Bracarenses sent certain Troops to take Revenge on them; but they being either killed or taken Prisoners, served only to revive their Sorrow. Among these were a Son and a Father-in-Law, whose Death so troubled the Wife of the one, and Daughter of the other, that affociating her felf with some desperate Women, and a good Number of Soldiers, she, in the Night, laid an Ambush, not tar from the City; and scaling the Walls, silently stole thence the two Bodies: But being discovered by the Sentinels, she was pursued by the Towns-men, whom she led to the Place of the Ambush, where most of them were killed, or made Prisoners: The Prisoners she carried in Triumph to Braga, and there, on the Walls, made them suffer the same Death which their Country-men had inflicted on her Friends. This done, the honourably buried her Father and Husband, and then killed her felf. Now the Citizens of Porto, finding themselves hard beset by the Bracarenses, prayed Aid of Norbanus Calvius, Legate to Augustus, in Lusitania; with whose Assistance they twice overthrew their Enemies. Many Cities, seeing that of Porto victorious, sent to congratulate and curry Favour with them. One of the Cities that followed this Counsel was Cinania, lying nearer to Braga than Porto; but they had afterwards Occasion enough to repent.

F 3.

CHAP.

68

of Braga

lichdue

Porto.

CHAP. IX.

The total Conquest of all Spain, by Augustus Cæsar: With all other Occurrences, from the Tear 27, before the Birth of Christ, till his Bleffed Nativity.

Ore were the Bracarenses greved to see their Neighbours slighted them, than at the Los they had fustained; and therefore, gathering again their Forces, they marched towards Porto: An Hundred and fifteen Women and 200 Men, made up a Party of Light-Horse, which, leaving the rest of their Army in Ambush, went to draw the Enemy out. Norbanus Calvius marched out with all his Force, that Body of Horse before-mentioned sometimes slying and fometimes fighting, till they drew the Ramans to the Place of Ambush, where a mighty Slaughter was made of the Romans, and the People of Porte. Norbanus was killed by a Woman, who returns ed to Braga with his Head and Right Hand; as did fel veral others, with those of several Men of Note. The Bracarenses used their Victory with Insolency, oppresfing the City of Porto in the heavy Conditions of Peace they prescribed to them. Being delivered of that Ene my, they bent their Force against Cinania, in Revenge for their having joined with those of Porto; and laid Siege to the City. The Besieged were not unprovided, nor did they want Resolution; so that many brave Attempts were made on both fides. At length, Hunger Walls, and rating all the Buildings to the Ground.

2. Octavius Cafar having now brought all the Roman Empire under his Subjection, found that only three Nations in Spain opposed his Authority; and those were, the Biscainers, Galicians, and Lusitanians, who inhabited between the Rivers Duero and Minho. To the fubduing Augustus of these, he came in Person, with a mighty Power; but Casfar being taken in Biscay with a violent Hypochondriack comes into Diftemper, he left there two Legates to continue the Spain. War, and went away to take the delightful Air of Andaluzia, where he gave himself up to the Care of his Phylician, Anthony Musa; who effecting a great Cure upon him, was magnificently rewarded. Whillthe was under Cure, his Legates overthrew the Biscainers, betrayed to them by the Tragicini. Such as escaped, fled to Lancia, a City near Oviedo in Asturias, where they made some Opposition, but at last were forced to submit. Thence the Victors advanced, bearing down all before them, quite through Galicia. We have no particular and Minho were subdued; whether they submitted, terrified with the Example of the others; or elfe were induded in the Conquest of Galicia. 3. Augustus, thus become Lord of the World, to re-Emerica ward his old Soldiers, who had ferved him to many Augusta

Account, how the People between the Rivers Ducro

Years, he affigned them Lands, and founded a City, (now Mewhich he called Emerita Augusta, (now Merida,) which rid 1) founhe made the Metropolis of Lusitania, and gave it migh-ded by Auty Privileges. Some will not have Augustus to be the gultus. founder, but rather Repairer of Merida. In Gratitude for this his Bounty, they raised Temples to him, and dedicated Priests to his Service. All the Cities in Spain followed their Example. That of Porto used all manner of Flattery, to oblige him to their Affiltance, in orbeginning to pinch the Besieged, and the Besiegers be der to cut off the heavy Yoke imposed upon them by ing sensible thereof, the Case grew desperate: When the their Enemies, the Bracarenses. Their Ambassadors were Cinanians had devoured all that was to be found in the lavourably heard, and brought back an Answer, such as City, rather than submit themselves to the Cruelty of they could have wished, that Caius Antistius and Murcus their Enemies, they set open their Gates; and rushing Arripa were upon their March, to their Ashstance. out like hungry Lions, failed but little of obtaining the This fo encouraged the Inhabitants of Porto, that before Victory; but at length, oppressed with the Multitude the Roman Forces could join them, they not only ravathey were all put to the Sword, without Distinction of ged the open Country, but entred the City of Braga, Sex or Age. Nor was this all, for the Victors executed with great Slaughter; those Citizens suspecting no such their Rage upon the very Stones, overthrowing the thing: Yet, laying hold of their Weapons, they purfied them to the very Walls of Porto. Scarce had they encamped about the City, when they perceived the Romans upon them, so numerous, that they were forced to fly with all speed, and take the Shelter of their own Walls, providing for a dangerous Siege. Before the Romans could take their Posts about the City, the Bracaren. fes fallied out, and much Harm was done on both sides. Among the Prisoners taken by the Romans, was a young Maid, who had acted like a Virago: She was taken by 2 Trooper; and the Roman General, by her Beauty; who would have fet her at liberty, promifing to pay her Ransom: The Trooper pressed, he might either have the Money, or Liberty to make use of his Captive: She fnatching a Ponyard out of his Hand, ranto kill him; but mitting her Stroke, stab'd her selt. The Bracarenses retiring, the Romans took their Posts; and many Skirmishes patting between them, it happen'd that Ansifius, one of the Roman Generals, was taken, and fell into the Hands of the Father of that Maid above-mentioned; who, for that he had honourably buried his Daughter, sent him away free, and honourably presented. Agrippa, to requite the Kindness shewn to his Colleague, railed the Siege, and obtained many Favours of Augustus, for the City; perswading him, that those of Porto were in the wrong. Thenceforth it was called Augusta Bracara; and had the Privilege of a Roman Colony.

encamped

Augustus ecknowledged Enperor of the World, and Temples erested to box.

4. The Emperor Augustus being at Tarragona, received there Ambassadors from all Parts of the then known World, congratulating his happy Accellion to so great, an Empire. Then it was, he concluded himself an absolute Monarch, being complemented, flattered and fawned upon by all Nations; in so much that they begged Leave to erect Temples to him, and give him Divine Honours. He granted their Requelt; and, among that Multitude, to the Ambassadors of Lusitania. At Santarem a Temple was built, in the manner of a Fort; which was afterwards thought to denote a greater Inclination to War, than to Devotion. On this Account, Accidius Costius, Augustus's Legate, obstructed the building of another at Lubon. The People, to remove his Suspicion, erected it on the Rock of Sintra, upon the Ocean. No less than for these stately Structures, Augustus was renowned for the Computation of Time, begun from him, and commonly called Ara. The Reason of this Name, is not our Affair to decide: Certain it is, it continued in Arragon till the Year of Christ, 1358; when K. Peter IV. ordered the Computation of Time, for the future, to be from the Birth of our Saviour. K. John I, of Castile, followed his Example, in the Year of Grace, 1383. And King John I, of Portugal, imitated them both, in 1415.

The History of PORTUGAL.

5. It was two Years before the Birth of Christ, when all Portugal, entirely subdued, enjoyed perfect Peace. Augustus had divided the Kingdom into four Provinces, Portugal, subject to as many Courts of Judicature: These were, how dead by Augustus, Santarem, Braga and Beja: In each of these was dead by Augustus, and other Officers of Justice. Augustus was suffill at Tarragona, when he published that memorable Decree for numbering of all the People in his Empire, and imposing on every Head a Tribute, or Poll-Tax; which, as some compute it, was, to the value of about 4d. according to others, 4d. half Penny; or, as others say, 9d. The first Court in Lustania, where the Edict was published, was Santarem. By the Lists it appeared, that in Lustania there were 5068000 Heads of Families; a wonderful Number, if true; but much to be doubted.

6. About this time, in the Province between the Ri-Corocota. vers Duero and Minho, there started up a Lustranian, cal- a financia led Corocota; who gathering a parcel of Outlaws toge-Rapper. ther, after committing several Outrages, durst venture to give the Romans Battel in open Field: But being defeated, they fled to Bifery, where they, in Warlike manner, followed the Trade of Robbing. Octavius the Emperor promised 3000 Crowns, and a Pardon for all . Crimes whatfoever, to any that should apprehend him. He fearing there could not be wanting Criminals defirous of Pardon, nor covetous Persons who would attempt any thing for Interest, resolved to gain the Reward and Pardon by a magnanimous, though dangerous Action: He presented himself to the Emperor, demanding both the Reward, and promised Pardon, since he delivered into his Hands Corocota, whom, perhaps, no Man elfe could have put into his Power. With which that generous Prince was fo taken, that he proved much better than his Word; for he not only pardoned him, and gave him the Money, but admitted him into his Guards.

7. It was now the Year of the World 3952, according of or Sacto Bede, and the Hebrews; according to Eufebius, 5199; viour.

4 according

according to Orofius, 5200; according to Isidorus, 5219; according to the Astronomers, 5328; according to King Aiphonso, 6980; according to John Lucidus, 3960, (such is the Variety of Computations;) and according to others, 2962. This last being, in my Opinion, the best Account, and followed in this History, it must then be 2432 Yearsafter the Flood, when. on the 25th of December, about Midnight, the RE-DEEMER of Mankind was born in the Stable at Bethlehem; wonderful Signs preceding his Birth. The Angels descended, linging, Glory to GOD on high, and on Earth, Peace unto Men of Good Will: They spread abroad the News of that wonderful Birth; and awaked the Shepherds, to behold the LAMB of GOD. In the mean while, the Three Kings of the East travelled, conducted by a miraculous STAR, to pay their Adoration to the KING of Kings.

Signs of our Savi-

8. Spain wanted not its particular Signs of the Blefgar's Birth sing communicated to Mankind that happy Night. That in Spain, very Night was enlighten'd with a glorious bright-shining Cloud, which not only diffused a Light equal to the Noon-day-Sun, but also an Heat nothing inferiour to it. This Cloud drove away to the West, and set in the Ocean; at fuch time as the Morning-Beams appearing, no Distinction could be made between Day and Night. And that Portugal might not want some singular Tokens of the Coming of the GOD of Peace, the Idol of the false God Endovelicus, whose Temple was near Villaviciosa, fell from the Altar, to the Ground; and though of Massy Silver, it was broke into several Pieces, which, for the Rarity, were fent to Rome, where many other Idols had been destroyed at the same Hour. Besides this, ap extraordinary Light appeared (like that which was feen all over Spain) upon the Promontory called Barbaricus, now Serra da Arabida.

The End of the First BOOK.

Pote, That hitherto we have diminished the Years, from the Flood, till the Coming of CHRIST; henceforward we shall increase them, from his Birth, to the End of the History.

THE HISTORY PORTUGAL

The Second BOOK.

CHAP. I.

All that hapned remarkable in Lusitania under the Roman Emperors, from the Birth of our Saviour Jesus Christ, till the Tear of Grace 260.

≺HE whole Universe being restored to Peace by the Birth of the King of Peace, Peace af-Augustus C.esar caused the Gates of the Tem-ter the ple of Janus to be shut. This was the Birth of third and last time those Gates were closed, and Augu-Christ. stus the remaining part of his Life, enjoyed a wonderful Felicity. Our Lustania had its share in this Tranquility, having entirely submitted it self to the Roman Yoak, and now reaping the Fruits of Peace under its Government. Quadratus, and Titus Flavius Caudianus were Legates or Pretors at this time, as appears by several Ancient Inscriptions found upon Stones. Not far from this time the Lusicanians inhabiting Vouga, or Vacca, made an expedition as far as the Cities Affora. and Lacedemona, in whose Territory they founded a Town, which of the Name of their own Country they called Vacca, and being delighted with the pleasantness of the Place, they added the word Chara, whereby it came to be called Charavacca. The News of the Death of the Emperor Augustus, being brought into Lusitania, his Funeral Honours were performed with no less Grandeur than they had been at Rome. Hispania Ulterior which includes Portugal, was at this time Governed by the Proconsul Vibius Serenus, whose unlimitted Avarice was the cause he exercised many Cruelties towards the People; nor were the Spanish Mines and Rivers, yielding Yearly three Millions of Crowns in Gold, fufficient to satisfy his unmeasurable Covetousness.

Tiberius Succeeds in the Empire.

2. Tiberius having succeeded Augustus in the Empire. appeared no less insatiable than his Lieutenant. The Lustranians by their Ambassadors, asked leave to Erect a Temple to him and his Mother Drufills, which he, pretending Modesty, refused: But in Reality was more desirous of their Gold, than of their Adoration. To shew that Learning was then esteemed here, several Lasitanians went into Italy, only to see the famous Historian Titus Livius; with them went Ambassadors from Lisben, to give an Account of a Prodigy there seen. It was a perfect Man coming out of the Sea, who sitting upon the Rocks, founded a great Shell as if it had been a Horn, so loud and shrill, that it drew the People thither to see who it was. Admiring the fight of that Creature, they fent that Embassage, which is a token no fuch Creature had been seen before; tho' Authors affirm that several have appeared since. The Roman Emperors were Lords of our Kingdom of Lusitania for fome Ages, but for Brevity sake, I will not mention them all as they succeeded one another, but only speak of those, who left something memorable among us.

Caius Caligula.

in Spain.

3. After Tiberius, the Imperial Crown was put upon the Head of Caius Calizula, whose horrid course of Lite made the wickedness of his Predecessor be looked upon as innocence. Caligula in the 4th. Year of his Reign was Murthered, as had been his Predecessor: During St. James his Reign, St. James the Apostle came into Spain, where the Apostle he Preached the Gospel, and converted many by virThe History of PORTUGAL.

tue of the mighty Miracles he Wrought. Among the rest, he is said to have raised to life a Citizen of Braga by extraction, a Jew called Samuel the Younger, or Malachias the Elder Son, to the Prophet Urias, who had been Buried near 600 Years; him he called Peter, and constituted the first Bishop of Braga, and the first in all Spain: This Bishop suffered Martyrdom at Rates, 44. four Leagues from Braga, and is therefore called St. Peter of Rites. Another of his Disciples St. James lest in the Church of Cinania, once a populous City, now a poor place scarce the shaddow of what it was, between Braga and Guimaraens upon the River Ave. In this same place he was Martyred by the Neighbouring People, in memory whereof, they to this day as it were acknowledging the crime, refort to his Church barefooted, and with Cords about them. The Martyrs name was Torquatus, now corruptly called Torcade; St. Fames embarking at Corunna, failed into England, in whole absence Peter the Archbishop of Braga, having spread the Faith made several Bishops. As the Nupti- 46. als of a little King's Son were Celebrating on the shoar of Bouzas, not far from Porto, the Bride-groom being on Horse-back among many others, suddenly there appeared a Ship at Sea; When it drew near, the Bridegroom was carried away by his Horse through the Water, and fuddenly appeared upon the Ship covered with Crosses and Shells: Wondring what this should mean, he asked of those in the Ship, who told him, They brought the Body of St. James the Apostle, who had wrought that Miracle to convert him and the Neighbouring People; and a voice from Heaven said, it was the Will of God, that all those who went to visit the Apostle's Sepulcher, should be so adorned with Crosses. The Bridegroom returned ashoar, his Horse treading the Water, as if it had been firm Land, whereupon he and all present were Baptized: Thus much may suffice as to the Preaching of St. James the Apostle, and the bringing of his Body after his Death into Spiin.

4. After Califula Reigned, Claudius, a Prince as 56. foolish as his Predecessor was wicked; no Memory of The Empehim remains in Portugal, it had been well if there were rors Claunone in the World. Of Noro, his Successor, there are dius and still many Monuments in Lusicania, and also of his Mo-Nero. ther gippina, for to her they Erected Statues. In the Emperor conferred that Honour upon him, the more freely in his absence to enjoy his Wife Popea, whose incontinency gave occasion for him to full in love with her Beauty. Ten Years did Otho Govern

this Province, with fo great Equity and Moderation, that he obliged the People afterwards to affift him towards obtaining the Empire. A great number of Martyrs suffered under this cruel Emperor, as well in Spain, nies, to wit, Merida, Medellia, Norba Cesarea near Alcantara, Braga and Santarem, besides others that had the Liberties of Rome or Latium, under the Name of Municipia. The Limits of Lusivania were along the Sea Coast from the Mouth of the River Guadiana, to that of Duero, and thence to the River Minho: Towards the inland, it ran from Guadiana to Medina del Campo, including the City Salamanca with all Estremadura, bordered by the River Duero. Nerva, the succeeding Emperor, much mended the state of Rome and the whole Empire, but chiefly by adopting Trajan the Spaniard, fo that still a better Emperor followed a good one. Portugal retains no Monument of Nerva; only it appears by a Stone found in the Ruins of Atilia, which was between Genoa and Tortona, that several Troops of Lusicanians

The History of PORTUGAL.

ferved under the Imperial Banners. 6. Tho' Trajan began his Reign with great mode- Trajans ration, yet as is usual in great Empires, many places Rebelled, which were afterwards subdued by his Generals. He adorned this Kingdom with many Publick and Majestick Structures, not laying the Burden of the Expence upon the People, but defraying it out of his own Revenue; among these Works is still samous the Bridge he Built over Tagus, called the Bridge of Trajan, till the Moores gave it the Name of the Bridge of Alcantara. It confifts of fix Arches, the two middlemost whereof being the largest reach over the River, when there are no Floods: The length of it is 670 Foot, the Breadth 28, and the height above 200; the Stones are all of one Bigness, four Foot in length, and two in Breadth. Between the two middle Arches on both fides. is an Inscription in Marble to this Effect: 'To the Em-'peror Cæsar Augustus Nerva Trajanus, Son to the Di-'vine Nerva, Conqueror of Germany and Dacia, high 'Priest, Father of his Country, who was Eight times 'Tribune, and Six times Conful: On both tides of this Inscription, were the Names of the Towns that contributed towards the Fabrick; near to the Bridge is a Church, tho' little in it felf, yet confiderable in the Workmanship: It is but twenty Foot in length, and ten in breadth, but being cut out of the Rock, confills of only one Stone. It is now Dedicated to St. Fulian, formerly to all the Gods as the Rotunda at Rome; in it is a Roman Inscription containing these Words: Conferraas in other parts: Next to Nero, Galba ascended the Imperial Throne, rather for the hatred all Men bore his Predecessor, than for any Merit of his own. Otho then Governor of Lusiania, in Revenge of the wrong done him in the Person of his Wife Popea, assisted him: Nevertheless, once possessed of the Government, he grew as odious as he had been before defirable, and therefore having held it but Eight Months was Mur-Otho. thered. His Death opened the way for Otho, who had won the hearts of all Men, with much Bounty and Clemency, to aim at the Crown. Otho, to gratihe the Affections of the Lusitanians, granted great Priviledges to many Towns, but particularly to Merida, then the Metropolis of the Province; only three Months lasted the Sovereignty of Otho, for understanding that Vitellius with the German Army, by which he was faluted Emperor, was marching against him, he Vitellius in despair Slew himself; nor did Vitellius hold it above Eight Months.

Galba.

Vefpafian

5. Vespasian succeeded Vitellius, and by his Prudence and Moderation, cheared the hearts of all his People: Lusitania was particularly favoured by him, for he adorned it with noble Works; one of them was the great Road he made from Braga to Orense the space of Fisteen Leagues, which breaking through many rough and uncooth places, runs fo smooth, there is not the least Ascent or Descent in it. Near to the Town of Chaves (of him called Aque Flavie) he built a Bridge over the River Tamaga, with a large Inscription on it: Vespasian died, having Reigned Nine Years and a half, and lest the Empire to his two Sons, Titus the Good, and Domitian the Wicked. During their sway, Lustrania was divided into three Districts, whose heads were Merida, Beja and Santarem. In the three were Forty Six Towns of Note, five of them were Roman Colonies

80.

Domitian

ted to the Emperor Nerva Trajanus, Cæsar Augustus. Germanicus, Dacicus. Another Bridge, begun by Vespatian, at Chaves, was also finished by Trajan; as appears by the Inscriptions upon it.

The Lusi-

7. The Lusitanians, under the usual Pretence of Optanians re- pression, broke out into open Rebellion, and commitwelt, and ted many Infolencies. For the suppressing of whom, are reduced Trajan sent 14 Legions, which utterly destroyed many i, Trajan. populous Towns and Cities. One of these Cities was Lamego, which now stands not far from its antient Seat, on the South fide of the River Duero; and is one of the best Bishopricks in the Kingdom. In the 14 Legions were many Lufitanians, who, in that common Calamity, helped much to the preserving their Country from utter Extirpation. Trajan died a natural Death; which was then looked upon as no small Rarity. His Fleets had before failed down the Rivers Tigris and Euphrates, into the Persian Gulph, and thence into the Indian O. cean; where taking some Vessels that came from Bengale, he got much Information concerning those Countries: Age, and other Cares, hinder'd him from making a farther Progress in those Discoveries.

Adrian.

140.

Antoni-

8. Adrian next ascended the Imperial Throne; who thinking it impossible to maintain all the Conquests of the Empire, he wholly abandoned them. To fecure the rest of that vast Monarchy, he placed Foreign Governors over all the Provinces. Over the Lusitanians, he placed Andaluzians; and over them, Lusisanians: These governed so well, that two of them had Statues erected to their Memory. Quintus Pontius Severus, one of the two, was born at Braga: And Cains Caretius Fufius, the other, at Chaves. Other Monuments there are of Adrian, in Portugal, but not material to History. He reigned almost 21 Years. Antoninus Pius, his Successor, held the Empire 22 Years, but left no Memonus Pius. rial in Portugal. About these Times was laid the first Foundation of the City Basto, (afterwards Basta,) among the Bastetani: As also Basto, between the Rivers Duero and Minho; whereof only the Name is now preserved, in a miserable poor Village. Then also, or soon after, an Heretick, called Mark, laboured to infect the People of Valencia, in the same Province, between Duero and Minho; and though driven thence, failed not of some Followers among the Women, but those of the meaneit meanest fort; for the others abhorred him. Great Troubles happen'd in Spain, but most in the Province Marcus of Lusicania, during the Reign of Marcus Aurelius. A Aurelius. vast Multitude of Mauritanians, being in Rebellion The Mauagainst the Emperor, came over into Spain; and ha-ritanians ving robbed the Sea-port Towns, they boldly pierced ravage into the In-land. Portugal was so involved in this Cala-Spain. mity, that it came near to utter Defolation: All that lay along the Coast, from the Cape of St. Vincent, to the Mouth of the River Duero, was confumed with Fire and Sword: Libon held out several furious Assaults, by the Strength of its Situation: Porto, after a vigorous Reliftance, was forced to Article. After having committed all manner of Outrages, the Africans put to Sea, for fear of the Roman Legions, and Lusitanian Forces, which were upon their March towards them. For above 70 Years, in which 13 Emperors reigned, till Maximin, we are in Darkness as to the Affairs of Portugal: For, though there are some old Inscriptions extant. they only serve to prove there were such Emperors: which is not to our purpole, lince our Subject is only what relates to Portugal. 9. The Memory of Maximin, the Successor of Alexander Severus, is preserved in the City Braga, in a Maximin Street and Gate of his Name. He also made several Ways and Bridges in that Country, as appears by Inscriptions upon Stones. Some other Reigns passed, without any thing remarkable. In that of the careles 269. Galienus, a Plague came out of the East, bearing down Galienus. all to the West; and raged so violently in Lusitania, that the Cities were almost left desolate, and the Fields untilled. Galienus, awaken'd at this Scourge, ordered the Persecution against the Christians, which had been continued ever fince the Time of Decius, to cease. This Persecution had filled Heaven with Martyrs; and also Persecution terrified others in fuch a manner, that they renounced under him.

the Faith. Among the latter, were, Marcialis, Bishop of Merida; and Basilides, of Astorga. Elianus, or Lelius, Deacon of Merida, a Man of great Learning and Vertue, assembled a National Council in that City; where the two Idolatrous Bishops were deposed. They, to recover their Honour, feigned Repentance: And St. Stephen, then Pope, believing the Fiction, ordered them to be restored; but his Command was not obey-

Con-

The History of PORTUGAL.

ed by the Council, who therein took the Advice of St. Cyprian, then Bishop of Carthage. Another Council was held at Braga, to decide whether the Baptism of Hereticks, done with an Intention, was valid: And it passed in the Affirmative. After the Plague, sollowed a no less Evil; which was, an Inundation of Germans, over all the Provinces of the Empire. Most Places now known in Portugal only by their Ruins, were by them overthrown, and not by the Goths: For, the Germans designing to return home, spoiled all they could not carry away; whereas the Goths, coming to settle, spared much, for their own Use. Thus ended the Empire of Galienus.

CHAP. II.

The Hereste of Priscilian. The Coming into Spain of the Vandals, Alans, Suevians and Goths. The Kingdom of the Suevians set led in Portugal. And all other Passages of Note, from the Tear 271, to the Tear 448.

1. Claudius II. and Aurelianus were Successors to Ga-27I. lienus, in the Empire. The latter was he that Claudius and Aure- overcame the most Warlike Zenobia, Queen of Palmira. Under these Emperors suffered Martyrdom nine Sisters, the Daughters of Lucius Catelius, or Caius Atilius, Governor of Galicia and Lusitania; as some Authors have it, born at Braga; but others say, he was a German. These things are very obscure, and uncertain; as are all the Affairs of Lusitania, till the Time of Constantine the Great. Only this is certain, That 2 a great Number of Martyrs suffered under the Heathen Emperors, throughout all Spain; and consequently, Portugal had a great Share in them. The Emperor Constant 311. tine, after quieting the Troubles of Spain, the better to Constantine the Great. The Church Settled, settle the Spiritual Government, assembled a National Council at Toledo: In it the Metropolitan Churches were fettled; which were, Braga and Merida, for Lusi-

The History of PORTUGAL.

tania; Toledo, Sevil and Cordova, for the rest of Spain. Another Council was afterwards held at Ilibers, which was near Granada, for settling many Things relating to the Affairs of the Church. There met at it 10 Bishops, 3 whereof went out of Portugal; which were, Vincentius, of Ossonoba, in Algarve ; Januarius, of Alcagar de Sal; and Quincianus, of Evora. Constantine regulated the Government of the Empire, reducing it to a better Form than any of his Predections had done. He employed Spanish Forces in remote Parts: In Egypt was a Body of Spanish Horse, and another of Lusivanian Foot: Also Spanish Horse, in Arabia; and others, in other Places. Constantine favoured Lusitania, bestowing great Privileges on it and eased it of heavy Taxes. These are all the Memorials that remain of him, in this Kingdom: Nor is there any of five of his Successors.

2. In this Age, the Heresie of Priscilian was con-Priscilian demned at Rome, in France, and Spain; he having be-the Herefore faffered Death for it. This Herefie was fire ich conbroached in Egypt, and thence brought into Spain, by demned. one Mark, who foon gained the Affections of fome Ladies, because he allowed (among his other Tenets) that Married People might be divorced, only upon Dislike of one another. Recettain Lady, called App pe, was the great favourer of this new Doctrine, and in her House it was taught; one Helpidius a Grammarian, being the chief Professor. Priscilianus, born in Galicia, with some Smattering he had of Rhetorick and Philosophy, and a little Skill in Magick, of a Disciple, in a few Days became so absolute a Master of this Herefies that it ever after took Name of him. A Synod, assembled at Zaragoza, condemned all the Profesiors of this Herefie; yet they prevailed so far against this Decree, that Priscilian was made Bishop of Avila: Upon Complaint made to the Emperor Gracian, he ordered that Priscilian, and the other Heretical Bishops, should not only be expelled their Sees, but all Spain. After this, Priscilian, with Bribes, obtained an Order from one of the Emperor's Secretaries, to be himself restored to his Bishoprick; and the sime for one of his Companions, the other being dead. The Catholick Bishops flying to the Emperor for Redress, Priscilian was not only deposed, but beheaded for his

The History of PORTUGAL.

ed by the Council, who therein took the Advice of St. Cyprian, then Bishop of Carthage. Another Council was held at Braga, to decide whether the Baptism of Hereticks, done with an Intention, was valid: And it passed in the Affirmative. After the Plague, sollowed a no less Evil; which was, an Inundation of Germans, over all the Provinces of the Empire. Most Places now known in Portugal only by their Ruins, were by them overthrown, and not by the Goths: For, the Germans deligning to return home, spoiled all they could not carry away; whereas the Goths, coming to fettle, spared much, for their own Use. Thus ended the Empire of Galienus.

CHAP. II.

The Heresie of Priscilian. The Coming into Spain of the Vandals, Alans, Suevians and Goths. The Kingdom of the Suevians setied in Portugal. And all other Passages of Note, from the Tear 271, to the Tear 448.

I. Claudius II. and Aurelianus were Successors to Ga-271. Lienus, in the Empire. The latter was he that and Aure- overcame the most Warlike Zenobia, Queen of Palmira. Under these Emperors suffered Martyrdom nine Lanus. Sifters, the Daughters of Lucius Catelius, or Cain Atilius, Governor of Galicia and Lusivania; as some Authors have it, born at Braga; but others fay, he was a German. These things are very obscure, and uncertain; as are all the Affairs of Luficania, till the Time of Constantine the Great. Only this is certain, That 2 a great Number of Martyrs suffered under the Heathen Emperors, throughout all Spain; and confequently, Portugal had a great Share in them. The Emperor Constan-311. tine, after quieting the Troubles of Spain, the better to Constansettle the Spiritual Government, assembled a National tine the Great. Council at Toledo: In it the Metropolitan Churches The Church were fettled; which were, Braga and Merida, for Lusifettled.

The History of PORTUGAL.

tania: Toledo, Sevil and Cordova, for the rest of Spain. Another Council was afterwards held at Iliberi, which was near Granada, for settling many Things relating to the Affairs of the Church. There met at it 10 Bishops, 3 whereof went out of Portugal; which were Vincentius, of Ossonoba, in Algarve; Januarius, of Alcagar de Sal; and Quincianus, of Evora. Constantine regulated the Government of the Empire, reducing it to a better Form than any of his Predecellors had done. He employed Spanish Forces in remote Parts: In Egypt was a Body of Spanish Horse, and another of Lusitanian Foot: Also Spanish Horse, in Arabia; and others, in other Places. Constantine favoured Lusitania, beflowing great Privileges on it, and eased it of heavy These are all the Memorials that remain of him, in this Kingdom: Nor is there any of five of his Succeffors.

2. In this Age, the Heresie of Priscilian was con-Priscilian demned at Rome, in France, and Spain; he having be-the Herefore suffered Death for it. This Heresie was first tick conbroached in Egypt, and thence brought into Spain, by demned. one Mark, who foon gained the Affections of some.Ladies, because he allowed (among his other Tenets) that Married People might be divorced, only upon * Dislike of one another. A certain Lady, called A pe, was the great Favourer of this new Doctrine, and in her House it was taught; one Helpidius, a Grammarian, being the chief Professor. Priscilianus, born in Galicia, with some Smattering he had of Rhetorick and Philosophy, and a little Skill in Magick, of a Disciple, in a few Days became so absolute a Master of this Herefie, that it ever after took Name of him. A Synod, assembled at Zaragoza, condemned all the Professors of this Herefie; yet they prevailed so far against this Decree, that Priscilian was made Bishop of Avila: Upon Complaint made to the Emperor Gracian, he ordered that Priscilian, and the other Heretical Bishops, should not only be expelled their Sees, but all Spain. After this, Priscilian, with Bribes, obtained an Order from one of the Emperor's Secretaries, to be himself restored to his Bishoprick; and the same for one of his Companions, the other being dead. The Catholick Bishops flying to the Emperor for Redress, Priscilian was not only depoted, but beheaded for his

416.

Contumacy. The other Bishop, called Instancius, recanted. Some of Priscilian's Disciples brought his Carcase into Spain, where he was reverenced as a Saint; and their most solemn Oaths were made by him. The Emperor Maximin would have put them all to the Sword, but St. Martin opposed it, being very angry that the Spanish Bishops had profecuted Priscilian to Death: Nevertheless, Maximus defended the

The History of PORTUGAL.

Bishops, and was offended at St. Martin for opposing 391. them. A fecond Constantine filled the Imperial Throne, in the Person of Theodosius; so equal was their Justice, Clemency and Religion. About this time there is some Account, that the Lusitanians of Ambracia built Placensia, in the Province of Cantabria. There is still a Town there of this Name, and we find one Protafius Bishop thereof, mentioned in the Fifth Council of Too ledo. But let us come out of this Obscurity, though not into full Light, yet to somewhat more Clearnels, gi.

and speak of the Coming of the Goths into Spain. 3. The Goths were descended of Magog, one of the they were. Sons of Japhet, and Brother to Tubal, who first planted in Scandinavia, that vast Northern Tract of Land which, in the manner of a Peninsula, contains Sweden, Norway and Gothland: Outsof the last came the Goths, well known in the World, no less for their many Victories, than for their beaftly Barbarities: After this, The Suevi- broke out the Suevians, driven out of Sweden, by the ans, Van- Goths: And lastly, came that Inundation of Vandals, dals, A- Alans, Burgundians, Selingi, and other Northern Nalans, Bur-tions, out of the Countries about the River Tanan and the Palus Meotis. Whilst these Nations were yet employed in Germany and France, the Roman Army in and Selin-Great Britain saluted two of their Generals, Marcus, and Gracianus, Emperors, successively; and then killing them both, promoted Constantius; who fearing the like End as the others had met with, passed over into France; where joining with the greatest Men, he made himself Master of most of that Country. Encouraged with this Success, he sent out several Commanders of Note to possess themselves of Spain, expelling those that govern'd there for the Emperor Honorius. There of the Pyranean Hills. However, Constans, the Son of Constantius, with certain Voterane Legions, and some Troops of Alans and Suevians, all in Rebellion against the Empire, forced their Way: The two Brothers purfued; and overtaking him, they came to a Battel, in which the Imperialists were overthrown, and Constans obtained a compleat Victory. Thus the Spaniards were forced to submit themselves to Conflans. The Guard of the Pyranean Hills was committed to the Sugrians and Alans, that they might keep out the other Barbarous Nations, dispersed throughout France. Thus flushed with the rich Booty they had got in Spain, they invited the Vandals, Alans, Sucvians and Sclingi, whom they were to have kept out, into Spain. Those People, though under several Commanders, unanimous in the same purpose, passed the Mounains: Guadericus was King of the Vandals; Hermeneriof the Suevians; and Resplandianus, of the Alans. They over-ran all the Country, gaining several Victofo that the Roman Authority was wholly abolished, and Spain entirely brought under that barbamus Tyranny: All the Civility and Policy learnt of the Romans; reduced to a Brutal Disorder; and most of the antient Natives destroyed by Sword, Peltilence and Famine.

4. The Vandals and Silingi planted themselves in he Province of Betica: The Alans and Sucvians, in Alans and Calicia and Lustiania. In ethis universal Desolution, Suevians the Relicks of the Saints being destroyed, together with in Lustrathe Churches, Panoracius, Archbishop of Braga, ga-nia. thered a Synod of some Bishops, and ordered them to hide the Bodies of the Saints, so that some Memory of the Places might be preserved to better Times. This was the First Council of Braga. In the mean First Counwhile, the Invaders took Lubon, Coimbra, Idanha, Me-cil of Brarida, Astorga, and afterwards the rest. Having divi-ga. ded the Lands, and Resplandianus, King of the Alans, Kings of the dying, Attaces succeeded him in the Kingdom of Lusi- Alans and tania, and settled his Court in the City Merida. Her- Suevians. menericus, King of the Suevians, Rept Lubon, and all as far as Algarve, with a part of Galicia. Both these had been no Difficulty in compatting his Design, but Nations, in process of Time, became more tractable. for Didimus and Verinianus; who being then in Lust and joined with the Natives. Attaces now grown pania, hasted with a good Power, to secure the Passes powerful, became terrible to his Neighbours; somebuilt.

times breaking into Celtiberia, and iometimes into Carpentania: Lastly, he fell upon Hermenericus, King of the Suevians, residing at Lisbon: From him besides other Lands, he took the City Colimbria, seated then where now is Conderia the Old. To ennoble this his *Conquest, he laid the Foundation of another City, on the Banks of the River Mondego, which is now the University of Coimbra. This Prince, being an Arian Heretick, obliged the Catholicks, and even the Prelates before taken, to work at this Building. Whilft he was busie at this Shucture, Hermenericus having gathered Forces, and joined with Gundericus, came as far as Porto, then an Heap of Ruins: But fearing lest Atmices should there encounter him, he fortified himfelf, and that so effectually, that People flocking this ther, the City was re-built, and called New Portucale, and Fistavole, which, in the Suevian Language, fignified, the New Shoar • This was the second Foundation of Porto. Hermenericus perceiving that Attaces came not to molest him in his new Work, marched to dis turb him; but being overthrown, he was glad to lue for Peace. The Conditions were fuch as pleased the Alans; but particularly, that which contained his marrying Cindasunda, the Daughter of the Suevian King, a Lady of incomparable Beauty and Vergue. Hermenericus carried the Bride to the new City Coimbra, where the Nuptials were solemnized with the greatest Magnificence that had been seen among the Barbarians.

5. Attaces, to express to his Father-in-Law how firmly he intended to observe the new-settled Friendship, caused Cindasunda to be painted on his Colours, standing upon a Pedestal; with a Green Dragon on the one fide, and a Red Lion on the other. By those, two Creatures, were fignified, the two Kings, before Competitors, now united by her: The Work-men, to flatter their King, carved the same upon many Stones; which have been fo preserved, that it is now the Coat of Arms of that City. Cindafunda, who was a Catholick, privately faroured those that the King forced to labour at his Structures: But particularly, the took Compation on the Priests and Bishops; and among them, the Bishop Elipanidus, and the Priest Esenus. She, with her Beauty and Intreaties, so mollified the Arms of Porto.

The History of PORTUGAL.

King, that many Catholicks were delivered from that Slavery. They lived some Time together very unanimously: He employed himself in endeavouring to subdue such Provinces as yet remained subject to the Roman Empire; but the Romans, joining with the Goths, defended themselves; as will appear by the Sequel.

6. The Emperor Honorius, then at Ravenna, seeing the mighty Decay of the Empire, for Constantius was possessed of a great part of France; while, Ataulfus, the Goth, held Gallia Narbonensis; and the Vandais, Suevians and Alans, Sain. Against all these Enemies, he made choice of Constantius, a Noble Roman; who belieged Constantine in Arles, and drove him, for fear, to enter into Orders: Yet this availed him not, for he was put to Death. Constantias deligned next to turn his victorious Arms against Constans, but understood that he was killed by Geronieus, who rebelling, had proclaimed Emperor a Friend of his own, called Maximus. This Geronicus passed over into France: And hearing that Constantius, having slain Constantine, was coming upon him, he returned into Spain, and, in Scorn, was murder'd by the Runan Legions. Maximus fearing the like Death, fled, and ended his Days in Misery. In the mean time, Honorius having, by his General Constantius, reduced France and Great Britain, he employed him against Ataulfus, King of the Goths, in Gallia Narbonensis. The Goth hard pres- The Goths sed, by the Way of Roussillon, broke into Spain, com-enter Spain mitting greater Outrages than the Alans, Vandals, Suevians or Silingi had done. After many Events which appertain not to our History, the Goths came to Compolition with Honorius. But it was not so with the Alans, who possessed the greatest part of Portugal, and continued their Conquests; treating the Vandals and Suevians, not as their Fellows in Arms, but as their Vassals. This put all Spain into a Flame, every one standing up for his Liberty, as Artaces listed up himfelf, to Lord it over all. That each Nation might be the more at leifure to follow their desperate Defigns, they all writ to the Emperor, to this Effect: Preserve the Peace, Sir, with us all; Take Hostages from us all: Let us fight; for if we kill one another, the Loss is our own, and yours the Fruit of the Victory, whoever has the better: Your greatest Advantage, is, to see us all confumed. The War was accordingly begun, the A. lans commencing it against the Vandals and Silingi. Constantius came to the War, bringing with him Wa lia King of the Goths, whose Residence was in Garalonia: And Attaces, not able to withstand that Power, fled into Portugal. .

7. The Victors pursued, and Attaces giving them Battel, was overthrown, though joined by the Native Lustranians: Those that escaped out of the Battel, fled; some into Galicia, to Gundericus; others to Life. bon, to the Suevians; seeking the Protection of those they had before profecuted as Exemies. Thus they rested a while, without any King: But Constantius being called away, to appeale other Troubles in Italy, the Alans and Lusitanians, before dispersed, began to take heart, and recover what they had loft founding also many new Towns. Among these were, Albuquerque and Terabjica; which last was rather repaired, being called Alankerken, which fignification The Church of the Alans; and now, corruptly, Almquer. Whilst the Alans, thus without any King, only following their Generals, paid Tribute to the Emperor; Hermenericus, the Suevian King, at Lisbon, applied himself to the repairing of the Towns that had vians inbeen destroyed; treating the Native Lusitanians no otherwise than his own Country-men. The Lusitanians having the free Liberty of their Religion, and ditanians. being equally admitted to all Honours with the Sucvians, the two Nations joined Marriage; and by that Means became so entirely one, that there was no knowing the Suevian from the Lusitanian, or the contrary, Being thus joined into one Body, they could afterwards never be parted; but notwithstanding the Invafion of the Goths, the Inhabitants of Portugal were afterwards called Suevians. Thus the Portugueses are descended from the Suevians, no less Noble than the Goths, if either of those Barbarous Nations deserve

> 8. The Alans enjoyed Tranquility, without any King; as did the Suevians, or Pertugueses, under their Sovereign Hermenericus; till Gundericus, King of the Vandals, to be esteemed Honourable: And thus the Province of Lusitania lost that Name, and was long after called

The History of PORTUGAL.

Vandals, thinking it easie to subdue the Alans in Lustrania, and the Silingi in Andaluzia, if Hermenericus were once oppressed, he broke the Peace with the Suevians; and rushing suddenly, with Fire and Sword, into their Territories; Hermenericus, though surprized at this unexpected Invasion, gathering his Forces together, received the Enemy to successfully, that he sent him to feek new Seats in the Islands of Majorea and Minorca; where we will leave him, to be spoken of by those Historians to whom it belongs. Gensericus, the 420. Brother of Gundericus, succeeded him: Who under- The Suevinding that Etius, Honorius's General, was coming ans, Alans into Spain, to revenge the Wrongs done by his Bro- and Silinther, he joined in League with Hermenericus King of gi join in the Sucvians, and with the Alans and Silingi; believing gains the none would dare to oppose their United Power. At Romans. Merida they Mustered their Forces, Etius dreading their Multitude; but much more surprized at the death of the Emperor, attempted nothing upon them. Thus 423-Gensericus was left at leasure to pass over into Africk, where he utterly abolished the Name of the Roman Empire, and Hermenericus, whillt the Vandals were employ- 427. ed in Africk, enlarged the Borders of his Kingdom to almost the same extent it now bears.

9. Valentinian the Emperor, who succeeded Honorius, Wars beunderstanding the Vandals were gone over into Africk, twist the Commanded his General Sebastian to invade the Alans Romans left in Lusitania. Merida and all that Territory was and Sueeafily taken from them, as was Lisbon and Estremadura from the Sucvians. Schastian now Victorious, forgetting his Duty, caused himself to be Proclaimed King of what part he had recovered of Lusitania; yet his Friends failing him, he was foon killed, and by his Death the Alans and Suevians had an opportunity of recovering Merida and Lisbon. Hermenericus grown Old and Infirm, caused his Son Richila to be Proclaimed King, who proved one of the most fortunate Princes of the Suevians; whilst Hermenericus rejoyced in the hopes of surviving in the Person of his Son, Andebalus the Imperial General was on his march to recover what Sebaftian had lost. Richila to begin his Reign honourably, gathered a mighty Power, and meeting Andebalus on the Banks of the River Xenil, then called Silingus, ilew him and the greatest part of his Army.

ro. All

Suevia.

corporate

with the Richila of Lusitania and Andalu-Tia.

448.

The History of PORTUGAL: 10. All Andaluzia easily submitted to the Victorious makes him-King, as did also Merida, where there had been an Imperial Garrison ever since Sebastian took it. All Lusitania in like manner was brought under, and Richila became absolute in Andaluzia and Lusitania. Old Hermenericus died contentedly, leaving such an Heir, in the Town of Britonium near Viana de Caminha on the mouth of the River Minho. Another Author who calls him Monarch of Spain, says, he was drowned in the River Guadiana near unto Merida. Richila being sensible how much more easie it is to gain, than to preserve. too large a Dominion, voluntarily refigned up Cartagena and Carpentania to the Romans, and entring into League with them, by that means established a large and peaceable Kingdom. He died Eight Years after his Father, and left his Son Ricciarius to succeed him, being equal to him in valour, but more fortunate in the true knowledge of the Evangelical Law, which he professed living, and adhered to at his death.

CHAP. III.

The Kingdom of the Suevians subdued by the Goths, two Kings set up by their consent, all again reduced under one with the other remarkable occurrences between the Tears of Grace 448 and 560.

448. Ricciari-115 75:5 Reign.

I. D Icciarius succeeded his Father Richila, not only in the Kingdom of Portugal, but the greatest part of Spain. The beginning of his Reign was disturbed with some Conspiracies of the Great Men, but he privately took off many of them, and by that means fecured his Life and Kingdom. He Married a Daughter of Theodoredus, King of the Goths; her Name is not known: Ricciarius after his Marriage, raifing a great Army, made War upon those parts of Navarre, which were yet subject to the Roman Jurisdiction, and through them he forced his way into France, to see his Fatherin-law Theodoredus. The old Man perceiving his afpiring Spirit, gave him considerable supplies for the carrying on of his Defigns. In his return, he conquered the Province of Tarragona and Carpentania, which his Father had abandoned to the Romans. In Aragon, he took Zaragoza, and Lerida in Catalonia; after plundering the Province of Cartagena, he returned loaded with Booty and Honour into Lusiania. Ricciarius being 451. now at rest, his Father-in-law Theodoredus died, and Theodoricus his Son succeeded him: Him Ricciarius thought to have been no less forward toward his Affistance, than the Father had been, and upon this conceit, he resolved to conquer the other Lands of the Empire. The Goth who was in League with the Romans. and feared the Ambition of his Brother-in-law might involve him in his own Ruin, advised him to moderate his extravagant desires. Ricciarius offended at this wholesome advice, marched against his Brother-inlaw with a powerful Army; Theodoricus was not backward to meet him, being strengthned with Succours from the Kings of France and Burgundy. The two Ar- He is overmies furiously ingaged in the Plains about Astonga, thrown by both Kings were present in all places, where the great-Theodo-est Danger was, Encouraging their Soldiers, and the ricus King Men fought as those who had their Kings to be Spe-Goths. ctators of their Valour. At last Ricciarius was utterly overthrown with the Slaughter of all the flower of the Suevians.

2. Ricciarius after this rout fled to the Sea-side, and Ricciari-Embarking, thought to have got over into Africk, to us his end. call the Vandals and Alans to his affiftance, but by a violent Storm was drove to the River of Porto. Those People to gain the Favour of the Conqueror, who was now subduing the Province between the Rivers Duero and Minho, fecured and delivered him up to Theodoricus. He Governed by Passion, cut off his Head, and in him perished the Glory of the Sucvian Kingdom, so that it never after rose to any Grandeur: His Death was the more lamented, for that he was a Prince zealous of the true Religion. Accordingly in his life-time, he affembled a National Synod at Aqua Celena, a Town in Galicia, now called St. George of Codesceda; here several Heresies were Condemned, and particularly that of Priscilian. The Victorious Theodoricus laid Siege to Braga, which was foon Surrendred to him: Here

Here he left one Aliulfus Governour, whilst he crossing the River Duero, went on to conquer all that had been subject to the Suevian King; all yielded to him without any opposition, except the City Merida, the Garrison and Inhabitants of which place were so hardy, as to meet the Goths in the Feild, which Theodoricus fo highly refented, that he promised to rase the City, but the Virgin St. Eulalia is said to have appeared to him in a Dream, and deterred him from putting his design in Execution.

Theodoricus hawing conauered Spain, puts is under Gowernours.

3. Theodoricus was upon his return to France, when he had intelligence, that Aliulfus whom he had made Governour of Braga, had affumed the Title of King, and raised a considerable Army to maintain it. But giving Battle to Nepocianus Theodoricus his General lost his life: From that time the Suevians remained Tablect to the Goths. All things being thus quieted, Theodoricus went away to France, leaving Governours over all his Conquests. The People considering the oppression they lay under, by the ill Administration of these Governours, and wanting the power to Revolt, had recourse to the Bishops and Clergy, praying them to intercede with Theodoricus, that he would appoint a King over them, whom they might obey, and who yet might be subordinate to him. The Bishops undertook the Bufiness, and Idacius Prelate of Lamego, having proposed the matter of the Embassy to Theodoricus in France, he tho' an Arrian, respecting the Character of the Embassadors, not only granted their request, but allowed the People to choose a King among themselves, to Govern them according to their Ancient Laws, only paying some small acknowledgment to the Kings of the Two Kines Goths. As foon as the Bishops returned to Braga, joyning with the Laity, they chose for their King one Lusitania. Masdra the Son of Masila. This, which was intended for the peace of the Country, proved its greatest Confusion, for some of the Nobility who were not prefent at the Election, fet up for their King one Franta, who presently possessed himself of all the Lands along the Coast of Galicia, with the Cities of Astorga, Orense and Iria Flavia. Masdra held all Lusitania, and was accounted King of the Suevians; he thought by his submission and paying the Tribute, to gain the favour of Theodoricus, and obtain Aid against his Competitor:

The History of PORTUGAL.

But, the Goth politickly thinking it better the Kingdom should be divided, as being thereby the less capable of Rebelling against him, accepted of the submission of them both; for Franta had sent to pay his o-. be dience with no less speed than the other.

4. The Kingdom of the Suevians thus divided, fell 457.

into those Calamities which commonly attend States that depend between Competitors. Two Years the Wars continued very furious, during which time to many Towns about the Frontiers were subverted, as might well have contented either party; but at last both of them grown weary, gave over the strife. Masdra 460. who had the better Title died, and left a Son called Remismundus his Successor; he considering how little had been gained on either fide by the War, not only made Peace, but entred into League with bis Competitor. Thus with their united Forces, they conquered several parts of Lusicania, which owned neither of them, but either followed their own Captains, or had again put themselves under the Roman Empire. Thus done. they both returned home fatisfied, having enlarged their Dominions, which they would have wasted by waging. War upon one another. Two Years Franta enjoyed A prodigio Peace, at the end whereof he died, leaving the Crown our Birth. to his Brother Frumarius: At this time hapned a Prodigy in the Territory of Braga, which was the Birth of two Children, each of them having two heads like one another, and of two several Sexes. Remismundus and Frumarius falling at variance about Precedency, took up Arms by force, whereof the latter-gained of the other the City Flavia, now Chaves, in which and all its Territory, he spared not even the Stones, all the Country was confumed with Fire and Sword. Remismundus was fatisfied with doing as much harm in his Enemies Country, as he received in his own; he took by open force the Cities of Orense and Lugo, in which he exer-

5. This Defolation continued for the space of two 464. Years, when Death put a stop to it by taking away The Suevi-Frumarius, and his subjects having left him, for whom an Kingbefore they had forfeited their quiet, submitted them-dom again selves to Remismundus, who thus became absolute and united unsole King of the Suevians. He presently thought of re-der Remicovering all that remained of Lusitania, and passing of smundus.

cifed the utmost Efforts of his Fury.

ver the River Duero with his Army, marched to the Ancient Coimbra, now Condeixa, which the Romans had Rebuilt and Fortified. It was then a place impregnable, and accordingly put a stop for a while to Remise mundus; but he perlifting before it, had it at last surren. dred upon Honourable Conditions; though, contrary to his Faith given, he broke the Conditions, robbing the Garrison, and rasing the City. Lisbon made such a vigorous Defence, that he began to despair of carrying it; but a Citizen called Lusidius privately, gave him Entrance into it, so that he was within before the Townsmen could put themselves in order to oppose him. Remismundus thus possessed of all those Dominions before divided, fearing least Theodoricus the Goth might grow jealous of his great power, fent him an account of his Victories with the best of the spoiles, affuring him of the continuance of his Fidelity to the Gothish Kings. Theodoricus overcome with this Generofity, fent him his Daughter for Wife, with a great Mass of Treasure, under the charge of his Ambassador Salanus.

He Mar-

Daughter of Theories the doricus.

6. This was an unhappy Match for Lusitania, for Hereste first the Suevians being before true Sons of the Catholick spread in Church, were now infected with the Arian Heresie, Lusitania. taught them by one Ajax a Galatian, whom the Queen being her self an Arian brought with her. The love of the Queen, and the perswasions of Ajax, wrought upon the King so effectually, that he not only gave his Subjects the Example of embracing that Herefie, but persecuted those that continued firm in the Faith. All the care of the Prelates for repressing of this current was fruitless, for it spread it self during the space of 100 Years, in which time the Catholicks suffered Oppression, Banishment, and cruel Deaths. There is no further memory of the Actions of Remismundus, after his Marriage till his Death; nor much of his Successors, Theodulus, Varamundus, Mirus, Faramirus and others, till Theodomirus, during the 100 Years that the Arian Herefie continued. In the Year 490, some Fishes were taken in the River Minho, which on their Scales had certain Characters, expressing that same number of Years. Not long after came into Spain, Euricus King of the Goths, with a design to subdue all the Country, and began with Lusitania, where having made great havock, he returned Victorious into France and died at ArThe History of PORTUGAL.

les. Amalaricus, Grandson to Theodoricus, succeeded Euricus, he being Maried to Crofilda he Daughter of Clouis, and Sister to bildebert, Clotarius, and Clodomirus Kings of France, treated her ill, because she was a Catholick, he being an Arian. She complained her Brothers by the means of Ausbertus Archbishop of Braga: Childebert hereupon came into Lusitania, and 531. having overthrown and flain his Brother-in-law, returned into France laden with Booty, and carrying away his Sifter, who died by the Way:

7. In the Year 549, Agila was Proclaimed King of 549. the Goths, he being overthrown at Cordova, retired into Lusitania. There he raised new Forces to withstand A. thanagildus, a valiant ambitious Captain, who being possetted of Sevil, stiled himself King of Spain: He was supported by Roman Forces, under the Command of Patricius Liberius, a General in esteem with the Emperor Justinian. Near to Sevil they came to a Battle, wherein Agila was otherthrown, and afterwards Murthered by his own Subjects at Merida. Athanagildus thus became Sovereign of all that part of the Kingdom of the Goths, which lies between the Mouth of Tagus and Cape St. Vincent. The greatest part of this Dominion was again recovered by the Romans, notwithstanding that Athanagildus did all he could to oppose them, till he died at Toledo in the Year 567. In these times 567. were famous for Piety and Learning, the Bishops St. Men fa-Julian of Evora, Lucenius of Coimbra, Aprigius of Beja, mous for Idacius of Lamego and Ausbertus of Braga, a Fleming by Learning. Birth: Also the famous Orosius born at Tarragona in Catalonia, flourished at Braga. The Prelates of Spain finding it not only convenient, but necessary to consult with St. Augustin then Bishop of Hippo in Africk, for the better settling and adjusting of matters of Religion, then much perplexed with Doubts and Controversies; Baleonius at that time, Bishop of Braga, made choice of Orosius to be sent to him with this Message. The chief point given him in charge, was about the means of extirpating the Herefies then spread about Spain; St. Augustin having therein given his own Opinion, ordered Orefius to pass over into the Holy Land, there to take the advice also of the other Pillar of the Church St. Hierome, who resided there at that time. There Orosius found the Priest Avitus a Lusitanian, who for the love he bore his Country, fent by Orofius at his return some relicks of the Protomartyr St. Steplen, whose body had been about that time miraculous bund out. This may be supposed to be the same that was held in Veneral tion at Offel, which Town some will have to be in the Territory of Beja and others of Bajadoz.

497.

4.90.

CHAP. IV.

The Reigns of the Tributary Suevian Kings, from the Tear 560, till 585, when Lusitania was again subdued by Leovigildus, the Goth. And the Government of the Gothish Kings, till the Tear 672.

fitanians from Arianism.

1. TX E are now come to the End of the 100 Years. which Historians pass over, without any considerable Mention of our Portuguese, or Suevian Kings. In Theodemirus, the Memory of our Princes is happily renewed, fince through his Means most of the Subjects returned to the true Faith. At the Beginning of his Reign he was an Arrian, but miraculously converted. He removed his Court to the City Braga, where his Son being desperately sick, and no Medicines availing, he asked, one Day, which had been the Religion of St. Gregory of Tours; this Saint being then famous for Miracles: It was told him, he had been a Catholick. Immediately four Gentlemen were fent, with as much Gold and Silver as the fick Person weighed, besides. other Gifts, to offer at the Shrine; with a Promise, That if the Prince recovered, he should embrace the Catholick Religion. The Sickness hereupon decreased, vet the Prince recovered not perfect Health: Whereupon, the King begged some Relick of the Saint; promising to renounce his Heresie. The Relick was refused the Ambassadors; and they, at Night, spreading a thin Veil over the Sepulchre, said, They would reverence it as a Relick, if in the Morning its Weight were considerably increased. Accordingly, the next Morning they found it as heavy as if it had been made of some weighry Metal. This Veil the Ambassadors brought with them; and the same Day they landed, the Prince perfectly recovered. The King performed his Promise, embracing the Faith; and by his Example, and the Preaching of another St. Martin, who then came out of France, according to some Authors; or, as others will have it, out of Greece, most of the People were converted. Theodemirus had before erected a Church. in Honour of St. Martin of Tours: Of this Church he made the other Martin Abbot first, and then Bishop; whence he was preferred to the Archiepiscopal See of Braga.

Z. Two Years were spent in the Embassages, and other pious Works of the King, for his Son's Health; and all things being now in Peace, he ordered Lucrecius, Several Sy-Archbishop of Braga, to assemble a Synod, for the better regulating the Affairs of the Church. Eight Bishops 563. being met, they agian condemned the Heresie of Priscilianus; and took Order for the propagating of the Faith. Another Synod met after that, at Lugo, to ap- 569. point the Limits of every Diocess; which were afterwards confirmed, in the general Distribution made throughout Spain, by King Wamba. Theodemirus dying, the Crown came to his Son Ariamirus; who, with the Approbation of St. Martin, now Archbishop of Braga, ordered another Synod to meet in that City; which was accordingly done two Years after: Twelve 572. Prelates affembled there; and one of the principal Matters handled, was, the fixing the due Time of Observing of Easter. After settling the Affairs of the Faith, the King raifed Forces; and invading the People called Rucones, now Ricja, subdued them. Luiva was now King of the Goths, and took for his Companion, and Successor, his Brother Leovigildus: Which done, he returned into France, leaving Leovigildus in Spain, to secure his former Conquests, and add others to them. He victoriously traversed the greatest part of Spain, and at last enter'd Galicia, Ariamiras in vain striving to put a Stop to his Progress; who now perceiving how ineffectual Force proved, thought better to try if Fair Means would prevail: Therefore he fent Ambaffadors to Leovigildus, to put him in mind of the Peace and Alliance established betwixt their Predecessors, and to de-upon his

ligion.

Turps the Cruwn of Portugal.

Son Her-

menegil-

fire the Renewing thereof. Leovigildus, content with this Submission, curbed his aspiring Thoughts, concluded a Peace, and retired.

2. Leovigildus had now two Sons, Hermenegildus and Recaredus. The first was married to Ingunda, Daughter of Sigebert King of France, and his Wife Brunechilde. Upon this Marriage, he lived apart from his Father.

and had the Stile of # King given him at Merida. There, by the Means of his Wife, who was & Catholick, and of his Uncle St. Leander, Archbishop of Sevilhe embraced the Catholick Faith; and, in Baptism, was. Leovigil- called 70/n. His Father being an obstinate Arian, was fo offended at his Conversion, that he deprived him of dus the GothWars the Regal Dignity. The Prince fled into Portugal, and was there protected by King Ariamirus, who was a Ca-tholick. Hemmenegildus raised Forces; but his Father dus, on Ac- coming speedily upon him, he fled, with 3000 Men, count of Re- to Offela, a Place thought impregnable: But Leovigil. dus, for all that, enter'd it by Force, put all to the Sword, burnt the Town, and carried away his Son Prisoner to Toledo. From thence he made his Escape to Sevil, where he fortified himself. King Levigildus laid Siege to that City, being affifted by King Ariamirus of Portugal; and having forced his Way into it, carried away Hermenegildus to Tarragona, where he was put to Death, in the Year 586. Which Passage is here related, to avoid interrupting the Narration.

4. Our King Ariamirus died at that Siege, and his 583. Son Eburicus, then very young, succeeded him in the Crown of Portugal, under the Protection of Leovigildus the Goth. Endeca, a Noble-man in great Power at the Endeca u-

Portuguese Court, taking Advantage of the King's tender Years, married Sisegunda the Queen-Dowager; and with the Help of his Friends, possessed himself of the Government, upon pretence of managing it for the young King. But having, in Process of Time, secured his Interest, he usurped the Regal Title, and put Eburicus into Prison at first, and soon after obliged him to take the Habit of a Monk, that to he might forfeit his Pretentions to the Crown. The Tyrant Endeca fearing Leovigilaus the Goth, who was Protector to the deposed King, joined in League with Gunteranus the French

King. But the Goth, whose Courage was not to be shocked, fent his Son Recaredus against the French, and himself invaded the usurping Suevian. He soon took He is depchim Prisoner, and obliged him to take the same Habit sed, and he had before forced upon the Rightful King, and to shorn a enter into Holy Orders, banishing him to the City Be-Mork, by ja, then possessed by the Goths. Yet Leovigildus, though Leovigilhe was thought to have conquered that Kingdom for Goth, Eluricus, kept it for himself; adding it to his other Dominions. Thus ended the Kingdom of the Suevians, after it had, with various Turns of Fortune, lasted about 180 Years: It expired in the Year 585. The People, diffatisfied with Leovigildus, rose up in Arms, and proclaimed a Noble-man, called Malaricus, King; but he being soon overthrown, and taken Prisoner by the Forces of the Goth, the Kingdom of the Lusitanians, or Suevians, was entirely brought under the Dominion of the Goths. The Lufitanians at this time continued He perfefirm in the Faith, and Leovigildus ceased not to perse-cates the cute the Professors thereof; deposing the Catholick Pre- Catholates, and filling their Places with Arians, who pervert-licks, but ed many of the People. Leovigildus having raigned 18 dies one Years, died at Toledo, a Catholick, though he had lived an Arian. His first Wife was Theodora, Daughter of Severianus, Governor of Cartagena, and his Wife Theodora, Daughter to Theodoricus, King of the Ostrogoths, in Italy; and Sifter to Undorus and Leander, Archbishops of Sevil; and of Fulgentius, of Cartagena. By her he had Hermenegildus, whom he put to death; and Flavius Recaredus, who succeeded him. 5. Recaredus, born at Sevil, in the Year 566, now, 586. in the 20th of his Age, inherited his Father's Throne. Recare-He proved an excellent Prince; and having embra-dus succed the Catholick Faith, restored all those that his Fa-ceeds. ther had expelled. His pious Intention of Assembling H. becomes a National Synod, was, for some time, obstructed by a Cathothe Treasonable Conspiracies of the Hereticks. The lick. first Council was held at Merida, under the Direction of Claudius, who governed the small Remainder of the Roman Empire along the Sea-Coast of Lusitania. Suna the Arian Archbishop, being now compelled to resign that See to Mansona the Catholick, before expelled by Leovigildus, conspired with other Hereticks, to murder him and Claudius. Witericus, who was afterwards King, now one of the Conspirators, laying his Hand upon his Sword, to execute his Purpose, he could not draw draw it; whereat being moved he discovered the Treat chery, and was therefore pardon'd. Suna, the Heretical Archbishop, was banished, as were the other Accomplices, and their Estates confiscated. Amidst this Confusion, Gunteranus King of France made War upon Recaredus; sending against him an Army, under the Command of his General Bossus. Claudius, a Man fortunate in War, marched to oppose him, and overthrew him near Carcassonne, with a great Slaughter. Some will have it, that Claudius, with only 300 Men, defeated Bossus, who had 60000: But let every one judge thereof as he pleases.

6. Recaredus having thus subdued his Enemies, both at home and abroad, was at leifure to affemble the 589. Council he had before defigned at Toledo. Seventy two A Synoa at Prelates met together there, St. Leander, Archbishop of Toledo. Sevil, presiding. The King himself made an Oration at the Opening of the Council. Now the Arian Herefie was totally extinguished, the Catholick Faith triumphed, and Recaredus, for his fingular Piety, had the Title of Catholick, or Most Christian King conferred up-601. on him. After triumphing over his, which were the Enemies of Christ, our Religious King Recaredus died at Toledo. He was born at Sevil, in the Year 565; reigned 16, and lived 37. His Coin has been seen in our Age, at several Places: Some at Lisbon, with this Inscription on the one side, RECAREDUS REX; and on the Reverse, OLISIBONA PIUS. Others at Evera, with RECAREDUS REX; and on the Back, ELBORA JUSTUS. Recaredus had two Wives; The first, before he came to the Crown, was Balda, Daughter to the famous King Arthur, or to Fonto, a Gothish Lord. The Second was Clodosinda, Sister to Ingunda, the Wife of his Brother, Prince Hermenegildus, Her chiefest Portion was, the Peace established between Spain and France, then at War.

By his first Wife (though some will have him to be Illegitimate) he had Linva, who succeeded him in the Throne; and was of fuch excellent Beauty of

Person, and such amiable Behaviour, that all his Subjects rather adored than obeyed him; except Witericus, whom the late King had pardoned for discovering the Conspiracy at Merida. This Man, before enured to Treachery, now compassed his wicked Designs, appre-

hending

hending his natural Lord, cutting off his Right Hand, and depriving him of his Crown and Life, in the Second Year of his Reign.

7. Witericus thus Tyrannically possessed of the Go- 602. vernment and Regal Throne of all Spain, held it seven Weteria Years; which ended in an ignominious Death, yet cus usurps. fuch as he deferved: He died, miferably dragged about the Streets of Toledo, by the People. Flavius Gundema- 610. rus, of the Blood of Recaredus, in that Right ascended Flavius the Throne, and proved no way inferiour to him for Gunde-Valour, Moderation and Piety. He defiring to ho-marus nour the Church of Toledo, made it the Metropolitan reigns. of all the Province of Cartagena: To which purpose, a Synod was held at Toledo, in which it was ordained. that Criminals should have the Benefit of Sanctuary. In this City Death cut him off so early, that it is doubted whether he reigned full two Years. Our Lusicania, 612. then subject to the Gothish Kings, was governed by Lusitania their Lieutenants, whereof there was one in every Pro- governed vince, and some Comites, or Counts; for then this Ti- by Lieuter tle began to be honoured for being rare, as now it is hants. little regarded for being so common. It is to be obferved, that at this time the Name of Comites was not

Titular, as now; but denoted a Power and Jurisdiction over Lands of the Crown. In Spain there is no Title given by the Kings, that is of 400 Years standing. Gundemarus, though married to Hilduara, leaving no Sifebutus

Heirs, Sifebutus was chosen his Successor, by the Pre-chosenKing lates and Nobility. He immediately, upon his Acces- 616. sion to the Crown, commanded all the Jews to embrace the Christian Religion: Almost 100000 were baptized; and as many chose rather to be banished Spain.

Sischurus, though absent from Portugal, adorned it with many Structures: Two Towers, with his Name on them, remain still at Evora, of the Walls then by him built. Some of his Coin is also extant, on the Reverse whereof is a Crofs, and about it, CIVITAS EBO-RA DEUS ADJUTOR MEUS. He ordered Ships to be built upon the Coast of Lustrania; and having obtained some Victories, which appertain not to our History, died when he had reigned 8 Years and an 621. half, much lamented, as extraordinarily beloved of his Subjects.

H 2

8. Sifebutus

was Wife to this King: By her he had three Sons, viz.

Recesuindus, Theodofredus and Favila. Having reigned

8. Sisebutus left a young Son, called Recaredus; who dying soon after his Acceission to the Crown, left it to 622. Flavius Suintila, Son to the Holy King Recaredus; so Flavius Suintila's worthy a Man, that Silebutus always committed to him the Command of his Armies. No sooner had he grasp-Reign. He utterly ed the Sceptre, but he changed it for the Sword, and expels the soon drove out of Portugal the small Remains of the Ro-Romans. man Empire, which still, in much Variety of Fortune, had retained some small Hold there. During the first five Years of his Reign, he behaved himself with that Justice and Piety, that, among other honourable Titles, he obtained that of Father of the Poor. Some of his Coin, in Gold, I have seen; whereof, one Piece had this Inscription, SUINTILA REX EBORA VICTOR: Another, SUINTILA REX EME-RITA PIUS. This King stained the Honour of the first five Years of his Reign, by the Lewdness of the enfuing five; which so incensed his Subjects, that he was forced to fly, and end his Days in Misery, in Lusitania, as some will have it; or in Toledo, according to others: Yet other Authors say, he and his Son Richimirus were killed by Sisenandus, their Successor. Some Writers affirm, that Sisenandus was Brother to Suintila. Certain 631. it is, he obtained the Crown by Election, with the Affistance of Dagobert King of France, whose Favour he Sifenanhad purchased with a great Summ of Money. At the dus ku-Beginning of his Reign he made himself loved, and ceeds in the Throne. feared. He affembled a National Synod at Toledo, at which 72 Prelates met: Here, in regard of what Sifebueus had done with the Jews, it was ordained, That none should be forcibly constrained to embrace the Ca-

635. tholick Faith. Sisenandus died at Toledo, having reigned four Years.

9. It is doubtful whether Sisenandus was Father or King Chin- Brother to Chintila, his Heir. Two Synods were held tila holds in his Days. He reigned three Years and an half, and ewo Synods. died at Toledo, much lamented of all Men. His Son

Tulga succeeded him; who holding the Crown but two 638. Years, could not do fo much as was expected from his His Son Justice, Prudence and Valour. He departed this Life Tulga at Toledo, leaving no Islue. Chindafuindus, by Force of succeeds.

Arms, possessed himself of the Kingdom. At Toledo he 64° gathered a Synod of 40 Prelates. Rensiberga, Daughter to Chinda-possession for the Kingdom by Force.

10 Years, he died at Toledo, and was buried in the Monastery of St. Romanus, founded by himself, between Toro and Tordesilas. Two Synods were affembled at 655. Toledo during the Reign of Recesuindus, the eldest Son Two Synods of the late King: In the First were 52 Bishops, from held by Reall Parts of Spain. In the Second Council were first cesuindus heard Debates and Disputes concerning the Primacy of all Spain: Braga pretended a Right to that Honour: It was decreed, that the Archbishop of Braga should be Metropolitan of all Galicia only. Another Council was affembled at Merida, to the same effect; but the Church of Braga still went down. About this same time the Ga/coigns invaded Spain, but were overthrown, and expelled, though no Particulars of the Action are to be found in History, nor of any thing that happen'd in the Space of almost 20 Years, which end with the Life of Recessiandus. He was buried in the Church of St. Leo- 672. cadia, at Toledo. Some of his Coin is still to be seen. His only Son Theodofrodus was left to young, that he was thought incapable of inheriting to great a Monarchy, as will appear in the Sequel. It is here very remarkable, that Pontamius, Archbishop of Braga, not content that he had done 9 Months private Penance.

accused himself openly, in the Synod, of committing

Incontinency; wherefore he was deposed from his Dignity, with extraordinary Horrour of all the Prelates who heard the Accufation, though from the Mouth of one so penitent. So rare was it then to see a Prelate guilty of any Crime; So rare now to see them endued with any Vertue.

Evancius,

CHAP.

IOI

CHAP. V.

The Succession of the other Gothish Kings in the Monarchy of Spain, till Roderick the last of them, from the Tear of Grace 672 till

1. Now was the Monarchy of Spain in a dangerous Condition, Theodogredus the Son of Recefuindus (if there were any fuch, for it is dubious) being left to Young, that he was wholly incapable of managing the Government; the Nobility confulting what was to be done, asked advice of the Pope, who by Divine Revelation, answered: It was the Will of God that Wamba should be preferred to the Crown. He bes firange being a Man not known, many went out in fearch of him, and at last found him near Idanha, then a samous mont to the City in Portugal; he was then busie at Plow with a pair of Oxen. They told him what they came about, and he taking it for left, or believing it impossible, answered: That when the Goad he held in his hand Bloffomed, Wamba would be a King. The Goad accordingly shooting out Flowers, he was immediately carried away and Crown'd at Toledo. At the time of Anointing his Head, a Vapour like a Cloud was seen to rise from it, and in the midst thereof, a Bee which ascending into the Air, at last vanished: This is in short, what some Authors relate, as to the Election of Wamba. Others wholly rejecting all that is miraculous therein, say, He was a Great Man at Court, and others, That he was Son to the lave King Recessiondus, and proclaimed the 3d. day after bis Death, so that there could not be time to repair to the Pope, and the working of the Miracles. These latter are the most suitable Opinions to Reason, and there is nothing certain in these Antiquities; every Man may believe as he pleases.

His Wars

Grown.

2. Wamba (howfoever it was) being placed on the in France Throne, the People of Navarre, and other their Neighand Spain bours, took up Arms to shake off the Gothish Yoak; but the New King taking the Field against them, soon quelled that Rebellion. In the mean while, the Count Hilo Hilpericus revolted in the City of Nismes, which is in Gallia Narbonensis, then subject to the Dominion of Spain; which made Wamba raise new Forces against that Rebell, and gave the Command of them to Paul a Valiant Grecian. He being Master of the Field, instead of punishing the Count, rebelled himself, and with him Ranofindus Governour of Tarragona and Hildigifius the Civil Magistrate. By these he was Proclaimed King of Spain, and Crowned at Marbonne with a rich Crown, offered by the Holy King Recaredas at the fhrine of St. Felix Martyr of Gironne. Hilpericus the first Rebel, and all Gallia Norbonensis joned with the others; the same did Catalonia and Navarre. Paul Brengthned with the acceilion of fe many Provinces, had the boldness to fend a Challange in most insolent Terms to King Wimba. He at that time was in War with the People of Nivarre and Bifcay, and having caused the Challenge to be Read in an Affembly of hischief Commanders, tho' most of them advised to the contrary, he resolved to march with speed against the rebellious Enemy; none hesitated to follow the resolute Prince. They entred Navarre, which they entirely subdued in seven days, and being come into Catalonia, the King divided his victorious Army into three parts; one took the way of Perpignan, another that of Auserania, and the third kept along the Sea Coast. The King himself stayed behind with certain choice bands to be ready to repair to the place where most Danger was. He took Barcelona by Force, and was peaceably received into Gironne, for the Tyrant believing that Wamba would not have the Courage to come to meet him, and that he should soon be there himself, had sent to order Amador the Bishop, That he should acknowledge as his Prince the first that came to the Walls. Wamba being the first, the Prelate did as he was ordered, and the King faid to him, Paul bas Prophefied my coming hither. Immediately he advanced to the Pyrenean Hills, and at the foot of them took Colibre and other strong places.

3. Whilst Wamba reduced the Rebels, Paul retired The Rebells to Nismes, leaving all he had provided for his Defence in France behind him at Narbonne. All that was not sufficient to subdued by secure that City to Witimerus, whom he had lest there bim. as his Lieutenant; for Wamba to avoid the Effusion of Blood, having offered him some good Terms, and he H 4 obstinately refusing, an Assault was given, which lasted three hours, at the end whereof the City was taken, and in it Witimerus with others of his Associates. The same hapned at Magalona, Agate and other strong holds, all taken by force and with much Slaughter. Nifmes held out longer despair fighting for Paul, but at last it submitted to Wamba. The French in the Town thinking they were betrayed by the Spaniards in hope of Pardon, fell upon them, and so they flaughtered one another, whilst the Besiegers breaking in, put them all indifferently to the Sword. Paul quitting the Royal Robes, retired to an Amphitheater, a strong Roman Work, where he flayed two days, the Victors only keeping Guard least he should escape thence. The King coming to the City, Argebatus, Archbishop of Narbonne, one of the followers of Paul, came out to meet him in his Pontifical Robes, and casting himself at his Feet, begged Pardon for himself and all the rest. This action somewhat appealeth Wamba, who Pardoned him and promifed to moderate his anger towards the rest. He entred the City in Triumph, where Paul was brought Prisoner and fell down prostrate before him, as others did; their lives were granted, but they were committed to custody till it were resolved what punishment to inflict upon them; all the French were fet free, and the City ordered to be repaired. It was voted, that Paul and his Affociates should have their Eyes put out, their lives being before granted them, but Wamba was content they should only remain perpetual Prifoners. When he entred Toledo in Triumph, they were all carried before him upon Camels, and Paul in the midst of them barefooted, with a Crown of black Lcather on his Head, instead of that of Gold he had aspired to; all their Beards long, and their Heads shaved; Penalties usually inflicted on Traitors at that time, and thus Peace was reitored.

deftroyed.

4. After this he affembled a National Council, where-The Afri- in the bounds of all the Bishopricks of Spain were decans inva-termined, which continued in the same form, till the ding Spain Moores conquered Spain. The same Year another Synod was held at Braga to reform Abuses; much about this time the Africans with a great Fleet scouring along the Coast of Spain, did much harm: The King fent his Forces against them, by whom they were overthrown, their Fleet burnt, and all their power both by Sea and Land confumed. It is thought that one Count Ervigius a Grecian, banished by the Emperor of Constantinople, was the cause of their coming; he aspiring to the. Crown, thought that the Goths thus invaded, would eafily have submitted themselves to him, because he had married a Niece of King Recessinudus, and that Wamba was then very Aged. Failing of his design, he gave Wamba a fort of Poison that disturbed his Brain, and at the same time prevailed with him to appoint him his Successor Besides these his Contrivances, Wamba delirous of himself to lay down the burden of a Crown to him grown unsupportable, voluntarily quitted the regal Authority, and took the habit of a Monk in the Monastery of Pampliega, betwixt Burgos and Valladolid, on the Banks of the River Pifuerga, where he approved himself as good a Religious Man, as he had been a King. Eight or more Years he Reigned, and lived Seven in the Monastery; it is not known that he had any Children, nor so much as a Wife, he was Buried at Pampliega. King Ferdinand the Saint, defigned to Translate him to Toledo, and his Son D. Alonso the Wife, put it in Execution. There are two Tombs now in the Chappel of St. Leocadia, in the Cathedral of that City, one supposed to be Wamba's, and the other of King Recessiondus. King Philip the II. causing them to be opened in the Year 1575, one of the Bodies was found cloathed in the habit of St. Benedict, which was therefore concluded to be that of Wamba, because he wearing that Habit whilft living, was doubtless Buried in it. Some Authors will have him to be Buried at Cinanium, or Citania, a City in the Mid-way betwixt Braga and Guimaraens.

5. Ervigius Successor to Wumba, was Son to Arde- 681. baffus, whom Ancient Records call Count, who was Ervigius married to the Daughter of King Chindafuindus. Tho' fuccesa he deserved not the Crown as being an unjust Usurper, Wamba. he afterwards seemed worthy of it for his good Government, his enfuing Virtues attorted for his former Crimes. One of his first Actions was the assembling of a national 682. Counsel, the chief intent whereof was to secure the Crown he had wrongfully got. Two Years after he called together another Council, which confirmed all the Acts of the former. A third also met the follow-

inos

687.

689.

His Astions ing Year to receive the Decrees of the fixth General Council of Constantinople against the Herefy of Apolli. narus. Ervigius though well fettled in the Throne, the from them at Seven Years of Age, to be instructed in the better to secure himself, married his Daughter Cixilona to Egica Wamba's Nephew, being the Son of his Sifter Ariberga. A great part of Portugal was at this time Go. verned by Sala, a Noble and Valiant Commander: He repaired the Walls and Bridge of Merida, and other publick Structures. King Ervigius himself Built al. Reigned Seven Years, and died at Toledo the same Year as did King Wamba at Pampliega.

6. Egica the Nephew of King Wamba, the more to King Egica express his Aversion to Ervigius, whom he succeeded in the Throne, put away his Daughter, whom, as was faid, he had Married; whereupon her Children were as ill treated, as were those of her Father. All the Brethren felt the want of right in their Father, being cast out and not respected so much as Noble Men. However, Egica gave them some ease till such time as a Council could be affembled to order what ought to be done with them. This Counfel at length meeting, Decreed the King might lawfully profecute all that were guilty of the Treason, whereby Ervigius ascended the Throne; Several were punished in different manners. Hereupon enfued a Conspiracy against the King, in which Segibertus Archbishop of Toledo was the principal Actor. This design being discovered, Egica called together another Counsel to be the better able to proceed against the Archbishop. Sixty Bishops met, among whom were Ten Portuguese, who gave Sentence against the Archbishop, Excommunicating, Banishing, and Depoling him from his Dignity. Some dangerous Commotions happened in Gallia Narbonensis, then subject to the Spanista Monarchs, fortune therein favouring the Rebels. These troubles were followed by Plague and The Jews Famine: The Jews who were then numerous in Spain, conspire a- took occasion herefrom to conspire against the King, reign parts. The King informed thereof, called another Counsel at Toledo, to punish the Guilty, excepting those of Narbonne, because of the Plague and Famine that confumed them. The Plot being proved, gainst the and for the carrying on their Deligns, held correspon-King, and dence with others that lived in Africk, and other Foare punish-the Criminals were Condemned to serve as Slaves throughout all Spain, and to have their Children taken Christian Faith. 7. About this time, one Count Vitulus rebelled in that part of Galicia, that joyns to Portugal: His design Witisa was to usurp the Monarchy of the Goths, but his Pow- Son to Egier being too small, he soon suffered the penalty of his ca Reigns Rashness. To prevent the like Practices for the suture, in Portumost from the Ground the Walls of Idaria; Ervigius the King gave the Kingdoms of Portugal and Galicia to gal. his Son Witisa, the Grandson of Ervigius, being then of Age to Govern. To himself he kept the rest of Spain and Gallia Narbonensis; Witisa went into Portugal, and kept his Court in the City Braga, where by his unjust Actions, he raised many Troubles and much Blood was spilt, his Father having sent him thither to prevent Discord, which he seemed rather to sow. This Country was eased by his absence, for he removed to Tuy in Galicia, where he lived till the Death of his Father. It is no new thing for a vertuous Father to have wicked Children; King Egica, besides Witisa, had Opas Archbishop of Toledo, famous for atlisting to the Destruction of Spain; he was also Father of Fandina, Wife to the unfamous Count Julian, and Mother to Florinda, the only cause of that lamentable Tragedy.

593

694.

8. Witisa being possessed of the Government of all 701. Spain, became so insolent, that giving way to all man- diter on ner of Vice, discouraging Vertue, and laying open all Richar's places of strength in the Kingdom, he may well be sti- Death, he led the Spanish Nero. I will not go about to relate all is Monarcia his Cruelties and leud Practices, but must not omit to Spain. fay, he cast off all Obedience to the Pope, and gave great Priviledges to the Jews, so that they returned to Spain, and erected Synagogues: The Inhabitants of Braga sent Felix their Archbishop to Toledo, to Petition the King that the Walls of their City might not be Demolished, as he had ordered. He was not admitted to speak with the King, but only with Count Julian, then the great Favourite, of whom he obtained what he went about. This lascivious King, killed Favila, the Father of Pelayus, and Duke of Cantabria, thinking by that means the better to enjoy his Wife D. Luz; he His Cruelput out the Eyes of Theodofredus, Father to King Rode- ties. rick and D. Luz, thereby to make him incapable of inheriting the Crown; but, Roderick did the same by him, so that he died Blind, having Reigned Ten Years. 711. There is no Account who was his Wife, but it appears he had two Sons, which were Evan and Sifebutus, who being Banished by King Roderick into Africk, fled to the Protection of Requila, Commander of Tangier their Fa. ther's Friend; and thence came over a Commander a mong the Moores that destroyed Spain, and so died: Those Calamities require another Chapter.

heriting

CHAP. VI.

The Reign of King Roderick from the Tear 711, till the coming of the Moores in 714; all Spain subdued by them in Eight Months; the Restauration began by Pelagius and his Successors till the Tear 783.

1. Ome Writers who have obtained no small Credit, 711. name Acosta or Aconsta, as Successor to Witisa; yet others there are who absolutely exclude him as fabulous. If any such was, he was Eldest Son to Theodofre. dus, and Brother to King Roderick; however it is, we have no account of his Actions, and if any were, being Roderick so dubious, they are scarce worth relating. Roderick Lift King then may be allowed immediate Successor to Wisifa; he was Granson to King Chindasuindus, and Son to Theeof the dofredus Duke of Cordova, by his Wife Recilona: Favila Goths. Duke of Cantabria was Brother to Theodofredus, and had Pelagus or Pelagius by his Wife, and Niece to the Lady Luz. Thus the Subversion and Restauration of Spain had their. Authors proceeding from the same stock; for as Roderick was cause of the Destruction, so Pelagus was the first that laid his Hand to the Reparation of it. Rederick ascended the Throne with no small hopes, conceived by his Subjects, of a better Government than had Count Ju- been before, but the event made him more odious than lian Favo. his Predecessor had been. Count Julian the great Farite to Ro- vorite and prime Master to Witisa, continued in the derick. same Post under King Roderick: Julian was Father to her, whom the vulgar calls Cava, and our Historians Florinda; of her, Roderick became enamoured, that fo the greatest Desolution might not happen without the help of a Woman. Having chosen her for his Wife, it fortuned that Egilona or Eilata an African Princess, or according to others, a Goth was droven by Tempest into a Port of Spain; she being brought to the King, her Beauty so captivated him, that forgetting Florinda, he took her to Wife: Thus she who thought to have been Queen, continued at Court as one of the Queen's Ladies. Julian her Father enraged beyond measure, immediately contrived how to be Revenged, and in order to it, perswaded the King to Dismantle all the strong places left standing by Wirifa, and disarm his Subjects, which was accordingly done. 2. Soon after the King sent Julian Ambassador to Julian Muza in Africk, to request of him not to protect Evan lens Am-Muza in Africk, to request or him not to protect Evan bassador and Sisebutus, the Sons of Witisa: The more to move into A-Muza, he thought it proper to send him some conside-frick. rable Present, and being informed, that in a Tower near Toledo, great Treasures were of Antient time reported to be hid, the Doors having many locks upon them, because it was a received Opinion, that when they were opened, great Calamities would enfue, the King resolved to enter this place. In it was found nothing but a Chest, containing only a Picture representing Men a Horse-back in Moorish Apparel, with several forts of Weapons, and an Infcription denoting, that when those Gates were opened, Spain would be Invaded and Conquered by that fort of Men. The King thought the Prediction would be Averted by locking up the place again with what it contained, but it proved otherwise. Julian being gone upon his Embassage, King Roderick relapsed into the love of Florinda, and courted her, but without receiving any Favour, Frandina her Mother perceiving it, and desiring to be her felf the Mistress of a King, caused one Bigamota, an attendant of hers, to deliver some Messages to the King as from Florinda, tending to meet him in some convenient place, where shrowded with Darkness, she might Roderick supply the place of her Daughter; the King encoura- ravishes ged by those false invitations, watched his opportunity, Florinda and finding Florinda alone ravished her and finding Florinda alone, ravished her.

The History of PORTUGAL.

to Tulian-

1, 1

2. Florinda now doubly wronged first of the Throne. and then of her Honour, was touched with the highest Resentment; her Mother soon discovered the effect. being fensible of the cause and changing her love to the King into hatred, perswades Florinda to acquaint her Father by Writing with the loss of her Honour. Juli. Julian me- an hereupon hasts back into Spain, dissembling his Rage. ditates Re- and appearing joyful before the King, having succeed. ed in his Embassy, obtained fresh Favours: He begged the Government of the Towns held in Africk, and this ther he went with his Wife, leaving his Daughter at Court to prevent all suspicion. Julian treated with Muza about betraying the Kingdom of the Goths unto the Caliphs, and he having received instructions from his Prince, agreed upon the Conditions without much difficulty; the Traitor not only encouraging the Bar. barian to pass over into Spain, but drawing over many great Men in his Government to take part with them. Having settled these Affairs at Malaga, he came to Count and obtained leave to carry away his Daughter with him, the King nothing mistrusting any Treason. Muthe Moors 7a in pursuance of what was agreed upon, sent over into Spain. 6000 Arabs under the Command of Tarif Abenzarca, to make the first incursion into Spain; these being joyn-713. ed by the like number of the Rebels, broke through Andaluzia into Lusitania, where nothing being les thought of than War, Men, Women and Children were seen in droves flying to the Mountains. King Roderick alarmed with this invalion, fent his Nephew D. Inhigo Sanchez with some number of Men armed only with Staves and Stones; yet such as they were, they had several rencounters with the Enemy, but at last their Commander being flain, and they overpowered. were put to flight. The Victorious Arabs returned into Africk with Booty and many Captives; this was the first Scene of the wicked Count's Revenge, and of the overthrow of the Spanific Monarchy.

4. Whilst Count Julian and the Caliph prepared for a more powerful Expedition, King Roderick now awake, raised the greatest number of Men he could, and with all possible speed provided Arms and Fortified his Towns. He thought the Barbarians would have given him more time, but they immediately palled over the streights of Gibraltar with a wonderful Fleet;

200000 Foot and 40000 Horse of them incamped on 200000 the Spanish Coast. The King's Army consisted of Foot and 120000 Foot and 10000 Horse, a sufficient num-40000 ber had they been well Armed, and Disciplined Men; Horse of the Moors he Encamped betwixt Xeres and Medina Sidonia, lea- ine Mo ving the Sea open at the Enemies backs, whereby they Spain. received Succours: Upon Saturday the 1st. of September in the fatal Year 714, the two Armies came in fight The King's of one another. That day was spent in taking up stray contheir Lodgments along the River Guadalete; on Sunday 120000 with the day began the Battle, which continued very Foot and Bloody till Night parted them; all the Week the fight 10000 continued. Still renewed with the Day as it was broke Horfe. off by the Night. King Roderick appeared in all parts 714. inhis Royal Robes; over his Armour he wore a rich A great Garment, a Crown on his Head, a Scepter in his Hand, and bloosy on his Feet Golden Buskins set with Pearl and precious Battle. Stones; he was carried in a high Ivory Chariot as was the manner of the Gothish Kings in Battle, and thence encouraged his Men, who the 2d. Sunday began to faint. The King perceiving them give way, left his Chariot, and mounting upon a Horse, he called Orelia, rushed couragiously into the thickest of his Enemies, making them give way to his Valour. The Spaniards encou- The Sparaged at this fight, came on so vigoroully, that the niards on Battle for some time continued doubtful; but at Sun-verthrown fetting, the Vigour of our Men quite failing, Victory appeared on the Enemies fide, and the Darkness gave the Christians an opportunity to fly.

5. I cannot forbear remarking how fatal the number A remark Eight has appeared upon this occasion; Eight days the upon the fight lasted. Eight months the Barbarians spent in sub-number duing all Spain, and 800 Years it cost the Spaniards to Eight. recover it. The King seeing he laboured in vain, fled to a Mountain, where he changed his Apparel with a Shepherd: In this condition he came to the Monasteryof Cauliniana, two Leagues from Merida, on the Banks of the River Guadiana. Here overcome with Trouble and Sorrow for his Sins, he fell into a Swoun, and was brought to himself by one Romanus a Holy Monk. With him he fled into Portugal, where they took up their Habitation on a Rock upon the Sea Coast, near the Town of Pederneira. They took two different Cells about a Mile from one another, where both of them

ended

200000

The History of PORTUGAL.

ended their Days. Here, as is said, was found an Image of our Bleffed Lady, in the Time of Alonso, our first King; and a Tomb, with this Inscription, HIC REQUIESCIT RUDERICUS ULTIMUS REX GOTHORUM; that is, Here reposes Rode. 'Thus far our Aurick, the last King of the Goths. thor, Emanuel de Faria, setting down this as an approved and undoubted Opinion: But many others, and those of good Note, reject this, as fabulous; most Men agreeing, that King Roderick was drowned in the River Gundalete, where most of his Royal Apparel was found; he being never after heard of. Many more strange Stories have been spread abroad, as it commonly happens in fuch Cases, where the Bodies of Princes, in such Universal Calamities, are not found; but they are rather Romantick, than Historical, and therefore not fit for any, but least of all for the Brevity of this History.

The Moors

After the Victory, the Moores spread themselves over all the Province, committing inhumane Barbarities; all Spain. not without losing, in several Rencounters during the eight Months of their Conquest, 80000 Men, besides 20000 before slain in the great Battel. The chief Resistance was made at Merida: The Defendants, whereof many were Portugueses, that being then the supream Tribunal of Lusitania, were commanded by Sacaru, 2 Noble Goth. Many brave Actions passed at the Siege; but at length, there being no Hopes of Relief, and Provisions failing, the Town was furrender'd upon Articles. The Commander of the Lusitanians, with such as would follow him, traverfing Portugal, came to a Sea-port Town; where gathering a good Number of Ships, he put to Sea; but to what part of the World they were carried, does not appear. 'There is an antient Fable of an Mand, called Antilia, in the Western Ocean inhabited by Portugueses, which could never yet be found; and therefore we will leave it, till such time as it is discovered; but to this Place our Author fupposes these Portugueses to have been driven. Fortune having now wholly forfaken Spain, the Moores eafily over-ran all that remained, as far as the River Minho, under the Command of Abdalaziz, Son to Muza: Yet the Andaluzians and Lusitanians, Muza being abient, role up in Arms, and put to the Sword the Moorish Garrisons

The History of PORTUGAL.

Garrisons of Sevil. Beja and Ilipula; which done, being affembled to a great Number, they took Merida by Force, killing all they found therein. Muza, who was then at Zaragosa, hasted to quell this Commotion: which was easily done. Merida he spared; Sevil suffered much; at Ilipula there was not one Stone left upon another; but what he did at Beja, is not known. though it may be supposed not to have escaped, having been the Place of Rendesvouz for the People of

7. The famous Actions of D. Pelayo, or Pelagius, and Pelagius the miserable Ends of Count Julian, his Wife, and the first Daughter, the principal Actors in this Tragedy, are that oppotreated of in the Chronicles of those Kingdoms to fed the which they appertain. Pelagius, during the 19 Years Moors. he reigned, had no Command in Portugal, where the Moors were fo predominant, that there were as many Kings as Cities. But because the Actions of Pelagius were so great in themselves, and in the Consequence of them, we will give some Hints of what others write at large. Pelagius was in the great Battel, with his Coufin-German King Roderick: After which, he fled, with 1000 Christians, to Asturias de Oviedo, where he took Shelter in a vast Cave, now called Covadonga, among the Mountains of Auseva; and was, in that miserable Condition, by his Men proclaimed King of Spain, a mighty Title, for so poor a Beginning; and yet here began those Victories, which, in the Space of 800 Years, recovered all Spain. Pelagius had a Silter, whose Name is not known; but Muza, Governor of Gijon, in Asturios, being taken with her Beauty, enjoy d her, upon Promise of Marriage. The Delire of Revenging this Wrong first moved Pelagius to appear in Arms: Thus it fell out, that as one Lady was the Cause of the Destruction of Spain, so another was the Motive of its Restauration. Pelagius was the Son of Favila Duke of Cantabria, Third Son of King Chinda-Juindus, and of his Wife D. Luz, the Daughter of Tocodefredus Duke of Cordova, and Brother to Favila. He was born at Toledo, and bred at Alcantara, by Grafes, Brother to the Lady Luz, his Mother. This was the first King that we find had the Title of Don annexed to his Name. His Wife was, Gaudiosa, of Cantabria;

Fourth Grandchild to Ofilon, Brother to Scephen, the happy

happy Father of the Archbishop St. Ildefonsus. By her he had Favila and Ermesenda, who succeeded him in the Regal Dignity. He took Leon in the Year 722: And hence came the Title of Kings of Leon, and the Bearing of a Lion for their Arms. He died at Canga, at the Foot of the Mountain Auseva, in September, 737 and lies buried in the Church of Covadonga, built by himself, and his Wife, and dedicated to the Virgin Favila Succeed's Pelagius.

Mary. 8. Favila, who succeeded his Father Pelagius, had not Time to perform any great Actions, being killed in the Second Year of his Reign, by a Bear, as he was hunting. He lies buried in the Church of the Holy Cross, founded by himself, at Cangas. He married Froil livua, and either had no Sons, or, at least, they came not to the Crown; for his Sister Ermesenda succeeded him, and took to Husband, and King, D. Alonso, Son to D. Peter, Duke of Cantabria, descended from Recaredus J. During the foregoing Years, the Christians in Portugal enjoyed full Liberty of Conscience. Several Morish Great Men ruled over them: Aliboacen, Grand fon to the General Tarif, was Lord of the City Coin bra, and all the Territories betwixt the Rivers Alva Mondego and Agueda; governing with Tyrannical Power. Thus the Portuguese lived in Subjection when Heaven gave them Hopes of recovering their Liberty. Happy was the Kingdom in falling to Erms Senda, for that she was the Mother of the Victoriou and Religious King Alonso, who conquer'd a great par King A- of Castile, Galicia and Portugal. He enter'd Galicia longo jue- with a powerful Army, and took the Cities of Lug and Tuy: Then pailing over the River Minho, he over ran all the Country, as far as Duero; entring the Citie gainst the and Towns of Braga, Porto, Agueda, Vifeo, and Chaves besides other Places of Importance: No Quarter wa given to the Moors; and the Christians were carried away to Asturias, he not defigning to keep all he gain ed. This was the first King, after the Destruction of Spain, that had any Jurisdiction in Portugal. Thus he reigned, with great Honour, 17 Years; and died a the Age of 64. His and his Wife's Bodies were buried in the Church of Covadonga. He had Issue, Fruela, who succeeded him; Wimaranus, Aurelius, and Adofinds By a Slave he had Mauregatus, who proved more like the Mother, than the Father, as will appear in the Sequel.

9. Fruela, who inherited his Father's Valour, as K. Fruela well as his Kingdom, marched to meet a mighty Ar- kill 60000 my, sent against him by Abderramen King of Cordova, Moors. (the first that, in Spain, durst cast off the Authority of the African Calyph,) under the Command of Omar, to revenge the Harm done by the late King Alonso, in Portugal and Galicia. He met with no Opposition in Portugal: But in Galicia, King Fruela discomfitted his mighty Army, killing him, and 60000 of his Men. This done, crossing Portugal, to beliege Setuval, he overthrew Aliaben Talib, who came to put a Stop to his Proceedings. with 1500 Horse, and 14000 Foot: Of the Moors, 8000 were flain in the Fight; and of the Christians, 2200. This Victory laid that Country open; and the King, after an hard Siege, had Setuval furrender'd to him. This is his last Action, we know of, in Portugal: In other Places he performed many great Exploits. He forbid Priests to marry, which had been allowed fince the Time of King Witiga; and was the Founder of the City Oviedo. All his Vertues and Trophies were obscured by his putting his Brother Wimaranus to death, upon bare Suspition that he intended to rebel, because he was exceedingly beloved by the People, for his extraordinary Endowments. Most Authors agree, that this Wimaranus was Father to Bermudo the Monk, afterwards King. Fruela was married to Monina, the Daughter of Eudo Duke of Guienne, in France. Their Children were, D. Alonso, and the Lady Ximena. This King had also a Bastard-Son, called Raimund. He prospered no more after the Death of his Brother Wimaranus; for Abderramen, King of Cordova, recovered all that Part of Portugal which lies betwixt Cape St. Vincent and the River Tagus. After this Loss, he was murder'd at Cangas, by his Brother Aurelius. His Body, and that of his Wife, were buried in the great Church of Ovicdo, founded by himself. He reigned I I Years in great Esteem with his People; and two more after the Death of his Brother, no less hated than he had been beloved.

10. We have no Account of any thing remarkable, particular done by Aurelius, the Successor of Fruela, in Portugal. Affairs of But about this time, Marvan Ibenzorat reigned in Coim- Portugal and the second s

Infideis.

stard 1:-

Surps the Crown.

bra: And Theodus, a Noble-man, descended of the Gothish Kings, was Governor of the Christians in these Parts, with the Title of Count. Aurelius reigned fix Years, died at Cangas, and was buried in the Church of St. Michael. He leaving no Children, Adofinda, the Daughter of King Alonso and Queen Ermesenda, and his Sister, succeeded him. She married Silo, whose Parents are not known; but so he came to be King. He enter'd Portugal, to make War upon the Moors; and took from them the City Merida, in Estremadura. Thence he marched against the People of Galicia, who were in Rebellion; and finding great Opposition, after the Victory, he treated them with much Severity. Having obtained these Victories, the King gave himfelf up so entirely to his Ease, that the Queen managed all the Government. They had one Son, called Aldegastus; who, with his Wife Brunilda, built the Monastery of St. Mary d' Ovanna, in the Territory of Tines, 783. for their Burying-place. The King died when he had reigned Nine Years, and was buried in the Church of St. John de Pravia, founded by himself. His Epitaph is thus: H. S. E. S. S. S. T. L. Each Letter stands for a Word; and are, HIC SITUS EST SILO SIT SIBI TERRA LEVIS.

CHAP. VII.

The Succeeding Kings, from the Year 783, till 924. The Battels they fought, and their Conquests upon the Moors; but more particularly, in Portugal.

1. Queen Adosinda confidering the good Qualities of her Nephew D. Alonso, the Son of Alonso the Catholick King, the appointed him her Successor. Manregatus, the Bustard Son of the same Alonso, begotten Maurega- on a Slave, foon deprived him of the Crown. To tus : be Ba- compass his Design, he enter'd into a League with the Moors, and became Tributary to them, the Tribute confifting of 100 Noble Maids, to be deliver'd to them yearly yearly: In case he gave not the Maids, in lieu of every one, he was to pay 500 Pieces of Money, supposed to answer to as many Crowns in our Days. This Tribute was conveyed to Cordova, and gathered and fecured in several Parts of Asturias, Galicia and Portugal. Now some Authors affirm, this Tribute was paid in the Year 770; and if so, it must be in the Reign of Aurelius, who governed from the Year 768, till 774; and then Mauregatus did not institute, but only continued to pay it. Whenfoever it began, certain it is, it continued till the Year 788, which was the last of Mauregatus's Reign. He died without Issue, and was buried at Pravia.

The History of PORTUGAL.

2. Bermudo, then in Deacon's Orders, Grandson to Bermudo, the Catholick Alonso, being Son either to Wimaranus, or advanced Fruela, his Brother, was promoted to the Crown after to the Mauregasus. The first Action of this King was very werthrown honourable; for Abderramen, King of Cordova, fending to demand of him the Tribute of the Maids, he not Moors. only refused to pay it; but, with a small Number, encountring an Army of his, of 60000 Men, under the Command of Muza, overthrew it, and so recovered the Honour of Spain, delivering it from that heavy Imposition. Bermudo, though a Deacon, was married to Ousenda, or Usenda; by whom he had Ramiro, afterwards King; and a Daughter, named Christina: He had also a Bastard-Son, called D. Nunho. Though the Action we have spoken of was great, his last was in- 703. comparably beyond it; for he not only refigned the He refigns Crown, but, having Children of his own, gave it up the Grown. to D. Alonso, Son to King Fruela; from whom it had been wrongfully taken by Mauregatus. This done, he took the Habit of a Monk, in the Monastery of Sahatranslated to Oviedo. 3. D. Alonso, who was restored to the Crown by Brimudo, was born in the Year 758. Though married to Alenio. the French Lady Berta, he had no Issue, having lived the Chaste. continently with her; and therefore he was called, The Chaste, a Name rare among Princes. This Name of Alonso, as it was fortunate to Spain in general, so was it also to Lubon in particular, for its Recovery, Reltauration and Defence. This King took it from the Moors, His Conkilling a great Number of them in the Aslault, and in question gun; where he died, and was buried, but afterwards feveral Battels he fought to come to it. Some Authors will have it, that Charlemaigne came over out of France, in Person, to his Amstance: Others deny his Personal Presence: But all agree, his Army was so great, that the Infidels could never make Head against it. The

799. following Year, the King took the Cities of Visco, Lamego, Coimbra, Braga, and other Places about Porto. Omar King of Merida, with a great Power, laid Siege to Benavente; but he and the greatest part of his Army were put to the Sword by Bernard del Carpio, commanding the Forces of King Alonfo. In the mean while, Aliatan, by the Way of Estremadura, enter'd Portugal, putting all to Fire and Sword, with such Success, that he took Lubon the 8th Year after it had been gained by King Alonfo. Many other Places submitted to the Barbarian; and he left Alchama, King of Badajoz, or Beja, to command there. This Alchama afterwards making an Expedition out of his Province, was killed by Ber-

812. nard del Carpio, at the City Zamora. Aliatan, to revenge this Lofs, raifed great Forces in Barbary, which he divided into two Bodies; whereof, the one enter'd Castile; the other, Portugal; making great Havock in both Places: Both these Armies were cut in pieces; one, in which Alahaban commanded, by the King, near the River Cefa; the other, conducted by Melich, by Bernard, in the Plain of Narnon. Abdalla, Governor of Valencia, and Mahomer, of Merida, rebelled at once against King Aliatan: He marched against Abdalla; but whilst he was there engaged, Mahomet joined in League with King Alonso; whereby he became powerful enough to conquer a good part of Portugal and Estremadura. Aliatan returning with a mighty Army, overthrew the Rebel, and possessed himself of all which he had conquered betwixt Merida and Lubon.

Mahomet thus expelled his Dominion, fled with such as would follow him to King Alonso, submitting himfelf to him as his Vaffal. The King fent him with one Raymund, to subdue certain places then in Rebellion in Gallicia; they casily overcame the Mutiniers, and the King ordered Mahomet to refide in those parts, hoping to make his advantage of him against the King of $14. Cordova, as he did for sometime: But Mahomet finding himself powerful, thought to recover what he had lost, and therefore privately conspiring with Raymond, they both Rebelled, usurping great part of Galicia: The King hasted thither with a considerable Army, Raymond presently submitted himself, and was not only Pardoned, but Married the King's Kinfwoman. Mahomes though he had then 60000 Men, durst not give Battle in open Field, but retired to the strong Castle of St. Christina, two Leagues from Lugo. There the King Belieged, and Hunger forced him to come out and give Battle, in which his Army was entirely routed and he Slain. About this time was found the Sepulcher of St. James the Apostle, and Patron of Spain, which had been hid almost 800 Years; it was discovered by Theodemirus Bishop of Iria. King Alonso removed it to Compostela, which he made a Bishoprick, erecting there a Church capable of fo great a Relick. Thus Crowned with Victories, and loaded with Years, for he lived Eighty Five, and Reigned Fifty Two: he 843. died at Oviedo, and lies Buried in the Church of St. Topic or Mary de Recasto, his own Foundation. At this time Ordial in the old Gothish Law of trying People by Fire was in we. use in Portugal, as appears by the Tryal of Elosinda, accused of Adultery by her Husband Ariovigildus, she after this manner clearing her felf, and he being Condemned to be Burnt, as she should have been if Convicted. Pope Honorius the III. abolished this Custom, yet afterwards, another worse started up, which was, that the Woman accused, should assign a Champion to fight the Accuser, and that party which had the Victory was held innocent.

The History of PORTUGAL.

5. King Bermudo by an incomparable Act of Justice, had taken the Crown from his own Children, to give it to Alonso, to whom of right it appertained; and God to reward this rare Equity, ordained that Alonfo should live Chast, and restore it to Rimiro, the Son of King Rathe same Bermudo. Scarce was he seated on the Throne, miro bis when Count Nepocianus rebelled in Austurias, and usurped Actions. the regal Title: The New King with all the speed he could, marched against him, and having defeated and taken him Prisoner, put out his Eyes and thrust him into a Monastery. Soon after he overthrew the Normans, who destroyed the Coast of Galicia, and the English who had laid Siege to Lisbon: Returning to the River Ducro, he vanguished Mahomet Cid Atauf, Lord of the Fort and Town of Gaya, and also Muley Achim of A. gueda more to the Southward. Zuleyma Ibon Muza, the tributary King of Lamego, and Tarif Iben Rages of Viseo were admitted to grace upon their submission. Alha. mar King of Coimbra, boldly standing upon his Defence. was overthrown, and all the Country reduced, which done, Ramiro leaving good Garrisons in his Conquests. returned to Qviedo; in his way, he visited 30hn the Abbot of the Monastery of Lorvan, and bestowed Lands upon the Monastery. The principal part of the Gift was the Town of Montemayor the Old, a strong place, the Garrison whereof the Abbot was obliged to maintain. In this Town was one Garcia Yannez, a foundling brought up by the Abbot, and by him preferred for his Valour. This Fellow envying the Honour of D. Bermudo the Abbot's Nephew, and Governour of that Territory, fled to Abderramen King of Cordova, offering not only to renounce the Faith, but also to put into his hands Montemayor, and the other Conquests of King Ramiro.

6. Whilft Garcia Yannez was with the Moorish King, the Abbot and his Nephew Bermudo, took the two Rebel Counts Alderedus, whose Eyes he put out, and Pinelus whom with his Seven Sons, he put to Death, as being more obstinate in their Crime. Knowing that Rages of Visco was joyning in League with other Moorish Commanders, he affaulted his City, and rafed it to the Ground. Sebastian Bishop of Salamanca, with the Abbot's Consent, afterwards repairing of it, is said to have found there the Tomb of Roderick, the last King of the Garcia Tannez having renounced the Faith, and calling himself Zulema, had the Command of an Army given him to execute what he had proposed. He entred Portugal, committing greater Barbarites than the Infidels, and laid Siege to Montemayor which was bravely defended by the Abbot and his Men. Hunger beginning to pinch, they thought of an Expedient more to be wondered at than imitated, which was, that they slew all their Women and Children, the Abbot beginning with his Sifter and Nephews. This done, they fallied out upon the Enemy with fuch Fury, that they soon put them to flight: The Rebel Zulema was killed by the Abbot, many of his Men were drowned in the River Mondego, and most of them perished by several means, so that few returned Home; 76000 were destroyed, and Night stopped the pursuit of the Victors. Morning discovered the Fields covered not only with dead Carcasses, but with plenty of rich Booty: This was a small comfort to them that had imbrued their hands in the Blood of their Wives. Children and An incredi-Relations, but some that had hasted to the Town after ble relations the Victory, brought back the News, that all those they had killed, were miraculously restored to life, and so all returned joyful with the Victory and Recovery of their kiends. The Abbot stayed in the place where he obtained the Victory, and there Built a small Hermitage, and ended his days in Sanctity. His Monks endeavoured it, but could not remove his Body, and our first King D. Alonso Enriquez Founded a Monastery in that place, which was finished by his Son and Succeffor D. Sancho, and given to the Cistercian Order. This is what related to Portugal in the Reign of King Ramiro; he obtained many other Victories, particularly the memorable one, called of Clavijo, in which St. James the Apostle is said to have been seen fighting for the Christians, and was thence called the Patron of Spain. This King Married Paterna, whose extraction is not known; he left the Crown to his Son Ordonno, 850. and died at Oviedo, where he lies Buried.

7. D. Ordono was no way inferior to his Father for King Or-Valour, and being at full Age when he died, was very dono Reacceptable to all the States. His first care was to re-builds mapeople the Cities of Leon, Astorga, Tuy, Amaya and o-ny Towns. thers, almost left desolate in the late Invasions; this 855. done, he obtained two notable Victories, one over the rebellious Vascones, and the other over Muza by extraction a Goth, but turned Mahometan. This Muza had possessed himself of the greatest part of Spain, but was entirely defeated by our King in the Plains of Alvelda or Albayda, two Leagues from Logronno. Many Moors upon this Defeat fent to Congratulate the Victor, and thrown others stood to see the Consequences of it. Mahomet by the King of Cordova, alarmed at this success of the Christi- Moones. ans, drew mighty succours out of Africk, and with a formidable Army began to conquer the Christian Territories. Ordonno met him in Estremadura, near the River Tagus, and though he killed double the number that he lost, was forced to leave the Victory to the Bar~

Barbarian, who recovered much of what the Christians had before taken. He took Santarem, Irena and Rotas; then returning towards Cordova, he took and Fortified many Towns betwixt the Rivers Guadiana and Tagus; the next Year was not so favourable to him, for the best part of his Fleet was cast away on the Coast of Galicia, and his Army was overthrown on the Borders of Navarre, by the King thereof D. Inigo Ximenez Arista. Irena is supposed to be the Town now called Legria and Rotos Roda near Redina. Many Christians at this time obtained the Crown of Martyrdom, under the power of the Moors, but especially at Cordova. King Orano was Married to the Lady Munia, by whom he had D. Alonso his Successor, D. Bermudo, D. Nunno, Odvarius and Fruela, whose Eyes the King their Brother caused to be put out for conspiring against him. He had also a Daughter called Aragonta, Wife to Sancho Abarca, King of Navarre. King Ordono was troubled with the Gout, and died of it at Oviedo, having Reigned Twelve Years, his Body was Buried in the Chappel of King Alonso the 863.

859.

8. Authors do not agree upon the Age of King Alonlonfo III. so the III. when he came to the Crown; some say Nine, enlled the fome Fourteen, and some Seventeen Years. The most is too little for the great Actions performed by him immediately after his Accession to the Crown; his Valour and other Vertues purchased him the Sir-name of the Great, only attributed to him among all the Kings of Castile and Leon. Fruela Bermudez a great Man in Galicia rebelled and came down so suddenly to Oviedo, that the young King was forced to fly to Alava, where haing gathered his Forces, the Rebels put to death their Leader, and submitted themselves to him: Then he repaired the Cities of Oviedo and Leon, and built many Castles. In the mean while Count Eylon rebelled in Alava, but was oppressed by the King's Celerity: During this time he was at peace with the Infidels, Mahomet King of Cordova, and Lot or Lope the Son of Muza King of Toledo, being at War among themselves. They two being agreed, the King of Cordova sent Albucazen and Alemandarin his Generals, the one into Biscay, the other into Galicia, where they made great havock, the People flying before them from the Plains to the Mountains. But King Alonso marched with such expedition, pedition, that he oppressed them both, before they thought he had been moving towards them; this fuccess produced Peace, which he employed in rebuilding ruined places, among which were Braga, Porto, Chaves and Vifeo, all in Portugal. The King of Cordova coming down suddenly with an Army, took Visco first, and then Salamanca, and so returned to Cordova, refusing to give our King Battel, who thereupon wasted all the Country of Toledo: Then turning into Portugal, he re-

The History of PORTUGAL.

took Vijeo, and had Coimbra yielded to him.

9. It appears, by a Grant of his to Sisenandus Bishop of Compostela, that the Territories betwixt Duero and Minho, and that called Tras os Montes, or Beyond the Mountains, were Defart, from the first coming of the Moors till his time, when he Peopled and made them fit to withstand the Enemy. At this same time the King continued the Structure of the stately Church of St. The Church James the Apostle. Seventeen Bishops were present at of St. James the Dedication of it, above half of them were Portu-the Apollie gurse. Next by Order of Pope John the VIII the King in Galicia held a National Council at Oviedo, to provide for the Dedicated. Bishops that were Expelled from their Diocesses, and erect the Bilhoprick of Oviedo into an Archbishoprick; after which the King again applied himself to Peopling of the Country, and was come as far as the River 903. Tagus, when he understood his own Sons conspired to depose him, being encouraged by their Mother and some of the Nobility. He voluntarily performed what they intended to extort from him; to D. Garcia he gave The Chri-Oviedo, Leon and Castile, to D. Ordono, Gallicia and Por- stian Dotugal. Having refigned his Kingdoms, he went in minions di-Pilgrimage to Santiago, and at his return, asked of his twixt the Son Garcia, some Forces to make an incursion into the two Sons Moorish Territories, which he performed successfully. of King He entred into League with the Kings of France and Alorso. Navarre; to the latter he gave his Sifter Urraca in Marriage, and married himself Ximena, Daughter either of France or of D. Tnigo Ximenez Arista of Navarre. His Sonsawere Garcia, Fruela, Ordonno, Ramiro and Gonzalo, who was Archdeacon of Oviedo. He Reigned 48 Years, died at Zamora, and was Buried at Astorga, where his 914. Tomb is still to be seen, tho' the Body was translated to the Chappel of King Alonso the Chast in Oviedo, where also lies his Wife Ximena.

10. D. Gar-

Garcia has for his Portugal.

Ordonno Succeeds bim.

10. D. Garcia having wrested the Scepter out of his Father's hand, enjoyed it but three Years: Tho' he got part Gali- the Crown by unlawful means, he Governed well, ocia and the vercame Ayola Lord of Talavera, and is said to have obtained other Victories; he died at Zamora, was Buried at Recasto of Ovsedo, and had been Married to the Lady Nunna, Daughter to the Count D. Nunno Fernandez de Amaya, but left no Issue. His Brother Ordonno in his time Governed so much to the satisfaction of the People, that after his Death, he was unanimously allowed his Heir. He had not only preserved the Conquests on this side Tagus, but passing that River, took the City Beja, putting all the Inhabitants to the Sword, which fo terrified the Neighbouring People, that they abandoned the Towns before he came near them. Having received his Brother's Kingdom, after some other exploits, he returned into Lusitania and wasted all the Country along the River Guadiana. Among other places, he took the Castle called Alhaje, where all the Treasure of the Moorish Kings lay as in a place inpregnable, whereby he so humbled all the Infidels throughout Estremadura, and as far as Algarve, that they submitted themselves as tributaries to him; after which he returned to Leon. No sooner was he gone, but they encouraged by Abderramen King of Cordova revolted, but King Ordonno speedily returning and ravaging the Country, they as foon submitted themselves, begging Pardon. The chief of these were the People of Merida, Badajoz and the Territories adjacent then io fruitful and plentiful of all things, that thence came the name of He emice Badajoz, being a corruption of Beled Aiz, two Arabick everthrows words, fignifying, The Land of Life. King Ordonno hear-Moors ing that Abderramen was marching towards him, advanced to meet him, and in a Battle near Talavera slew 25000 of his Men. This done, he returned to Leon, and applied the spoiles of the War to Building the great Church there. Mean while Abderramen having drawn vast supplies out of Africk, laid Siege to Santistevan de Gormaz; but the King surprising him in the Night, forced him with great Slaughter to fly back to Cordova. Still the Moore recruits his broken Army, and having wasted all the Country, sits down before the City Porto, which was bravely defended by Count Hermenegildus. Our King came to his relief, and made made a great Slaughter among the Besiegers, yet so, that 920. he was not affured of the Victory, till the next day he found the Enemy had quitted the Field, leaving their Tents, Baggage, and warlike Engines behind them. Having obtained this Victory, the King returned to Lcon. 11. Early the next Year, Ambassadors came to Or- 921. donno from the King of Navarre, to crave aid against a Ordonno great power of the Infidels. He thought not enough to vanquished send, but went himself in Person, and Fortune here by the Inforsaking him, was overthrown near Valdejunquera, fidels, remany Captives were taken by the Infidels, among whom fooiles were the Bishops of Salamanca and Tuy, and the Kings their Counthemselves escaped narrowly. Our King grieved at try. this loss, the following Year broke into the Moorish Territories, driving all before him even to the Walls of the City Cordova, which it was feared he would Besiege. Having struck an universal Terror into his Enemies, he returned to Zamora. He had a Daughter called Ximena, who falling in Love with a Courtier, ran away with. him, carrying all her Jewels along with her, and he left her on a Mountain, having fulfilled his desires. She travelled on, and took up with a Farmer as his Servant, from which he raised her to be his Wife. The King long after, Hunting that way lost himself, and fell into this Cottage, where he was entertained, his Daughter making a fort of Puff-past she knew he loved, and putting a Ring well known to him into it; the Ring caused him to suspect somewhat, and examining the matter, he found that was his Daughter, whom he forgave, and preferred her Husband, whose Name was Tello, and the place of his aboad called Meneses. Hence some will have the Family of Meneses to proceed; others Write that this passage hapned to the Lady Teresa Sanchez, bastard Daughter to King Sancho the First, and Wife to D. Alonso Tellez de Meneses, whom they esteem the Progenitor of this Family. King Ordonno had three Wives, the first Elvira, whose Parentage is unknown; by her he had D. Sancho, D. Alonso, D. Ramiro, D. Garcia and D. Ximena. The second was Aragonta of Galicia, whom he is faid to have put away, suspecting she knew of the flight of his Daughter Ximena. The third was Sancha Daughter to the King of Nivarre, by these two he had no Children. The last Action of his life 923.

darkned

darken'd all the Glory of his former Triumphs: He fent for four Counts who governed Castile, upon safe Conduct, to Carrion, and there cut off their Heads: Which so incensed the People of Castile, that they only wanted an Opportunity to rebell, and take Revenge: But Death prevented their Designs, taking him away at Zamora. His Body was buried in the great Church of Leons which City he had so entirely loved, that he took its Name for the Title of his Kingdom, leaving that of King of Oviedo and Galicia.

CHAP. VIII.

The Succession of the Kingsoof Castile and Leon, from the Year 924, till 985: With the Revolt of Count Fernan Gonzalez: And the Desolation made in Portugal, by Alcoraxis and Almanzor, the Moors.

Fruela II. 1. D. Fruela II. was Successfor to his Brother Ordonno; usurps the usurping the Crown from his Children, who were then very young. He was nothing like to his Cron 71. Brother in Valour, for he ceased the Prosecution of the War against the Infidels; but was not unlike to him in the last Action of his Life; for, as Ordonno unjustly put to death the fore-mentioned Counts, so Fruela wrongfully executed certain Gentlemen, called Olmudes. He became so odious to the Castilians, that the Castile se-Nobility, joining together, rebelled, and separated themselves from the Crown of Leon. To this purpose, from Leon, they chose two Judges to rule them: The two first and creates were, Nunno Rasura, and Lain Calvo. They were of ment under the Middle Sort of People, neither of the Greatest, sao Julger, nor Meanest; that so they might neither be too powerful, nor become contemptible: Yet, from them are the Kings of Spain descended. At the same time that this Government was instituted in Castile, we find Counts governing in some Parts of Portugal; as, D. Gutierre Aris, at Porto; and Hufo Hufoz, at Visco. A Leprofic

confumed

confumed King Fruela fo fast, that he died at Leon, having reigned scarce a Year; and was buried in the Cathedral. He had two Wives, D. Munia, and D. Urraca: By them he had Issue Ordonno, Alonso and Ramiro. King Ramiro II. put out all their Eyes, and thrust them into the Monastery of St. Julian, either upon Suspicion, or Proof, that they conspired against him. He had also a fourth Son, called Fruela.

2. Alonso IV. Eldest Son of King Ordonno II, after Alonso IV. the Death of Fruela, recovered his Right, and King-resigns the dom. He was not wicked, as his Predecessor; but as Governunprofitable to his Kingdom as he. His best Quality ment to his was, That he was sensible of his own Insufficiency; Brother miro. and therefore, first sent his Brother Ramiro to govern Portugal, and afterwards refigned the Kingdom to him, and became himself a Monk. Ramiro had chosen the City Viseo for his Residence in Portugal, whence he made Inroads into the Frontiers of the Moors; and by his gentle Government, gained the Affections of the People. Here he received Letters from the King, his Brother, calling him to Court, in order to refign the Crown to him; for that his Son, Prince Ordonno, was but an Infant. D. Ramiro fearing his Brother's Inconstancy, hasted to Zamora, that he might not have Time to repent. The King immediately put the Crown upon his Head, and was the first that did him Homage, as his Subject: Which done, he took the Habit of a Benedictine Monk, in the Monastery of Sahagun; and is therefore called. Alonfo the Monk. He was married to Ximena, the Daughter of King Sancho Abarca, of Navarre; and had by her, Ordonno, who came to be King; and D. Alonfo, who died young. He died in the Monastery of St. Julian, and lies there buried: But we shall see him repent, and disturb his Brother's Reign.

3. King Alonso being become a Monk, and repent- 028. ing, his Brother Ramiro, now possessed of the Crown, Alonso resolved not to part with it: and thus began a Civil repents, and War, which was the Cause of much Milchief. The raises a Moors making their Advantage thereof, recovered the Civil War. Cities of Lamyzo, Briganza and Porto, with all the Country lying between the Rivers Tagus and Duero. The Caffilians also made use of this Opportunity, (their Judges, Nunno and Lain, being dead,) to raise

. 4.

The History of PORTUGAL. up in their stead the Count Ferran Gonzalez. King 932. Ramiro politickly winking at this Affront, which he could not revenge upon the Authors, invaded the Kingdom of Toledo, destroying all before him with Fire and Sword. King Alonfo the Monk, held out two Years in Leon, against his Brother Ramiro: But then. despairing of Success, he stirred up Alonso, Ordonno and Ramiro, the Sons of his Predecessor Fruela, to raise a Rebellion in Asturias and Biscay, believing that would draw away the King, his Brother, from attending upon him. Nevertheless, the King continued the Siege, obliged him to furrender, and afterwards put him into Prison. This done, he found Means to apprehend the three Brothers; and to prevent future Deligns, put out theirs, and his Brother the Monk's Eyes. Two Years Alonso lived blind: But the King repenting of this Cruelty used towards his Brother, to testifie his Repentance.

built the Monastery of St. Julian.

9344 Prodigies

4. Two Months are faid to have passed in the Year 934, in which Time the Light of the Sun was scarce in the Sky. seen; at the End whereof a Breach or Yawning appeared in the Sky, along which great Flames of Fire were seen to run; and the Stars seemed to wander in Cornet he carried with him, he in Disguize approachthe Region of the Air. Many Judgments were made the Castle where the Queen was kept: There he upon these Prodigies; but most agreed, they portend. Inc. Maid belonging to the Queen, carrying a Pitcher ed, the End of the World to be at hand. At last the Water for her; whereof, with the Maid's Consent. Sun shined out; and whilst the Christians appealed God the drank, and dropped a Jewel into it well known to with Prayers, the Moors confulted their Wizards. Al- The Queen. She feeing the Jewel, caused him to be farani, of Meca, affirmed to King Abderramen, that this brought up to her; and having yielded her felf up be-Prodigy threaten'd the Downfall of Christian Princes, fore to the Lust of Alboarar, she now betrayed the King if he would take in hand to pull them down. Divi- into his Hands, Remiro seeing himself taken, begged ners fore-tell what, they know, is pleasing to Princes; Leave only to found his Cornet; which being granted. and Princes believe that which pleases them. Abderra- his Men that lay in Ambush broke into the Castle, kilmen declares War, and makes mighty Preparations for aled Albeagar, and carried away the Queen, whom the it, drawing great Succours out of Africk, under the King caused to be cast into the Sea, with a Stone abour Command of Almanzor. With an Army almost innu- ther Neck; because, asking of her why she looked so merable, he broke into Portugal, bearing down all be- melancholy; she answered, It was for the Death of the fore him, and putting the Christians to most cruel Moor, who was a better Man than he. To this Rela-Deaths. King Ramiro having gathered the greatest tion, let every Man give the Credit he thinks it may Power he could, set forward to meet the Enemy, deserve. This King Ramiro had two Wives, besides whose Multitude obliged him to retire to the Mounth we have now spoke of: The First was, the tains of Clavijo. Here the Apostle St. James is said to Lady Urraca; and by her he had Ordonno, his Succes-Ramiro have appeared to him, promifing, he should obtain a for, Sancho and Bermudo. The Second was, Teresa. destroys a wonderful Victory in that Place. In the Fight, the Waughter to Sancho Abarca, King of Navarre: Her Islue Apostle was seen on Horseback, making great Slaughe ter among the Mars. This Victory, some will have to be the Cattle of his being taken for Patron of Spain; though others fay, it was that in the Time of King A lonfo I. as was before observed.

7. There is a very strange Story about this King. A Romanwhich, because it looks rather Romantick, than Histor tick Story rical, I will lightly pass over: It is as follows: King of King Ramiro Was married to the Lady Urraca; but under Ramiro. standing that Albeagar, a powerful Meer, had a most beautiful Sifter, called Zara, he fell in Love with her by Hear fay. He demanded her of Albeazar; but being denied, had her betrayed to him for Money; then putting away his Queen, he married her. Alboazar, to revenge this Wrong, surprized and carried away Queen Urraca, who was left at Millor, on the other fide the River Duero. Ramiro hearing hereof, filled hi Galleys with the choicest of his Men; and running un a River, near which the was kept, he planted the Galless, all covered with Green, close under certain Trees that over-shaded the River: Then having laid an Ambuth, and ordered them to lie close till he founded a Were were, Sancho, Audonio and Elvira. By Artida the Moor. he had Alboazar Ramirez, and Artiga Ramirez. King Ra-950. miro reigned 19 Years; he died at Leon, and lies in the Monastery of Our Holy Saviour, founded by himself and his two Wives, Urraca and Terefa.

King Or-1 bducs them.

He takes

Lisbon.

6. King Ordonno III. was Successor to Ramiro II. The donno III. Beginning of his Reign was bleffed with Peace, which tafted not long; for he was foon disturbed by his Broby Rebels, ther Sancho, who aimed to usurp the Crown, affisted by the Count Fernan Gonzalez, who took part with him through Malice, and contrary to Right, and the Tyes of Affinity, for Ordonno had married his Daughter Ur. raca. The Count was guilty of many Enormities befides this, notwithstanding the vulgar Opinion of his extraordinary Vertues and Merit. D. Garcia Sanchez, King of Navarre, and Encle to Sancho, as well as Brother to his Mother, favoured his Designs. With these Aids Sancho prefumed to affume the Regal Stile, and enter'd the Kingdom of Leon, wasting that very Country where he intended to reign. King Ordonno foon repulsed the Invaders; and the better to be revenged of the Count, he was divorced from his Daughter, and sent her back to him. Some Towns in Galicia had also rebelled; but the King reduced them, with a great Slaughter of the Rebels. No sooner had he quelled the Rebels, but he marched through Portugal, as far as Lifbon, whither no Christian King had reached, fince D. Alonfo the Chafte. After a fierce Assault, he took the City by Storm, and gave the Plunder thereof to his Army: Which done, he returned to his Court, laden with Spoils, and bestowed them in rewarding those that had deferved best, and in Religious Works. Conveniency made the King and Count Fernan Gonzalez, who had been long at Variance, agree, and unite their Forces against the King of Cordova. They came to a Battel near Gormaz, where the Christians obtained a glorious Victory; which brought Peace to their Frontiers, before subject to continual Incursions. This was the Po-955. Sture of Affairs, when Ordonno died at Zamora. He lies buried in the Church of Our Bleffed Saviour, at Leon, by his Father, with his two Wives, Vrraca, from whom he was divorced; and Elvira, whose Parentage is unknown: By her he had D. Bermudo, and Terefa, a Nun in the Monastery of St. Julian, in Leon.

7. Sanches

7. Sancho, the Brother of King Ordonno, usurped Sancho. 17 the Crown from Bermudo, the late King's Son, then a Useper, Child. This Sancho was excessively swelled with the carled The Dropfie; and thence, though improperly, called, The Fat. Fat. He had not long enjoyed the Crown, when those very Rebels who had unjustly fet it upon his Head, 957. took it thence, to bestow it upon D. Ordonno, Surna-Ordonno, med The Wicked, Son to King Alonso the Monk. The Surnamed Rebel Count Fernan Gonzalez was the chief Actor in the Wicpromoting him to the Throne, and therefore gave him ranced to to Wife his Daughter Urraca, before put away by the the Crown. other King Ordonno. King Sancho fled to Navarre, and thence to Cordova, where there were famous Physicians, who cured him of his Dropsie. Being recovered of his Sancho re-Indisposition, he gathered an Army; and was so for-turns, and tunate, as to take the Count Fernan Gonzalez, and his expels him. Son-in-Law Ordonno. Though he had them Prisoners, he would not presently put them to Death, but kept the Count in Custody. D. Sancha, his Wife, coming to see him in Prison, changed Clothes with him, and by that Means he escaped, leaving her in his stead. A great Rebellion was raised by the Counts that governed Portugal; but the Presence of the King soon reduced them. Only Count Gonzalo, who governed beyond Duero, durst march with an Army, to meet his Sovereign; yet finding him too strong, he made a feigned Submittion, and was pardoned. It was not long before he compassed by Poyson what he had failed of by the Sword. The Portuguese Counts being accused of this Treason, to clear themselves, challenged D. Genzab; and Count Fruela Vermuiz, their Champion, overcame him at the Town of Salas, near the City of Perce. King Sancho perceiving his Death draw near, ordered Amfelf to be carried to Leon, but died by the Way, at 96" the Monastery of Castrillo, where he was buried, but was afterwards translated to Leon, where his Queen was also interred. Queen Teresa was Daughter to Assur Fernandez, Count of Monzon. By her the King had Issue, D. Ramiro III, his Successor; Urraca, married to Count Nepociano Diaz; and Ermefenda, by whom the King, her Brother, is faid to have had D. Sancho the Hairy. About this time Castile revolted from the Crown of Leon. Authors write, that the Cause was, because the King could not pay Count Fernan Genzalez for an Horse and an Hawk he had fold to him upon Credit: But it appears very fabulous, that a King should part with a Kingdom upon so slender an Account. The true Reason was, the Rebellion of the People, headed by the wicked Count.

K 2

Ramiro III. 8. King Ramiro III. succeeded his Father, when he was but fix Years of Age; his Mother, Queen Terefa, under the and his Aunt Elvira, the Nun, managing the Govern-Tuition of ment with such Prudence, during his Minority, that his Mother there was no Want of him to be perceived. Besides, there was then a Truce with Hiscen King of Cordova, then but 11 Years of Age, and under the Tuition of the famous Ahagis, Surnamed Almanzor, a most cruel

The Nor- Enemy to the Christians. This Tranquility was difmans in- turbed, by the Normans invading Galicia: But the Count vade Ga- Gonzalo Sanchez, falling upon them with a great Force, licia, and left not one of them to carry the News of the Defeat. At this time the City Coimbra was subject to the Kings of Leon; and the Christians about it, possessed their pieces. Lands in Peace. After all things had thus remained

975. quiet 7 or 8 Years, Alcoraci (supposed to be King of Sevil) broke into Lusitania with such a Power, that the Christian Counts, not able to withstand him, fled from the Plains, to the inaccessible Mountains. The Barbarians, destroying all the Country as they went, passed even the River Minho, and laid Siege to Compostela, where the Plague so violently raged in their Army, that

978. few of them returned home. King Ramiro being come to Age, he shewed himself so incapable of the Government, that the Counts of Portugal and Galicia took Oc-Civil casion to proclaim another King, which was, Bermudo, Broils. Son to King Ordonno III, by his Second Wife Elviral The King awaking at the News of this Rebellion, met

981. the Rebels, and a Battel was fought between them, which lasted the whole Day: Night parted the Armies, and each returned home, neither victorious, nor overthrown. In this Fight perished the Flower of the Spawish Cavalry, that used to withstand the Moors. Coin. bra was not concerned in this Rebellion; it then enjoyed Peace, under Portuguese Governors: The Chief, who commanded all the rest, was, Count Gonzali Moniz.

9. The Civil Broils we have spoken of, encouraged 983. the Moorish General Almanzor, spurred on by the Fugitive Count D. Vela, who had been expelled his Lands, to break the Truce. Many notable Places in Portugal Many Plawere again brought under, by the Infidels; and among ces in Porthem, Coimbras Porto, Braga, and Britonium, which was tugal talaid level with the Ground, so that only the Memory destroyed of its Name remains. The same Fate attended Lame- by the go, and Visco, in the Province of Beira. The King Moors. adventuring to give the Moors Battel, was overthrown, and forced to retire to the Mountains, being almost reduced to the miserable Condition that Pelayus, or Pelagiss, had been, when first Spain was over-run. Count Garcia Fernandez, Lord of Castile, being persecuted by

D. Vela, and his Adherents, always kept the Field.

against the Moores; but being forsaken by the People of Leon, was not able to prevent the Loss of many Places. In Portugal only, the small Province between the Rivers Duero and Minho, and the Mountain-

Country of Beira, now adhered to D. Bermudo, who still called himself King in Galicia. To these Parts.

many great Men, who before lived in the Territories of Coimbra, withdrew themselves. The unfortunate

King thus thrust into a Corner by D. Bermudo on the one fide, and by the Moors on the other, died at Leon, in the 33th Year of his Age, and 28th of his Reign, was buried in the Monastery of St. Michael of Distriana, founded by his Grandfather, King Rami-

10 II; and 200 Years after, translated thence, by King Ferdinand, to the Cathedral of Astorga. He was married to the Lady Urraca, of whose Parentage we have no Account; nor did she leave any Issue. By his own

Sifter, Ermesenda, he had, incestuously, a Son, called

D. Sancho el Velloso, or The Hairy.

K

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

The Succeeding Kings from the Tear 985. till 1037. with the coming of the Gascons into Portugal, and their exploits against the Moores; many places recovered by them, and others from the Infidels.

Berniudo 989.

၅၇၆

1. II Ing Ramiro dying, D. Bermudo was left fole Poffes. for of the Crown. At the beginning of his Reign, hydragy he wholly applied himself to the Government, but soon Flaces, and after he became so entirely given up to his Vices, and especially to incontinency, that he was slighted by Almanzor his Subjects, and became contemptible to his Enemies. Almanzor laying hold of this opportunity, and prompted by the fugitive D. Vela, invaded again the Christian Territories, and without any confiderable opposition, subdued all the Towns between the Rivers Dueso and Ezla. Here King Bermudo came upon him so unexpectedly, that he put his vast Army to the rout; but Almanzor perteiving how difordered the Christians pursued, rallying some of his scattered Forces, changed the fortune of the Day, and drove those that before were victorious, to the Gates of Lcon. That City had inmediately fallen into the hands of the Infidels, had not the matchless valour of Count W. Iliam Gonzalez, a Portuguele, placed there Governour by the King, defended it against the fury of the Infidels, tho' the King then lying at Oviedo took no care to relieve the place. In the year 996. Almanzer again incamped before the fame City, resolving not to depart thence, till he were Master of it. Above a Year the Count held out against all the fury of Almingor's Affaults and Batteries, in to much, that the Moore was about quitting the Siege, and had certainly done it, had the King either come or fent any Succour to the Belieged. At length a great part of the Wall shaken with a continual Battery, fell down, and the Moores gave a furious Affault, which obliged the Count, tho' then fick in Bed, to cause himself to be carried, as he was, to the Breach, to give the necessary Orders, and encourage his Soldiers. Three whole days did he make good the Breach with great Slaughter of the Affailants, till another Breach being made, the Infidels broke in overpowering the Defendants. All the Inhabitants were put to the Sword, the City Plundered and laid level with the Ground. The same fare attended Aftorga, which done, Almanzor with his Army loaded with Booty, returned to Cordova to Winter.

The Hiftory of PORTUGAL.

2. Ataulphus Archbishop of Compostel., being wrong- A strange fully accused before the King, he ordered him to be trial of exposed to the fury of a wild Bull, who coming to him, and more instead of Tosling him upon his Horns, left them both in his Hand, which was a sufficient Testimony of that Prelates innocence. Almanzor again broke out like a Torrent, overturning all that the Christians had repaired of the former Ruins, and destroying what was before untouched. Montemayor the Old, Visco, Lamego, Porto and Braga, were rased down to the Ground: The Barbarian entring Galicia, made a Font in the Almanzor Church of St. James the Apostle serve for a Manger, again and fent away the Gates and the Bells of the Church makes upon the shoulders of Christians to Cordova; but pre-great spoil. fuming to prophane the Sepulcher of the Apostle, he was drove back by flames which issued out of it. Atning the Church of the Apostle. A mortal Flux destroying great part of his Army; the rest marched leafurely in several Bodies: King Bermudo sent some light Troops, who made fuch havock among them, that not the 20th, part of that great Army returned to Cordova, all the Country the way they went being covered with dead Carcasses. Count Fruela Vermuiz (wno, as his been faid, overcame Count Gonzalo that Poiloned King Sancho) fell upon Almanzor himself, who led the manzor returning through Portugal heavy with Plunder, was overtaken with vengeance from Heaven for profachoice of the Army, and put him to flight with great Slaughter of his People. King Bymudo at length awaking out of his dead Sleep, joyned his Forces with the King of Navarre and Count Garci Fernandez. They expected the coming of the Enemy near Alcantaroz, four Leagues from Ofmi; here they fought from Morn- 999. ing till Night, and then at length victory inclined to the Christians, who slew of their Enemies 70000 Foor and 40000 Horse. Almanzer flying towards Tolode, died of Grief near Berlanga; soon after, his Son Abdol $\Delta L(1,1)$

Melich, to revenge him, invaded the Christian Territo. ries, but being met by Count Garci Fernandez, was defeated and fled back to Cordova. King Bermudo had two Wives, the first called Velasquita, by whom he had no issue; the second Elvira, her Children were Alonso, Successor to his Father; Teresa married to Abdala, King of Toledo, and afterwards a Nun, and Sancha a Nun alfo. The King gave great Scandal by keep. ing two Sisters at the same time publickly as his Mistreses, one of them was Mother to Elvira, the other to Ordonno. By Velasquita, a Peasant, the King had a Daughter called Christina; he died in the Year 999, at Villabuena in Galicia, very penitent for his fins, There he lay Buried till his Son King Alonso translated him to Leon, where he lies with his Wife in the Church of St. Isidorus,

3. Let us look a little back to see the coming of

The Gal-

cons come the first Strangers, that assisted the Natives of PortusnioPortu-gal in expelling the Moores. These were the Gascons gal and as who came in a mighty Fleet, and were Commanded by who came in a mighty Fleet, and were Commanded by Christians D. Moninno Viegas. There is a great dispute among Authors, whether this D. Moninno was a Gascon or a Portuguese, and whether he came with those People, or only headed them after their coming, he being by some supposed to be then a great Man in Portugal. All that is faid on either part, being rather Suppositions, than Proofs, we will pass by this Dispute, leaving it free to every one to believe as he shall be inclined. This Fleet cast Anchor in the River Duero, on the one side whereof was the Castle of Gaya, Demolished by King Rami. ro II. when he killed Alboazar, and on the other, the City Porto destroyed long before by the Moores. Here they landed, and their first care was to repair the City, then only a heap of Rubbish; in the highest part of it they built a Castle, supposed to be the same that is now the Bishop's Pallace. The compass of the Walls was but small, and they weak for our times, but then confiderable; some part of them is still to be seen in the midst of the City, which being increased, has hemmed them in. Two of these Ancient Gates are still stand ing; the one called St. Ann's Gate, the other our Bleffed Ladies, over which is an Image of the Bleffed Virgin, with our Saviour in her Arms, which Image between two Towers is the Arms of that City. Having repaired Repaired and Fortified this place, the Natives and Strangers began joyntly to conquer the Neighbouring Country. Men remarkable among them were, Sifenandns, Brother to D, Moninno, and D. Nonego of Vendosme. The first that felt their fury were the Moors. who possessed the Territories of Resende, and Bienviver. and all up the River Duero; this done, thinking their Conquest secure, they chose Siscnandus Bishop of the City, and yet he ceased not to appear in Arms till he died at Bienviver, and was Buried in the Monastery of Villaboa. D. Nonego of Vendesine, also a Bishop, carried on his Conquests on the other side, and four Leagues from Porto in the Mountain, built a Castle which he called Vendosme, and so streightned the Moores, that they were forced to abandon all that Neighbourhood. The Castle is ruined by time, but the name of Vendosme still continues in the Mountain. In this exercise he continued till his Death, and was Buried in the Monastery of Aviaos. The conquered Lands were equally divided. as well among the Auxiliary strangers, as among the native Portuguese.

The History of PORTUGAL.

4. King Alonso V. succeeded his Father Bermudo; he again is the first of the Alonsos that appears without some Sir- King A. name; for the First was called the Catholick, the Se- Ionso V. cond the Chast, the Third the Great, the Fourth the Monk. Not that this deserved less Titles, for he might have been called the Brave for his Valour; the Legiflator for giving good Laws to his People; the Restorer for repairing Leon, and in fine, the Defired as being one who left the greatest desire of himself, and was most lamented by his People. He was Six Years of Age when he began his Reign, under the Tuition of Count Under Tuis Mendo Gonzalez and his Wife the Lady Mayor, who tion. had great possetsions in Galicia, and some in Portugal, and Governed fo well, that the King's minority was no prejudice to his Kingdom. The Christians in Portugal began to be so powerful, that under the conduct of forme notable Commanders, they repaired many places before ruined, and conquered others possessed by the Mores. D. Alboazar Ramirez Son to King Rimiro II. by 1000. Zara or Artida, whom he stole from the Lord of Gaya, Many plaas was faid before, with many Gentlemen and Forces ces recovemaintained at his own Charge, entred Portugal and red from drove the Moores out of all the Province betwixt the the Moors

Kivers

138

Rivers Duero and Minho. He took St. Roman, Castro de Avioso, and Castro de Gondomar: Beyond the River Duero he forced them to retire as far as St. Martin de Moras and Lamego, making room for the Christians to dilate themselves. The lands of Arouca and that Neighbourhood were again Peopled; the Year following, he overthrew the Moores in many places, took the City Braganza and other confiderable Towns in those Mountains, and so extended the Christian Dominions, that he deserves to be accounted one of the principal Restorers of Portugal. His two Sons D. Trastamiro and D. Her. migio, or Hermiron Alboazar accompanied him in these Conquests, of whom are descended some Honourable Families in Spain.

Count Froila a Portugues Rebels.

His Sub-

mi fion.

5. The tranquility the King's Tutors endeavoured to preserve in the Kingdom, during his Minority, was disturbed by the Portuguese Count Froila Vermuiz, who took up Arms against the King. They came to a Battle in the Territory of Mafra, betwixt Villanueva and Betances, where Froila got the Victory. The King now grown bigger, was much incenfed against Count Froiling and his anger was increased by the infinuations of Q. Elvira, his Wife and Daughter to Count Mendo Gonzalez. Froila being in disgrace, had again recourse to Arms, which not a little troubled the King, and the more for that at the same time, he received the News, that another had rebelled in the City Oviedo. This ther the King hafted, leaving Froila till he was more at icasure: But he marched directly after the King, and overtook him at fuch time as he was ready to Affault the City. The King was advised to forbear the Affault, least in the heat of it, Froila should fall upon him behind, but he Answered, Let the Affault be carried on, for the Count is so much a Gentleman, that he will not fall upon the backs of his Enemies. As he faid, it fell out, for Froila overcome by that Generosity, joyned his Forces to the King's, and fo forwarded the attack that the City was immediately carried. In this Action the Count behaved himself so bravely, that he lost both his Eyes, at which the King was exceedingly grieved, and bestowed large possessions on him, in some measure to recompense his loss: About this time, Count Garcia Fernandez of Castile, was killed in a Battle betwixt Alcozar and Langra, having behaved himself with great Bravery, he being one of the most notable Commanders of that Age. His Son Sancho succeeded him as well in his Courage, as Dominions, and often revenged his Death upon the Moores. There being feveral pretenders to the Kingdom of Cordova, he feemingly fided with each of them to have the better opportunity to ruin them all. The fugitive Count Vela, who used to ftir up the Moores against the Christians was now dead. and his Sons Roderick, James and Innigo were restored to their Estates, and served the Count as their natural Lord. He the more to Honour them, made the Eldest God father to his own Eldest Son D. Garcia, and yet he afterwards behaved himself like a Traitor, as his Father had done before.

The History of PORTUGAL.

6. The Divisions among the Moores at Cordova, were very advantagious to the Christians of Leon, Castile and Portugal. Those that had escaped the desolation made by Almanzor about Coimbra, dealt with the Infidels, and bought Lands of them at a very low rate; it appears by the original Deeds still extant, that Oborez a Moore, fold the Town of Botam to Arias Prior of the Convent of Botam for a Mare and her Fole; either the Mare was worth much, or the Town very little. Till the Year 1020, we have no account of any thing remarkable in Portugal. Out of it the King repaired the City Leon, and gave it a Charter, and great Priviledges to all that would come and inhabit there. Six years after was Born the renowned Captain Roderick de Bivar, com-Roderick monly called Cid, which in Arabick fignifies Lord, of de Bivar. whom mention will be made hereafter. The Christian commonly affairs throughout Spain were in a flourishing condition; called Cid. the King entred Portugal, recovering many Towns in his Birth. the Province of Beira, till he came and incamped before Visco. The City was obstinately defended, and the King going out in the Evening unarmed, to view the Enemies Works, was shot through the Body with an Arrow from the Walls Some write that he died King Athere presently, others that he was carried to Porto. His lonso death we shall hereafter see revenged as far as it could slain. be. His body was laid in a stately Tomb at Leon; he lived Thirty Two Years, and Reigned Twenty Eight; being bred in Galicia by Count Mendo Gonzalez, Lord of Vierzo, he married his Daughter: By her he had Bermudo his Successor, and Sancha who afterwards came 1027.

the Match, unless Count Fernan Flaminio, who struck to be Queen; he had also a Bastard Son, called Numo Alvarez de Amaya, or Roderick Anzures, Lieutenant of Asturias, and Lord of Gijon.

Bermudo III. Succeeds.

An inbu-

ther.

man Mur-

7. Bermudo III. of the Name, succeeded his Father Alonso V. but so young, it was much feared his tender Years might produce some notable Disorders in the Government. His extraordinary Abilities far above his Years, soon dried up the Tears his subjects shed for his Father, and made them rejoice in so unexpected a Bleffing. He was extreamly Religious and Devout. and therefore applied himself to the re-establishing of many ruined Churches. Being of Age to Marry, he took to Wife the Lady Ximena or Terefa, younger Daughter to Count Sancho, Lord of Castile, by whom he had D. Alonso, who lived but a few days. He concluded a match between his Sifter the Lady Sancha and D. Garcia, the Son of Count Sancho of Castile. King Sancho of Navarre, who was Brother-in-law to D. Gareia, bore him Company to Leon to honour his Marriage. The next day after their Arrival, the Bridegroom went out with the Bishop to hear Mass; in the way, he was affaulted by the Sons of the traitor D. Vela, before spoke of, and by them stabbed in several places, his own God-father being the first that wounded him. This News being carried to Court, the Bride forgetting her Grandeur, ran out to the place, and pittifully lamenting her loss, it was thought she would have given up the Ghost upon the dead Body. She railed at the Murderers, which Count Fernan Flavino hearing, had the impudence to strike her on the Face. The Murderers for the present escaped, but Sancho King of Navarre, afterwards getting them into his power, burnt them alive, declaring all their progeny for ever infamous.

8. D. Garcia thus murder'd, and no Heir Male remaining to the Earldom of Castile, Sancho King of Navarre possessed himself thereof in the Right of his Wife, the Lady Elvira, Sifter to the late Count. Grown Great with this Accession of Power, he made War up-Christian on King Bermudo, about the Limits of Castile and Leon; and conquered much of the Country, betwixt the Rivers Pisuerga and Cea. More had been won by him, but that Sancha, only Sifter to King Bermudo, was given in Marriage to Ferdinand, Second Son to King Sancho. This Lady swore she would never consent to her on the Face as she lay upon the Body of the dead Count Garcia, was delivered up to her. This was accordingly done; and she, with her own Hands, put him to a cruel Death, but well deserved by him. The 1025. King of Navarre dying, and his Son Ferdinand succeed- Ferdiing him, King Bermudo was in hopes to recover what nand of Ferdinand's Father had taken from him. They came Navarre to a Battel in the Valley of Tamara, near Fromista, Bermudo where, after a bloody Fight, King Bermudo was killed, and her and his Army overthrown. Ferdinand, now victorious, comes fole immediately laid Siege to Leon; and having made him- Monarch of felf Master thereof, he was there Crowned King of Le- Castile. on, Galicia and Portugal, in the Right of his Wife San-Leon, cha, the lawful Heiress of those Kingdoms. Thus, for Portugal, want of Issue Male to the Kings of Leon, and Earls of Galicia Castile, those two Dominions fell to the House of Na-varre.

Kings of Spain. 1034.

9. What I am about to relate, happen'd in the Reign of King Bermudo; but in what Year, is not certain: Two Grandsons of Prince Alboazar Ramirez, Son to King Ramiro III, called Tedon and Rosendo, with a Body of resolute Men, broke into that part of the Country that lies betwixt the Rivers Tavora and Duero. Having drove the Moors thence, they began to Till the Land; A Strata. and knowing well that the Infidels would not suffer gim of the them quietly to rest there, they fortified themselves on Christians a Rock, over the River Tivora; which running round against the great part of it, makes it a fort of Peninsula; which, Moors. with the Steepness of the Rock it self, renders it inaccesfible any Way but one. Here they built their Habitation, and hence infested the Country of the Moors. At length, on Midsummer-Day, which is much reverenced even by those Infidels, in Honour of St. John the Baptist, the Moors of the Town of Paredes reforted, in great Numbers, to fport and divert themselves on the Banks of the River, and to bathe themselves in it. D. Rosendo cloathing his Men in Mooristo Apparel, passed the River, out of fight, and lay close in Ambush till he saw all the Banks covered with the Barbarians: Then, by degrees, coming out, as if he had been some of their own Company, he furfered his Men to mix with the Enemy, who took them for Friends. Being all mixed. the Christians fell upon them, and turned their Pleasure varre, by the Female Line.

inte

of Love.

into Sorrow: However, many stood, and made a good Defence; and others coming to their Aid, the Success was doubtful, till D. Tedon, fording the River, with his Men, ended the Dispute, with the Slaughter of most of the Moors. This, and other Victories, put the two Brothers in Possession of many Lands in that Country: And in Memory of the Action, they took to themselves the Name of the River, which still continues in the Family of the Tavora's.

10. The Fame of the Exploits of D. Tedon, particularly that upon the River, together with that of the Comliness of his Person, reaching the Ears of Ardinga, the beautiful Daughter of Aliboazen King of Lamego, The Effects she fell in Love with him by Hear-say. Love perswaded her to quit her Father's Palace, and, disguised in the Habit of a Man, through bye Ways, she found out the Abbot Gelasius, a solitary Hermit. She told him who she was, and the Cause of her Coming; and he baptized her, promising to perswade D. Tedon to take her to Wife. This took not effect, for her Father closely pursuing her, overtook, and put her to death. Tedon hearing of her Love, had promised to marry her, and she being dead, would take no other Wife; but was afterwards killed by the Moors, near a small Brook, which, of him, was called Tedo: So he took his Surname from one River, and gave his Name to another, There being nothing elfe remarkable, recorded in Portugal, during the Reign of King Bermudo, and he being the last King thereof of that Name, I must not omit to remark, that Bermudo is the same Name with Veremundus, which the Spaniards call Veremundo; so that, to make it Bermudo, there is, corruptly, an e and an n omitted; and to use B for V, is common in Spanish. Thus Bermudo and Veremundin appear to be the same Name.

EHAP. X.

The remaining Kings, from the Fear 1027, till the Year 1108, and till the Establishment of Count Henry of Burgundy in the Sovereignty of Portugal, where begins the Line of the Portuguese Kings, and ends the Second Book.

of Leon, in the Right of his Wife, the Lady dinand Sancha, Daughter to King Alonfo V, and Silter to King alled The Bernudo HI, who died without His. The Farldon of Great. Bermudo III, who died without Issue. The Earldon of Castile fell to him by his Mother, the Lady Nunna; and the Crown of Navarre he inherited, from his Father: Three Crowns were united in him, and he was well worthy thereof; purchasing, by his Piery, Valour and Bounty, the Title of The Great. The Moors believing King Ferdinand was wholly employed in reconciling his new Subjects in Castile, Lcon, Galicia and Portugal, broke into Lustrania; but hearing he was provided to receive them, they retired hastily. He, once provoked, would not put up his Sword without doing Execution. He took the Town of Sea, and the Cities His Con-Merida, Badajoz, Beja and Evera, without any Refistance, quests over Vileo, guilty of the Death of King Alonfo, and fearing athe Infi-Revenge, was strongly fortified, and governed by Cid dels. Alafun, a notable Commander. The King fate down before it, resolving not to shir thence, till be were Master of it. Eighteen Days the City was battered, and bravely defended; at the End whereof, being the Eve of the Feast of St. Peter and St. Paul, it was enter'd by Force, and never after returned under the Yoak of the Infidels. The Man that shot King Alonso being taken in the City, had his Eyes put out, and both his Hands and one Foot cut off; which done, he was shot to Death. The Governor Alafun had, in Confideration of his Valour, Lands given him to live upon, paying a certain Tribute. His Name is still preserved in those Parts, in the Mountain called Alafan, the Council of Alafana, and other Places.

CHAP.

2. The City Lamego held out no less obstinately, du-ting Twenty Five Days, at the end whereof it was furrendred upon Articles the 22th Day of July. It was not then used to expel the Moors, but to bring them to pay a moderate tribute. After these Conquests, the King croffed the Province between the Rivers Duero and Minho into Galicia, to wifit the Sepulcher of the Apo-1039. Itle St. James, and make his Offerings there: The following Year he conquered many places in the Province of Tras as Monses, and pierced down even to the River Tagus. King Ferdinand made glorious Conquests the enfuing Years; but they being out of Portugat, do not Coimbra appertain to us. Two Monks of the Monastery of Lantaken by the van advertised the King, that the the van advertised the King, that the try Coimbra was ill Advice provided, and worse sortified, and therefore it would and Affibe easie to gain it. King Ferdinand marched in Decemsance of the ber, 1062, and laid Siege to it, where he continued Manks of till July following: so that 7 Months were spent in the Lorvan. Siege: And it may be supposed, the Moors, before un-1064. provided, upon Notice of his Coming, had prepared to receive him. Provisions grew so scarce in the Army towards the latter end of the Siege, that the King was about raising it, and departing: But the Monks of the aforesaid Monastery of Larvan supplied him plentifully. and the City was taken the 8th Day after. The King offered the Monks to take what they pleased, in requital for their Intelligence and Supplies; but they mo> inferiour to the other for Warlike Exploits. 3. The King returning to Leon, left Sisnandus, a noble and valiant Man. Governor of Coimbra. He made War upon Abudad, a resolute and powerful Moor, who had much disturbed the King at the Siege; but being subdued, became a most loyal Subject. Soon after, the Moors > deftly begged only a Church in the City: However, he gave them many rich Gifts, and confirmed all the former Grants made by his Ancestors. In token of Gratitude, the Monks presented the King with a Golden Crown, which Count Gonzalo Moniz, Governor of the Province between Duero and Minho, had offered to their Church: The King restored it, with 10 Marks of Silver, to make a Cross. Roderick de Bivar, Surnamed Cid, that famous Captain, was at this Siege, and Knighted by the King, in this City. Here was also the renowned Portuguese, Roderick Frojas, Contemporary, and not much

Moors, under the Command of Benalfagi, a great Lord 1065. in Estremadura, repaired the Fortifications of Montemayor the Old, that it might be a Check upon Coimbra. This Place was so obnoxious to it, that King Ferdinand was forced to come with a powerful Army, wherewith he laid Siege to it for many Days. Here Roderick de Bi- 1066. var took great Pains to supply the Camp with Forage, all the Country about being kept by great Multitudes of Moors. At length the Besieged surrender'd, upon Pro-Montemise of their Lives; and the King, offended at the Re-mayor tafistance he had found there, demolished the Walls. ken, and The Governor Sifnandus repaired them again, in the demolified. Reign of King Alonso VI. King Ferdinand was born in the Year 1007; and in 1030, married the Lady Sancha, by whom he had the following Children, in Order as named, Urraca, Elem, Sancho, Alonso and Garcia. By a Daughter of Raymund, Lord of Savoy, he had Ferdinand, who was a Cardinal; and D. Minimo Fernandez of Toro. The King finding his End draw near, Ferdis divided his Kingdoms among his Sons: To Sancho he nand dre gave Castile; to Alonso, Leon; and to Garcia, Galicia ing, diand Portugal: To the Lady Urraca he left the City Za-vides his mora, with half the Principality of Leon; to the Lady Dominions. Elvira, the other half, and the City Toro. Having thus Garcia is settled his Affairs, King Ferdinand died, in the 60th King of Ga-Year of his Age, and the 30th of his Reign; and was licia and buried in the Church of St. Ijidorus, where, a Year after, Portugal. his Wife Saucha was also laid his Wife Sancha was also laid.

4. King Ferdinand foreseeing, that the Division of his Kingdoms could not but produce Discord among his Sons, bound them by Oath to stand to this Distribution; leaving his Curfe upon him that should attempt to alter it. But, of what Force are Oaths, against Ambition? None of them was satisfied. Sancho, the El-The three dest, thought himself wronged, as having a Right to Brothers all. Garcia was grieved that the Cities of Toro and Za-fall at Van mora were given to his Sifters. Alonso was offended that riance. Sancho should think he had Right to his Dominions. Garcia was the youngest, and therefore the last in the Distribution: But he proved the first that took up Arms against his Sisters, and invaded the Lands of Toro, and others along the River Duero, which he would have to belong to Portugal. D. Sancho foon followed his Example in taking the Field, not to defend his Sisters, but this Enterprize, asked the Advice of all his Noble.

men; who unanimously disswaded him from the Undertaking, for fear of incurring his Father's Curses, However, finding him not to be moved, they counsel.

led him to continue in Amity with King Alonso, and ask Leave of him to pass through the Kingdom of Leon, into Portugal. To this purpose he met his Brother A.

lonso, at the Monastery of Sahagun; but could not prevail to have Passage granted him: Nevertheless, upon

The History of PORTUGAL.

threw them, killing 600, among whom were many of Note: 200 Portuguese were flain; and Frojas himfelf received many Wounds.

6. King Garcia was gone to Santarem, when King Sancho, to revenge the former Loss, pierced through Portugal, with a numerous Army. Some advised to protract the War, and not hazard a Battel; but D. Roderick Frojaz, now recovered of his Wounds, was positive for Fighting. A Plain, not far from Santarem. was chose for that Purpose; where was fought as bloody a Battel as has been feen in any Age. The greatest Fury was, when the Portuguese strove to gain the Standard of the Castilians. King Sancho came thither in Person, King Santo defend it; and being unhorsed by D. Egas Gomez de throws his Soula, was taken Prisoner by D. Roderick Frojaz, who Brither delivered him up to King Garcia. No sooner had he Garcia and delivered his Prisoner, but he fell down dead of the takes him Wounds he had before received. King Garcia put his Prisoner. Brother into the Custody of certain Gentlemen, while he purfued the flying Enemy: But King Sancho making his Escape from them, made his Way to join Roderick Diaz de Bivar, called Cid, who was then coming up with fresh Troops, that had not been engaged: These charging the Portuguese, before tired, and now dispersed in the Pursuit, changed the Fortune of the Day: However, the Fight, thus renewed, lasted till Night. D. Peter and D. Vermui, Brothers to D. Roderick Frojas. were killed, and King Garcia was taken by his Brother. who not long before had been his Prisoner, and who now knew better how to secure him than he had been kept himself. Thus the Castilians recovered the Day, and the Portuguese, before victorious, were put to the Rout. King Garcia continued in Prison 10 Years. when he was released by Death. There are Authors who write, that King Sancho enlarged his Brother Garcia, contenting himself that he should be Tributary to him; and that D. Alonso, Brother to both, returned him to Prison, in the Castle of Luna, where he died, with Irons on his Legs: With those very Fetters, at his own Request, he was buried in the Church of St. Iside-

7. King Sancho having obtained the Victory over his Brother Garcia, all the Kingdom of Portugal and Galicia submitted to him. This Kingdom being subfecond Thoughts, they both agreed to conquer Portu-1069. gal. Our King Garcia, taken up with his own ambitious Designs, had no Leisure to look into the Practices of his Brothers. What was yet worse, his Subjects were discontented, for that he made Account of none but his Favourite Verna, by whose Advice he began the War of Toro unfuccessfully

5. The Portuguese Nobility and Gentry consulted

The Portuguese No-together, how they might remove this mighty Favourite: and it was resolved, that D. Roderick Frojas, a mighty Man in those Days, should discourse the King upon that Matter. When he had made a long Harangue Favourite. upon the Subject, all the Answer the King made, was, to turn his Back upon him, and go away. D. Roderick feeing how little his Words had prevailed, soon after killed Verna in the Palace. The Death of Verna troubled not the King so much, as the News that King Sancho was marching against him, and the small Confidence he had in his Subjects, especially for the Brothers of that D. Roderick conspired together to oppose his punishing the faid D. Roderick. Necessity obliged the King to wink at Offences, and fend for D. Roderick, who was fled into Navarre, designing for France. He immediately returned, and came to Coimbra, then the Court of Portugal, at fuch time as King Sancho's Forces began to range in Galicia, and in the Province of Beira, without 1071. meeting with any Opposition. The two Earls, D. Nunho de Lara, and D. Garcia de Cabra, advanced to the Walls of Coimbra, with some Troops of Horse. The King would have gone out to fight them, but D. Roderick Frojas said, It was not fit for him to hazard himself, where

The Forces overthrown there was no King against him. D. Roderick went out, by these of with his two Brothers, Peter and Vermui, to meet the Portugal. Enemy; and in the Field called Agua de Mayas, over-

Sancho, dued, he turned his victorious Arms against King Alonafter sub- so of Leon, who well deserved it for consenting to the duing Por- Destruction of his Brother. The War continued blootugal, on-dy for some time, with various Success, till at length quers Le- King Alonso, overthrown, was taken Prisoner. To on, and be-deliver himself from that Misery, he retired to Sahagun, pretending to become a Religious Man. Soon after, Monarch. finding a fit Opportunity, by the Advice of Count Pe-King A- ver Angures, he fled to Toledo, where the Moorish King

Joulo of Alimaimon entertained him with Royal Magnificence. Leon files Nothing now remained to disturb King Sancho's ambito the Pre-tious Thoughts, but his Sifter Urraea's possessing Zatestion of mora. He laid Siege to that City, and had now reduin Moors. ced it to Extremity; but here, in this last Act, God permitted the Curles of his Father to reach him; for, in the Height of his Confidence, a Traytor, called Vellido Dolphes, coming out of the City, upon pretence of revealing some Secret to him, took his Opportunity to strike him through the Body with a Spear, whereof he fell down dead. King Sancho reigned fix Years, 1073. and was murder'd in 1073. He was called The Brave, and was married to the Lady Blanch, Daughter to his Uncle Garcia Sanchez, King of Navarre; or, according to others, to Alberta of France. His Body lies in the Church of our Bleffed Saviour at Onna.

8. King Alonso being generously protected by the Moor, Alimaimon King of Toledo, lived in hopes of better Fortune; when Advice was brought him from Zamora, by Order of his Sister Urraca, of the Death of his Brother, King Sancho. He immediately came to after his take Possession of his Kingdoms, and was received with general Applause: Only Roderick Diaz de Bivar, called Death, re-Cid, would not take the Oath of Allegiance to him, turns, and till he swore he had no Hand in the Death of King Sancho. It is strange, amidst the universal Satisfaction, the Pregration King should have need of one Man: But he resented this Affront to heinously, that he afterwards banished him; in which Exile, Roderick gained much Honour. King Alonso, the 6th of that Name, being settled in quier Possession of his Kingdoms, approved himself worthy of greater Dominions, being one of the molt victorious Princes of Spain, and that farthest extended his Conquests. He seemed rather to have fled to Toledo as a Spy, than for Protection; for he took that City from the Infidels, and valued himself so much upon it. that from thenceforwards he stiled himself Emperor; 1085. and was the Honour of the Spanish Monarchy.

9. King Alonso had fix Wives: The First was, Ag- Alonso's nes, her Parentage unknown, and she left no Islue. W ver, and

The Second was, Constance, Daughter to Duke Robert II. Wue. of Burgundy: She had a Daughter, called Urraca, afterwards married to Count Raymund of Burgundy; and her Portion was, the Kin om of Galicia: Her Husband came to Spain, with her Mother; and they had Issue, Sancha, and Alonso the Emperor. King Alonso's Third Wife was, Berta, Daughter to Philip I, King of France: By her he had the Ladies, Sancha and Elvira; the First married to Count Roderick Gonzalez Giron; the Latter, to Roger I, King of Naples and Sicily. The Fourth Wife was, Elizabeth, Daughter to the Empetor. The Fifth, Beatrix, a French Lady: Neither of them had any Children. The Sixth was, Zaida, her Christian-Name Elizabeth, Daughter of Almucamuz Aben Hamet, King of Sevil: She bore him a Son, called Sancho, killed at Twelve Years of Age, in the Battel of Velez, in the Year 1100. The King, in his Youth, had to do with the Lady Ximena Nunez de Gusman, Daughter to King Garcia VI, of Navarre: By her he had three Daughters; The First, Elvira, married to Count Raymund of Toulouse; her Portion was, a great Summ of Money, with which he returned to France. The Second Daughter was, Terefa, Wife to Count Henn, the Progenitor of the Kings of Portugal, Grandfon to Robert I. Duke of Burgundy, being the Fourth Son to Henry, Eldett Son to the Duke. Of the Third Daughter we have no Account, unless it was one that was married to Ferdinand Mendez the Elder, Son to Mem Alao, Lord of Breganza. Some Authors would make the Lady Ximena to be lawful Wife to King Alonso; but there are undeniable Proofs to the contrary in old Records, specifying the Time when each Wife was married to the King, wherein none is left for this Lady, who, doubtless, was no other than a Mistress,

10. Count Henry, after he had married the Bastard- Count Hen-Daughter of King Alonso, served the King in his Wars, ry marries and was some Times sent Governor into Portugal; as Daughter were several others, from the Year 1072, till 1098 of King A-For, the count was married in the Year 1072, the lonfo.

Kingdom

King.

Kingdom of Portugal was not absolutely assigned over to him till after the Birth of his Son Alonso, which was in the Year 1094: And we find, that from the Year 1099, the Count continued settled in Portugal, as abso. lute Lord and Proprietor thereof; whereas before, being only Governor, at certain Times he used to follow and ferve King Alonso in his Wars. This King Alonso was born in Galicia, in the Year 1025; was married the first time in 1076; die at Toledo in 1108, having reigned 35 Years, and live 33. His Body lies in the Monastery of Sahagun, with that of his Son Prince Sancho: There also lie four of his Wives, Agnes, Constance, Beatrix and Zayda; the other two, Elizabeth and Berta. in the Church of St. Isidorus, at Leon. Now we shall be almost 500 Years without returning to Castile, for now begins to bud the Tree of the most August Kings of Porsugal; a Tree which has shaded much of the World.

* The End of the Second BOOK.

THE

THE HISTORY PORTUGAL.

The Third BOOK.

CHAP. I.

The Country, Extraction, Life and Death of Henry first Earl of Portugal, and progenitor of all the Kings thereof, from the Tear 1067 till 1112.

Opinions concerning Henry the

I. Enry the first Founder of the Portuguese Monar-progenitor chy, is by all Men allowed to have been of of the Pornoble Extraction; but others very much differ both as tuguele to his Country and Family. As to his Family, the Bi- Kings. shops D. Roderick Sanchez, and D. Alonso de Cartagena fay, he was of the House of Lorrain, but do not name his Parents. Duarte Galvan, our Antient Chronologer, affirms, He was second Son to a King of Hungary, which Opinion the famous Poet Camoens, in his Lujiads follows: Damianus de Goes, in the life of King Emanuel, says, he was Son to William Baron of Joinville, and Duke of Lorrain, and Abida of Champagne. James de Valera, and Antony Beuter, bring him from Constantinople.

tinople, grounding their Opinion upon the History of Spain, writ by King Alonso, mistaking a Quotation of the Archbishop D. Roderick, who Writes that he was of the Bisontine Province, meaning Besancon, the Capital of the Dukedom of Burgundy, which they take for Bisantium or Constantinople. Wolfangus Lazius Writes he was of Limburg; Duarte Nunnez de Leon endeavours to prove he was Grandson to Reginald Earl of Burgundy, by his Son Guido Earl of Verneuille in Normandy. Lewis Gollut in his History of that Earldom, says, he was Brother to Raimund, both Sons to Earl William: All these doubts are cleared by the Antient Manuscript of Fleury, which being a fragment of French History, was writ in the time of our Count Henry, for the Author of it brings himself as an Eye Witness of the three Suns that were seen at the Town of Scyrs, on the Banks of the River Garonne, in the Year 1108. It was writ by a famous Benedictin Monk of that Convent, and reaches from the Year 897, till the Year 1110. Petrus Piteus a learned Man, published it with other like Manuscripts, and it was Printed at Francfort in the Year 1596. By this Antient Manuscript it appears, that Robert the first Duke of Burgundy, younger Brother to King Henry I. of France, had by his Wife Hermengarda, one onely Son called Henry, who died before his Father, leaving five Sons by his Wife Sibila, Daughter to Reginald Earl of Burgundy: These were Hugo, who was heir to his Grandfather, but being left a Widdower without Children. became a Monk of Cluni, and so died in the Year 1092. Endo or Odoa, who succeeded his Elder Brother, Robert Bishop of Langres, Henry our Earl, and Reginald an Abbot; many other Authors too long to insert, have hinted that he was of the House of Burgungy, tho' perhaps none specified it so particularly. His Family once allowed to be that of Burgundy, it will need no further proofs to shew his Country; besides, that it is more likely he should come out of France, which joyns with Spain, than from Hungary or Constantinople so remote. It is also a sufficient proof of his Country, that all his followers were French, which could not have been, were he a stranger to them.

The History of PORTUGAL.

2. 'The Portuguese strive to clear two points for their Honour, in which there is great difficulty, or rather Conseits of the Portuguese Authors.

an imposibility, for that all arguments are against them; the one is to make out, that the Sovereignty of ' Portugal was granted to Count Henry without any ac-'knowledgment to Castile; the other that Teresa was 'lawful Daughter to King Alonso. The Arguments for the first, are, That no Records are to be found in Ca-'file or Leon, to prove the Title to such acknowledgment, and that their King Alonso the first, was anoin-'ted King by Christ himself, and therefore owed his 'Crown to him. These proofs are meerly Suppositious; for as to the first, whether such Record remains for not, it is not credible that a King would alienate a 'Kingdom to a Bastard Daughter, so as to reserve no 'Sovereignty to himself, nor if he had, is it in the pow-'er of a Prince to give away the right of a Legitimate 'Successor to one Illegitimate? The second instance a-'bout Christ giving a right to the Crown, seems so ex-'travagant a Notion, that as it carries no proof, it 'nceds no Confutation. The other point infifted upon, is the Legitimacy of Terefa the Counts Wife, but 'that has been spoke of already; no Author of Notehas 'named her otherwise than as unlawfully begotten, and the computation of the time her Father was mar-'ried to, and lived with his fix Wives, makes it im-'possible to allow of a Seventh. There is another 'doubt about Earl Henry's going to the Holy Land. 'which some Pertuguese Authors insist upon without any fufficient Grounds, or rather without any probability; 'but whether he did or not, is not easy to decide, nor 'worth the discussing; let us go on to his Life, or ra-'ther to the small fragments that remain of it, as of all other things before his time, but we begin now by degrees to come into days of more light.

2. By what has been faid, it appears that Earl Hen- Count Henry was a Burgundian, the Son of Henry, Son to Robert the ry of Burfirst Duke of that Country, and Hermengarda Daughter gundy. to Count Reinald of Burgundy. There he was Born in the Year 1035, being descended by the Fathers side of the Royal Family of Hugh Capet, and by his Mother from the Earls of Burgundy. The cause that moved Henry to pass over into Spain, was the desire of Glory to be purchased in the continual Wars, betwixt the Christians and the Moors. Authors do not agree about. the time of his coming, but it appears by Ancient Records.

The History of PORTUGAL.

His com- cords, that he Governed Portugal in the Year 1072, so that he must have been in Castile when King Ferdi-Portugal. nand died, and when the fame of Roderick de Bivar's exploits, incited strangers to come from Foreign Parts to 1067. imitate his Actions. Roderick was then near Fifty Years of Age, and Henry about Forty: The Author of the Manuscript above mentioned, says, That succours were fent out of France to King Alonso, at his request to King Philip I. being then pressed with the War made by the Almoravides. It is likely that Henry came with the Command of these Troops, and having gained esteem, had the Government of the Province between the Rivers Duero and Minho committed to him, other great Men governing the others at the same time. After the death of King Ferdinand, who divided his Kingdoms among his three Sons, Sancho King of Castile having taken Portugal from his Brother Garcia, and Leon from Alonso his other Brother, obliged him to fly for 1071. fafety to the Moors. Henry accompanied him in all misfortunes, till Sancho being killed. Alonso was not only restored to his own, but seated in the Thrones of Ca-

1072. Itile and Portugal. King Alonso considering, that he who Gains the follows a Prince, deposed in his misfortunes, does some-Affection of thing more than Man, concluded that Henry was a pro-King Alon-digy among mortals, and therefore from that time, refolved to fuit his reward to his Fidelity.

4. Beatrix the second Wife of King Alonso dying, 1076. a match was agreed for him with the Lady Constance, Alonfo marrieshis Aunt to Earl Henry, and he was sent to France to conduct her into Spain. With him went Raymund Earl of Toulouse, and with them both came Raymund Earl of Burgundy, which is the reason some Authors write they came all together; whereas the other two had been long before in Spain. Thus Henry became great at Court, the King being his Friend, and the Queen his Aunt, which his power he used with such moderation, that he 1081. was beloved by all Men. He accompanied King Alonfo at the memorable Seige, and taking of Toledo, as 1087. also at the Battle of Sagulias near Badajoz, where the King was overthrown. To reward all these Services, the King at last gave him to Wife his Bastard Daughter He takes to Terefa, whom he had by the Lady Ximena Nunnez de W.fe Te-Gusman. Her Dower was the City Porto with its Terrefa Baflard Daughter to Alonfo, and has in Dower the City Porto and its Territory. ritory, ritory, then the best part of what was gained in Portugal, giving him leave to retire thither, and live with his Wife: His Age was the cause that he died, leaying Terefa young to marry a fecond Husband, which much disturbed the publick Peace. Soon after the Christian Princes joining in League to conquer the Holy Land, Earl Henry was chosen General of the Forces fent by King Alonso, in which employ he gained great Honour. He returned from this Expedition to Toledo, where the Court of Castile was then kept in the Year 1099. King Alonso at this time being of a great Age, fent his Son Prince Sancho, being but Twelve Years of Age, under the direction of D. Garcia Count of Cabra, with an Army to oppose Almanzor the Moor. With them went many Persons of Quality, among which the chief was Earl Henry; they came to a Battle in the Plains of Veles, where the Prince was unhorsed and killed, though Henry and Garcia exposed themselves to save him. Earl Henry meditating Revenge, met Al- 1100. manzor again in the Field, whom he dismounted and the Infidels took Prisoner, delivering him to James Ordonnez for and takes to carry him to the King; this done, Henry broke Almanzor through the Infidels, putting them to flight, with a prisoner.

mighty flaughter.

5. As it is doubtful whether Henry went to Hierusalem with the other Christian Princes, so is it also, whether he was present at the taking of Lisbon, Santarem, Sintra, and other strong places by King Alonso, but that he was at these latter Expeditions as most properly appertaining to him is most likely. But his great Age re- For his good quiring some rest, the King at last gave him leave to services he retire to Portugal, giving to him for himself and his receives o-Heirs, all that was conquered there, which was the ther Terri-Cities Coimbra and Visco, and the three Provinces; that tories of betwixt the Rivers Duero and Minho, Beira, and Tras King Aos Montes, with that part of Galicia as far as the Castle lonso. Lobeira, and leave to conquer as far as Algarve. Earl Henry settled his residence at Guimaraens, taking the Title of Earl of Portugal; The Portuguese encouraged by the presence of a Prince of their own, did much upon the borders of the Province betwixt the Rivers Duero. and Minho, till then not entirely subdued, but we have no particular account of their Actions. Hecha Martin King of Lamego, being a tributary to Henry rebelled; and drawing together a powerful Army, did much hurt in the Christian Territories. The Earl with Egas Moniz, a Gentleman then famous, and afterward Tutor to King Alonso, marched to recover the Booty he had taken, and overtook him in a Valley near the Monastery of Arouca. The Moor for greater security. in case of any misfortune, placed his Wife Queen AxaAnzures, and all the Prev on the top of a Mountain he thought unacceilible, called Sierra Seca. The Christian Army encamped along the River Alarda and Egas Moniz, seeing the Enemy advantagiously posted, undertook with a good party by Night, to go about the Mountains, and at break of Day, to be ready to fall upon them on the top, whilst the Christian Army charged the Enemy below. This was accordingly put in Execution, and after a bloody Fight, the Queen was taken above and the King below; they becoming Christians, the Earl bestowed the City Lamego upon them, they paying tribute for the same.

157

Moors. .1103. him.

Another overthrow

given by

to the

him to the

He performs other great Actions.

6. The Moores rebelling against their King for chang-A Moor- ing his Religion, he fled to Guimaraens to crave aid of Earl Henry, who by force took the City Lamego, and restored by restored him: He searing in the Earl's absence his Subjects would again revolt, defired of him to leave some Portuguese Gentlemen to secure those Lands, which was accordingly done, and the Country Peopled with Inhabitants brought from the Province betwixt the Rivers Duero and Minho. This year some Writers will have it, that Earl Henry went to the Holy Land with Guy of Lufignan and other Princes; all the likelihood there is thereof, is, That we have no account of him in Portugal from the Year 1103. till the Year 1109. King Ali Haben Foseph, with a numerous Army, laid Siege to Coimbra, which he furiously battered during a Month. Earl Henry marched to their relief, and coming to a Battle, overthrew the Infidels with a great Slaughter. Cintra and other places revolted and were overcome, but rifing again, they could not eafily be subdued: Whilst our Earl was diverted in the Wars of Galicia and Leon, where he took some Towns, Cyrus King of the Arabs taking the opportunity, laid Siege to Santarem, whither our Forces hasting to relieve the place, were by him overthrown, and so the Town being distressed, Surrendred. The Earl took several places in Leon, so that King Alonso was glad to abandon that City upon promile to relieve it in four Months. He overthrew King Alonso of Navarre in defence of Queen Urraca. and about the Government of Prince Alonso: soon after Henry being diffatisfied with the faid Queen, took part with the King against her, and defeated Count

The History of PORTUGAL.

Gomes who espoused her Quarrel.

7. Whilst he was absent from Astorga, those People of the Kingdom of Leon that he had subdued revolted. III2. and he returning, laid Siege to Astorga. In the heat of His Death the Siege, he died, and his Son Alonso rising with his and Cha-Army, went away to Bury him at Braga. Thus After-ratter. ga with all its Territory was lost: The death of Earl Henry was much lamented of his Subjects, for that he was a Prince of extraordinary Piety, Valour, and Generofity. He overthrew the Moors in Seventeen feveral Battles, and took from them many Cities and places of Strength. He lived Seventy Seven Years, Governed Portugal with the Title of Earl above Twenty, and was Governour of part thereof almost as many more. He was of a middle Stature, a beautiful and awful Presence, his Complection fair, his Eyes blew, and his Hair yellow, inclining to red: In his antient Pictures, he is represented with his Sword in his hand; his Body lies in the Cathedral of Braga, with a modern Inscription on his Tomb, which mistakes his Country and Parentage. The Countels Dowager governed this Dominion for some years, asbeing her Dower, and her Son being under Age. She might have ruled longer, had she not Married, or proposed to Marry the Earl of Trastamara D. Ferdinand de Trava; this or some other cause, produced Civils Wars betwixt the Mother and Son, which ended in her overthrow, her Son without regard to the duty he owed to a Mother, when she was made Prisoner, keeping her in the Castle of Lannoso, with Fetters on her Feet, till she died in the Year 1130. and was Buried by her Husband.

8. The Islue of Earl Henry was, First, Alonso Enriquez, His Island. taking his Name and Sir-Name from his Father and Grand-Father. This being his Heir, is named before the Sifters, though they preceded him as to Birth. Secondly, the Lady Vrraca Wife to D Bermudo Picz, Earl of Trastamara. Thirdly, the Lady Sancha, Wife to D. Ferdinand Nunnez, a great Man in the Kingdom of Galicia; they left no Children. Fourthly, the Lady Teresa Married to D. Sancho Nunnez, Son to Count Nunno de Celanova. Fifthly, he had a Bastard Son by a Woman of Quality, his Name was Peter Alonfo, of whose brave Actions we shall hear in the life of his Brother. Earl Henry for some Years wore a plain white Shield, till after he had obtained renown by his Sword. he added to it a plain blew Cross.

CHAP. II.

The Birth of Alonso first King of Portugal, he takes upon him the Government, is proclaimed King by the Army, his wonderful Victory over the Moors at Ourique, he takes Lisbon, Santarem, and many other places, all from the Year 1094. till the Year 1148.

ry.

1. FN July, or according to others on the 15th. of August 1094. was Born D. Alonso Enriquez only of Alonso Son to Earl Henry, and his Lady Teresa, at the Town Enriquez of Guimaraens. He is said to have been Born with both his Legs cleaving together from the Knees down, and Count Hen- that his Governour Egas Muniz having devoutly begged of Heaven to loosen his Feet, the Blessed Virgin appeared to him, bidding him carry the Child to an old ruined Church at Carquere near Lamego, and that restoring the place, and setting the Infant upon the Altar, he should recover his Limbs. Egas for the space of five Years did as he had been ordered, and the Child reco-1105. vered: This Prince was but Fourteen Years of Age, when he began to follow the Wars under his Father, and was with him when he died at the Siege of Afterga, 1112. as has been said before. Having paid the last Honours to his Father, to express his great respect towards his Mother, he committed the Government to her, though then of Age to undertake it himself. St. Bernard hang at his Convent of Claraval in France, had a vision of St. 70hn Bapist, directing him to send some of his Minks of Monks to found a Monastery in Portugal, in the place Claraval that should be shown to them by one John Cerita, whom came into they should find there, he accordingly sent seven of his Portugal. Monks. They found Cerita who lived an Austere Eremitical life, and conducted them to Prince Alonso, by whom they were honourably received, and encouraged in their Foundation. Being dismissed, they settled 1120. in a deep Valley, encompassed with high Mountains near the River Barofa, almost two Leagues from Lamego, where they built a Chappel Dedicated to our Saviour, which is still in being in the Village called Pine-The following Year, they built in a place where 1121. they had seen certain Lights, during Nine Nights, as had been foretold by St. John Baptist to St. Bernard. Here Prince Alonfo visiting them, enlarged the Structure at his own cost; John Cersta took the order here. and reduced several who lived an Eremitical Life in the Mountains to follow his Example. The number of Monks thus increasing, he founded another Monastery called St. Christopher de Lafoens. Both these Churches were afterwards Confecrated, and great Gifts offered in them at the Solemnity.

2. Prince Alonso having now weilded a Sword long 1125. enough to gain Renown, thought it requisite to be Alonso Knighted according to the Custom of those days, and Knights thinking there was none about him great enough to himself. Confer that Honour on him, by putting on his Armour. and girding on his Sword, as was then the Custom; he laid the Arms upon an Altar, and taking them thence. put them on himself, so taking the Honour at his own hands. Prince Alonso's Mother being about to marry the second time, it bred such Animosities betwixt them, that they finally came to Battle near the Town of Guimaraens; the Mother overthrown, fled to the Castle of Lannoso, which is hard by, and was there Besieged by He besieges her Son. Alonfo VII. King of Castile and Leon, came his Mother, to her relief with a powerful Army. The Portuguese takes and Alonso was not unprovided, but meeting him in the puts her plains of Valdevez, put to the Sword the greatest part of his into Irons. Forces, took feven Earls Prisoners, and the King himfelf hardly escaped, having received two Wounds. This done, the young Prince returns to the Siege of the Castle, which being yielded to him, he put his Mother into

into Irons. She provoked at this dis-respect, as her Bolts were put on, prayed to God that his Legs might be broke, and her Prayers were heard as will appear hereafter.

Faith.

3. Alonso now grown absolute, and having provoked felf besieg- the King of Castile by the late overthrow given him, to ed by King revenge the Affront, that King marched with a power-Alonso of ful Army, and belieged Prince Alonso in the Town of Castile, he Guimaraens. There being no hope of relief, nor pos-Articles for fibility of holding out, Egas Muniz was sent out by the rance, and Prince to treat of some accommodation with the King, treaks his which Bufiness he managed so Dexterously, that the King upon Promise and Articles, that Prince Alonso should hold that Country of him and do him homage for the same in a certain time prefixed, raised his Siege and departed. Prince Alonso delivered of that danger, thought of nothing less than performing the Articles agreed upon. Porteguese Authors will have it, that Egas Muniz, who managed this Treaty, because it was not performed, presented himself to the King of Castile, with a Halter about his Neck, for him to punish that breach of Faith, and was pardoned by the King. But this is as Romantick as what our Authors writes, that the whole treaty was concluded without the privity of Prince Alonso, as if the King could be so infatuated to treat with a private Man stolen out of a Town, where his Prince was closely Belieged, without seeing his Commission, or to conclude Articles, and depart upon his bare word without the Ratification of the principal Points. These Chimerical Notions are better passed by than to interrupt the course of History with them; however I would not wholly omit this wild imagination of the Author.

1131.

1135.

Caffile.

4. Albucagan King of Badajog did great harm in the War with Province of Beira, and took the Town of Trancoso beshe Moors fore Prince Alonso could come to relieve it. However, our Prince foon retook it, and repulfed the Moor who came to have hindred him from fortifying of it. In his return from this place, Alonso was worsted by the Moors, but recovering himself near the Town of Guimaraens, he overthrew a great multitude of them, and so entred that Town victorious, where he hanged up the Colours taken in the Church. The War broke out again betwixt Castile and Portugal, in the Reign of Alonso VII.

of Castile called the Emperor, and much harm was done on both fides, though with no great advantage to either. At last our Prince broke into Galicia, where King Alonso meeting him, was in Battle overthrown, and the Earl D. Roderick Vela made Prisoner: After this our Alonfo valiantly defended Coimbra, belieged by the Moor Eujuni, so powerful a Prince, that he is said to have covered all the plains about the City, with an Army of 200000 fighting Men: But a violent Plague raging among his Troops, forced him to break up and depart much weaker than he came. Our Prince thus delivered, entred the Territory of Legria, which place, tho' ftrong, he took by Escalade, putting most of the Defendants to the Sword. This being the first of his notable Conquests, he offered it up to God, delivering it to Theotonius, Prior of the Monastery of Santa Cruz, whether after the taking of Torres Novas, he returned to repose himself in order to prosecute greater Designs.

7. Ifmar or Ismael, a powerful Moor, was Sovereign 1139. of all the Country beyond the River Tagus, called Alen- A Fabu.ous tejo. Our Prince passed that River, and made great Relation. Havock in the Territories of those Infidels; Ismael assembled twenty petty Princes, subject to five little Kings who were all under his Dominion. Each of those Kings led 80000 Men, wherewith they covered all the plains. With our Authors leave it is wholly incredible, 'That fuch inconfiderable Princes, as they must be, whose Dominions extended not to above half the limits of Portugal, should raise so prodigious a Multitude, for it amounts to no less than 480000. This may perhaps be added to gain the greater Reputation to those strange miracles he talks of in the Sequel. The Christians were not above 12000, and those wholly dismayed (as well they might) at the fight of such an Army as they could not be capable to number. However, Prince Alonso reposing his confidence in God. ceased not to encourage and animate his fainting Forces. They encouraged with his undaunted Contehance, and resolute Expressions, took heart and offered their ready fervice: It was then Night when the Prince retiring to rest, read the History of Gideon and fell assecp; in a Dream there appeared to him a venerable Old Man, promiting him Victory, and being awakened, was told there was fuch an one pressed to speak with him; being admitted, he found it was the same Man he saw in his Dream, and that he came to give him the same assurances. At break of day he went out of his Tent, and looking towards the East, saw a mighty Brightness, in the midst of which appeared our Saviour on the Cross furrounded with Angels, who promifed him Victory over the Infidels, and commanded him to accept the Title of King, if offered to him by his Army. Soon after the Portuguese flocked about him, demanding the fignal of Battle, and unanimously saluted him King, He at first seemed to refuse that Title, but it being the consequence of the Vision he hadseen, soon admitted it: Let every one give that credit to this strange relation he shall think fit, I have briefly set it down, that I 'might not wholly cut off so extraordinary a passage in 'my Author; yet would I not extend it to that length 'as he has done, because I believe most Men will give 'as little credit to it as I do. 6. Alenso thus encouraged, drew up his Army into four Bodies, the Enemy making twelve: The charge was व्यट.

Alonfo

Intated.

King.

2/ 17/07/ 2/01/5

Battle.

The Barrie seconded by a most hideous cry raised by both Armies, an incredible clattering of Weapons, and fuch showers of Darts and Arrows, as seemed to darken the light of the Sun. No Christian sought to save himself, all their fludy was to kill; the King encouraged all Men by his example, and every Man fought to out-do another. Six hours the fight lasted, in which time the plain of Ourique, where they engaged was all covered with dead Bodies, which almost floated in a Pool of Blood. At length the Victory fell to the Christians, and was one of the greatest ever obtained against Insidels. 'It is very R. A.H. Sas hard to reconcile the account of this Battle to any 'thing of probability; for whereas the Author fays but 'a little before, there were five lesser Kings and one Sovereign of them all, with each 80000 Men, which amounts to 480000; now he fays, they were above 6000 10. Doubtless there mult be willful mistakes in these Numbers to magnifie the Action, which would · seem great if not rendred incredible; Besides he reckons fix Kings which are those of Silves, Merida, Seevil, Budyoz, Lisbon, and Algezira, whereas all other · Authors agree they were but five, and give that for the reason that the Portuguese Arms contain five small Scutcheons within the great one; nor is it any excuse to fay, there were five Kings subject to one that was 'supream over them, for the principal could not be omitted in the Number, and if he was not, than the others must be but four. Another reason makes me incline 'not to credit this Story, which is, that we fee the King's of Castile, Aragon, and Navarre have often joyned their Forces to oppose a much less power than is here 'spoke of, and it is not credible that such a Multitude 'could be now amaffed on a fudden without their know-'ledge, or much less that they knowing of it, should 'make no provision to oppose that Torrent. Nor was there ever such a number of Moors in one body heard of from their first invading Spain, till their last ex-'pulsion. In fine, I cannot be reconciled to this mon-'strous Story, and could show many other reasons a-'gainst it, but look upon it as needless, this being on-'ly a project to gain credit to the Miracles pretended 'for the founding of that Kingdom, which ferve only to cover its revolt at that time from the Crown of 'Castile and Leon. I will insist no more upon it, but re-

'turn to the course of the History. · 7. Ismael provoked with this loss, and desiring revenge, battered the City Legria, which he took, putting all the Defendants to the Sword, except D. Pelayo Guterrez the Governour, whom he kept Prisoner. He fortified this place to strongly, that King Alonso found much difficulty to recover it, but at length drove the Moers out of all that Territory. King Alonso VII. of Castile seeing that erected into a Monarchy, which but a little before was only the Portion of his predecessors Bastard Daughter, thought it convenient in time to pull down that rifing greatness before it was too powerfully. cemented together. Thus breaking into Portugal by the way of Galicia, he came to the plains of Valdevez, where the Castilians had been before overthrown, and 1140. where our King now again gave him Battle. The King Alonio as of Castile was defeated, and several Persons of Note India, taken Prisoners. A French Fleet confisting of 70 Sail, Franch the arrived in the Harbour of the City Pages. The Wing of arrived in the Harbour of the City Porte. The King Cathie invited them to affift him in the taking of the City of IIAI. Lisbon, which having some years before been made trig a freeze of butary, was again revolted: This united power of French at Christians attempted to scale it, but without any success, Porto.

being forced to defift for that time. The Moors obtain- 1142.

M 2

ed a Victory at Soure over the Knights Templers, and among the Prisoners carried away to Santarem Martin Vicar of Source efteemed a Holy Man, whose Father Aires Manuel, when his Wife died, led an Eremitical Theodoricus Earl of Flanders were also in it. After strug-Life.

8. Ansciri a valiant Moor Governour of the Town of 1144. voked King Alonso, who long meditated how to surprize designed for the Holy War; the King made proposals four men of Quality with him into a Field, where has cepted, and the Siege was formed. The strangers en-The taking delign in Execution, he charged them upon pain of Francis stands, and the King where is at present the joins his of Santa-death, not to reveal to any Man what they had difrum.

Town, made a vow if he succeeded to build a stately memies, he could see at the time of making the Vow. At the minute he made this Vow, St. Bernard who was then at time and the want of Writers have Baried them in Ob-Charavallis in France, by Revelation from God, sent two wion. It will not therefore be just to omit one glori-Monks to begin that Monastery. Five days the King was exploit, whereof the memory still remains. Martia spent marching from Coimbra to Santarem, and made Moniz entring a Gate, found such opposition from the himself Master of it in an hour; some of his Men had Moors, that they were forcing him back and shutting to Scaled the Walls before they were discovered, and then the Gate: to prevent which, being himself not obje to in the confusion had time to break open a Gate, at sppose their Force, he let himself fall a cross the enwhich the King entred. The Booty was very confiderable, and the Town remained in the power of the freedily be put too, and his Men coming on, beat off Christians; several lesser places followed the fortune of the Infidels. making their way over his dead Body; nor Santarem, but the King now bent his thoughts upon must the Strangers be robbed of their part of the Glory. greater Conquelts.

discovered a mighty Fleet at Sea, which made towards reported to have been wrought; many others were bu-and Flemings, in the River of Lisbon.

The History of PORTUGAL.

lemings, under the Command of William Long Espe, nd other inferior Captains. Some Authors report, hat Henry King of Denmark, a Duke of Burgundy, and ing with a Storm, they were coming to Water and remit themselves at the soot of that Mountain; the Santarem, with his often Excursions, had highly pro- number of Vessels was 180 sail containing 14000 men that place. At length being at Coimbra, he took only them for conquering the City of Lisbon; they acving consulted with them of the method of putting their comped on that side, where now the Church of St. Alonso Church of St. Vincent. For five Months the City was strength to coursed about. As they returned home along the Banks of the River Mondego, an Old Woman said to others that were with her so loud, that the King and his company heard it; 'Do you know what the King and his company heard it; 'Do you know what the King and his company heard it; 'Do you know what the King and his company heard it; 'Do you know what the King and his company heard it; 'Do you know what the King and his company heard it; 'Do you know what the King and his company heard it; 'Do you know what the King and his company heard it; 'Do you know what the King and he company heard it; 'Do you know what the King and his company heard it; 'Do you know what the King and he company heard it. Noblemen have been about? They are confulting how Infidels are said to have fallen that day. But it is imto take Santarem; the King hearing this, said to those possible the place then could contain near that number Gentlemen, if any one of you had gone a step from me before I heard that Old Woman, I would have cut of his head. So hard a matter is it for a Secret to be concealed. The King being resolved to gain that strong the City in Triumph over the dead Bodies of his E-

10. The particulars of this famous Astion would some parrance, and so lying in the way, the Gare could not 9. Our King being at the Rock of Sintra with an tem was one Henry of Bonneville near Color, at whose ardent design to possess himself of the City of Lisbon, Tomb in the Church of St. Vincone, many Miracles are the mouth of the River Tagus. This Fleet appearing, fed, where now is the Church called that of the Martyrs he understood was composed of English, French and

Fleming's

The History of PORTUGAL.

167

half the City, but they fatisfied with the Booty and fome other rewards, departed to profecute their holy deligns, for to their own Countries. Such as would stay, had Lands ailigned them; many other strong places were taken soon after in this current of the King's good 1148. Fortune, the chief of them were, Mafra, Almada, Palmela, Cintra, Obidos, Trancoso, Alenquer, Serpa, Beja, Elvas, Coruche and Cezimbra. Thus the Pride of the Mahometans began to be humbled, and this Christian Kingdom to lift up its head.

CHAP. III.

Continues the mighty Actions of the victorious King Alfonso, the Kingdom confirmed to him by the Pope, his Death, issue and description, all from the Year 1148. till 1185.

Alonfo o versioroms the Moors Min.

I. CInce we cannot give the particulars of all the Heroical Actions of this King, let us at least in two of them represent somewhat of the grandeur of the rest. He sat down before Aleazar do Sal, with a small handfull of handful of Men; 500 Moorish Horse and 10000 Foot came to raise the Siege, whom he went out to meet with only 60 Horse, and a proportionable number of Foot. With this small Body, he put his Enemies to flight, but was himself wounded in the Leg, most misfortunes always lighting upon his Legs ever fince his Mother laid that Curse on him, as was said before. After this Victory, returning to the Siege, he took it at the end of two Mon hs; this done, he went with 60 Lances and a few Cross-bow-men to take a view of the Fortress on the Rock of Paintela. Being before the place, he discovered the King of Badyoz coming down a Hill with 400 Horse and 60000 Foot, but without tike explais any order. Our King lay a while betwixt certain Rocks out of fight, confidering their diforderly march, whill his Company meditated on their Numbers. At length breaking out suddenly with that handful, he soon covered the Hill with dead Bodies, and the Infidels believing

lieving a greater Army had followed, fled in confusion, leaving all their Baggage to a few above 60 Conquerors. Palmela upon the News of this defeat, immediatly surrendred upon only promise of Life. The City Tuy left him by his Father, and now revolted, he reduced to his Obedience, and at the same time, concluded a match for his Daughter Mafalda, then 12 Years of Age, with Raymund Prince of Catalonia. 2. Some time before, he had subdued the City Beja, after a tedious Siege, but the Moors who are faithful no longer than compelled by necessity, finding now a fit opportunity, rebelled. Certain valiant Commanders, 1162. imitating the example of their King, affaulted this place by Night with such resolution, and so unexpectedly, that they carried it making great flaughter among the Inhabitants. A Gentleman of Quality called Giraldus, living like an outlaw on account of certain crimes he had committed, entred into hopes of A number regaining the King's Favour, by some extraordinary of Christiaction. Confidering therefore that the City Evera was an Our-lows not guarded by the Infidels with that circumspection for the that was requilite at fuch a time, he refolved to surprize Evera.

it. There was a Watch-tower, where the Centinel was kept by a Moor and his Daughter by turns; Giraldus knowing this, Scales the Tower alone, and killing both Father and Daughter, who were affecp, returns with their heads to his Men, being 500 Horse and a good number of Foot. They encouraged by this fuccess, scaled the Walls then unguarded, and breaking open one of the Gates, let in their Companions: Thus with a mighty flaughter made of the Inhabitants, the City was gained. The King not only Pardoned, but Rewarded all those Out-laws, and made their Captain Governour of the City. 3, King Alenso thus become terrible to the Mors, fell at variance with his Son in-have Fordinand the Second King of Leon, and thereupon entred Galicia in the 75th. year of his Age. Here he took the Towns of Limitand Leon. Turon, and putting Portuguese Garrisons into them, turned his Forces against Badajoz, then a tributary City to the King of Leon. This City he affaulted and entred, but not the Castle: Mean while King Ferdinand came to defend that place which fell within the limits of his Conquest. The Portuguese Army encountring filling his Mathers

M +

King A- him in the Field, was overthrown, and King Alonfo? lonfo pu: forced to fly into the City, whence thinking to make to fight, his escape, he struck his Leg against a bolt of the Gate breaks his to violently, that he broke it, and here his Mothers Curse reached him fully. Nor was that all, for in that condition, he was taken by the King of Leon, who curfe when treated him with extraordinary courtefy, and was conhe put Fet- tent that he should restore to him only such places as he ters upon had wrongfully taken in Galicia and Leon, tho' he offered others in Portugal. 'Our Author will not allow that King Alonso promised any acknowledgment to the 'Crown of Leon for his Dominions, but all Spanish Authors are positive he did. Certain it is, that from henceforward he remained lame, so that he never after could ride a Horseback, but was carried in a Chariot,

4. The King had some time since taken the City Beja, but it was soon after lost. Gonzalo Mendez de Maya, 1170. called the Combatant, about this time made a Road into the territory of Beja, where was a great body of Moors, under the Command of Almolymar, a Soldier of Reputation. These two Bodies encountred, and Maya remained Master of the Field; scarce had he vanquished this Enemy, when he was met by Alboazem King of Tingier, who was coming to the affiftance of the vanquilhed. The fight was renewed on the same spot of Ground, and a fecond Victory added to the former. Maya was 95 Years of Age when he obtained thesetwo Victorics, but died immediately of the Woundshe had received, which made his Army return home in mornful manner. Albaraque King of Sevil made bold by the King's lameness, drawing a vast multitude out of An-Beserva in daluzia, presumed not only to wast the Country beyond Santarem Tagus, but to fet down before Santarem, where the King then in the 88th. Year of his Age reposed himself; he caused himself to be carried out in his Chariot to give the Beliegers Battle. The fight was fo obstinate, he was forced to quit his Chariot, and appear at the head of his Men with his Sword in Hand. Hereat his Soldiers took to much Courage, that they foon put their Enemies to the rout with a great flaughter; St. Michael > the Archangel is faid to have been feen by his fide, hewing down the Infidels. Hence he went to the Monaste> ry of Alcobaca, to return thinks to God for this success, and flaying there a Month, is faid to have instituted a new order of Knighthood, called that of the Wing, for that in the Battle he faw a winged Arm near him fighting against the Moors, which the King supposing to be St. Michael, or his Guardian Angel, he dedicated the order to them both. The chief Rules were, that the Knights should wear a red Wing embroidered with Gold; that none but Gentlemen of Note should be admitted to the Order; that in fight they should carry the Royal Standard; that they should take the Oath of Allegiance administred by the Prior of Alcobaca, who was to be superior of the Order; that they should every day fay the fame Prayers, as did the Converts of that Monastery, that their Feast should be observed on Michaelmass Day. The King and principal Men were enrolled in this Order, but it was not lasting.

5. At this time there was in the Portuguese Court, a Gonzalo

Gentleman called Gonzalo Hermiguez, much esteemed of Hermithe Ladies for his Eloquence and Art in Poetry, and guez his no less envied of the Men, as well for those Qualities. as for that his extraordinary Actions had purchased him the Title of Moor Swallower. This Gentleman with a party that used to follow him, passed over the River Tagus, before it was light on Midsummer Day from Lisbon to Almada, and there lay in Ambush. The Moors according to their Custom coming out that Morning with their Women to be merry upon the Banks of the River; he fuddenly rushed out upon them, expecting no fuch Entertainment, and made a great flaughter of them. The Infidels strove to defend themselves, but in vain, for he carried off a rich Booty to his Boats. Being ready to put off, he espied a Moor carrying away a beautiful Woman, and leaping again ashore, he forced her from him, and so made over to Santarem with his Prey. Of all the booty he took nothing to himself, but the fair Captive, whom Baptized, he made his Wife: She foon after dying, he was to afflicted that leaving the World, he took upon him the habit of Sr. Bernard, in the Monastery of Aicobaca, and out of his own Patrimony, having no Children, founded the Monaftery of St. Mary de Turnarayo near Ourem. Much about this time it is recorded, that the King being near the mouth of the River Mondego, found a small Chappel with the Image of our B. Lady, which restored to life one of his Servants killed with a fall from his Horfe. An old Hermit told him it was the same that had preserved all the Women and Children, killed by John the Abbot (as was faid in its place) when he fallied out of Montemayor, and unexpectedly overthrew a multitude of Infidels. This moved the King to erect a Monastery there; called at present St. Mary de Seica, and the Image being several times removed from the poor Chappel, to the magnificent Church of this Monastery, is faid always of it felf to have returned to its own place. Peter the King's Bastard Brother ranging abroad, mer a party of Moors conducting a Beautiful Lady with much Treasure, all which, having routed them, he took. Cide Achim a Moor of Silves, who courted this Lady, begged her of the King, or else desired him to keep him also for his slave. The King referred him to his Brother Peter, who not only reflored to him the Lady, but all the Treasure taken with her upon condition he should send no succours to Lisbon, which it seems was not then taken.

b p = 1/52 Moors, and difeati Sec. 71.

Of Peter. Bastard Alonfo.

6. Peter, Bastard Brother to King Alonso was sent into France, to prevail with St. Bernard, touse his interest Brother to with the Pope for to obtain his investiture and confirmation of the new Kingdom of Portugal. To omit what is too Romantick concerning this Peter, he is faid for his extraordinary valour to have been admitted into the number of the 12 Peers of France, and that preparing to accompany that King to Hierusalem, he was diswaded by St. Bernard, who advised him, rather to act against the Moors in Spain. He followed his advice, and was at the taking of Santarem, Lisbon, Trancoso, Badajoz, and other great Actions: After this he was chosen Master of the new instituted order of Knighthood, called that of Avis, which Honour he obtained of the King, that he might not be obliged by him to Marry. Returning one day with a party from an Engagement with the Moors, he laid down in a Field and fell a Sleep, at which time St. Bernard appeared to him in a Dream, perswading him to take upon him the Habit of his Order, which he accordingly performed, and lived 13 Years in the Monastery of Alcobaca, with an extraordinary opinion of Sanctity.

7. The Dominions of Portugal being now enlarged from a small Dower, given by the King of Lcon, with his Bastard Daughter to the proportion of a considerable Kingdom, King Alonso sued to Pope Alexander III. for his investiture in the same, offering to pay to the See of Rome for ever, two pound of Gold yearly, as an acknowledgment of his holding that Crown of the Pope. His Holiness granted his request, and accordingly expedited his Bulls to that effect in the Year 1172. Here- 1172. upon the Cortes or Parliament was affembled at Lame- Pope Alexgo, in which pursuant to these Bulls, the King was ander crowned with a Crown of Gold by the Archbishop of grants the Braga, and all the States there affembled, unanimously investiture voted their Kingdom independent of the Crown of Le-dom of on. For the better regulating of the succession, it was portugal enacted, That the King's Sons should inherit, and for to Alonso want of them his Brothers, whose Sons should not suc- under a ceed them, without consent of the People. That Tribute. Daughters might Inherit, provided they Married not out of the Kingdom; that their Husband should not be called King, till the Queen had a Son; that he should not wear the Crown on his Head in Parliament; that if she Married a Forreign Prince, she should not inherit, least the Crown should be transferred to Strangers.

8. About this time the King made an incursion into The body of Algarve, as far as the Promontorium Sacrum, or Cape St. St. Vin-Vincent, desiring to translate the Body of that Saint cent tranwhich he understood to be there, but he could not perform it, and retired: Afterwards the Council of Lisbon sent People to discover it, who brought it away to that City, where it is kept with great Veneration, a number of Crows following the Body, from the Mountain to the great Church where it lies, and there they also continue to this Day. Abenjacob Son to the Miramamolin, or Emperor of Marocco, with a mighty Army, belieged and much streightned the Town of Abrantes, but certain Portugueso Gentlemen raising the greatest Power they were able, gave him Battle and put him to flight. D. Fuas Roupinno commanded in the Castle of Puerto de Mos, at such time as Gami King of Merida came to attack it. D. Fuas hearing of his approuch with a fmall body, went out and lay close in Ambulb. The Moor giving an Affault to the Castle, he fell upon him to unexpected and furiously, that most of the Islans being flain, Gami and many others were made Prisoners. Gami and his Brother were sent for a present 1182. Engagements by Ses.

lonfo.

present to old King Alonso, who then reposed himself at Coimbra. This same D. Fuas being Admiral at Sea. destroyed the Gallies of Mauritania the first time near Cape Espichel, and brought nine of them to Lisbon: others he burnt in the Sea of Ceuta. Returning thither afterwards with 21 Galleys, he fought 54 of the Enemy, but was totally destroyed, and found a Grave where before he had raised Tropheys. Joseph Aben, Jacob Miramamolin of Morocco, Andaluzia, Murcia and Valencia, with 12 Kings, and the mightiest Army that till then had been seen, to revenge the harms suffered from the Portuguese, passed the River Tagus, and having de-1184. Stroyed Torres Vedras, and whatever else stood in his way, laid Siege to Santarem, where Prince Sancho then was. During 6 or 7 days, he incessantly Battered the Town, and gave feveral affaults to it, so that many of the Defendants were killed, the Prince wounded, and the Walls shaken. At this time King Alonso being 91 years of Age, came to relieve the Town, but scarce had the occasion to draw his Sword, the Infidels flying precipitously at the very fight of him. Both the Father and Son purfued the flying Enemy with fuch Execution, that the River was dyed with their Blood. The Miramamolin ended his days, in the very River, being tirst wounded by the Prince. 9. The most glorious King Alonfo having Governed 17 Years without the Title of King, and 46 with it, and having lived 93, at length departed this life in the 1185. month of Decembers and year of our Lord 1185. In The Death his life time he is faid to have overthrown 30 Kings, of King A- belides a number of leffer Princes and inferior Commanders. It must be observed, that most of these were Kings of particular Citics. His Piety appears in the great number of Churches he Erected, reported to amount to 150. He instituted two Military Orders, that of the Wing before spoken of, which for want of Revenues died with the first Knights. And that of Avis as our Author will have it, tho I find no other to confirm this Antiquity) which continues to this day. To the Knights Templers and Hospitallers, he affigued considerable Revenues. As to his Person, he was 11

Spans High, a Gigantick Stature, his Hair Red, a large Mouth, long Vifuge, and large sparkling Eyes.

He lay in the Church of the Holy Cross at Coimbra in a wooden wooden Tomb, till King Emanuel erected one more Majestick for him. His Sword and Buckler are there still to be seen; the Arms he bore on his His Arms

Sheild were Argent, 19 Scutcheons Arzure, 10 of them in the nature of an Orle, the other nine in Cross and in Saltire, all joined together with twifts of Silk, running from one to the other; each Escutcheon charged with Thirteen Bezants.

10. King Alonso was 53 Years of Age when he Mar- His Wife ried Mafalda, the most Beauriful Lady of those times, and Iffue. and second Daughter to Amadee, 5th. Earl of Marienne, and first of Savoy. This Queen followed the example of her Husband in erecting several Churches and Monasteries. By her, the King had Issue, Henry who died young: Sancho who inherited the Crown, John, Malfalda Wife to Alonso the second King of Aragon, Urraca Wife to King Ferdinand the second of Leon, from whom she was divorced on account of Consanguinity after she had by him Alonso who inherited that Crown. Terefa, second Wife to Philip the first Earl of Flanders, and Sancha; his Bastard Children were Peter Alonso, Terefa married to Sancho Nunnez, from whom her Father took her, and married her to Ferdinand Martinez, the brave Lord of Braganza, and the Lady Urraca married to Peter Alonson Viegas, the Grandson to Egas Moniz the King's Tutor.

CHAP. IV.

The life and Reign of King Sancho I. from the Tear 1154. till 1212, all his Actions in Peace and War, his Arms and Isuc.

I. K Ing Alonso had enjoyed the regal Title 15 Years 1154. when his Wife Queen Masalda bore him his Sancho fecond Son and Successor Sancho. He was Born at Success his Coimbra the 11th. of December, which being St. Mar- Father Astin's Day, he had that Name given him, together with lonfo.

the other. From his very Infancy, he was bred in the Field amidst the noise of Arms, and surrounded with His Atti. Dangers. At the Age of 12 he engaged with the King ons under of Leon, in the Plains of Arganal, and tho' not Victo. his Father. rious, came off with Honour: He was the first Christian Prince, after the Conquest of Spain by the Moors. that advanced to the Walls of Sevil. His Father King Alonso had ordered him to pass the River Tagus, to defend that plentiful Country. The Moors suffered him to pass undisturbed by Evora and Beja, but having passed Sierra Morena, he was met by the King of Sevil with a numerous Army in the plain of Axarafe; here they came to a Battle, which was obstinately fought on both sides till the valour of the Christians overcame the multitude of their Enemies, whom they pursued to the Gates of Sevil, making that River run Red with the blood of Infidels. In his return to Portugal, the Prince wasted all the Country carrying a vast Booty, without meeting any opposition. By the way he laid Siege to Niebla, and had now reduced it to great extremity, when advice was brought him that the City Beja was distressed by the Moors. Thither he hasted, and charge ing the Beliegers, put them to the rout, and relieved the City. The King of Bajadoz had sent Ravadan, a famous Commander, with an Army to spoil that part of Portugal, which he performed as was expected from him; being on his return, he was overtaken by the Prince, and forced to quit the Country, and his Booty with more hast than he came. This Prince valiantly defended Santarem against the Miramamolin, till his Father came to raife the Siege, and they both entred the place in Triumph. These were his principal Exploits till his Accession to the Crown, which was in the Year

> 2. The third day after his Father's Death, in the 30th. Year of his Age, and the 10th after he was married, Prince Sancho was Proclaimed King in the same place where he was Born. Since this is the first King that died in Portugal, we will fet down the manner of publick lamentation made for his Death which continues to this day, leaving the Formalities of the inauguration of the new King for another place. The Judges and their Officers walk a foot from the Townhouse, with long mourning Cloaks, with Hoods to them them on their head. After them the Town Standard Bearer on a Horse with mourning trappings, with black colours on his Shoulder, the end whereof trails upon the Ground. Then follows the Sheriff with two others in Mourning like the others, each of them carrying a Bucler over his head. Next to them come the Aldermen. followed by a multitude of People; in this manner they proceed to the great Church, where the Sheriff having made a short Speech, declaring the King's death. and their great loss, he lets tall the Buckler from his head upon the Stones, and breaks it to pieces, at which the People raise a hideous lamentation. Then they go to the Mint, and so to the great Hospital, at both which places they perform the same Ceremony, which done. they return to the great Church and hear Mass. The third day after, is performed the Ceremony of inauguration, which shall be spoke of in another place. This Ceremony was now performed at Coimbra, where Marein then Bishop crowned King Sancho and his Queen

The History of PORTUGAL.

Dulcis according to the custom of those times. 3. The first action of the new King was paying his 1186. Obedience to Pope Urban III. after which he so much He repairs addicted himself to repairing of Towns and Castles and and builds building others anew, as also to encouraging of Tilling, many Towns that he was called the Peopler, and the Farmer or Tiller. To the Military order of Santiago, he gave the Towns of Alcazar, Palmela, Almada and Arruda: to that of Avis, Alpedriz and Alcanede; to the Templars Idanha. He repaired the great Town of Covillam, to whose jurisdiction 200 Villages are subject, and gave a Charter to it, as he did to Gouvea, Viseo and Braganza. Ferdinand King of Lean entred into Portugal, with greater force than success; for after several repulses, he was defeated in the Country of Cerolico Bebado, now called la Vera: The Governour of Villota, a Town on a Hill near the City Gundia, observing the King of Leon's Army dispersed about the Villages for Plunder, gathered all the Forces near him, and marching from Trancofo, recovered all the Booty, killing many, and putting the rest to flight. A Fleet of English, Flemings and Danes confishing of 52 fail, Commanded by Faques Lord of Avefnes, entred the Mouth of the River Tagus, being defigned for the Holy Land. The King supplied them with all they wanted, and defigning the Conquest of

The manner of lamenting the death

1185. 1185.

The History of PORTUGAL.

Fleet.

Silves in the City Silves the Metropolis of Algarve, and refuge Algarve of all the Moorish Pyrates, he proposed advantagious taken with terms to these Strangers if they would affist him in that the help of Expedition. They consented, Articling for the Plunder of the City, if taken: Forty Portuguese Gallies were joined to the Foreign Fleet, besides Tenders carrying Provision and warlike Munitions. The King marched with his Army by Land, whilst the Fleet made the best of its way at Sea. Both being come before the City, they furiously Battered, and gave several Assaults to it for the space of two Months, meeting a vigorous resistance in the Defendants. At the end of that time the Moors pressed with Hunger, and the continual attacks of the Christians delivered up the City, capitulating only for their lives.

1189. Algarve Subdued, gal.

4. This City of Silves taken, as has been faid, was again lost the ensuing Year: King Sancho soon returned into Algarve, and not only recovered it, but took also King San- the Town of Alber and Castle of Abenabacci, besides ocho adds ther places. This Country thus conquered, King Santhat Title cho stiled himself King of Algarve, and to the Royal to Portu- Arms of Portugal, added an Orle of Castles. Some of his Coin has been seen, which in the Orle has 7 Castles, which number is still used in the Armes of Algarve, when separated from those of Portugal. King Alonfo III. added more, making the Number uncertain; but King John II. long after fixed the Number again at seven. Betwixt this Year and that of 1200 were repeopled the Towns of Penamacor, Pinel, Torres Novas, Azambuja, Penucova, Gondomar, Ermelo, Covellinas, Soco de Panoyas and Povos. Mentemayor the New was now first Built, as also the City Guarda on the side of the Mountain formerly called Herminius, now Serra da Estrella. King Sancho entred Andaluzia a second time, laid Siege to the Town of Serpa, overthrew the Moors that came to relieve it, and yet was forced to rise without taking it. Soon after it was taken by the Knights of the Order of Avis; Peter Fernandez de Castro, that famous Castilian, who taking offence at his King, often led the Moors against him, being now General for the King of Morocco, did great harm in Portugal. All the territory of Tomar was wasted, and Abrantes plundered: As he was retiring loaded with rich Plunder, Martin Lopez a famous Commander encountred him, and after a most sharp dispute, recovered all the Prey and took him Prisoner.

The History of PORTUGAL.

5. The Miramamolin again overwhelmed this Kingdom with an Army of 400000 Horse and 500000 Foot (I could wish a Cipher were cut off from each Number, and it would appear more credible.) He took Torres Novas without opposition, but Tomar was bravely defended by Galdin Pacz, Master of the Templers, who had done notable service in the Holy Land. The Moor offered to exchange the places he had taken for the City Silves, but this proposition being rejected by King Sancho, he in a fury laid Siege to Santarem. where the Plague raging in his Army, he was forced to Robert break it up and depart; 63 Men of War from the Labril and Northern parts arrived at Lisbon, commanded by two Richard English Men of Note, called Robert Lubrilland Richard Cambif Cambil. The first ten that came in, aided the King at Englishmen Santarem against the Miramamolin; the others being with a fleet joined to them, there arose such contention betwixt of 63 Snips them and the Porraguese, as might have been the cause of arrive at much Bloodshed, had not the King prudently prevented Lisbon, it, and fent the Strangers away well contented. A most the Portuterrible Plague and devouring Famine followed all these guese agreat successes, and not only destroyed Men in their gainst the Houses, but even the wild Beasts in the Woods, or else Moors. they ran to the Towns for Prey whilst Men fled to the 1191. Mountains for Shelter. The Monks of Alcobaca per-Great Faceiving they must of necessity Perish, hid an Image of mine. our Lady in the Mountain, which being afterwards found, a Church was built there, and called Our Lady A total Eof Help. To be brief, a great part of the Kingdom was clipse of the altogether unpeopled; all this was foreshown by a to-Sun. tal Solar Eclipse.

6. As if all these Calamities had not been sufficient to humble so small a number of People and so narrow a Country, the Miramamolin Abenjoseph. Brother to him that besieged Santarem, affished by the Kings of Cordova and Sevil, entred Portugal with 40000 Men. All the The Moors open Country was by him miserably wasted, and the ravage the Towns of Alcazar, Almada and Palmela taken with all Country. that the Christians had before gained in Algarve. Our King not able oppose so puissant an Enemy, concluded a Truce with him for five Years, which ended in a wonderful Eclipse of the Sun. This was followed by

Earth-

Moors, commanded by D. Ganzalo Viegas Master of Avis, who died honourably in that glorious Action. A multitude of Arabs after the Expiration of the Truce, o.

1196. verran a great part of Portugal, consuming all that was not before spoiled, and putting to the Sword all the 1197. Monks of the Monastery of Alcobaza. King Sancho at last provoked by these losses, marched out with his Forces, took Roca de Palmela and recovered Elvas, nor long before taken from him. Next he made War on the King of Leon his Son-in-law, having obtained of

1200. Pope Celestin III. the Croisade for all that fought against him, as a favourer of Infidels against Christians. He took from him the City Tuy, and Towns of Pontevedra and St. Payo de Lombeo and recovered Contrasta, now called Valencia, before taken by the King of Leon. At length these two Kings were reconciled through the mediation of the King of Aragon, who to that effect came 1208. to Coimbra, then the Court of Portugal. Some time at ter there ensued Civil Wars in Portugal betwixt certain great Men; the most considerable betwixt Peter Rodyiquez de Pereyre and his Cousin Peter Mendez de Poyares, who coming to a Battle near Valongo, two Leagues from Porto, the latter was there flain with many other Men of Note.

7. The Holy City of Hierusalem being taken by Saladin, the Christian Princes made preparations for recovery of it, and our King Sancho defigned to have gone thither himself; but being disswaded, sent supplies and encouraged the knights Templers and Hofpitallers to proceed vigoroully in that religious Enterprize In this King's time was used in Portugal the A Falent weight called a Talent, but less than the Roman, Greek, or Hebrew, being worth but four Ducats. Portugal. feen filver Coin of this King's with his Image a Horse back on the one side, his Sword held up a cross on his Reines, and about it these Words: In nomine Patris & filij & spiritus Saneli; On the reverse, the Arms of the Kingdom and this Inscription, Sanctius Dei Gratia Rex Portugalia. King Sancho fixed not his abode in any one place, place, but often removed, that for all might equally enjoy his prefence. He was a great Patron to the religious and Military Orders, careful of rewarding Merit, a Friend to the Poor, an Enemy to Idlenes, and true Father of his Country. The misfortunes during his Reign, and his own bounty might well have exhausted the Treasure; yet so well did he manage it, that at his death he distributed 778000 Crowns and 1400 Marks of Plate, and 100 of Gold. His Legacies extended to Rome and Hierusalem whe was of a mid- The death dle Stature, and strongly set; he Reigned 26 Years and of King lived 57, died in March, and lies Buried in the Church Sancho. of the Holy Cross at Coimbra, opposite to his Father, whose Tomb is on the right side of the Altar. His Tomb being opened by King Emanuel to put him into a new one 400 Years after his Decease, the body was found uncorrupted.

8. Some Years before the death of his Father, he His Isue.

married Dulcis or Aldonza, Daughter to Raymund Berengarius Earl of Barcelona, by whom he had issue, Alonso his Successor. Ferdinand married to Joanna, Countels of Flunders, Daughter and Heirefs to Baldwin, Empenor. of Constantinople. Peter who married the Daughterand Heiress of Earl Armengaud, in whose right he had the Earldoms of Urgel and Segorbe, and Illand of Majorca. Henry that died young, and Raymund that lived a short time. His Daughters were Teresa, married to the King of Leon, and parted from him on account of Consanguinity, when she had three Children by him, she is esteemed a Saint. Mafalda married to Henn. King of Castile, and divorced as well as her Sister. on the same account of Consanguinity; she lies buried in the Monastery of Aronca, and is Worshiped as a Saint. Sancha who converted her own Pallace at Alenquer into a Franciscan Monastery, which was the first in Portugal, that holy Man being then alive. She also built the Monastery of Celas near Coimbra, and lies Buried at Lorvan with the same esteem as her Sisters. Blanch Lady of Guadalajara in Castile where she died, but was translated to the Church of the Holy Cross at Coimbra among her Parents. Berengaria died young at Lordan, and lies there. His illegitimate Children were Martin Sanchez Earl of Trastamara, Urraca Sanchez Wife to Laurence Suarez. Teresa Sanchez, second Wife to Alonso Tella the Elder. Giles Sanchez, who became a Priest; Constance Sanchez finished the Monastery of St. Francis at Coimbra. Ruy Sanchez killed in Bautle, as will appear in the year 1245. Nunno Sanchez, and Mayor Sanchez; All these the King had before he was Married, by a Lady of Quality, called Mary Pagz.

9. King Sancho left out all the small Scurcheons un fed by his Father in his Arms, only retaining the five principal in form of a Cross, with the strings that bind them together. In his time the Orders of St. Dominick and St. Francis first founded in Portugal, and those of the Holy Trinity and Carmelites were then also admitted.

CHAP. V.

The Life and Reign of King Alonso II. of the Name and third King of Portugal, his action ons and death, from the Tear 1183. till I223.

1185. 1. A Lonfo Eldest Son to King Sancho, and his Wife Queen Dulcis, who was the third King of Porof King A- tugal, and second of the Name, was Born the 25th of April, in the famous City Coimbra: He falling desperately fick, and being given over by the Physitians, his Father had recourse to Heaven for his Health, which was obtained through the Prayers of the Holy Nun Sennorina, then living in the Mountains of Basto, of the Province between Duero and Minho, as an acknowledgment for which benefit received, the King bestowed Lands and Possessions on that Church, as did some of his Successors. Soon after his miraculous recovery, his Father fent him General against Torres Novas, whence the Infidels used to make Excursions, and Ravage all the Neighbouring Country. The young Prince gave good proof of his Valour at this Siege, and became Malter of the place by plain force.

King Sancho perceiving his Son to be worthy to continue the race of Portuguese Kings, gave him to Wife Viraca, Daughter to Alonso VIII. of Castile. The Bride and Bridegroom could not lawfully be Married without a Difpensation, being Cousins in the fourth degree of Consanguinity; yet without any, they had a Son the following Year 1208. King Sancho lived 1208. but four Years after, and our Prince succeeded him, being then Twenty Six Years of Age. The first thing he did, was to give the Town of Avis to the Military Order of that Name; Ferdinand Yenez being the Master of it, who removed thence from Evora, where he had resided till then.

2. King Sancho perceiving that his Son Alonso did not well agree with his Brothers and Sifters, as he lefe him the Crown, so he provided for them, giving the Brothers Money and Jewels, and to their Sifters the Towns of Alenquer and Aveiras. King Alonso not King Asatisfyed with the Crown, pretended his Father could lonto acnot alienate any Towns from it, to give to his Sisters. tacks the The Brothers fearing his Power, fled, Ferdinand to Ca-Town offlile, and Peter to Leon, and then to Morocco. The ven by his sisters Fortifying the Towns, left them by their Fa- his Sisters. ther, provoked their Brother, who by force of Armes, mok the Town of Aveiras. This done, he sent Forces to Beliege Alenquer, and fat down himself before Montemayor: These Sieges lasted four Months, the King of Leon who had Married Trefa, Sifter to our King, forced him to quit that Enterprize. He marched with Prince Peter, through the Province between Duero and Minho, wasting all that Country, and besieged King Alonfo as he lay before Montemayor. Much Blood was He to routshed, and all the Country ruined, but at last coming ted by the to a Battle, our King was Worsted, and the victorious King of Army in their return took the Towns of Valencia, Mel-Leon. gazo, Fulgoso and Freixa, with other places of less Note, which they Plundered, and Burnt what they could not carry away. The Portuguefe in the absence of the King of Leon, again provoked him to fend his Forces. Martin Sanchez, Brother to our King, but offended at him, commanded the Army of Leen, being that King's Lieutenant. All things being in tendiness to give Battle, he refused to Fight against his natural Prince in Person, who being informed thereof,

King

Army of

Leon.

with-drew himself to the City Porto: The Army left to Engage Martin Sanchez, was commanded by Mendo Gonzalez de Sousa, Joim Perez de Maya, and Giles Val. quez de Soverosa. The King being gone, the Fight began, in which singular acts of valour were performed. D. John Perez de Maya with his Lance overthrew fe. Recovering ven Horsemen; in short, the Portuguese obtained the defeats the Victory in the Plain called Vareza, betwixt Duero and Minho. The second day they Engaged near Braga, and the third hard by Guimaraens, with the like Juccess; so that the Enemy retired into Gaticia. These and the like misfortunes, moved the Sisters to sollicite Pope Innocent III. to interpose his Apostolical Authority, to oblige the King to do them Justice. Nevertheless the Power of the Sword prevailed beyond Equity, or Spiritural Weapons.

He is reconciled to kis Brethreu.

3. Ten Years were spent in these Domestick Broiles at the end of which the King was in some measure reconciled to his Brethren, and had leafure to attend other Enterprizes, from which Civil Discord had diverted him. Though he could not go in Person to the famous Battle of Navas in Castile against the Infidels, he sent some Forces under the Command of Gel mez Ramires. Our King being now disposed to advance his Conquests on the Infide Heaven ordered it so that a Fleet of 100 Sail from the North, under the Command of Walter de Avesnes, was drove by stress of Weather into the River Tagus. The King ordered the Bishop to relieve and cherish them, and then both perswaded them to give their helping hand towards the gaining of Alcazar do Sal. The King being hindred by Sickness, sent the Bishop General of 20000 Portuguese, who marched by Land whilst the Strangers steered the same course at Sea. At the first attacks, many fell on both fides, but the Belieged fearing so great Power, sent advice of their distress to the Kings of Badajoz, Jaen, Sevil and Cordova, who came to their relief with 15000 Horse and 40000 Foot, besides 10 Gallies well provided. Providence ordered it so, that at the same time, Thirty Sail of French and Flemings arrived at Sctuval; these immediately moved to aid the Christians, who gave the Enemy Battle whilst another part attacked the Town. All the first day the Christians had the worst, but the next renewing their firength

The History of PORTUGAL. strength and courage, they obtained an absolute Vidory with the slaughter of 30000 Infidels and two of the Kings, supposed to be those of Badajoz and Cordova, because the other two soon after appeared before Elvas. A bright Cross carried like the Standard of a Troop of Angels, with White Garments croffed with Red, is faid to have been seen this day in the Air, not only by the Christians, but by the Infidels themselves, several of them consessing it after the Battle. The Victors profecuted the Siege, and carried on a Mine, which being discovered by the Defendants, much Blood was shed under Ground; at length the Town. was taken on St. Luke's Day, and the Governour having feen the strange signs mentioned, in the Sky, became a Christian.

4. The Kings of Sevil and Jacn, with a numerous Time Moors Army, Encamped before the City Elvas, confiding vanquished they should carry it by their Multitude. Qur King at Elvas. disappointed their expectation, giving them Battle, and overthrowing them in open Field, after which he entred Andaluzia victorious, overruning that Province with Fire and Sword. This done, he returned home in Triumph, and his Army laden with Plunder; this Action so daunted the Infidels, that they never after invaded that part of the Country. Nevertheless, Moura and Serpa were soonafter Besieged by the Moors, but they were forced from both places with great loss by the King in Person. Out of the last Engagement, he was drawn almost stifled, being very corpulent and oppressed with the heat of the Weather, and weight of his Armour. Afterwards he overthrew the King of Badajegnear Alcozer, killing 30000 of his Men. He fet out a Fleet to Sea, for the War in the Holy Land. To he short, in all his undertakings, he came off with Honour, as became the Son and Grandson of such a Father and Grand father. Many other his Warlike Exploits are Buried in Oblivion.

5. Of the excellency of his politick Government, there are sufficient Testimonies. Till his time, this Kingdom was Governed according to the private Laws of every Town. He was the first that instituted gene- Laws are ral Laws, in the first Year of his Reign, holding a enacted by Parliament for that purpose at Coimbra. In these Laws him. great regard was had to the Church-Men, the prices of all things necessary for the support of life were settled. fo that the meanest might buy as cheap as the greatest; the Extortions of publick Ministers were retrenched; Plaintiffs if cast, were ordered to pay a Fine; Sentence of Death passed by him, was appointed not to be Executed till 20 days after, to prevent the Effects of Passion. This King used extraordinary severity towards the Church-men, for which being reproved by 1221. Stephen Suarez de Silva Archbishop of Braga, instead of amending, he fet Officers to destroy all the Posses. sions of that See. He persisted so obstinately in this fury, that Honorius the third wrote a Letter to him full of most severe Expressions, calling him Tyrant: In fine,

N 4

His Death, the King died before he was reconciled to the Clergy, or his own Sisters, the Kingdom at that time lying under an interdict. He lived 48 Years, and Reigned 21: His Body lies Buried with the Queen his Wife, in the Royal Monastery of Alcobaca, in a plain Tomb without any Epitaph or Inscription, as were all the first Kings of this Nation. Of Body he was extraordinary groß, and therefore called the Fat; yet his Gigantick Stature carried it off, his Countenance was Comly, his 1223. Forehead High, his Eyes Chearful, and his Hair Yellow, which he always wore long.

His Wife

5. King Alonfo Married Urraca, the Daughter of Alonso VIII. of Castile, called the Noble and Good, a most vertuous and beautiful Princess. His Issue by her was Sancho, who succeeded in the Throne; Alonso Earl of Bolen, in right of his Wife Maud, whence he was called to Govern the Kingdom-by reason of the insufficiency of his Brother, whom he succeeded: Ferdinand called de Serpa, married to Sancha Fernandez, Daughter to Ferdinand Earl of Lara. Lastly, Elenor who was Queen of Dacia. The King had one Bastard Son, called Fohn Alonfo, of whom there is no other memory, but that he lies Buried in the Church of Alcobaca. Tho' it be faid before at the end of the last King's Reign, that then the orders of St. Dominick, St. Francis, the Blessed Trinity and the Carmelites came into Portugal; our Author repeats it again in the Reign of this King, which is the most likely.

CHAP. VI.

The Life and Reign of King Sancho. II. he is deposed by his Brother, flies to Toledo, and there ends his days, all betwixt the Tears 1207 and 1246.

1. CAncho II. of the Name, and Fourth King of Por-Jugal, Eldest Son to King Alonso, was Born on Sancho II. the Eighth of September at Coimbra. He was called ascends the Capelo, because being sickly in his Child-hood, his Throne. Mother confiding to obtain his Health, through the intercession of the Holy Father St. Augustin, caused him to wear that Habit. His Weakness rather than want of Years, must be the cause that he appeared not in any Military Action with his Father, for we have no account of him till he ascended the Throne, which was about the 20th. or 21st. Year of his Age. His 1223. first Action was a Reconciliation with the Clergy, who had suffered much under his Father, but he soon followed his Example. After this agreement with the Church, the Ecclesiastical Censures were taken off, and those who died during the interdict, were now Buried in hallowed Ground. The controversies also between the late King and his Sisters ceased, they now swearing fealty to the King for the places they possessed. His next care was to visit his Kingdom, which he did taking a Progress through it leasurely, doing justice to all Men, and giving prudent Orders in all places. Then laying aside for a while the Civil Affairs, he applied him to the Military, making feveral incursions upon the Moors, whence he returned with Honour. Our King, and Ferdinand of Castile met at Sabugal to adjust certain Differences, which they amicably put an end to; King Ferdinand delivering up the Town of Chaves which had been engaged to him.

2. Still

He entirely Elvas

2. Still the Arabs ranged about the territory of Eldefeats the vas, wasting the Country and destroying the Villages. King Sancho affembling his Forces, soon drove them thence, but no fooner was his back turned then they came again, laid Siege to Elvas, and carried it by Asfault. Our King returning with speed, utterly discomfitted those Barbarians, so that they never again attempted any thing there. Nor did he delift till he had Juremenha, Serpa, and other Castles, which had often been gained, and again fallen into the Enemies 1226. hands. For four Years there was nothing of Action, but in the Year 1230, he made War on the Moors, in the Province of Alentejo. The following year he advanced into Algeros, to recover what his Grand-father had conquered there, and was now again fallen into the hands of the Insidels. Some places he re-took, confe-1222.

crased the Churches, and placed therein Evangelical 1235. Pastors. After this, by his Commanders, the chief whereof was Payo Perez Correa, he took Aljustrel which he gave to the Military Order of Sansiago; then the Towns of Mergola, and Affajar de Penna, which alfor 1239. he bestowed on the same Order. Of late Years the infolencies of Favourites were grown insupportable, they abusing the King and their Kindred and friends them. The Subjects were treated worse than con-Commen quered Moors, their Persons Imprisoned, their Estates complaints Wasted, their Children Murdered, unless redeemed mohen (ubfor Money, and their Wives and Daughters openly jects will Ravished. Nor was the Sanctuary of the Church rebell. any refuge, for even in those Holy Places, all Villanies were committed: he King knew nothing, but what his Favourites told him, and it was their study to keep him in ignorance, and hence proceeded the ruin of this unhappy Prince.

1240. all things adjusted.

3. In the Year 1240. Cacela and Ayamonte were taken by Affault, in which Actions D. Payo Perez Cormade to the rea particularly fignalized himself, wherefore the King Pope and gave those places to the Military Order of Santiago, whereof he was Commendary. During this current of Affairs, the King was highly commended, and received Spiritual Favours from Pope Gregory IX. The Spiritual Graces were for such as died in the War, and for the King himfelf, who lay under Ecclesiastical Censures, for having proceeded unjustly against The History of PORTUGAL.

Peter Bishop of Perso, who carried his complaints to Rome, Belides, he feized the Ecclesiastical revenues on prevence of urgent necessities, and of punishing Clergy Men who kept Women in their Houses. Silvester, Archbishop of Braga, had hereupon made application to the Pope, who therefore wrote to the King, and recommended the charge of reducing him to certain Bilhops. But he prevented them by submitting himself, and so all differences were adjusted. The King considering the great merit of D. Paro Correa, before spoken of, made him General for the conquest of Algarve. He acted therein with the success that was hoped of his conduct taking several strong holds, among which were Estombar and Alvor. Garcia Bodrigues who had travelled that Country as a Merchant. was his principal Guide, having forlaken the pursuit after Riches, to purchase Honour with his Sword. Paderne was also taken, but cost dear, the success remaining a long time dubious. The Enemy having proposed a Cessation of Arms it was granted, because our forces fatigued with so many expeditions required fome time of refreshment. During this Truce, the Commendary Peter Perez with five Gentlemen went out to hunt in the Mountains of the Village of Antas. In their passage by Tavira, a City belonging to the Moors, they were fet upon by a greater number of Infidels. Garcia Rodriguez, the Merchant above mentioned, passing that way, hasted to their succour, and after a brave resistance, they were all killed upon the place. D. Payo Correa could not come time enough to fave their lives, though upon the first advice of the accident he hasted thither. Seeing his Friends could not be faved, he fell upon the Enemy for revenge, and they flying to the City, he entred it together with them, and though he met with a vigorous relistance, made himself Malter of it. King Sancho hearing of the taking of Tavira, gave it to the Knights of Santingo.

4. The conquest of Silves only was wanting to com- Silves a. pleat our General's Glory: His Policy and Celerity gain recobrought it about, the Enemy offering him a favourable vered. opportunity: The Inhabitants of that place went out to affift King Aben Afan at the Siege of Estembar, D. Payo instead of relieving the Besieged, attacked Silves then then forsaken of its Defendants, and easily made himself Master of it. The Moorish King hasting to succour the City, came late for his delign, but in time for D. Payo, who rushing out of the City, pur him to flight, so precipitately, that he was drowned on the Coast, which in memory of him is to this day called the Sea of Abenafan. Thus all Algarve was brought under the power of King Sancho: The Pope about this time having invited all Christian Princes to joyn their 1244. Forces against the Tartars, King Sancho provided a Gallant Army for that Expedition, but all his Preparations were disappointed, for he went not as he had defigned. Roderick Sanchez, Son to King Sancho I. having been long at variance with Giles de Soverofa, a powerful Man in those days, they met with armed Troops near the City Porto, and after a sharp Engagement, the dispute ended with the life of Roderick Sanchez, who was there flain. In this Encounter, Roderick Fafes, a Man of Note, having lost his Horse, asked Gonzalo Rodriguez de Abreu to give him his; he, gave it upon condition the other should give him his Daughter Mencia in Marriage, which according to promise, Fafes afterwards performed.

Actions.

The subjects 5. The King continued to bestow liberally most ripe for re- rich Possessions on the Church. His goodly Actions bellion, the deserved no less love of his Subjects, than any of his the King Predecessors, but it is not always Merit that gains ewas blame-steem among Men. Envy towards his Favourites produced Malice against him, nor was the fault in his less. Government, or in choosing such Ministers, but that all who aspired to it, could not be Favourites. There never is wanting a pretence to subjects disposed to rebell. The King eafing himself on his Favourites, the Portuguese gave out he was uncapable to Govern, and therefore proposed to erect a Lieutenant to manage affairs for him, and made application to the Pope hereupon, having fixed upon the King's Brother Alonso to fill that place and succeed him. It was want of Loyalty in them, and not of capacity in him that produced this Resolution. One objection raised a-They cavil gainst King Sancho by his Enemies, was, That he had married a Wife below his Quality, and was too fond of her. Weak motives to a Rebellion, especially confidering his Queen was the Daughter of D. Lope Diaz

The History of PORTUGAL. de Haro Lord of Biscay and of Urraca, bastard Daughter to Alonso IX. King of Leon, so that the was equal to him either as being both the Off-spring of the same King's Bastards, or as to grandeur, her Father wanting nothing but the usurped Title of Kings to make him as great as he of Portugal. It is true, the Queen favouring those who had been instrumental in advancing her to the Crown, hid fome miscarriages from the King, which gave occasion to the multitude to commit feveral infolencies, and the King not punishing them whilst he could, had not afterwards the power to do it when he would. Some would have it that the Queen had given her Husband a Potion, the more to fecure his love to her, and to divert him wholly from the care of the Government. 6. The tumultuous Cryes of the People not pre-The Clergy vailing, the Clergy took upon them to espouse their joins in the Quarel, and had recourse to Pope Gregory IX. who Rebellion thundered out Ecclesiastical Censures against the with the King on account of his being Married to Queen Laity. Mencia, who was his Kinswoman within the prohibited degree. The King making no account of the Spiritual Weapons, the People mutinied, being headed by Raymund Vicgas Portocarreo, a Man of quality, and breaking into the Palace at Coimbra, The Rebels took away the Queen and put her into the Castle feize the of Ourem. This exasperated the King to that height, Queen. that gathering what force he could, he endeavoured to recover her, but all in vain, for the Rebels conveyed her into Caftele. Now it plainly appeared, The King that King Sancho was rather Unfortunate, than unfit betrayed by to Govern, for even the Ambassadors he employed all his Miabroad, betrayed him. He sent John Egas Archbi-nisters. shop of Braga, and Peter and Tiburicus Bishops of Porto and Coimbra to Rome, and they forgetting they were fent by their Prince, became Sollicitors for the Rebels, who held correspondence there. Hereupon a Council was held at Lions in France, affembled by Pope Innocent IV. and King Sanche having fent thither his Ambassadors Ruy Gomez de Briteiros, Gomez Vicgas, Peter Alonso, a Franciscan and Dominick de Braa Dominican, they joyned with the metinous Prelates.

Alonfo Vicar of th: Kingdom by the Rebels.

Prelates, and thereupon Count Alonso, Brother to Brother to King Sancho, then Married in France to Maud Coun-King San- tels of Bolen, was at Paris Sworn Vicar of the Kingcho, made dom, and as such, confirmed by the Pope, yet to that King Sambo should still retain the Title and Preheminence of King, and his Sons if he had any; should inherit. This new Substitute brought more harm than good to the Kingdom, for his followers treated him as a King, and he assumed that respect which did not belong to him, whilst others acknowledged the true King, so that this difference, came to be decided by the Sword.

into Castile.

7. The Dominicans and Franciscans were appointed to put in Execution this unjust decree, and one King San- Giles a Dominican durst notify it to the King. He cho flies seeing himself deprived of his Wife and Government. and the People in Rebellion fled to Toledo, then the Court of Ferdinand the Holy King of Castile. By the way, King Sancho repoling himself at Moreira certain Gentlemen came to him, offering to stand by him, and support his cause, provided he would put away his Favourite. The King disapproving of this conditional Loyalty, no better then open Rebellion, continued his Journey. At Toledo he spent the remainder of his life in works of Grandeur and Piety. He expended a great Treasure in Alms, and Building the Royal Chappel in the Cathedral: having done extraordinary Pennance for his Sins, and given His Death, fingular marks of great Piety, he departed this life the Thirty Ninth Year of his Age, and the Thirteenth of his Reign, reckoning in those that his Brother Governed for him. He is said to have had a special Devotion to S. Lazarus, and also that he appeared twice to him in his life-time, and was prefent at his Death. In the beginning of his Reign, he peopled the City Idanha, which had been destroyed by his Grand-father King Sancho when he took it from the Moors. He maintained the City Aleazer against the Infidels who Belieged it, who after much loss sustained, begged a Truce. He not only preserved his Kingdom, but recovered many places that had been loft, and may be accounted amongst the best of our Princes. 8. In

8. In this King ended the direct line of the His Person Kings of Portugal, he being the Fourth King, and described. Second of the Name. His Countenance was Beautiful, his Hair fair and long, his Forehead high, his Eyes green and cheerful, his Nose large, and his Complexion inclined to pale. In his Antient Pictures, he is represented in Scarlet Robes, a Crown on his Head, a Book in one Hand, and in the other, a Scepter with a Pigeon on the top of it, as the commonalty would have it, or else it might be a Stork as many Antient Kings used, denoting by the care that Bird has of its young ones, the love of a Prince towards his Subjects. He built from the ground the Monasteries of St. Dominick, in the Cities of Lisben and Porto. Some say his Queen accompanied him at Toledo, and others affirm, the was never heard of more after being taken from him. He had no IC fue, and consequently his Brother succeeded him.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

The Life and Reign of Alonso the third of the Name, and Fifth King of Portugal; his Actions and Death, from the Tear 1210. till 1279.

A'onfo III. his B rth and Crown.

1210.

1245.

1. Alonso the Third of the Name, and Fifth J. King, was Brother to King Sancho, whose lot it was to have a Crown without the power of the Actions till Government, and a Wife without Issue. He was Born in the City of Coimbra, on the 5th. of May, was the second Son of King Alonso II. and Married Maud Countess of Bolen in France, then Widdow of Phillip the curled Son of Philip Augustus King of France, and Grand-son to the Duke of Maravia, whose Daughter Queen Mary was. His thoughts were employed upon the Holy War, when he was called to the Crown of Portugal. The Kingdom being in confusion, the Nobles made suite to Pope Innocent the III. that Alonso might ascend the Throne instead of his Brother Sancho. The Pope not to deprive the King of his right, and being informed he was not of Ability to Govern, consented that Alonso should have the Authority of Regent, but Sanche should still have the regal stile and preheminence, and his Children if he had any should inherit. At Paris, Alonso took Solemn Oath as Regent, which was to this Effect: That he would preserve the Priviledges of the Clergy, Nobility and Commonalty; That he would constitute upright Judges, without Favour or Affection; That such as had committed Crimes against Priests, should be punished; That their Estates should be restored; That all Buildings erected to the prejudice of Prelates should be Demolished, and nothing for the suture should be taken from them. This was the promise made, and confequently such were the miscarriages then in the Government, so that the King suffered for some miscarriages in his Ministers.

2. Alonso having taken upon him the Title of Re-Alonso gent, set out from Paris, and returned to his Coun-received as try, where he was received by most places; yet Regent. feveral having more regard to their Loyalty, than the present Danger, held out long after, and some till King Sancho died at Toledo. Alonso possessed of the Kingdom, like an ungrateful Man, put away He puts as his Wife Maud, the Countess, who Married him way his when he had nothing, and took in her place Bea-Wife, and trix, Bastard Daughter to King Alonso the Tenth Marries of Castile. Some Authors say, the Countess was another. contrary to all Human and Divine Laws put away on account of Barrenness, but that is a mistake, for it will appear she had Children. Pope Alexander the Fourth thundered out Censures as gainst this second Marriage as unlawful, but all to no purpose, the King continuing obstinate till the Death of Maud, put an end to the dispute. Alonso with the ambition of rule, pressed all Governours to deliver up their Forts into his hands, and yet they that did so, were accounted no better than Traitors, and fuch as held out against him, were afterwards most esteemed even by him. - Obidos was the first Town Besieged by Alonso, but what the event was, is not known. Ferdinand Rodriguez Pacheco, valiantly defended Cerolico de los Bebados, or Bebado, and being reduced to great want one Morning, a Bird of Pray dropped a large Trout before him taken out of the River Mondego. The Governour sent it as a present to Alonso, who judging thereby there was plenty in the Town. raised the Siege and departed. Thus the Besieged were left at liberty to look abroad for Sustenance, so that the Trout may be said to have fed them

3. The Regent removed to Coimbra, where he A notable met with no better success, being opposed by the example of invincible Loyalty of D. Martin de Freitas. Both Loyalty. Parties resolved not to give way to one another. The Siege lasted long, and the Defendants wavering, their noble Governour performed more than Man to retain them in their Duty, insomuch that one day he brought out to the Parade his Daugh-

2. Alonfo

The History of PORTUGAL.

ter, telling the Soldiers, That if want of Women obliged them to think of a Surrender, they might make use of that one. This act wholly confirmed the minds of the Garrison to him, insomuch, that they resolved to live and die with him. Such was the posture of affairs when News was brought of the Death of King Sancho at Toledo. The great Freitas demanded a Truce, whilst he went to Toledo, to be affured of the Truth. There he caused the King's Grave to be opened, and seeing him Dead, delivered to him the Keys of the City he had entrusted him with, and asking leave to deliver them to his Brother, took them again: Being come to Coimlra, he opened the Gates to King Alonfa, who admiring fo unparallelled a Gallantry, restored to him the Command, without demanding Ho. mage of him for it, which favour he extended to his Heirs; but he knowing how hard it was to make a return suitable to such a favour, refused to accept of it, and layed his Curse even to the fourth Generation, upon fuch as should admit of it. 4. Alonfo now become absolute King by the Death of his Brother, resolved to imitate his Predeceffors, or if it might be to out-doe them, by adding to his Dominions the Kingdom of Algarve, and not fuffering it to be lost again as had happened to them. D. Payo Correa with the Forces under his Command, had already taken several places in that Kingdom, the King joyned him, and both together layed Siege to the Town of Faro. The King observing the place might be relieved by Sea, placed some Vessels at the Mouth of the River to guard the Paffage, and then began to batter the place on all fides. The Besieged perceiving no hopes to hold out, began privately to treat of a Surrender with the King; he taking only Ten Gentlemen that were privy to the Treaty, ventured into the Town fo fecretly, that none of his Army knew it. D. Payo Correa milling the King, and hearing no account of him, furioutly affaulted the place, the Portuguese fighting like Lions instead of being discouraged at the absence of their Sovereign. Many were killed, and more had perished, but that the King appeared on the Walls, holding out the Keys of the Town. Thus this place was reduced, submitting to pay the same tribute it had before payed to the Miramamolin. The Government of it was given to Stephen Perez de Tavares. D. Payo Correa was fent before to invest the Town of Albufiera, and had fignalized his Valour when the King came to fecond him. Both together finished the Conquest of the place, which was given to D. Payo for his good Service. I guess the motive of the King's staying behind, was the Beauty of the Governour of Faro's Daughter, with whom he fell in Love when he received the Keys of the Town; for by this Lady he had D. Mirtin Alonso Chichorro, from whom is Descended the Family of Soufa of that Name. Fortune now bent upon favouring our King, caused other places to submit to him, before he could appear before them. Loule surrendred, but not without some 1250? Bloodshed; Algezar, Perches, and other places were all reduced. The King before his departure placed trusty Governours in all the Towns with fufficient Garrisons, so as to secure that new conquered Kingdom, which never after offered to revolt from him.

The History of PORTUGAL.

King Alonso having nothing now to employ his Arms within his own limits, entred Andaluzia and took the Towns of Arouche and Araens. This 1251. Action moved King Alonso, the Wife of Castile and Leon, to invade the Kingdom of Algarve which he conquered. After much contention betwixt the 1252. Crowns of Castile and Portugal, Pope Innocent the Differences Fourth composed all Differences, so that the King by TROINT of Castile was to hold Algarve during his Life, and Castile and he of Portugal to marry his Baftard Daughter. Both Portuga', Kings were so willing to embrace this accommodation, that they never confidered the Bride was not in Pope. Twelve Years of Age, and the Bridegroom above Forty, nor that the Countess of Bolen was still alive. It is true, Pope Innocent approved of this Match, and yet afterwards Pope Alexander would not allow of it. All Military Employment now ceasing, the King applied himself to the Civil Affairs, and held a Parliament at Leiria. Next he on condition the Portuguese, should during his life, 1255. took a Progress through the Kingdom, repairing be obliged to assist him with Fifty Lances when-1258. of Estremoz, Odemira, Monforte, Valencia del Minho, 1259.

12.19. quers Algarve.

then called Contrasta, and Viana de Lima. His whole study was bent upon the good of the Govern. ment, and knowing how necessary Trade is to support it, ordered many Fairs, and cleared the Roads of Robbers to fecure Commerce.

The King's lanful Wife.

6. In the midst of these Employments came to him cruelty to two Gentlemen to Freilas, where he then was, sent wards his by Maud the Countess his first and lawfull Wife, to advertise him, that she perceiving he did not fend for her to his Kingdom, and hearing he was Married again, was come of her felf to find him out, and lay then at Cascais. The King who had for the fake of his new Wife, regarded neither Divine nor Human Laws, lent her such an Answer, that she was forced to return to Bolen, leaving a Letter for him, wherein she taxed himwith Ingratitude and False-hood, threatning him with the cenfures of the Church, the Power of Christian Princes. and the revenging hand of God. Authors add, that she brought with her two Children she had by him, whom in revenge she left exposed upon the Rocks, which are ever fince called Cachopos, that word in Portuguese signifying Boys. That the Countess had Children by him-is proved by the authority of Antient Authors, and there is no proof, but bare furmifes to the contrary; besides, that a Tomb has been seen with an Inscription, denoting it contained a Son of theirs that followed him into Portugal, and was entirely beloved by him. King Alonso of Castile, Father-in-law to our King, having composed the difference about Algarve, marched into Andaluzia, his Son-in-law affifting him both by Sea and Land. In return for this kindness, the Castillian resigned up to him all his Title to Algarve, and delivered the Towns to D. John de Aboin, and his Son D. Peter Anes de Portel, upThe History of PORTUGAL.

the Forts, Towns and Churches that had been rul foever he should demand them. This obligation was ined during the War. He spared neither cost nor also taken off when his Grandson Prince Denis belabour in those publick Works; he built from the ing Seven Years of Age visited him at Sevil, and Ground the Monastery of Santarem, the Towns desired to be knighted by him. Before this time 1263. to prevent Broils and Animolities, the bounds of the Kingdoms of Leon and Portugal were marked made

7. About this time hapned an unparallelled won- A strange der, a Woman perceiving the was not beloved by action of s her Husband, acquainted a Jewish Woman there-jealou: Wow with, desiring her affiltance. The Jew per-man.

fwaded her, that when the received the Bleffed Sacrament, the should keep the Host and bring it to her, wherewith the would work her relief. She tied the Host in the end of her Head-cloaths, and going home, the Blood trickled down, and the not observing it, was told of it by those that met her. Being come home, she locked the Bloody Hood with the Host in a Closet. In the dead of the Night, her Husband awaking, faw a great light upon the Chest, and calling upon his Wife, asked whether she saw it not? She then declared the truth to him, and he rifing, ran to the Parish Church, and to the Dominicans. The Friers still preserve the White Hood or Vaile bloody in a Glass Case; the Parish keeps the Host and Blood gathered on a Ball of Wax. Some Years after the Prior of that Church, which is Dedicated to St. Stephen, going to show that Relick to the People. found it shut up in a Cristalline Pyramidal Cafe. with a hole so small, that neither the Hold nor Ball could be put in unless it were miraculoufly. The Ball is still to be seen round with drops of Blood on it, the Holt is bent and Bloody. Many Persons of Credit, have affirmed. That they have there seen our Saviour in several Poltures of his Passion. Another Miracle is Recorded of a Christian, who was flave to a Moor, and daily recommended himself to St. Dominick of Sovereira. His Master every Night loaded him with Irons, and laid him in a Cheft upon which he made his own Bed. One Night this Chest with the slave in it, and the Master upon it, was brought to the Door of the Chappel of that Saint in the Town of Penamacor. This Miracle to wrought upon the Moor, that he imbraced the Faith, and the Slave and he lived there as Hermits all the refidue of their lives. The Chest and Chains are still kept in that little Church.

The History of PORTUGAL.

Clergy.

8. No sooner was the King seated on the Throne, sumes his but he made it appear, that what he had before bountifully bestowed, was only to secure himself, and not to reward those that promoted him. He took from the Military Orders what he had before given them; neither did he make account of what he swore at Paris in order to be Regent for his

1268. Brother; for he fo treated the Clergy, that feveral of them had recourse to Rome for Redress, of which were the Bishops of Braga, Coimbra, Guarda, Porto and Viseo. Pope Clement the Fourth, and after him

Gregory the Tenth, reproved his oppressing the Clergy, and forbidding the Jews and Moors under severe Penalties not to turn Christians. The King at first shunned the Pope's Commissioners, but when he could no longer do fo, appointed to hear them before the Cortes or Parliament summoned to meet at Santarem, where he shewed some disposition to obey them, though at the same time he defigned nothing less. The Pope offended at 1274. his proceedings, issued out Bulls, containing the highest Censures, and in case the King was not reclaimed within three Months, absolving his Subjects from their Allegiance. The King continued obstinate, and the Nuncio went away leaving him

1175. Excommunicated, and the Kingdom under an interdict. The Popedied, and the King no way relen-

1276. ted. Pope John the 20th. or 21st. Born at Lisbon, was promoted to St. Peter's Chair. He fent a Spaniard his Nuncio to perswade the King by fair means to comply. The Nuncio accompanied by Dominican and Franciscan Fryars, of which latter order he was, attended the King, and found 1277. him as obdurate as ever. Sickness made the King begin to relent, and Death surmounted all difficul-

The History of PORTUGAL. ti s. At his Death the King ordered his Son to perform all lie had refused to do.

9. During this King's Reign, certain devout Women went from Evora to Rome, to obtain of the Pope the confirmation of a Monastery of Bernardin Nuns in that City. There wanted not Civil A battle Broils among the Subjects; for Peter Estevas de Ta-bitwixt vares, and Ferdinand Alonso de Cambra, fought a Bat-private tle in the Plain of Gouvea, in which much Blood Men and was shed and many Persons of note killed; the latter obtained the Victory. The Holy Laurence Mendez, a Dominican of the Province betwixt the Rivers Duero and Minho, walking in a Field, an Angel appeared to him, and gave him a small Box, which he faid, contained many Relicks brought from a City then fallen into the hands of Infidels. Which Relicks are still preserved in the Monastery of Guimaraens, where the said Laurence placed them. 10. King Alonso was of such extraordinary King A-Stature, that all Men admired when King Sebasti- lonso dean caused his Tomb to be opened. His Counte-Scribed. nance was Majestick, his Eyes little, but Sparkling, his Hair black, his Complexion fair. He died at Lisbon on the 20th. of March 1279. being 64. Years of Age, and having Reigned and Governed 34. His Death. Ten Years after his Death, King Denis his Son translated him to the Monastery of Alcobaza, near to his Father, and opposite to his second Wife Queen Beatrix, whose Tomb being afterwards opened, she appeared as Beautiful as if she had been a live. His Islue, by the first Wife most Authors a- His Islue.

gree he had two Sons, as they do in calling the fecond Robert, who they fay, succeeded his Mother in the Country of Bolozne. About the Elder they vary, some calling him Ferdinand, others Peter, and lastly, others fay, he is the same with Alonso Denis, counted among the illegitimate.

By his fecond Wife, he had Denis, who succeeded in the Throne. Secondly, D. Alonso Lord of Portalegre, who lies buried in the Monastery of St. Dominick at Lisbon. Thirdly, Sancha; Fourthly, Mary; Fifthly, Vincent who died young, Sixthly, Ferdinand

CHAP. VIII.

The Life and Reign of Denis the first of that Name, and fixth King of Portugal, his Actions and Death, from the Year 1261. till 1325.

I. King Denis, Eldest Son to Alonso III. and Queen King Da-Beatrix, was born at Lisbon on the 9th. of Octo- nis his ber, 1261, and was so called from the Saint whose Day Birth and that was. From his Infancy he was educated in all those Succession Vertues and Accomplishments that make an Excellent to the Prince. In Truth, Justice, and Liberality, he exceeded Crown. most of them that had been before him. His Father dying when he was but Eighteen Years of Age, though were Thirteen. He was the first that stiled himself the honoured his Mother in all other Respects, he would Men fa- King of Portugal and Algarve. Men famous for San- allow her no share in the Government. She resenting mous in his city in his time were St. Gonzalo, St. Laurence Men- this as an Affront, went away into Castile, pretending dez, and St. Giles, all three Dominicans, at least the her Journey was only to pay a Visit to her Father. two latter without dispute. Also St. Walter of the That King, desiring to please her, took a Journey to Order of S. Francis; Pope John the 21st. famous Badajoz, and sent to desire King Denis to come as far for his Learning and Dignity, was Born at Lisbon. as Elvas. Thither the Princes Peter, Sancho, Jayne, and his Brother Emanuel repaired to him, by whom the chief whereof was D. Payo Perez Correa, Master of King of Castile desired they might meet at Badajoz. King Denis having entertained them magnificently for he space of three Days, sent them back, saying, He would soon be after them, but suddenly returned to Lisbon, thinking it a better Expedient not to meet his Grandfither, than to deny his Request. The Queen thus lisappointed, went away with her Father to Sevil, where he continued, being convinced her Son would admit no Partner in the Throne.

2. The King being Twenty Years of Age, fent his He Marries Embassadors to Peter III. King of Aragon, to ask his Elizabeth, Daughter Elizabeth, then but Eleven Years old, in Mar- the Daughlage. His Request was easily granted, and the Bride ter of Ring onducted to Braganza, where the was received by Alonfo Peter of he King's Brother, who conveyed her to Trancofo, Aragon. where the best King of Portugal, and one of the best Queens in the World were marryed. His next Care was, o compleat what his Father had begun, which was to lear the Kingdom of Robbers and Out-laws, and to Protect

209

The History of PORTUGAL. who died also in his Infancy, all these Buried at and baxa; Seventhly, Blanch Abbess of Lorvan first, and then of Huelgas at Burgos; Eighthly, Constance Buried at Alcobaga; Illegimate he had Ferdinand, a Knight Tem. plar; Giles Alonfo, Alonfo Denis, Martin Alonfo got. ten on the Governour of Faro's Daughter, as was faid before; Ellenor Alonso, Urraca Alonso, Elenor for whom her Father built the Monastery of St. Clare at Santarem, where she was famous for Sanctity, and Roderick Alonso who died Young.

time.

11. The Arms of the Kingdom of Algarve, given by this King, were Sanguine Semee of Castles Or. Over these he placed the Arms of Portugal, so that the Castles of the former made an Orbe to the latter. He also made an alteration in the number of Bezants, in each Escutcheon of the Portuguese Arms, leaving but Eleven in each, whereas before there Many Men were famous for Military Exploits, the the Military Order of Santiago.

CHAP.

Protect the meaner fort against the Insolencies of Great Men, and particularly the Country People, whom he called the Sinews of the Commonwealth. For this Reason, and because he built many Castles, he was called the Husbandman and Father of his Country. Having at his Entrance into the Government passed many extravagant Grants, when he came to the Age of 22, he recalled them all. He had some Difference with his Brother Alonso, who refused to make any Acknowledg-Has Diffe- ment for the Towns left him by his Father, and had rences with some Pretensions to the Crown, pleading that Denis Lis Brocher was Born before the Death of the Counters of Bologne, and consequently must be Illegitimate, whereas he was Born after her Death, when the Pope had ratified the Match. They both took Arms, and Alonso was besieged by his Brother in Portalegre, yet at last they agreed. The chief Articles were, That Alonso should be allowed 30000 Crowns a Year out of the King's Revenue, and instead of the Towns he possessed, should have Sintra and Ourem, for that the others were more dangerous to the King, as lying on the Borders of Castile. Thus ended those Civil Broils.

War bestile and

3. A War broke out with King Sancho the Third of wint Ca Cultile, called the Fierce, for that he performed not the Covenants about the Marriages of the Princes, for Secu-Portugal. rity whereof he had put ino Portuguese Hands the Cities of Budajoz and Truxillo, as also the Towns of Moura, Serpa, Caceres, Allariz, and Aguiar de Neiva. All these Places he again suddenly surprized, and made several inroads into Algarve, and into Portugal, by the way of Leon, destroying all the Country before him. King Denis being then wholly unprovided for War, fent Emballadors to adjust Affairs, but to no effect. Ising Denis now moved to Wrath, challenged King Sancho, and at the same time caused his Forces to do much harm in the Enemy's Country. Sancho defigned to answer the Challenge, but was prevented by Death, at which time he ordered all that had been before stipulated, should be performed. Ferdinand the Fourth, his Successor, not answering what was expected from him, King Denis fent his.Embassadors to demand the Restitution of the Towns taken by his Predecessor, and in case of Refusal, ro fix the Challenge upon him. Restitution being denied, the Challenge was accordingly given, and the Embassadors withdrew. This done, King Denis with a Puissant Army marched from the City Guarda, and entred Castile, committing all manner of Hostilines. Prince Henry, who was Governour to the young King Ferdinand, put a stop to our King's further i'rogress, making him advantageous Proposals, and referring the Conclusion to Cuidad Rodrigo, where the two Kings met with the Queen-Mother of Castile, and concluded all Articles; the Towns demanded by the Portuguese being put into the Hands of Ferdinard Longominho, as a Pledge for performing all other parts. But this Compliance on the part of Castile being the Product of Fear, and not of any Friendly Intention, nothing of what had been promised, was performed.

The History of PORTUGAL.

4. King Denis draws together his Forces again, and Denis enfuriously enters Castile, and with him Prince John, who ters Castile stiled himself King of Leon, as Son to King Alonso the the second Tenth, and John Nunnez de Lara, who was in Rebellion against his Prince. Our Army being in the Province of Beira, near the Frontiers of Castile, there came to the King, Margaret, Daughter to the Earl of Narbonne, Wife to Prince Peter, the Son of King Alonso, and with her, her Son Sancho de Ledesma, who offered to serve our King, being disgusted with his own. Yet, tho he was much honoured, and received great Bounties from King Denis, he soon returned to his own Master, and ferved against him of whom he had received such Favours. King Ferdinand understanding that King Denis had invaded his Dominions, sent his Fleet from Sevil, under the Command of that Sancho we last spoke of, to Lisbon, where he surprized some Portuguese Vessels. Our Admiral having gathered what Force he could, purfued and overtook the Fleet of Castile without the Bar. There was fought a most obstinate Battle, till the The Flort Castillians were worsted, and their Commander, D. Sancho, of Castile brought back Prisoner. In the mean while K. Denis, with worsted by out Opposition, ranged about the Territories of Cuidad the Portu-Rodrigo and Ledesma, where he took the Cattle of Torres, gueles putting all the Defendants to the Sword. He palled by Simancas, where King Ferdinand was, and laid Siege to Possaldes, where neither Sex nor Age was spared, nor was any Reverence paid to the Churches, where the Altars were stained with Blood, nor did their Sacrilegious Hands abitain from Plundering those Holy Places.

The History of PORTUGAL

The Castilians were not idle, for many great Men laid 1296. waste our Borders. Alonso Perez de Guzman, who Commanded on the Frontiers about Guadiana, with a good Body of Andaluzians, shed much of our Blood. and carried away great Spoils. The Master of Avis. met him with some Portuguese Forces, but was overthrown, and almost One Thousand Prisoners carried away, who were ranfomed at an easie rate, not to retard the course of their Victory. He also recovered the Castle of Torres, where he spared no Portuguese, and thus Fire and Sword raged in all Parts. King Denis understanding hereof, committed the greater Cruelties in the Villages, about Salamanca, where he then was. The Inhabitants fled to the Mountains, and to the Churches. but neither Churches nor Mountains could protect them, rage bore down all Divine, as well as humane Considerations.

Peace coneluded betwist the Kings of Portugal.

5. The Moorish King of Granada laying hold of this advantage, broke into Andaluzia, took Fifteen Castles, and retired with a mighty Booty. Mary the Queen-Mother, and Prince Henry, Governours to King Ferdi-Cassileand nand, now sensible of their Danger, offered King Denis all manner of Satisfaction, as to the Points before promised, which were, That King Ferdinand should marry his Daughter Constance, and Prince Alonso, Beatrix Sister to Ferdinand, and for performance they gave him tufficient Hostages. King Denis in his return, to be in tome fort revenged on D. Sancho de Ledesma, took from him all the Towns he possessed in the Province of Riba de Coa. The King of Castile sent Alonso Perez de Guzman to the Portuguese, to sollicite that they might meet at Alcanizes, where this Discord was to have an end. There both Kings accordingly met honourably attended. A Peace was Concluded for Forty Years, and it was Stipulated, that wholoever did infringe it, should be delivered up to the Party aggreived. The Towns of Olivenza, Campo-Mayor, and S. Felices, were delivered up to the Portuguese in lieu of Aroche and Aracena. That King Denis should still hold all the Towns of the Province of Riba de Coa, and for the Title the King of Castile might claim to them, he refigned up to him Valencia, Ferreyra, Esparragal, Ayamonte, and other Places in Levil, and Gallicia.

The History of PORTUGAL.

6. Articles being figned, King Ferdinand presently The Peace Married the Portuguese Princess Constance, and delivered confirmed his Sister Beatrix to her Father-in-Law, as Wife to with mutu-Prince Alonso, who expected the event of this inter-al Allianview at Trancoso. The Portuguese Princess being left set. in Castile, King Denis, with the Castilian, returned to Coimbra, then the Seat of the Portuguese's Court. Till the Princels came to Age. for Marriage, the King affigned her a competent Revenue, and appointed Martin, Archbishop of Braga, and Count Martin de Sousa, his Standard bearer, her Governours. The Day she was delivered to the Prince, the King added to what he had before given her, the Towns of Viana, Terena, Ourem, and Armamar. King Ferdinand of Castile, made this Accomodation in good time, being then preffed by the neighbouring Princes, in favour of D. A. lonso de la Cerda, Grand-son to King Alonso, X. from whom Sancho, Father to Ferdinand, and Uncle to the faid Alonso, had Usurped the Crown, so that Alonso de la Cerda was the rightful Prince, and Ferdinand then in possession, an Usurper. The dispossessied Princegave the Kingdom of Leon, to his Unkle John, and that of Murcia, to Jame or James, King of Augon, upon Condition they should assist him to recover his right. Both those Princes endeavoured to possess themselves of what was allotted them, before the Injured Prince could be Re-inthroned. King Ferdinand, overwhelmed with these Enemies, craved Aid of our King Denis, and that they might meet at Fuente Guinaldo, and Badajoz. There having declared his wants, our King prefented him with a great Summ of Money, a Cap made of an Emerald of inestimable Value, and sent him such supplies of Men, as gained him a Superiority over his Enemies.

7. Pope Benedict XI. sent his Legate to compose these King De-Differences, and with the general Confent of all Par- nis cholen ties concerned; our King Denis was appointed Media- Mediator tor between them. It was agreed that all Parties should betweet the stand by his Determination, to which purpote a folemn of Castile, Instrument was figned, and Cautionary. Towns given and the on all fides.* King Denis fet forward towards the Plain, lawful where the Conference was to be held, with an Honour-Heir, then able Retinue, to the number of One thousand Persons. Bamphen, and to avoid all disorders that might happen in Towns,

Knights

An unjust Sentence

given by

King Denis, against the rightfal Heir.

of the

Knights

lay all the way in Tents, in the open Field. King Fer. dinand met him at Cuellar, they travelled together to Soria, and there parted; our King proceeding to Tor. rellas, in the Kingdom of Aragon, where Jampe or James. King of Aragon, and Blanch his Queen received him. Here King Denis entertained them with fuch Magnificence, as had scarce been seen in Spain. The Arbitrators and Parties, being come to Taracona, the Kingdom of Murcia, was by them divided betwixt the Kings of Castile, and Aragon, and several Towns were assigned to D. Alonso de la Cerda, and he ordered to forbear Itiling himself King of Castile. "This Sentence of King " Denis, our Author admires for its equity, as if it " could be any justice to deprive the rightful Prince of "Three Kingdoms, and give him the Revenue of a "few Towns in lieu of them, and those Towns to be " held of that ame Usurper who kept him out of his "right. Judgment being given, they went away to Agreda, where King Ferdinand was with his Mother. There Three Kings dined at one Table, and Three Queens at another, which were those of Castile, Aragon, and Portugal. Hence King Denis went to Valladolid, to fee his Daughter, Queen Constance, and so returned to his Kingdom.

8. King Ferdinand now at Peace with the Christians, refolved to employ his Arms against the Moors of Granada; To this effect he craved Succours of King Denis, who fent him Seven hundred Horse, Commanded by D. Martin Gil de Sousa, his Standard-bearer, and lent him Seventeen thousand Marks of Silver, for which Badajoz, Alconchel, and Burguillos, were given in pawn This expedition was well begun by the taking of Gibraltar, but its Progress was stopped; First, by want of Provisions, and next, by the Death of King Ferdinand, Phillip the Fair King of France, placed Clement V. (be-1309, fore Archbishop of Bourdeaux) in St. Peters Chair, upon Condition he should remove the Papal Seat to Lions, that he should publickly burn the bones of his Predecessor Boniface VIII. give him the rents of the The cruel Church Revenues., for Five Years, and suppress the Suppression Order of the Knights Templars, that he might feize their Revenues. This Pope not willing to perform that Templars. part touching the burning of his Predecessor, thought to make the King amends, by falling the heavier on the

The History of PORTUGAL. Knights Templars. To this purpose, at the infligation

of the King, those Knights were charged with most heinous Crimes, and their great Master with Sixty Knights were publickly burnt at Paris, to the astonishment of all the World. The Pope had fent Orders to all Parts, that these Knights should every where be apprehended on the same Day, but the Kings of Castile, Aragon, and Portugal obeyed not, esteeming the merits of that Noble Order, above the unjust Commands of a Byassed Pope. Yet after much Debate, the Order was wholly suppressed, their greatest Crime being their Riches, which nevertheless, in Spain were for the most part bestowed on the Knights Hospitallers of St. John, now called the Knights of Malta. But King Denis, begged of the Pope that the Revenues of the Knights Templars in Portugal, might be given to a new Order of Knighthood, he then instituted to serve against the bordering Moors. His fuit being granted, this Year 1310. was erected the Order of Knights of our Saviour lesus Christ, the King besides the possessions of the Templars, bestowing on it several Towns and Churches, that were in his gift. This from time to time, has been so increased that at present, the Order enjoys a Revenue of about 500000 Duccats, divided into 500 Commendaries, to Encourage Gentlemen with this reward, to the Conquest of Africk At present, those thoughts are quite laid aside, and those Revenues are almost become Hereditary: Many of the Knights Templars being found innocent were admitted to this New Order; and a Maiter of it created. At first these Knights were obliged not to Marry, but that yow was abolished in the time of King Eminuel, by Pope Alexander VI.

9. King Denis, in his latter Days, had much Conten- King Detion with his Son Prince Alonfo. This Prince took for his at 1/2. the occasion of his Difgust, the great Favour that Duke reance with Alonfo Sanchez, and Count John Alonfo, the King's Ba- his son. stard Sons were in with him. Having drawn Peter, another Bastard Brother to his Party, the Prince prefurned to ask of the King, to refign to him the Power of the Administration of Justice. Being justly denied so unreasonable a Demand, he drew over his Motherin-Law, Queen Mary, to affilt him towards obtaining his defires by Force, to which purpose she asked leave of his Father for him, to come to her into Caffile, and being refused, the Prince went to her, to Cuidad Radrigo, against his Fathers Consent. Being returned to Portugal, the Queen sent to demand of the King what he had before refused to his Son; and now again denied to her. This Project failing, the Prince contrived by his Servants, an Information to be drawn, as if left by a Man that died at Magaula: containing a Defign of the Elder Baftard, the King's chiefest Favourite. to Poyson the Prince. A Copy of the false Information he sent to the King, who having examined the matter, found it was a piece of Forgery. Being again difappointed, he perswaded some of his Followers to Murder Alonso Sanchez, saying his Father negotiated with the Pope, to exclude him the lawful Heir, and leave the Crown to a Bastard; but he in this did not succeed neither. All these practices failing, the Prince betook himself to open Hostility, robbing the King's Loyal Subjects, ravishing Women, sacrilegiously ransacking Monasteries, killing Giraldus, Bishop of Evora, and committing many other Enormities, without the reach of Justice, as acted under the Heir of the Crown.

The History of PORTUGAL.

217

The Prince proceeds in his Disobedience-

10. The King advertised Pope John XX. of his Son's Disobedience, and he dispatched his Bulls, admonishing him to defift from force, and submit to his Father; but all to no effect. For he gathering a number of Criminals, and Out-laws, pretended to go in Pilgrimage to the Church of St. Vincent without Lisbon, defigning to furprize that City. The King having timely Advice of it, hasted thicher to prevent him, and the Queen after him to Mediate betwixt the Father and the Son. The Prince thus prevented, turned away towards Sintra, and his Father after him. Both Bodies stood as if they designed to give Battle, but on a sudden the Son marched off; and tho' the King might have overtaken him, he perfued not. Being come to Coimbra, the Prince fent away his Princess to Alcanizes in Castile, and then gave out that his Father intended to kill him. After disabusing the World of the falsehood of that Report, his Father declared all fuch as should adhere to the Son, Traitors; and knowing that the Inhabitants of Lyria had entertained him, he hasted thither, where Nine of the chief, as Rebels, had their Hands and Feet cut off, and were afterwards burnt. The Prince went away to Santarem, and flying thence before his Angry Father, possessed possessed himself of the Castle of Coimbra, of Monte-Mayor the Old, of Feira, Gaga, and Porto, whither came to him his Bastard-Brother Peter, out of Castile. Guimaraens was defended against him, by Mem Rodriguez de Vasconcelos. In the mean while the King laid Siege to Coimbra, which obliged the Prince to quit Guimaraens, and return to relieve that City. Here were to be seen all the usual dire effects of Civil Wars. The Holy Queen Elizabeth ceased not to pass betwixt the Two Armies, mediating for a Reconciliation, which at last she compassed, the King giving to the Prince, the Cities of Porto, and Coimbra, and the Old Town of Monte-Mayor, with some additional Revenue. Pardon was given on both fides, and the Prince took an Oath to be Obedient to his Father for the future. But notwithstanding this resonciliation, the Prince pressed his Father to call the Cortes, or Parliament, and yet would not be present at it, but went from Santarem, towards Lisbon, with armed Troops. The King came out in the like manner, commanding him to return, which he refusing, the Trumpets sounded, and both Parties Engaged. Yet the Queen rushing through all dangers came to her Son, and upbraiding him with breach of Faith, and Obstinacy, at length the Battle was parted, and the Father and Son once more were Reconciled. That this agreement might be the more lasting, D. Alonso Sancheze, the King's Bastard-Son, was fent out of the Kingdom, and went to the Town of Albuquerque, which he possessed in Castile, by that means becoming a Subject to that Crown.

11. King Denis fortified many Towns and Cities, en- King Decompassing them with beautiful Walls, as is to be seen nis his at Porto, Braga, Guimaraens, Miranda, and other Pla- Structures, ces. He Built from the Ground, above Fifty Castles, and other and some Towns, besides those he new Peopled. Nei-Works. ther did he forget pious Work, and therefore he endowed many Churches. Pope John XXII. granted him the Tenths of Church Revenues for 3 Years, to the end he should keep his Gallies in the Streights of Gibraltar, to hinder the Moors from passing into the Kingdom of Granada. He was addicted to Learning, especially to Poetry, and it was he that first crected the University at Coimbra, His Liberality was such that it became a Proverb, As liberal as Denis. The Presents he made to Kings,

Queens, and Nobility, when he went to compose Affairs betwixt the King of Castile, and Duke Alonso de la Cerda, were inestimable, and cannot be reckoned. After that, a Gentleman of Castile telling him that none but himself had fallen short of his Bounty, he gave him the Silver Table whereon he dined. To reckon un

the particular acts of his Generolity were too tedious. it may suffice to say, this above the rest was his peculiar Vertue, in which he exceeded most Princes. He knew all the Product of his Kingdom, and valued it so much, that he never defired to be supplied from abroad, with any thing that he could have at home. Of the Gold gathered in Tagus, he made a rich Crown and Scepter.

But notwithstanding his prodigious Liberality he never oppressed his Subjects with heavy Taxes. He was of

CHAP. IX.

The Life and Reign of Alonso the Fourth of the Name, and the Seventh King of Portugal, his Actions and Death, from the Year, 1290. till 1357.

1. THE Favour that King Denis shewed to Learn- King A. ing made him refide where he had caused it to longo the flourish. Having therefore resettled the Court at Co- 4th. wholly imbra, on the Eighth of February, 1290. was Born to addicted to him in that City, of his Wife the holy Queen Eliza- his Pleabeth, his Son Alonso 4th. of the Name, and the Seventh sure. King of Portugal, who for his forward and fiery spirit, 1290. was called the Fierce. He, who as we have feen, was so eager to Rule whilst his Father lived, after his Death cast off all the care of Government; giving himfelf wholly up to his Pleasure, and particularly to Hunting. Upon his Accession to the Crown, instead of fettling the Affairs of the Kingdom, he went away to the Forrest of Sintra, where he spent a whole Month among the wild Beafts. Returning to Court, and appearing at the Council-Board, instead of the Business of that Place, he gave them an Account of his Sport. Hereupon, one of the Countellors took the Boldness to reprove him with threatning Expressions, which the King being offended at, all the Council stood up and said they would choose another King, if he did not alter his Course of Life. The King, tho he then went out in a Passion, being grown cool, thought good to curb his Inclination. Our Author here extols the Bravery of those Counsellors. " I find nothing to admire in the matter, but the Infolency of wicked and haughty " Subjects, and the want of Resolution in him, he "stiles a Magnanimous Prince. The King, not satisfied with having, during his Father's Life, unjustly Persecuted his Bastard-Brother, and Expelled him the Kingdom, still persisting in his ill grounded Malice to- At Varia wards him, laid many things to his Charge, and by for- ance with mal, tho' unjust Process, Condemned him to forfeit all frard- Erehis Possessions in Portugal, at once endeavouring to dea middle Stature, his Hair black, full Faced, not so Beautiful as Majestick. He died at Santarem, the 7th. of January, 1325. at the Age of 64 Years, having Reigned 46. It became a Proverb, That Denis could do all he would. His stately Tomb, built by himself, is in the Monastery of Odivelas, of Benedictine Nuns, near Lisbon, of the Invocation of St. Denis.

His Wife. and Muc.

12. Elizabeth, Daughter to King Peter III. of Aragon, and his Queen Constance the Daughter of Manfredus King of Naples, and Sicily, was the only Wife of King Denis. He being extreamly addicted to Women, she bred up all the Children he had by them. as if they had been her own; by which her patience the made him afterwards forbear that Vice, and punish it feverely in others. To be short, she was a most holv Woman, and an excellent Queen, and was Canonized in the Reign of Phillip IV. of Spain. By her the King had, Alonso his Successor, and Constance, Wife to King Ferdinand IV. of Castile.

His illegitimate Issue were, by Aldonza Rodriguez.

Alonso Sanchez, created Earl of Albuquerque.

By the Lady Grace, Peter, Earl of Barcelos, the first Title of that kind given by the Kings of Portugal; another Poter, called also Earl.

By other Women, John Alonso, Ferdinand Sanchez, the Lady Mary, Married to Duke John de la Cerda; another Mary, a Nun at Odivelas.

CHAP

prive him of his Fortune and Honour. D. Alonso

Sanchez, modestly sued for Redress, but none was to be swading her to prevail with the King to marry her; for his Marriage with the Princess of Portugal was void, by reason of Consanguinity. But that Lady considering the danger of aspiring, to rise from a Mistress to a Queen, slighted his Advice. 3. It was now found in Pertugal, that the Princess Blanch di-

The History PORTUGAL.

Blanch, by reason of the Tissick, was unfit for Matri-vorced mony; and the King of Castile having fent his Phy- from the sitians to examine into it, they agreed in the Point. Prince. This Prince being on this score disengaged from that 1334. Bride, it was proposed he should marry the Lady Con- He Constance, Daughter to D. John Emanuel, whom the King tracts with of Castile had before put away. This King was confused with thereupon, but he advised the contrary, yet Daughter feemed to allow of whatfoever ours should do. The to D. John Portuguese took this for Consent, whilst the Castilian Emanuel. used all possible means to obstruct the Match; telling her Father he designed her for the Prince of Navarre. Both seemed to mean as they spoke, and each designed to deceive the other. D. Gonzalo Vaz, Master of the Order of Avis, and Embassador from Portugal, came to D. John, to conclude the Match. The King of Castile, sent D. John Orders, to apprehend the Embassador, as coming without his leave with armed Men, and having committed Extortion on his way. D. John doubting, the Embassador advised him to conclude their Affair, and he would go deliver up himself to the King at Burgos. They agreed, D. John offered with his Daugter, 300000 Doubles. The Articles were, That the Lady Constance should be absolute over the Lands affigned her in Dower: That the Prince should keep no Mistress whilst his Wife was of Age to bear Children, or did not appear to be Barren: That there should be a League Defensive betwixt the Father, and Son-in-Law, that he might go visit his Daughter, whensoever he

4. The Embassador went immediately away to Burgos, and prelenting himself before the King, was satisfied with feigned excuses. At this time came one Martin Catina, craving leave of the King, to Combat with A single Gonzalo Rodriguez Ribeiro, one who followeth the Em Combas, bassador, and had killed his Brother. The King would pleased, and that the Second Son should inherit D. John's Possessions in Castile, or else the First should inherit, in case she had but one.

had from a byaffed Judge. He was now powerful, and beloved in Custile, and Leon, and therefore raising a good Force, entred the Territory of Bragança, with Fire and Sword, whilst others of his Troops did the like from Medellin, and Albuquerque, in the Country about 1326. Guadiana. This done, he returned to his Town of Albuquerque, where he Fortified himself, and made preparations for open War. D. Gonzalo Vaz. Master of the Knights of Avis, being fent against him by the King, was put to the rout; and Duke Alonfo, falling Sick returned to Medellin. In the mean time the King Befieged the Castle of Codesseyra, near Albuquerque, which being basely delivered to him by the Governour, was rased to the Ground. 2. The King proposed a Match betwixt his Son Prince Peter, and Constance the Daughter of D. John Emanuel, who was of the Blood Royal of Castile, and his Wife of that of Aragon. King Alonso IX. of Castile, broke off this Match, contracting himself to her, for she was Henry Prince of Portugal, marries Blanch, King of Castile.

1330.

1227.

under age, and yet afterwards he contemned her, and Marries his was Married to Mary, Daughter to King Alonso of Daughter Portugal. To that effect he came into Portugal, and reto the King ceived the Princels at the Town of Alfayates, whither of Castile. her Father had Conducted her. At this Place a Match 1328. was concluded betwixt Henry, Prince of Portugal, and the Princes Blanch, Aunt to the King of Castile. The following Year, the Portuguese received her at Fuentegrinaldo, where he again met with her Father Prince Peter, about some alterations to be made in the Hosta-Aunt to the ges given for exchange of the Ratifications. Two Years after the King of Castile was Married to our Princess, he became so intangled in the Love of the Lady Ellenor Nunnez de Guzman, that he treated her as Queen; and the Queen as if she had been but a Concubine. Our holy Queen Elizabeth met him at Xerez de Badajoz, to endeavour to reclaim him, but could obtain nothing but promises; for he continued obstinate in his 1332. Amours. D. John Emanuel desiring to be revenged of the King of Portugal, for that giving his Daughter to the King of Castile in Marriage, he had caused his Daughter Constance to be put by, made his interest with the Lady Ellenor the King of Castile's Mistress, per-fwading

The King

obstructs

flance.

of Castile

The History of PORTUGAL.

have made them Friends, but Ribeiro opposing it, they were allowed to enter the Lists according to the Custome of those Days; where Catina had his Head clove asunder by his Adversary. Many other notable Acts were performed by this Ribeiro, and Two of his Companions, in a solemn Tilting, wherein they gained much Reputation to the Portuguese Nation. But the King of Castile, ceased not all this while, underhand, to endeavour to break off the Match, writing to the King of Portugal by way of Advice, That he should not be too hasty herein; for that D. John was rich, and would increase the Portion if he was backward. At the same time, he blamed D. John for offering so much, and lastthe Marri- ly, with his own Hand he wrote a Letter to the Lady age of the Constance, assuring her of his sincere Assection to her, and declaring he had been ill advised in marrying the Princess of Portugal, but that by Reason of Consanguinity, that Marriage was void, and he would not fail to be always hers. The Lady sent the Letter to her Father, who dictated an Answer, to this effect. That he had much wronged her Innocence, having by false infinuations gained her Love. That his ill Inclinations, did appear by his unjust proceedings towards Queen Mary, his present Wife. That she had so often found him false, that she could now find no Reason to give any Credit to his Words; and that she gave Thanks to Almighty God, who had delivered her from being his Wife, that she might not suffer as the Queen did, by his inordinate Affection, to the Lady Elenor Nunez de Guzman, who had entertained other Lovers before him.

5. It was agreed betwixt the King of Portugal, and D. John Emanuel, that the Lady Constance should be brought into Portugal, in June, and the Bride and Bridegroom were contracted by Proxy. Embassadors were fent to Valladolid, where the King of Castile was to be acquainted with the Conclusion of the Match. He, tho much Displeased, expressed great Satisfaction, sent Presents to the Embassadors, and ordered publick Demonstrations of Joy to be made. The Portuguese sent Martin Lopez Machado, his Embassador, to return thanks for those Courtesies; But still the Castilian refolved to hinder the Bride's Journey into Portugal, and to that purpole guarded the Roads, always pretending other other Reasons for so doing. The King of Portugal, to remove this Obstacle, sent another Embassador, who being killed about Play at Valladolid, his Tutor, for he was a Young Man, continued his Journey to the Court of Castile, where he delivered to that King his Master's Letter, containing how evidently he was convinced of his ill Intentions, and made great Threats, in case he persisted to obstruct the Lady Constance's Journey into Portugal. The Castilian shewed that Letter to the Ladv Ellinor his Mistress, who, with that Liberty that is Natural to such Women, spared not to blame his unjust Proceedings in that Particular; yet he forbore not to stop the Princess, tho' he excused himself to the Portuguese. Our King, already disgusted at this ill Usage, was yet farther provoked, for his Admiral, Stephen Vaz. de Barbuda, pursuing certain Pirates with five Ships, and three Galleys, was driven by stress of Weather to Cadiz, where, instead of a kind Reception, his Vessels were taken by the Fleet of Castile, under the Command of Peter Ponce de Marchena. Our King gave Advice hereof to D. John Emanuel, and he making fuit to his King, that he would suffer his Daughter to depart, received no Answer, whereupon he openly declared against his Soveraign. The Portuguese demanded of the Governours of the Cautionary Towns, for Performance of Articles, that they should deliver them up to him, since the fault lay on the side of Castile. They consulting sogether, sent one of their number to the King, to represent to him how unjustly he dealt with the Portuguese. He answered, That if they delivered the Towns, they would incur an infamous breach of Fealty, and that he would not depart from the Siege he had laid to D. John Nunnez de Lara's Garrison, till he had his Head. Yet considering the Difficulty of that Defign; he intimated he would defist, if the King of Portugal should request it of him. Queen Mary advertised her Father hereof, and he immediately wrote to the Castilian, desiring him to raise the Siege, and promising to make D. John Nunnez submit himself as soon as the Princess was sent into Portugal. The Queen her self carried the Letter to the King, and he answered angrily, that he would raise the Siege for no Man. Which made her return disconsolate to Burgos. But the fome of the Nobles contrived that D. John might escape, yet the King was so watchful, they were disappointed.

The History of PORTUGAL.

War be-Stile and

6. The King of Portugal, impatient of longer Difantwist Ca- pointments, sent a Challenge to him of Castile, grounded upon these Reasons: That he treated ill the Queen Portugal. his Wife, that he gave out, he would be divorced from her, and Marry the Lady Ellenor de Gazman, that he designed to declare Peter her Son his Heir, and that he hindred the Princess Constance from going into Portugal. While his Embassador executed his Commission, he made all manner of Warlike Preparations both by Sea and Land. He laid Siege to Badajoz, and at the same time his Parties ravaged all the Country about Arauna, Aroncha, and Cortegana. The Siege being tedious, the King left sufficient Forces to continue it, and he with the rest of the Army over-ran a great part of Andaluzia as far as Sevil, which done, he returned to the Siege. His Brother, Count Peter, did the like in Galicia, the Archbishop, and other Commanders in vain endeavouring to oppose him. Numerous Forces were raising in Castile to relieve Badajoz, when the King, confidering the difficulty of the Enterprize, and that Peter Alonso, one of his Officers, had been defeated, raised the Siege, and returned dissatisfied to Portugal. But whilst he prepared to return thither stronger than before, the Queen, without his knowledge, went away to Badajoz, where the King of Castile, her Son-in-law, then was, thinking her Prayers might prevail with him to defift from War, and comply with her Husband. The King received her with Respect, but demanded such Conditions as he knew could not be granted. . Scarce was she gone from Bradajoz, when the Castilian followed as far as Elvas, ravaging all the Country. Two days he spent Plundering that Territory, and then laid Siege to Aronchez, but understanding that the Portuguese Parties infested the Neighbourhood of Xerez, Badajoz, Burguillos, and Alconchel, he removed to meet them. Not meeting with them, he besieged Olivenca, and being taken with an Ague, was forced to depart, and return to Sevil, leaving his Forces to do all the harm they could. Some Troops, under the Command of the Brothers, Ferdinand, and John Roiz de Castro, pillaged all the Country betwixt the Rivers Duero and Minho, till being met by, the Archbishop of Braga with 1400 Portugueses, D. John de Castro was killed, with 300 of his Men, and a great Booty recovered. At Sea, 20 Galleys, carrying carrying 2000 Men, put into Lepte in Andaluzia, where they landed, Plundering the Country, and being met by D. Nunno Portocarrero, there enfined a hot Fight between them, in which 26 Portugueses and 80 Castilians were killed. Camello, the Portuguese General, was taken: and by the Portugueses, two Castilian Commanders, for whom he was exchanged. The Castilians set out 40 Sail to Revenge this Affront, but a Storm dispersed and wrecked both Fleets. Another Portuguese Squadron. commanded by Misser Emanuel Pissano, a Genoese, had spoiled the Coast of Galicia, and was now again sent against the Spanish Fleet, that did no less harm in the Kingdom of Algarve. They met about Cape S. Vincent, and fought with extraordinary Resolution, till the Portuguese Admiral, and many more, were taken, and the Castilian returned Victorious to Sevil. At the same time, Ferdinand Arraez lying in Ambush, took 70 Portuqueses, and killed 180.

7. Our King, leaving an Army to Besiege Salvaterra, King A. pierced as far as Orenje, destroying all before him, whilst longo en-Peter Fernandez de Castro, who commanded on those ters Ca-Frontiers for the King of Castile, refused to oppose him, stile with on pretence of the Favours he had received from him an Army and his Father. The Castilian, always ready to take Revenge, with 10000 Horse, and a number of Foot broke into Algarve, and having in vain belieged Castro Marin, laid waste without Mercy all the Country along that Coast. Pope Benedict XII. sent Bernard, Bishop 1337. of Rhodes, his Nuncio, to encleavour to bring these two Kings to some Accommodation. Philip the Fourth, King of France sent the Archbishop of Rheims upon the same Errand. The Castilian turned them over to Portugal, and the Portuguese to Castile. Both were desirous of Peace, but neither would ask it. The Portuguele carried himself highest with the Nuncio. At length a Truce was concluded for a Year. After much Debate, ATrace for the Pope was chosen Arbitrator betwixt them, but the a Year. Castilian fearing the Revolt of his Nobles, and an Invafion from Africk, required of the Portuguese to fend his Embassadors to him, and they would agree, without going so far as Rome, or Avignon. Hereupon three Embas- 1240. ladors were tent from Portugal, who meeting with the Commissioners of Castile, concluded a Peace upon these Conditions. That all Places taken since the War, and Prisoners on both sides, should be restored; That neither, without consent of the other, should make Peace with the Moorish King Banarin; That the Princess Constance should be permitted to go into Portugal; That the Princess Blanch, being unfit for Wedlock, should return into Castile; That all former Articles should continue in force; That the King of Custile should restore all due State to his Queen, and put away the Lady Ellenor Nunnez. The Castilian performed all Points, except putting away the Lady Ellenor, yet he behaved himfelf better towards the Queen.

Priloners

8. Aliboacem, King of Morocco, being about to pass Person aids into Spain, as being sent for by the Moorish King of Grathe Castili- nada, the Castilian sent his Queen to ask Succours of her an against Father the King of Portugal, who immediately marched the Moors thither in Person with a better disciplined than numerous Army. The King of Castile having notice hereof, visited him at Jurumenna in Portugal. Our King was received at Sevil by the Clergy, finging Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini. Here a Council of War was held, to confult whether it were fit to fight the Moors, who befieged Tarifa, and were an innumerable Multitude, or no. While tome were of Opinion to yield Tarifa to them, our King's Opinion prevailed, that the Place should be relieved. All the Mountains and Plains about Tarifa were covered with multitudes of Infidels, yet the King of Caftile was overjoyed to understand they had resolved to give the Mahometan Battle. Both the Christian Kings advanced, and passed the River Guadalete. Being there joyned by some Troops that were not before come up, on Sunday, the 27th. of October, they marched to Penna de Cuervo, where they first discovered the Barbarians, covering all the Landas far as they could fee It was agreed the Castilian should attack the King of Morocco, who lay along the Shoar, and the Portuguese him of Granada, that was at the Foot of the Mountain. On Monday, the 28th. at break of Day the Army heard Mass, many received the Sacrament, and the Archbishop of Tolean exhorted them to expose their Lives in Defence of the Faith. Being come before their Enemies, both Kings made fhort Speeches to their Men. This done, the Armies engaged with such terrible shouts, that the Mounrains feemed to shake. Nor was the noite of clattering of Arms less hideous. Vast numbers of Dead were soon #rod trod under foot, and the wounded, in that Confusion. were scarce sensible of their hurts. Our King, rushing The two into the midst of the Enemies, made such havock, that Christian the Moors foon turned their backs, and fled to Aigezira, Kingsoverthe Portugueses making a greater saughter in the Pur- throw the fuit, than they had done in the Fight. The King of Infidels. Castile, with no less Bravery, thrust himself into the midst of his Enemies, till stopp'd in his rash Carreer by the Archbishop of Toledo. Yet so did he press Aliboacem, that despairing of Success, he fled to Algezira, and not thinking himself safe there, passed the Streights over into Africk. Both the Christian Princes followed the Chace as far as the Rivers Britabotellas and Guadamicil, which they dyed with the Blood of Infidels.

The History of PORTUGAL.

9. Queen Fatima, with many other Moorith Ladies, were killed by the Soldiers in their Tents. Some Princes also died, and two were taken. The quantity and value of the Booty is not to be expressed, for they came to divide Spain among them, and brought over above The number 100000 Families, besides their innumerable Army, all of the Inwhich was so great, that they spent five Months in pai-fidels. and fing the Streights, fixty Galleys being continually em-greatness of ploy'd in Transporting them, and twelve Galleys were fifteen days in carrying back the Remnants of this Overthrow. 450000 Infidels are faid to have died in this Battle. Of the Christians so few were missing, that it will be scarce credited, if the Number were reported. The Victorious Kings entred Sevil in Triumph, the chiefest of the Captives dragging the Colours that were taken. Many Carts followed laden with Spoil, and then a multitude of Moorish Horses with all their Accourrements. Several Colours and Horses were sent for a Present to Pope Benedict. The seventh day after the Victory, the Portugue/e being obliged to return home, the Caltilian laid all the Booty before him, to take what he liked best; whereof he only took some Arms, one of the Captive Princes, and five Colours. The Frince he released without Ransom, and hung up the Colours in the Cathedral of Lisbon.

10. King Peter the Fourth of Aragon, by his Embat- Daughter fadors, demanded of our King his Second Daughter Elle- to K.A. onnor in Marriage. His Request was granted, and her Por- fo marry'd tion settled at 50000 Doubloons. The King of Cajtile to Peter, endeavoured to hinder this Marriage, but failing of his King of Ellenor, Defign, Aragon.

1:49. A grest Diague.

his Eldest Son pri-

vasely

Marrics

Caltro.

she Lady

Design, the Princess was carryed to Valencia, and there marryed with great Solemnity. The three following Years Portugal was infested with that Universal Pestilence, which began by the opening of the Earth after a terrible Earthquake in the Eastern Countries, whence issued such a destructive stench, as infected those Parts, and thence diffused it self into these. The Princess Constance dying after she had brought forth three Children. our King found that Discord at home, which had before drawn him thence. He thought to Marry the Prince. to strengthen the Succession to the Crown, but found he was in Love with the Lady Agnes de Castro, a Kinswoman, and one of the Ladies to the late Princess, and that enjoying her Person, he refused a second Wife; and K. Alonfo enquiring farther into it, he was informed they were privately marryed by Giles, Bishop of Guarda, and yet the Prince, fearing his Father's Displeasure, denyed it, tho' he promised, if it were really so, to treat her as Princess. The Nobility envying the Lady Agnes her Happiness, perswaded the King to oblige his Son to Agnes de Marry another Wife, or else to kill her; alledging, that if the came to be Queen, her Brothers, Ferdinand and Alvaro, would destroy the Prince's Son Ferdinand, that one of their Nephews might Inherit the Crown. They also said, the Lady Agnes was not of sufficient Quality to be a Queen; but in this they wronged her, for she was of Royal Blood, and her Sister came to be Queen of Castile. Upon these Pretences her Death was contrived, and tho' the Prince had notice given him hereof by the Queen his Mother, and the Archbishop of Braga, yet he thought none durst attempt such an Action while he was in the way. The King, overcome by Perswafions, fet out from Monte-Mayor, and went to Coimbra with a great number of armed Men, at fuch time as the Prince was gone out a Hunting. The Lady Agnes was in the Palace called S. Clare, and understanding the King came to kill her, went out to receive him, and falling at his Feet with the three Children she had, bathed them with her Tears. This fad Spectacle moved the King, and he turned back to depart. But those who had perfwaded him to this Action, the chief whereof were Alvaro Gonçalez, James Lopez Pacheco, and Peter Coello, blamed the King's Remissness, and so earnestly pressed him to give them leave to execute what they came about, that

The Lady Λ gnes cruelly. wardered. that he condescended, and they immediately, with more than barbarous Inhumanity, struck off her Head.

II. The Prince returning from Hunting, for some The Prince time was almost distracted with Rage. Being come to begins his himself, he began to execute his Revenge, destroying all Revenge. the Country betwixt Duero and Minho, where those Cruel Executioners had their Estates, with Fire and Sword. The City Porto he spared, for the sake of the Archbishop, who had given him notice of the Design. Thus King Alonso's Disobedience towards his Father, was now with more Reason punished by his own Son, The Prince marched to the Town of Canavefes, where the Queen his Mother, and the Archbishop met, and reduced him to submit to his Father, and disband his Followers, conditioning that both Parties should Pardon all Offences, and that in all Places where the Prince was, all Acts of Justice should be performed in his Name. It was visible enough, that the Prince would some time or other be revenged on the Murderers of the Lady, The Murde. therefore the King, being near his End, advised them rers fly inbefore his Death to shift for themselves. They there- to Cassie. upon fled to Castile, and we shall hereafter see what became of them. This was the end of King Alonso, an Unnatural Son towards his Father, and a Barbarous Fa- The Death ther towards his Son. Yet he was an excellent King, of King either for Peace or War. He coined a new fort of Mo- Alonfo. ney, called Aifonsines, worth, in English Money, about Three Shillings. Many wholesom Laws were instituted by him, and his Government was equitable and just. He had a large Forehead, but with wrinkles in it; his Visage long, a proportionable Nose, a large Mouth, his Hair reddish, and curled, his Beard forked and long, his Limbs groß, and his Presence Majestick. He died at Lisbon in May 1357. being 67 Years of Age, and having Reigned 31 Years and a half. His and his Queen's Tombs are to be seen in the Quire of the Cathedral of Lu-

12. Queen Beatrix, Wife to King Alonfo, was Daugh- Ha Wife, ter to King Sancho the Fierce, of Castile, and of Queen and the Mary, the Daughter of Prince Alonfo de Molina. By her the King had Issue, 1. Alongo, who died Young. 2. Denis, died much at the same Age. 3. John, died in his Infancy. 4. Mary, who was Queen of Castile, Wife to King Alonso XI. and Mother to King Peter. 5. Peter, who Succeeded his Father; 6. Elenor, Queen of Aragon, Second Wife to King Peter IV.

This King reduced the number of Castles in the Orle His Arms, being the Arms of Algarve, to 8. and the Bezants in each Escutcheon, to 10.

CHAP. X.

The Life and Reign of Peter the First of the Name, and the Eighth King of Portugal, with his Actions and Death, from the Tear, 1320, till 1367.

King Peter I. ING Alonso, and his Queen Beatrix, were Un-Eirch. But Peter the 5th. who was Born at Coimbra, on the 19th. of April, 1320. He was by some called the Cruel, by others, Executor of Justice, and this last Title most properly appertained to him. His Accession to the Crown was in the 37th. Year of his Age, being twice a Widdower by the Death of his two Wives; Constance, and Agnes. His First care was to secure Peace with his Neighbour, the King of Castile, which was accordingly 135-Ratified. The following Year, it was farther Confirmed, and it was agreed that Ferdinand, Prince of Por-Peace contugal, should marry Beatrix, Eldest Daughter to King chaled. Peter of Cultile; and the Princesses Constance, and Elimitil Cazabeth, should marry John, and Denis, Sons to the La-Dile. dy Agnes de Castro; That both Kings should Aid each other by Sea and Land; That the Portuguese should not joyn with the Aragonian, or any other Prince, without acquainting the Castilian; That he should assist him against the Aragonian, with whom he was then at War. Me panish. King Peter having now the Power in his Hands, and being at leasure to meditate his Revenge, for the Death ech ike Murderers of his beloved Agnes, was grieved at nothing more, than of his Wife that he thought the Lives of the Three Murderers, too she Lady small an Expiation for the Death of her, in whom he Agnes de had lived. Yet for some farther Satisfaction, he resolved to make up in Torments, what was wanting of Life

The History of PORTUGAL.

in them. We saw in his Fathers Life time, how far he proceeded in his Revenge, so as to raise a Civil War; But scarce was he now seated on the Throne, when the Three Murderers, Peter Coello, James Lopez, and Alvaro Gonzalez, were Attainted of Treason, and their Estates Conflicated. Next he contrived how to get them out of Castile, and soon found the means to effect it; for Peter Nunnez de Guzman, Lieutenant of Leon, Mem Roiz Tenorio, Ferdinand Gudiel de Teledo, and Fortun Sanchez Calderon, being fed from Castile, were then in Portugal: He knew that King was no less desirous to reach them, than he was to have the other Three; Therefore he agreed with the Castilian, that both should at the same time secure the Fugitives of the other, which was accordingly put in Execution.

2. James Lopez Pacheco, had the good Fortune to be abroad a Hunting, the Day the others were taken. He being missed, Guards were set upon the Gates, that none might give him Notice; but a Beggar got through unregarded, and not only informed him of what had happened, but changing Cloaths with him, he got away The Murwith a Carrier to Aragon; and thence into France. At derers varo Gonzalez, and Peter Coello, were carried to Portu-Racked. gal; as were the Four Castilians taken there, conveyed to Sevil. King Peter was at Santarem when the two Prisoners were brought to him: He instantly put them to the Rack, to force them to, discover their Accomplices: But they continued filent or else answered far from the purpose; which caused the King to lash Coello on the Face; to which he returned nothing but reproachful Language. The King smiling hereat, said to the standers by, Bring me Vinegar and Onion for this Rabber; for Coello in Portuguese, fignifies a Rabbet, and that was the Sauce then used, giving them thereby to understand he should be Burnt. Whilst they were yet Living, their Hearts were cut out, one at his Breast, and the other at his Back. Lastly, he caused them to be Burnt, and the Table he dined at to be set in fight of the Fire. Nor did King Peter's Amorous Flame expire here. But before we shew what farther Essets it had, we must observe in this Place, that the Kings of Castile, and Acagon being ready to break into War, our King sent his Embassadors to the latter, to Mediate a Peace. That Prince complained to them, that their Master should take part with Castile against him, yet offered, in regard of the Ancient Friendships betwixt the two Crowns, and in respect to the Pope, to give ear to Conditions of Peace.

The Funeral the Lady Agnes de Castro.

3. This was the posture of Affairs when our King dis-Pomp, for covered the Love he still entertained for the Lady Agnes, by performing her Funeral Obsequies. Being in the Town of Cantannede, in the Presence of several Persons of Note, he solemnly Swore, That he had taken to Wife the Lady Agnes de Castro, at Bragança, Six Years before that time. Then he caused the Witnesses of the Marriage, which were Giles Bishop of Guarda, and Stephen Lobato Master of the Robes, to be Examined. This done, the Bishops of Lisbon, Porto, and Visco, the Prior of Sancta Cruz, and other Persons of Note, meeting together published the said Marriage, and the Causes why it was concealed; as also, the Dispensation granted by Pope John the 22th. in regard that they were within the forbidden Degrees of Confanguinity. An authentick Instrument to this purpose being formed, several Copies were dispersed, and the Original is still preserved among the Records at Liston. Not content herewith, he caufed two Tombs of the whitest Marble, and most exquifite Workmanship, to be erected; One of them for himself, and the other for the Lady Agnes, whose Image stood on the Top, with a Crown on her Head, that she might appear like a Queen after her Death. These Tombs were placed in the famous Church of Alcobaça. Then entring the Church of S. Clare at Coinsbra, he caused the Body to be taken up, and being Crowned, and Cloathed in Royal Robes, placed it on a Chair, where his Subjects kissed those Bones that were' once beautiful Hands, as being the remains of their lawful Queen. After this Ceremony, being put into a Herse, the Corps was conducted to Alcobaça, to be placed in that rich Urn, with the noblest Attendance, and greatest Grandeur, that has been seen; vast numbers of Noblemen, and Gentlemen, in long Mourning Cloaks, and Ladies in White Mourning Vailes, attended the Funeral. From Coimbra to Alcobaça, it is 17 Leagues, and yet all that Distance was filled with many Thousands of Men, in two Rows, making a continued Lane, with lighted Flambeaus in their Hands.

4. The Unfortunate King Peter of Castile, being drove out of his Kingdom by his Bastard-Brother Henry, asThe History of PORTUGAL.

fifted by the French, and flying from Sevil, after loofing King Peall the Treasure he had amassed, arrived at the Town of ter of Ca-Cornche in Portugal, with his two Daughters, Constance stile, stying and Elizabeth, and thence fent to Advertise our King, frem his then at Coimbra, of his Arrival: That King's Daughter Beatrix, was Travelling another way, to be Married to refused the Portuguese Prince, her Father not having any fore- protection thought of what hapned to him. This Accident much in Portusurprized the Portuguese; some were for protecting a gal. rightful King, their Neighbour and Confederate; others were for more safe than honourable Courses, not to embroil themselves in the Quarrels of others. This Advice was followed, and our King made the best Excuse he could, for not entertaining that Unhappy Prince. He failing of this Refuge, withdrew to Albuquerque; but neither was he to be admitted there. He sent to ask a Pass of our King, to Travel through his Dominions into Galicia, and the Earl of Barcelos, and Alvaro Perez de Caftro, were fent to Conduct him: But they not only forfook him by the way, but stole from him Elenor, the Daughter of his Bastard-Brother Henry, whom he carried with him. From Galicia he passed over into England, where he so grievously Complained to the Prince of Wales against the King of Portugal, that he was forced to fend Embassadors to Vindicate himself. In the mean while, the New King, or rather Ulfurper, Henry, Solicited the Friendship of Portugal; and Embassadors meetting to that Effect, betwixt Badajoz and Elvas, a Treaty was Concluded; And it was Stipulated, That the Caftilian should solicite an Accommodation betwixt Aragon and Portugal; and also, That the Aragonian should suffer the Portuguese Princess Mary, Widow of Prince Ferdinand, to return to her Country, if she thought good.

5. About the end of October, almost Three Months Fredigies before the Death of our King, was seen a prodigious Al- feen in the teration, or rather Confusion in the heavenly Lumina Sky. ries. On the 27th. Day at Midnight, all the Stars in a Body began to run from East to West; then suddenly dispersing, they wandred through several parts of the Sphere; next, falling nearer to the Region of the Air, the nearness made them appear like vast Globes of Fire, so that the whole Heaven seemed to be in a Flame, and the Earth threatned to be reduced to Ashes. The Sky in many places feemed to gape, the Stars being removed.

Subjects, is

King Pe-

This Spectacle lasting a considerable time, Men stood amazed, expecting the Dissolution of the Universe. Three Months after this Prodigy, our King died. It will not be amis, to give some Instances of his suffice His Justice and Magnificence. He was not, as some have called and Mag- him, Cruel; but a zealous lover of Justice, punishing Crimes with the utmost Severity, and rewarding Vertue with Liberality. The Punishments he inflicted, tho in appearance terrible, were necessary, and well applyed. A Young Man having struck his supposed Father, and the King hearing thereof, called the Mother, and pressed her to tell him who was the Youth's Father; for it was impossible it should be her Husband. She confessed, in some time, a Fryar had got him. Thereupon the King went in Person to the Monastery, and putting the Fryar into a Case of Cork, sawed him in two. One of his Favourites lived in Adultery with a Judge's Wife, for which the King caused his Privities to be cut off. A Priest being suspended for killing a Man, he caused him to be put to Death by a Mason; saying, That the Ecclefrastical sudges condemned a Priest, for killing a Man, to be suspended from his Office; but he, in his Tribunal, would fuspend the Mason from Working, for killing the Priest. The Bishop of Porto he scourged, for having to do with a Citizen's Wife. He caused a Gentleman to be beheaded, for staving a Country-man's Cask, that was full. A Clerk of the Treasury was hanged, for receiving a small Bribe. Hearing a Woman upbraid another with being forced, he asked the cause; and being told, her Husband ravished her before they were marryed, he caused him to be hanged. Knowing that a Merchant's Wife cuckolded him, one day, when the Merchant was at some Publick Feast, he surprized his Wife, with her Gallant, and burnt them, and then congratulated the Merchant, that he was revenged. A Bawl having procured a Young Woman for the Admiral, Lancelote Pessana, the Bawd was burnt, and the Admiral hardly obtained Pardon, after several Years absence. A Country man complaining, that a Gentleman, to whom he had lent certain Silver Cups, would not restore them; the King kept him in hand a Year, and then caused the Gentle nan to pay him Nine times the value, which was then the Penalty of Thieves; and farther told him, he should be always answerable for the Country-man's Life. A Purfivant complaining, that in the Execution of his Office, a Gentleman had struck him, and torn his Beard, the Gentleman was immediately beheaded.

The History of PORTUGAL.

6. The Laws he instituted, were religiously observed. Laws esta-One of them condemned Judges, who received Bribes, blished by to Death. To avoid delays in Suits, he established, him. there should be no Counsellors, Sollicitors, nor Attorneys. He went about the Kingdom in Person, to administer Justice impartially to all Men. Tho' so much subdued himself by the Love of the Lady Agnes de Castro. he suffered no Crime of Incontinency to pass unpunished. Several new Pieces were coined by him, on the one fide whereof, was his Effigies fitting in a Chair, holding a naked Sword; on the reverse, the Royal Arms, with these Inscriptions, Peter, King of Portugal and Algarve. God affist me, and make me Victorious over my Enemies. He was so Bountiful, that, like the Emperor Titus, he thought himself not a King the day he gave nothing: To this purpose, he kept always much Plate. He was much addicted to Mulick, and used to go abroad at Nights, and dance to the found of Trumpets. Notwithstanding his great Liberality, he left a confiderable Treafure to his Successor, which he gathered without the least dissatisfaction to his Subjects. In fine, such was his Life, that his Death was generally lamented: and it was in all mens Mouths, That such Ten Years Government never were, nor would again be seen in this Kingdom. Others said, That either he should never have been born. or never have died.

7. This King was of great Stature, a Majestick Pre- His Perfor. fence, his Forehead large, his Eyes black and beautiful, and theerhis Hair reddish, which he wore long, his Mouth small, ment. his Vitage long. He somewhat stammered in his Speech, was addicted to Poetry, and some Verses of his are still extant. He Reigned Ten Years, wanting Two Months, and died in January, 1367. He is buryed by the Lady Agnes de Castro, and his Picture, to the Life, on the Tomb. The Lady Constance, his first Wife, lies in the Church of S. Francis at Santarem. By her he had Islue; 1. Lewis, who died an Infant. 2. Ferdinand, who fucceeded in the Throne. 3. Mary, marryed to Ferdinand Prince of Aragon, Son to King dlongs the Fourth.

Ho

His Mue.

His Children by the Lady Agnes de Castro were 1. Alonso, who died a Child. 2. Denis, who refusing to kiss the Hand of Queen Ellenor, Wife to King Ferdinand. went away to Caltile, where he marryed Joanna, Bastard. Daughter to King Henry. 3. John, who by the Advice of Queen Ellenor, killed the Lady Mary Tellez de Meneses, his own Wife, and the Queen's Sister. He should have succeeded King Ferdinand, but that King John of Castile kept him Prisoner, and in the mean while his Bastard Brother, called also John, usurped the Crown. In Castile he marryed Constance, Bastard Daughter to King Henry. 4. Beatrix, Wife to D. Sancho, Earl of Abuquerque, Bastard Son to King Alonso XI. of Castile, King Peter had one Bastard Son, called John, Master of the Military Order of Avis; who, after the Death of King Ferdinand, usurped the Crown.

CHAP. XI.

The First Part of the Life and Reign of Ferdinand the first of the Name, and ninth King of Portugal, from the Year 1340. till 1373.

dinand his Birth.

1340.

1267. He engages in a War against Castile.

King Fer- 1. Erdinand was the Second Son of King Peter, and I his Wife Constance. He was Born in the City Coimbra, and succeeded his Father at 27 Years of Age. The Peace and Treasures King Ferdinand inherited, were not at all lasting; for he engaged himself in a War against Castile, pretending a Right to that Crown, after the Death of King Peter, as Great Grandson to King Sancho, Henry, the present Possessor, being a Bastard and Regicide. Many Persons of Note, who fled out of Castile, encouraged him in this Enterprize, and many Towns not admitting Henry, offered themselves to Ferdinand. He bestowed vast Possessions on several of the Castilians that came over to him, as particularly to Ferdinand, Earl of Castro Xeres, and Brother-in-law to King Henry, he gave Fifteen Towns, to D. Alvaro Perez de Castro, his Brother, Eight Towns, the Earldom of Arroyolos,

The History of PORTUGAL.

Arroyolos, and the Office of Constable; to Ferdinand Alonso de Zamera, Nineteen Towns, and so to many others, too long to recount, besides Gifts in Money and lewels, which exhausted the Treasures left by his three Predecessors. Many Cities and Towns also of Castile declared for our King, where he immediately coined Money, bearing the Arms and Titles of both Kingdoms. Our King, in outward appearance, pretended more Zeal to Revenge the Murder of King Peter, than Ambition to joyn that Kingdom to his own. To inculcate this Opinion, he sent Embassadors to the Pope, the King of England, and other Princes, laying before them the heinousnels of the Crime, as committed by a Brother against his Brother, and by a Subject against his Soveraign.

2. Whilst the Embassadors were on their way, the Enters into King concluded a League with the Moorish King of Gra- League nada for Fifty Years, during which time they were to with the affist one another, and neither was to pretend any Right Moorish to what soever Places of Castile were taken by the other; King of nor was either of them, if affisted with any Troops by Granada. his Confederate, to allow them any Pay. For farther Security, King Ferdinand asked of King Peter, the Aragonian, his Daughter Ellenor in Marriage, and Embassadors were sent on both sides to agree the Articles. tho' that Lady was before betrothed to John, the Eldest Son of King Henry. The Princess was marryed by Proxy to our King at Lisbon, the Aragonian Embassador reprefenting her Person. The Articles of Marriage were, That the should bring 100000 Florins Portion; That her Father should make War on Castile two Years; That the Husband should give three Months Pay to 3000 Horse in his Father-in-law's Service. Some Places in Castile were also allotted to the Aragonian, for every Man gives freely of what he has not. Soon after, the Bridegroom that was to have been, but never was, sent a Rich Prefent to Barcelona for the Bride, without expecting the Payment of the 100000 Florins. He also sent Eighteen hundred weight of Gold to be coined, to defray Charges there. To Convoy the Bride, seven beautiful Galleys were fitted out, whereof that which was to carry her, had her Sails of Silk, wrought with Gold, and all that was above Water was gilt. The Rowers were cloathed in the King's Livery, and many gallant Gentlemen went 1369.

Caltile, in-

Henry of

tugal.

as Volunteers. Among other things of value there was carried a Crown of inestimable price for the Bride. D. John Alonso Tello, Earl of Barcelos, attended by the Bishops of Evora and Silves, and the Abbot of Alcohaça went Embassadors, and performed the Ceremony of marrying the Princess in his Masters Name. But her Father put off the delivering of her till the Pope's Dispensation was obtained, and times altering, all came to nothing.

3. King Ferdinand began the Wars in Galicia with a small Power; Coruna, and other Places, voluntarily fubmitted to him. Monterrey was taken by Force, after it had made a vigorous Defence. But understanding that King Henry drew near with numerous Forces, Ferdinand went away by Sea, to Porto, leaving D. Nunno Freyre, Master of the Military Order of Christ, with 400 Horse in Coruna, Alonso Gomez de Lira at Tuy, and others in other Places. Henry to bring our King to Peace, left them and entered Portugal, burning all the Country as far as Braga, where Lope Gomez de Lira wades Por. made a vigorous Defence, but was forced to abandon the Place, after loofing 48 Men, because he was not releived, and the Town was not Walled nor Garisoned; having Articled to Surrender, if not releived by a certain time. Henry finding the Place was not Tenable, Burnt it, and removed to Guemaraens, which being better Fortified held out against him: Seing he prevailed little by Force, he thought to take it by Stratagem, and to that purpose James Gonzalez de Castro, got into the Place disguised like a Country-Man, but being discovered was put to Death, and his Body exposed to the Dogs. Now it was that Count Ferdinand de Castro, Brother-in-Law to King Henry carried about by him as a Prisoner, made his Escape into the Town with his Keeper Ramiro Nunez, and both went into the Portuguese's Service. King Ferdinand, who was then at Coimbra with a numerous Army, with all speed made towards the Castilian, fending before a Herauld to Challenge him, but he drew off by the way of Bragança, Vinaes, and Outeyro, which Places he took. Miranda was Surprized by certain Castillians, who in Carriers Habit were admitted in : Cedavin after a vigorous refiltance was Betrayed by Fasco Estevez, but his Treaton tho not discovered in time to prevent the Loss of the Place, was so soon found that he was Hanged for it. Henry having secured Bragança, halted

hasted to Castile, for that the King of Granada was now acting with a great Power in Andaluzia.

4. Ferdinand having missed of his Enemy, divided his Several Army under several Commanders, Garrisoning all Pla- Military ces he was suspicious of. He had recovered most of what Expedisiwas loft, but the People not fatisfied with his Proceed- ons. ings, complained he only knew the way betwixt Lisbon, and Santarem, because he often went from the one Place to the other, whence it became a Proverb, That the Fool goes and comes betwixt Lisbon, and Santarem; when they would express a Man often does the same thing to no purpose. Giles Fernandez with 60 Horse, and 400 Foot, made an Incurtion towards Medellin, where he took to great a Booty, that fearing to loofe it if pursued, he caufed his Uncle Martin Yannez, to feign himself to be Prince John, and as such to discharge several Prisoners, who reporting his being there with a greater Force than really was, deterred the Enemy from following him. Gonzalo Mendez being General, took this Giles Fernandez with him to make an Inroad to Badajoz. The Garrison issued out upon them, and both sides fought with great Resolution. In this Action a Butcher of Lisbon, called Laurence, killed several Castilians. In the mean while Prince John forcing his way into the Suburbs of Badayoz, Burnt them. Gomez Lorenço de Avelar, on the lide of Cuidad Rodrigo, took S. Felices, Inojosa, and Cerralvo. Here John Roiz Fortocarrero, with only 23 Horse, killed or took almost 80 of the Enemy from Ledesma. This Year ended with a Fire at Lisbon, which Burnt down all the then Smiths Street, it is now the Confectioners.

5. As the Last Year ended in Fire, so this began with 1370. storms of Rain and Wind, which were so Violent, that Great the Gate of the Cathedral, tho' fastned with Iron Locks Sterms. and Bolts, was carried into the middle of the Church; the Ships in the Harbour being drove from their Anchors were dashed into pieces; but the Gallies escaped better by lying in the Mouth of the River Guadalquizir. The great Rains, and alto the Alors who infelled his Frontiers, obliged King Henry to quit the Siege of Cuidad Redrigo. The Queen his Wife in Person had distressed Alosfo Lopez de Tejada, in Carmona, so that he agreed to Surrender the Place it not releived by a Day prefixed, and gave up his Two Sons as Hostages Afifer Gregorio d Campemerto, with only 60 Men, made his way through the Camp into the Town, at the Day prefixed, the Queen threatned to execute his Sons; he bid her do fo. for he was able to get others; and so he persisting Obstinate, they were beheaded; all Men calling that Barbarity, which he thought would be accounted Magnanimity; but it could not be such, being a breach of Promise. Thirty two Portuguese Galleys had been a Year upon the Coast, under the Command of the Admiral Lancelot Pelsano, a Genoese. The Castilians, when this Fleet appeared before Barrameda, scoffed at our Men, for that having refused Aid to King Peter, whilst living, they now pretended to Defend him after he was Dead. But they in The Portu-Revenge, destroyed the Island of Cadiz, and the Shores of the Continent, till the severity of the Winter and Diseases almost consumed them. The Fleet of Castile coming out of Sevil, took a Portuguese Ship that had Money and Provisions on Board, and then shut up our Admiral Pessano in the River, to oblige him to Fight in that narrow Place. He fitted out Two Fireships which dispersed the Enemy, and in that time he escaped, having lost one Galley.

1371.

guele

Fleet, wastes the Island of Cadiz.

Peace concluded at the in-Pance of the Pope.

6. Carmona still held out, but fearing the Power of King Henry, sent a Gentlemen to our King Ferdinand for Succour, according to his promise. This being refused, the Town was obliged to Surrender. There was in it a confiderable Treasure of King Peter's, and Two of his Bastard-Sons who were cast into Prison. Pope Gregory the 11th. sent Two Nuncio's to Mediate a Peace betwixt the Two Kings, which was concluded at Alcoutin in Algarve, upon these Conditions, That they should be obliged to affift one another; That the Portuguese should be a Friend to Charles King of France, that he should take to Wife Ellenor, Henry's Daughter; That he should have with her Cuidad Rodrigo, Valencia de Alcantara, Monte-Mayor, Alhariz, and a Summ of Money; That a general Pardon should be granted on both sides. Thus our King broke his Word with him of Aragon, who in revenge kept all the Treasure that had been sent to his Daughter. King Ferdinand finding his Treasures exhasted; called in the Old Money, and enhanced the Value of the New, which did great Harm, and much more when he endeavoured afterwards to rectifie that Error. The Five Months allowed for the Princess Ellenor to come out of Castile were now expiring, when the King falling forgot his Bride. This Lady Ellenor Tellez was Wife to John Lorengo de Cunha Lord of Pombeyro. He fell in Love with her at his Sifter's, the Princess Beatrix, where he was always fo affiduous, as gave occasion to suspect him guilty of a more than Brotherly Affection. This Lady being about to return into the Country, whence she came, the King ordered her Sifter who attended the Princess, to stay her in Town, for he would marry no other Woman. The Sifter objected, that he was engaged to the Princels of Castile, and her Sister Married. The First, he replyed, might be easily put by; and as for the latter, he faid, the being Married to a Kinfman without Dispensation, the Marriage was void. All which gave the Lady Ellenor to understand the King's Affection was not at all Nice.

The History of PORTUGAL falling in Love with the Lady Ellenor Tellez de Meneses.

7. Scarce had the confented when her Marriage being The Lady called in question, and the Husband not opposing it, Ellenor ludgment was easily obtained for the K. Hereupon her being di-Husband went away to Castile and there publickly wore vorced a pair of Golden Horns. In fine, Ferdinand Married the from her Lady Ellenor. The whole Kingdom was altonished at band, the this Action, but Lisbon shewed it self above all other King mar-Places. Here a Taylor, called Ferdinand Vasquez, a bold ries her. well-spoken Fellow, gathered 3000 of the People, and with them went to the Pallace, nothing being heard but Reproaches against the New Queen. To appease A great them, the King protested he was not Married to her, meeting at and promised the next Day to hear them, when they Lisbon on were Calmer, at the Church of S. Dominick. By Day, account of the Multirude was in the broad Place before that Church, the Marrithe Multitude was in the broad Place before that Church; but the King fearing the popular Fury, was already gone away to Santarem. When the People understood it, they vented their Malice in Reproaches, and this made the Queen stir up the King to Revenge. The Taylor was apprehended, and many of his Followers; some whereof had their Hands, others their Feet cut off; many more fled, now too late understanding, that Subjects ought to have no other Redress against the Miscarrages of their Sovereigns, than by their Prayers to God. In the mean while, the King traversed the Kingdom with his beloved Confort, till being come to the pleafant Monaftery of Lega, Two Leagues from Porto, he then declared, what he denied at Lisbon; to wit, That he was Married

Married to the Lady Ellenor, and affigned her a greater Joynture than any Queen before her ever had.

8. All the Nobility killing the Queen's Hand, only Prince Denis Son to the late King, by the Lady Agnes de Castro refused it, for which the King offered to Stab him, but was prevented, and the Prince fled to Coimbra. Tho many of the Multitude were punished, the clamours of the People against the King's Marriage ceased not, enor were they continued without reason, for that Marriage was in reality unlawful; she being the true Wife of John Lorenço. Ferdinand at last remembring he was scontracted to the Princess of Castile, sent to inform her Father, Thattho he could not perform that Article, he would fulfil all the rest. That Prince did not seem at all to be concerned, but Embassadors were sent on both fides to Ratifie the Peace. The New Queen having gained a Crown by her Beauty, fought now to gain the Affections of the Nobility by her Bounty, and she attained her end in a great Measure, for many who before ber Genero. railed, having tasted of her Favours, began to extol her Generofity. Befides, the more to bend them to her, she married all her Relations among the Nobility.

King Ferdinand 103713 172 Leagne of Ghent azzinst Castile.

The New

Queen

zains

sty.

9. King Ferdinand still pursuing his inconstant Humour, began again to break with Castile, taking some Ships of that Crown in the River of Lisbon, and entering into a Confederacy with John Duke of Lancaster, with John Third Son to Edward the Third King of England, and married to Constance the Eldest Daughter of King Peter of Caltile, in whose right he stiled himself King. It was agreed, they should joyntly make War upon the Kings of Castile and Aragon; That they should bear an equal part in the expence of the War, and that King Ferdinand should have all he could take in Castile, excepting Towns and Caitles; That each should have what he could gain in Aragon. King Henry sent an Embassador to Portugal, to protest against these proceedings, but to no effect. Hereupon, Henry marched with his Army to wards Lisbon, his Admiral Misser Ambrosio Bocanegra at the same time entring the River Tagus with 12 Galleys. About the middle of September he set forward from

Henry of Zamora, and by the way took Almeyda, Pinnel, Linnares, Castile in- Cerolico, and Viseo, where Prince Denis offended at King vades Por- Ferdinand, offered his Service to him. They marched to Coimbra, from whence Ferdinand was newly gone to tugal Sant ar 6111

The History of PORT UGAL.

Santarem, and here Henry quartered in the Suburbs. Our King being less forward to Fight than he had been to give the Occasion; Henry marched without observing much order, towards Lisbon, about the end of February. He Quar-The King, and those that were with him, could from ters in the the Walls of Santarem discover the Enemy marching towards Lisbon, yet had not the Courage to attack them. Lisbon being surprized, Henry entred at S. Antony's Gate. and took up his Quarters in the Monastery of S. Francis; the People retired to the stronger parts of the Town. Our Fleet had been sent to hinder the Castihan Squadron from entring the Port, but our Ships were taken by them. and only 4 of our Galleys escaped, saving themselves in the Creeks. The People of Lisbon understanding there was a defign to betray the City; dragged one of the Conspirators about the Streets, and then cut him in pieces: another was exposed to the fails of a Mill, which cast him into the River. The Franciscan Friars, where the King quartered, thought to have expelled him thence; but their design being discovered, he put them into Boats, without Sails or Oars, and exposed them to the mercy of the Sea; yet they got a Shoar. The Castilians possessed the Skirts of the Town, and many Skirmishes dayly hapned. In the mean while, the Earl of Gijon, King Henry's Son, took Cascaes at the Mouth of Tagus, whilit several Parties wasted the Country. The Lisbonians not able to Most of the expel the Enemy out of the Suburbs, fired the Houses; Gity Burnt and they, in requiral, fet Fire to the Rua-nova, or New Street, and so the greatest part of the City was Burnt. The Country betwixt the Rivers Duero and Minho, was no less infested by the Forces of Galicia, which routed a Portuguese Body that came to oppose them.

10. Such was the posture of Affairs, when in the Peace come Month of March, Guido of Bononia, a Cardinal, was sent cluded. by the Pope to compose these Differences; and towards the latter end of that Month the Peace was concluded, upon these Conditions. That both the Kings should joyn with him of France, against the King of England, and Duke of Lancaster: That the Portuguese should furnish a Fleet, for Three Years, to be maintained by the Castilians; That the English should not be supplied with Ammunition from Portugal; That the Portuguese should expel the Castilians that followed him; That a general Pardon should be granted on both sides; That the Prin-

Suburbs of Lisbon.

menner.

cess Beatrix, Sister to King Ferdinand, should be married to Sancho Lord of Alonquerque, Brother to King Henry. The two Kings met upon the Banks of the Ri-Kings meet ver Tagus, and parted in Friendly manner. In pursuance of the Treity of Peace, Count Sancho married the Lady Beatrix, and the Wedding was kept with great Solemnity. A Match was also agreed betwixt Elizabeth, Bastard Daughter to our King, and Alonso Earl of Gijon, Bastard-Son to King Henry. Thus ended the War, to the Satisfaction of both Kings; but with the Desolation of their Kingdoms.

CHAP. XII.

The remaining Part of the Life and Reign of Ferdinand the First of the Name, and Ninth King of Portugal, from the Year 1373. till 1383.

1374 Ferdinand enters into a League with the King of Castile, against the King of Aragon.

1375. 1376.

1377. Prince John privately marries Mary, Sifter to Queen Elknor.

1. Ing Ferdinand had not yet forgot the Treasure detained from him by the King of Aragon, in return of his Mutability. He thereupon meditated Revenge, but it was hard to compass. It happened the King of Castile fell at Variance with the Aragonian, and our King joyned in League with the former against the other. But the Castilian knowing the inconstancy of Ferdinand, foon came to agreement with the Aragonian. The more to bind the Portuguese to him, he proposed a Match betwixt our Princess Beatrix, and his own Bastard-Son Frederick. This Match being approved of by the Cortes at Leyria; they were married by Proxy, and the King of Castile Swore to perform the Articles of the Treaty, on the 19th, of January. Our King being forfaken by the Castilian, concluded a League against Aragon, with Lewis Duke of Anjou, Son to the King of France. Prince John of Portugal, falling in Love with the Lady Mary, Sister to the then Queen Ellenor, raised also by her Beauty to the Throne, he was privately married to her. But Queen Ellenor, instead of rejoycing at the Advancement of her Sister, fearing that the King dying without Islue, she might come to be Queen, contrived her Death; and to compass her ends, she perswaded the Prince she would Marry him to the Princels Beatrix, the King's only Daughter, and by that means secure him the Succession of the Crown. At the same time she accused her Sister of defiling his Bed. The Prince, moved with Hope and He Murders Revenge, hasted to Coimbra, and breaking in upon the her. Innocent Lady, murdered her as she leaped naked out of Bed, and taking Horse, fled to secure himself and his followers. As soon as the News of this Action came to Court, the Queen went into deep Mourning. The Prince eafily obtained his Pardon, and coming to Court, began to follicit the Conclusion of the Match before propoled to him by the Queen, with the Lady Bearix; but finding nothing in her but Deceit, he retired to the Province that lies betwixt Duero and Minho, and thence fled to Castile, where he was kept from the Crown of Portugal, which weuld have fallen to him, as we shall fee in the next Reign, had he nor fled for killing his Wife. 2. A mighty Solar Eclipse preceded the Death of A great

Henry, King of Castile, which happened on the 30th. Eclips of of May. Embassadors went immediately from Portu- the Sun. gal, to propose to John, the new King, a Match betwixt 1379. his Eldest Son Ferdinand, then a Year old, and Beatrix, Princess of Portugal, tho' she was before contracted to Frederick, King Henry's Bastard Son. The Custilian approving of this Proposal, sent his Embassidors to Portugal, who concluded upon the Articles of Marriage. But notwithstanding this so late Capitulation, King Fer- King Ferdinand, hoping to gain some Advantage over the Young dinand King, resolved upon War. John Fernandez Andeyro, underhand one of them expelled Portugal, upon the Pacification treats mith with King Henry, was at this time in England, to whom the Dukes private Instructions were sent, to treat with the Duke of Lancas of Lancaster, and Edmund, Duke of York, for Succours. York a They espoused the Caule, and Anderro came away with bout subthe News to Portugal, where the King being at Estremoz, daing of kept him up in a Tower, that the Design might not Castile take Air, nor he seem to Entertain any of the Fugitives. It fell out the Queen spoke sometimes with Andeyro in this Retirement; and as Queens are but Women, their Familiarity became scandalous; for she who had forfaken her Lawful Husband for a King, now abandoned that

that King for a Private Man, whom she railed to the honour of an Earl. After fome time, the King ordered him to appear publickly at Leyria, as if newly come from England, and there, as had been agreed, he was apprehended for coming into Portugal without leave, Within a few days he was again fet at Liberty, and it was given out, he should lose his Head if he stay d in the Kingdom. Under this Pretence he returned to England, to follicite the execution of the Treaty concluded.

3. King John understanding that Edmund, Duke of York, raised Forces in England, to Conquer Castile for his Brother the Duke of Lancaster, who had a Right to it by his Wife, the Daughter of King Peter, and that he intended to ailist the King of Portugal; marched now as far as Zamora, fitted out his Fleet at Sevil, and sent Ferdinand Ofores, Master of the Knights of Santiago, to secure Badajoz. The King of Portugal had already fitted out 22 Galleys at Lisbon, and fent Commanders to all the Frontiers. The first Action of King Ferdinand was the demolishing the Walls of his own City of Evera, which were so strong, that three Years were spent in that Work. The Portuguese Fleet, commanded by the Earl John Alonso Tello, the Queen's Brother, let out from Lisbon, and in the Sea of Algarve met with the Fleet of Castile, consisting of 17 Galleys, under the Command of Ferdinand Sanchez de Toar. He being inferiour in number, endeavoured to shun coming to an Engagement: But our Admiral pursues and comes up with him off of Saltes, having left behind 8 Galleys, that went to take in some Fisher-Boats. Toar seeing our Galleys dispersed, bravely boards and takes 12 of the first that came up, and afterwards, Seven of the Eight that were behind. Only one of our Galleys escaped, to Galley, ta- bring the News to Lisbon, the rest were carryed in Triken by the umph to Sevil. Few were killed in this Engagement, Castilians. but the Prisoners amounted to 6000. In the mean time, the Master Ferdinand Osores, infested the Frontiers with frequent Excursions from Badajoz. Peter Alvarez Pereyra, Prior of Crato, marched with 1000 Lances, and 4000 Cross-bow-Men in quest of him, but came too late, for he was retired to Badajoz. King John streightly belieged the Town of Almeyda, thither came to him Prince John, who was fled from Portugal on account of killing his Wife, and offered, with the affiftance of some banished

The History of PORTUGAL.

banished Portugueses, to cause Lisbon to be delivered up. to the King. Upon this, he appeared before Lisbon with fix Galleys, but being disappointed of his Design, returned back to Sevil.

4. King Ferdinand fent his Chancellor, Laurence Yannez Fogaça, into England, to haften the promited Succours. The Duke of York fet Sail from Plymouth with 3000 Men, and entred the River of Lisbon on the 19th. of The Duke July. With him came the Princess his Wife, and many of York Ladies, as also his Son Edward, and some of the ba- arrives as nished Portugueses, among whom was Andeyro, who Lisbon came not so much to serve the king in his Wars, as the with 3000 Queen in her Amours, the King's Sickness administring Men a favourable Opportunity. The King went aboard to receive the new Guelts, who were lodged in the Monastery of S. Dominick, where Rich Presents were bestowed upon them, and they were sumptuously entertained. The King was by the Treaty obliged to furnish the English with Horses, and he gave them more Mules than Horses, for there were scarce any in the Kingdom, and he gave fuch as could be had. The Duke of York advised our King to adhere to Pope Urban, and disown the Anti-Pope Glement, which the King willingly complyed with; for there being then a Schism in the Church, A Schijm the English would not hear the Masses said by Portuguese in the Priests, because they acknowledged the Anti-Pope. Ed-Church. ward, the Duke's Son, was solemnly contracted to the The Duke Princess Beatrix, they being both about fix Years of Age. of York's Elvas was at that time belieged by the Castilians, who Son conhearing of the Arrival of the English, raited the Siege, traffed to and departed. The English committed many Outrages married in Lisbon, and being ordered to March against Castile, did no less harm in the Country as they went, which was the cause that many of them were cut off by the Pertugueses. D. John Alonso, Earl of Ourem, and the Queen's Brother, dying, the Queen gave his Title and Honours to her Gallant, John Fernandez Andeyro. He was a marryed Man, and his Wife in Galicia. The King, to take him from the Queen, caused his Wife to come to Court, and the Queen endeavoured to gain her with Gifts, which she received, yet at the fame time openly spoke of the Queen whatsoever her lealousse dictated.

5. This Year another Powerful Fleet of Caftile from 1382. Biscay entred the River Tagus, and meeting no Opposi-

Fleet, ex-

All the Portu-

guele

wages the Conft.

The First tion, destroyed some Vessels; then Landing, they burnt of Castile three Royal Palaces, and ravaged all that Coast. At again ra- lengh, Peter Alvarez Pereyra, Prior of Crato, with 200 Horse, cut off almost all the Party of the Enemy, and recovered the Booty they carryed away, which was some check to them for the future. Nunno Alvarez Peregra lay in Ambush with 24 Horse, and 30 Foot, near the Bridge of Alcantara, there he put to flight 20 of the Enemy, who fled to the Shoar. The Enemy increasing to about 250, his Men refused to Engage at such odds. and he, to draw them on, run upon them alone, where his Horse tell upon him, but his Men coming to his Rescue, brought him off, the Castilians at the same time retiring to their Vessels. The Queen having in Publick rent a Veil in two, and given one half to her Gallant. John Fernandez Andeyro, and the other to Count Gongalo, for that they were sweaty, and had no Handkerchiefs to wipe their Faces, for it feems they were not then used in Portugal; Gonzalo Vasquez de Azevedo, her Coulin, reproached her with it; and she, in Revenge, accused him, and John, Bastard Son to the late King, of holding Intelligence with the Spaniards. Hereupon they were both committed to Prison. She contrived to put them to Death, but failing in her Projects, set them at Liberty, and shewed extraordinary Kindness to them both, the better to disguise her Practices against them, as also since she had failed to destroy them, to bind them to her Intereit.

The Eng-Jish and Portu-Towns in Cassile.

6. The Master of the Knights of Avis being now at Liberty, joyned with some English, and making together 200 Horse, and 4000 Foot, they marched to Castile, guese take and laid Siege to Lobon, which they took, the English being the first that entred. Cortijo fell into their hands, and was more hardly used; for the Priests appeared on the Walls with the Blessed Sacrament, the English put all to the Sword, in Revenge of one of theirs that was killed. The Kings of Caltule and Portugal were now at the Head of their Armies, the former at Badajoz. the latter at Elvas, ready to decide their Quarrel by Battle. King Ferdinand Knighted 24 of his own People and the English; but being told, he could not, tho a King, confer that Honour, because he had not received it himself, he caused the Duke of look to Knight him, and then repeated the Ceremony to those 24 Knights,

The whole Day was spent by both Armies looking upon each other, and at last, the one drew back to Badanes. and the other to Elvas. What the cause of parting so should be, cannot certainly be assigned; but some said. The Castilian feared the English, who had been before. victorious in Castile, to which the Duke of Lancaster had a good Title, and had been once proclaimed by part of the Army. Whatever it was, a Treaty of Peace was Immediately set afoot, none knowing who had first moved for it. Embassadors being sent on both Sides, the Articles were at length agreed upon, without the Knowledge of the English; and were, first, That the Princess Peace con-Beatrix, lately contracted to Edward, Son to the Duke cluded of York, should marry Prince Ferdinand, King John's without second Son, having before been promised to the eldest. the Know-But this Match was better liked, to prevent the Union of ledge of the Two Crowns. Secondly, That the Twenty two Gal-the Engleys, taken by the Castilians, should be restored. Third-lish. ly, That a general Pardon should be granted on both fides. Fourthly, That the King of Castile should furnish Ships to carry the English Home, as if he had sent for them. When these Articles were to have been ratified, the Castilian demurred, as to restoring the Gallies. and sending Home the English: The Embassadors hereupon challenged him, in their Master's Name; and he scornfully answered, I did not think he had so much Conrage. Nevertheless, through the Perswasion of the Master of the Knightsof Santiago, he ratify'd the Peace.

7. The Peace was proclaimed at Elvas, which made the English rail, for that it was concluded without their After the Knowledge; and the King put them off the best he Peace King could. At this time came to the Court Cardinal Peter de Ferdi-Luna, an Aragonian, fent by the Anti-Pope Clement, nand arequiring King Ferdinand to acknowledge him again, gain subfor he had cast him off at the Request of the English, mits to The King aftembled some learned Men, and the worst the Anti-Advice was followed, for he again submitted himself to pope. the Schismatical Pope. In the mean while died Ellenor 1383. Queen of Castile; and King Ferdinard forgetting he The King refus d his Daughter to the eldeit Son of Caffile, to pre- of Castile vent Disputes about the Succession, now offered her to marries the Father. His Offer was accepted, and this Princels the Daughat last found a Husband, the fifth time the had been con- Ferditracted: For the was first promited to Deke Frederick; nand fecondly.

fecondly, to Henry Prince of Castile; thirdly, to Ferdinand his Brother; fourthly, to the Duke of York; and now lastly to King John. She proved a Pattern of Cha-Hity, for her Husband dying whilst she was yet very young, and being courted by feveral Princes, she anfwered. That Women of Honour did not marry twice. The Archbishop of Santiago came to Portugal to receive the Bride, the King being then at Salvatierra, upon the River Tagus. It was agreed, That in cale King Ferdinand died without Heirs, his Daughter should inherit. and after her her Islue; but if she had none, then King John should succeed; and that if King John, his new Queen, and the Princess Ellenor, Wife to the Prince of Navar, died without Heirs, before King Ferdinand, then he should inherit the Crown of Castile. That till the new Queen of Castile had a Son Fourteen Years of Age. Queen Ellenor her Mother should govern Portugal. Thus it appears, the future Pretentions of the King of Castile to the Crown of Portugal, were just, as were Queen Ellenor's to the Government; and that the succeeding King John was an Usurper, having no lawful Title to the Crown.

King Ferdinand

8. King Ferdinand being Sick, his Queen Ellenor conducted the Princess, then not full Thirteen Years of falls sick. Age, to Elvas. When both Parties had sworn the Performance of Articles, the King and his Bride met, in Tents near that City. Such was Queen Ellenor's Beauty, that the Castilians seeing her said, King Ferdinand were much to blame, had he not loved her, having seen her; or if, having loved her, he had not made her a Queen. Here the Cardinal of Luna produced a Dispensation for them to marry, they being within the prohibited Degrees of Confanguinity; after which there was a most splendid Entertainment. Then they returned to Elvas, where the nuptialRites were folemnly performed with extraordinary Pomp; and after all publick Testimonies of loy, and Demonstrations of Grandeur were over, the King of Castile gave rich Presents to all the Portuguese Gentry. Queen Ellenor returning to Almada, where King Ferdinand lay fick, and intimating, That she liked not the King of Castile; The Maiter of the Order of Avis, commended his Sense and Modelty; to which she answered, That is true, but I would have a Man be more a Man. At last, King Ferdinand being convinc'd of the extravagant Familiarity that was betwixt the Queen; and

The History of PORTUGAL.

Count John Fernandez Andeyro, and being unwilling by punishing to expose her Weakness, or to lose her he to passionately loved, he ordered the Master of the Knights of Avis to make him away privately. But though he performed not at this time what was enjoyned him, vet afterwards he murdered him in the Revolution that happened when the Order was void.

9. The King now spent with Sickness, removed from Almada to Lisbon, where he died very Penitent, on the 1383. 24th. of October, 1383. He was almost Forty four Ferdi-Years of Age, reigned Seventeen, and was buried with nand dies Pomp, in the Quire of the Monastery of S. Francis, at Santarem. His Presence was so Graceful and Majestick, that through any Disguise he appeared to be a King, his Visage was long, his Complexion fair, as was his Hair, and his Eyes sparkling. The great Expence of his Wars obliged him to enhance the price of the Money, whereof he coined several Sorts; but after his Wars ceased, all the Coin was reftor'd to its intrinsick Value. He removed the University, erected by King Denis at Coimbra, to Lisbon, but it afterwards returned to the same Place from whence he brought it. He was rather Prodigal than Liberal, which may appear by the many Towns we have mentioned he gave to the Castilians that came over to him. As to his other Gifts, one Instance will serve to demonitrate the reit. To John Alonso de Moxica, one of the Castilian Gentlemen that came over to Portugal, besides Towns and Lands, he gave, in one Dav. 50 Horses, 30 Mules, 3 Suits of Armour, 30000 Marks of Plate, and 4 Sumptures loaded with rich Tapiftry. He pulled down the Roman Walls of Ebora, to build New. And thus, though unfortunate in all his Undertakings, he secured to himself the Love of all Men.

10. His lawful Issue was, first, Beatrix, married to His Issue. King John the first of Castile; they wronged her who faid she was Daughter to Count Fernandez Andeyro, for she was Eight Years of Age when he begun to be familiar with the Queen. Secondly, A Son, who died in his Infancy. Thirdly, Another in the same nature. One Bastard Daughter he had, married to Alonso, Earl of Gijon, Bastard Son to King Henry the second of Castile, from whom sprung the Family of the Noronhas.

The END of THE THIRD BOOK. THE

THE HISTORY PORTUGAL.

The Fourth BOOK.

CHAP. I.

The Birth, Education, and Actions of John, Bastard Son to King Peter of Portugal; His Promotion to be Protestor of the Kingdom; and Wars with Castile; from the Tear 1357. till the end of 1384.

1. TOHN, Bastard Son to King Peter, by Teresa Alonso of Galicia, was born at Lisbon, on the 22d. of April, 1357. In his Intancy he was John, Ba- kept by Laurence de Lyria, a noted Citizen; then deliflard Son vered to Nunho Freyre de Andrade, Master of the Orto KingPe- der of Christ, who presented him to the King at the ter, aspires Age of Seven Years, asking for him the Mastership of the Order of Avis, then vacant, by the Death of D. Marto the tin de Avelar. This was the first time his Father saw Crown. him, and having Knighted him, gave him that Honour.

The History of PORTUGAL.

He was sent to receive it at Avis, a Convent of that Order, and was there educated, till of Age to bear Arms. His Actions till the Death of King Ferdinand, have been related; it now remains to recount what he did afterwards. The late King, in his Will, left the Administration of the Government to his Wife Queen Ellenor, in pursuance of what had been Stipulated with King John of Castile, upon his marrying the Lady Beatrix, lawful Daughter to King Ferdinand; tho the unbridled Malice of the Multitude Defamed her with the Name of Count John Fernandez Andeyro his Daughter. Queen Ellenor entred upon the Government with Extraordinary tokens of Grief for the Death of the King her Husband. The Council of the City of Lisbon advised her not to be so negligent in the Government as her Husband had been; and fhe answered them so graciously, that they went away well fatisfied. The King of Cafile immediately sent Embassadors to condole her Loss, and at the same time to require himself to be proclaimed King in the Right of his Wife, and in pursuance of the late Capitulations. Scarce was this mentioned throughout the Kingdom, when a general reluctancy appeared in the Countenances of all Men. D. Henry Manuel de Villena, Earl of Sea, and Unkle to the King Castile, was ordered to Proclaim him in Lisbon, but was opposed by D. Alvare Perez de Castro, in behalf of King Peter's lawful Issue by the Lady Agnes de Castro. The same happened at Santarem, Elvas, and in most Places of the Kingdom. King John proposed his Title, by his Embassador, to the City of Lisbon, but it was not favourably received.

2. The First contrivance of the Master of Avis, with Before bis fome others, was to Murder the Count John Fernandez, the Crown, the Queen's Favourite; and the said Master being ap he Merders pointed General of the Country, betwixt the Rivers Ta-Country gus and Guadiana, he marched Three Leagues from Lis- Fernanbon, whence fuddenly returning with armed Men, he dez Anrushed into the Palace, and there Murdered the Un-deyro. happy Count. The Queen, when fhe heard is, faid, He bas died a Martyr, and I will to Morrow, in proof of it, undergo the Trial of Ordeal. Next, the went to know of the Master, whether she also must die; and a civil Anfwer was returned, to quiet her. The Rabble, raised by the clamours of one of the Master's Pages, who cryed he would be killed in the Palace, flocked thither, and would would certainly have destroyed the Queen, had not D. John, the Master of Avis, looked out at the Window. He seeing the Multitude on his side, went away, followed by them to the great Market, called Recio, to Dine with the Queen's Brother, the Earl of Barceles, who was confenting to the Murder. The Bishop of Lisbon was then also at Dinner at his House, and with him the Prior of Guimaraens, and a Notary of Silves. They hearing the Tumult, got up into the Belfrey, where the People seeing them, called out to have the Bells ring, They not regarding to obey these Turnultuary Shouts, the Rabble broke in, and cast them headlong from the Tower, then dragged them to the Market called Recio, where they lay naked and exposed to the Dogs, till the next Day. D. John, after Dinner, went to Court, to beg the Queen's Pardon for murdering the Count. She took little Notice of him, but threatned the Kingdom with the Power of Castile; vet fearing the Rabble, she went away from Lisbon to Alenquer, praying to God, at her departure, that she might see the City burnt. 3. Don John fearing the Power of the Queen, resolved to go away into England; but the more this was rumoured, the more the Multitude pressed him to stay. and protect them against Castile. He made some seeming opposition, but was soon brought to comply. A Council was named, where it was resolved that D. John should marry Queen Ellenor, for defence of the Kingdom; and that if the King of Castile had ever a Son by Queen Beatrix, the Government should continue in D. Joan and the Queen, till that Son came to Age. Here ceased all the Reproaches that had been cast upon the Queen, who when this Overture was made to her, rejected it with Scorn. Nevertheless he was declared Protector of the Kingdom, by the Commonalty, in the Church of S. Dominick; and because most of the Nobility were absent then, they were summoned to meet in the Town-House, where the chief of them being dubious what to do, one Alonso Jannez, a Cooper, stept into the midst of them, and laying his Hand on his Sword, threatned such as should refuse their Content; and they fearing the Multitude, confented to what had been done in the Church of S. Dominick. Thus was D. John, Master of Avis, entrusted with the Government and Defence of the Kingdom. His First Action that gained

Sacrileg€

him

He is desector of the Kingdum.

him Reputation, was the Prudent Choice he made of Counsellors, not according to Men's Quality, but their Ability. Next, to secure many of his Party, he distributed a confiderable Treasure belonging to those that followed the Queen, or fided with Caftile, amongst them. and promifed a general Pardon for all Crimes but Treaion; not confidering that the only Treason was to sunport him.

4. The Queen began to think herself in Danger at The Cafile Alenquer, and therefore leaving Vasco Perez de Camoens of Lisbon Governour there she went away to Santarem. Here Nun-taken by no Alvarez Peregra who had been Educated by her, for- the Profook her and went away to Lisbon, where he was admit- tector ted into the Council of State. D. John Alonso the Queen's Brother was Governour of the Castle of Lisbon, and Martin Alonso Valente was within as his Lieutenant. Alonso Yannez Noqueira got in with some Men, sent by the Queen to Re-inforce the Garrison. These refusing to deliver up their Trust to the New Protector, they were Belieged, and the Assailants threatning to Sacrifice their Wives and Children, before their Faces, if they held out; they surrendred the Place. The Nobility who opposed D. John, called the Commonalty, that followed him, The People of the Messiah; because they seemed to Adore him. And the Rabble termed them Schismaticks and Traitors. Several Places then in the Hands of the Nobility, were eafily wrested from them by the Commonalty, as Beja, Portalegre, Evora, and others. Now the Rabble being uppermost, began throughout the Kingdom to commit the most execrable Villanies, un-Barbarider the Pretence of defending their Country. It was ties of the an unpardonable Offence, even to name Castile; And the rebellious Lady Joanna Perez Ferreyrim, Abbess of the Monastery Rabble of Caltres, seeing a Man ill used for that pretended Crime modeftly reproved their Cruelty, but such was their Rage, that tho' she fled into the great Church, and embraced the Sanctuary, in which the Holy Sacrament is kept, there they gave her feveral Wounds, then dragging her from the Altar, tore offher Vail; next they cut off her Coats to high, as modesty forbids to utter, which done she was dragged into the Market, and there hewed in pieces; Lastly, the Body was dragged to the Place where they shut up the Cattle, and left there; till some Charitable Body buried it by Night. To compleat this

Sacrilege they returned to the Monastery, designing to Murder all the Nuns, but they withdrew themselves from their Furv. Queen E- Queen Ellenor feeing her self in manifest Danger. lenor flies fleet to her Son-in-Law the King of Caftile, who espous-Lastile. ed his own Quarrel in her. The First thing he did was to secure Prince John, Son to the Lady Agnes de Castro; by that means to cut off the Hopes the Portuguese might have of a lawful Successor. But the Portuguele ceased not to Encourage D. John to proceed in the Defence of the Kingdom, and he the more to try them seemed doubtful, and spread some Reports, as if he would depart the Countrey. But finding an inclination in the Multitude towards Prince John, the more to exasperate them against Castile, he caused a Standard to be made. in which that Prince was drawn to the Life, loaded with Chains; which being carried about the City, enraged the The Pro-People against the King of Castile. Thus pretending to Revenge the Wrong, done to the Prince, he gained the means of Establishing himself in the Throne; and stirred up all the Kingdom to defend it felf, against Cafile. The Commonalty every where took his Part, but not the Nobility. Yet he believing he could not prevail without Forreign Aid, asked it of Richard King of England, at the same time perswading the Duke of Lancaster, to affert the Right he had to the Crown of Castile, by his Wife. The Embassador's Proposals were admit-sector his contri-Usurp the Crown.

> Arms; and this Advice was followed. 6. The King marched to the City Guarda, which was delivered to him by the Bishop, but Alvaro Gil, Governour of the Castle would not Surrender. The Towns

> ted, and much Money advanced to them for the Expence of the War, with which, and some good Troops they returned. The Earl of Gijon, Bastard-Brother to the King of Castile, and Elizabeth his Wife, Bastard-Daughter to the late King of Portugal, were both secured in Castile, on Account of holding Correspondence in Portugal. The King and Queen of Castile, removed from Puebla de Montalvan, to Toledo, where against their being proclaimed, Standards were made with the Arms of both Kingdoms. And now it was debated in Council, whether Portugal ought presently to be invaded. The wifer fort were for trying all obliging Methods First, but the hotter Youths, allowed of nothing but force of

The History of PORTUGAL.

of Cerolico, Bedado, and Linhares, were also put into his The King of Hands. Some other Places submitted conditionally, Castile of that the King should fulfil the Articles of Marriage. wades Por-Queen Ellenor fent to perswade the King to proceed, and tugal meet her at Santarem. Several Places submitted themfelves to him in his way, and being come to Santarem, the First Resolution of Queen Ellenor was, to request he would revenge the Wrong done to her. The K. answered, he could not Revenue her quarrel, unless she would refign up the Government to him; which she accordingly did, and then they entered the Fown. Here the King took Portugue fe Winnicers of State. On the right side of the Royal Seal, were the Arms of Castile and Leon, and on the left, those of Portugal. The Royal Seal ran thus, John King of Castile and Leon, of Portugal, of Toledo, &c. Money was also covned after that manner. Many of the Nobility adheared to the King of Castile. and he was possest of the best Part of the Kingdom; but the Multitude generally was inclined to the Bastard, D. John, Master of the Order of Avis. The King of Castile sent D. Peter Fernandez Cabeça de Vaca, with 1000 choten Horse, and a proportionable number or Foot, to invest Lisbon. These Troops being advanced as far as Lumiar, John Fernandez Moreyra engaged them with a small Party, but was himself Killed with fome others; many Prisoners were taken, and the rest fled. And now D. John the Protector, marched out to meet the Enemy; but they not expecting his coming, fled in great disorder to Alenquer, and Torres Vedras, leaving all behind them.

7. At First the Castilians behaved themselves modeitly at Santarem, but after a few Days, they turned the Inhabitants out of their Houles, pillaged them, and a bused their Wives and Daughters; and there being no re drets, the Town began to be abandoned. The Office of chief Rabbi among the Jours being vacant, Queen Ellenor begged it of the King for one Man, and he gave it to another, recommended by his Wife, Queen Bourie, This repulse, and their different Humours, let Queen Ellenor at Variance with the King; and the now repented her The King calling him in, and refigning the Government into his of Camle. Hands, in to much that the advised many of her Follow- and Queen ers to go over to the Master of Avis, telling them he was Ellener # their Natural Lord. The King and Queen went away Pariages.

racy azaint the vered.

to Coimbra, which City had promifed to receive them: yet when the King was Quartered in a Monastery without the City, they refused to admit him. Here a Conspiracy was laid to Convey Queen Ellenor into the City. and Murder the King. This Design was betrayed by a King of Ca- Jew; some of the Conspirators fled, and Queen Ellenor file, defee. was fent Prisoner to the Monastery of Tordesillas near Valladolid. As focn as the News of Queen Ellenor's imprifonment was brought, the Town of Alenquer revolted to the Protector; but the King being Re-inforced, marched to Besiege Lisbon. At Aruda 40 Portuguese hid themselves in a great Cave, and Fire being applied to it, most of them died. Two hid themselves in the House where the King Quartered, designing to Murder him, but being discovered, were Hanged. Many Places in the Province of Alentejo, held for the Protector, and tent to him for one to Command over them; he sent Ninho Alvarez Pererra, with an absolute Power, who having visited some Places of his Charge, and hearing that a great Body of Castilians was upon their March to Befiege the Town of Frontera, he hasted with a much smaller number to releive that Place. His Men knowing how much more numerous the Enemy was, at First refused to follow him; but being encouraged by his Resolution. they gave the Charge, and put the Castilians to the Rout, killing many, and among them several Personsof Note. This done, he took Aronches by Force, and Alegrere was furrendred to him.

Fezed by Sea and 1.475

8. The Protector understanding that a mighty Fleet was coming from Castile, ordered the Archbishop of Bra-Lisbon Berga to over-see the Equipping of his Vessels; which performed with great industry, fo that Twelve Galleys, fome Galliots, and Seven Ships, were fitted out. The King of Caftile spread his Army about Lisbon, where one of his Parties approaching to S. Augustin's Gate, was defeated by 200 Horse that Sallied out of the City. About the end of May, 13 Galleys, and 40 Ships of Cafile appeared in the River of Lisbon. The King drew nearer to the City, and encamping at the Foot of Mount Olivet, wasted the Country; then encompassing it on all fides, refolved to Starve it. In the mean while, a confidetable Fleet was fetting out at Porto, for the relief of Lisbon; and the King having notice thereof, with the Advice of his Commanders, resolved to give the Enemy Battle Battle in the River. The Portuguele Fleet confided of 17 Galleys, and as many Ships, which entred the River in this order: First 5 Ships, then the 17 Galleys, and after them the other 12 Ships. The Castilians furiously The Poraffailed the 5 Ships, where they met with a most vigo. toguese rous Opposition, yet they took 3 of them; but whilst Fleet, floor they were intent upon them, the rest of the Portuguese up the Rislipped by, and got safe up the Harbour. Soon after, bon. the King's Fleet was re-inforced by several Vessels; so that now it confifted of 60 Ships, and 17 Galleys, befides Carracks, which made the Protector lay afide all thoughts of engaging. 9. The Fort of Almada opposite to Liston, after enduring great extremities for want of Water, was at length Surrendred to the King, who entred into that Place on the 1st of August. At this time, Ruy Freyre, and others discovered to the Protector a Design of betraying the City to the Castilians, carried on by D. Peter de Castro, Son to Count Alvaro Perez, and his Accomplices, who were all apprehended. Many alto deferted to the King, and among them, D. Alonso Enriquez, who at Coimbra had plotted to convey away Queen Ellenor. Hunger now began to pinch in Lisbon, and was hard to be remedied, but that at the same time the Plague raged in the Castilian Army. Overtures of Peace were also Guertary made by the King to the Protector; but he would hear- of Peases ken to none. Nunho Alvarez Percyra having ventured to rejected. pass the River in a Boat, through the midst of the Fleet of Castile, returned thence to Ebora, and had the Town of Portel betrayed to him by 3 Citizens. Twice he attempted Villaviciosa, but was both times repulted with Loss. The Protector lay before Torres Vedras; and Nunho Alvarez understanding that several Parties of the Enemy provided to fall upon him, he hatted to his Succour, which the Castilians understanding, they gave over that Defign; however the Protector was forced to quit the Siege. Nunho returning to his Charge, took Rocarde Palmela, and Comna. 10. The Scarcity was now so great at Lisbon, that they turned out the Poor, and unferviceable People to the Enemy, who fent them back well lashed. No nopes now remained; but that the Plague raged so violently

Monzaraz, defeated a Custilian Party near Buday zu another before Almada, and made himself Maiter of នាចបាន

Lisben raised, when it had lafied five Months.

The Siege of among the Castilians, that Two hundred died in a Day, and of them very many of Quality. But the King no way moved hereat, continued the Siege, till the Infection touched the Queen and then he raised it, having lain Five Months before the City. Being come to Santarem, he fent Troops to re-inforce the Garrisons of such Places as still held for him; but passing by Torres Novas, he was not admitted into the Town by Gongalo Vasquez de Azevedo, who before kept that Place for him. His Wife went out to visit the Queen, and there promised to reduce her Husband; and not prevailing, she returned to the Camp, and the King fent to bid him Farewell, for that his Wife was going to Castile. He fearing to lose his Wife, delivered himself and the Town; but the King carried him and his Son away Pritoners, leaving their Wives behind, and a New Governour in the Place. Whilst the King marched home, the Protector granted large Immunities to the City of Lisbon, in recompence of its Fidelity to him. Next, he contrived how to recover some places out of the Hands of the Castilians. He marched by night, to surprize Sintra, but was disappointed by a violent Storm, and Floods that fwelled the Rivers above their Bridges. Soon after, Almada was furrendred to him; notwithstanding that the King had carried away the Children of the principal Inhabitants as Holtages. Alenquer summitted to him also, after having made some Defence; But Torres Novas held out against all his Attemps, and to add to his Grief, he under-Hood that Nunho Alvarez had been also repulsed at Vil-Liviciosa, that the Master of the Order of Christ, the Prior of Crato, and Alvaro Gonzalez Camello, were taken Prisoners at Torres Novas; and that Two Galleys of Castile, itealing into the Port of Lisbon by night, had Eurne Three Veilels there.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

John the Bastard-Son of King Peter, of Pro tector is declared King; he continues the War with Castile Successfully, from the Year 1384. till 1293.

1. A Bout the beginning of the New Year was disco- 1387. vered a Conspiracy against the Protector. Peter A Consi-Earl of Trastamara, was stirred up by the King of Ca-racy file to kill him, as he lay at the Siege of Torres Vedras, gainft the The Count communicated this Affair to D. Peter de Ca- Protestor. stro, John Duque Governour of Torres Vedras, John A- discover is lonso de Bacza, Garcia Gonzales de Valdez, and several others, of whom only 3 Men were apprehended, and one of them burnt. In Revenge whereof John Duque fent out fix Portuguese he had in Torres Vedras, with their Hands and Noses cut off. The Protector raised the Siege of Terres Vedras, in order to go to Coimbra, to meet the Cortes or Parliament he had caused to be thither Assembled, and most of the Inhabitants about Torres Vearas went away with him. In his way, Legrid refused to admit him; but he was well received at Monte-mayor, and Caimbre. In this City, some were for proclaiming the Protector King, Dente as and others for the Princes, John and Denis, lawful Sons bout proto King Peter; but all agreed the present Protestor claiming should continue as long as Prince John should be Priso- the Proner; and in case neither he nor his Brother could come tector King. to Portugal, then the Protector was to be received as King. Dr. John de Regias, a famous Civilian, made two Harangues in behalf of the Protector, catting scandalous Reflections upon Queen Eilenor, to incapacitate her Daughter. Queen Beatrix, from succeeding in the Throne; the same he did on the Lady Agnes de Castro, Wife to king Peter, with an intent to exclude her Sons, the Princes John, and Denis. Some little Opposition was made at first, by feveral of the Nobility; but at length they all confented the Protector flould be proclaimed King; the fo much ceiebrated Nanho Alvarez Percyra, having offered to Murder Mirin Vusquez, chief of the adverte Party, only because he shood up for the lawful Heirs. 2. Tha

261

2. The Protector with a counterfeit Modelly seemed to excute himself from accepting of their Offers, but it was only to heighten their Zeal; and to on the 6th. of April he complyed with them. He immediately shewed great Favour towards the Cities of Lisbon and Porto, for having so constantly adhered to him. Thus it appears how little hopes of Salvation there can be left for Lawvers, who by false Interpretations invert Justice, as it appears in the case of this John de Reglas before-mentioned, who fundered the Queens, Beatrix and Ellenor, and the Princess Agnes de Castro, and excluded the Lawful Heirs, the Princes John and Denis, only for his own private Interest, in promoting the Bastard Protector, who could have no Title to the Crown. I think it were better to breed up Children Thieves than Lawyers, for the former will at least Repent at the Gallows, but the latter are never permitted by Worldly Interest to Repent. All Parties thus agreed, the Protector was folemnly Proclaimed King of Portugal, and accordingly chose all his Officers of State, and of the Houshold. Marching into the Field, he mustered 6000 Men, a small number, but resolute and unanimous; and Nunho Alvarez Pereyra, now made Constable of Portugal, was ordered to Sea with a Squadron from Porto, to engage the Castilian Fleet before Lisbon. Miffing of that Enemy, he failed back to the Province betwixt the Rivers Duero and Minho, to recover part of that Country, then holding for Caltile. Here he took Neyva and Ponte de Lima by force; Villa Nova de Cerveyra, and Mongon opened their Gates to him.

Caima 2 recht be raged to 208 23.3 King.

The Prote-

3 . 2 . 2 . 2

18. OF

3. The new-made King went from Coimbra to Porto. where he was received with great Joy. Here he confulted with Aionso Lorenzo de Carvallo, a Man then Powerful at Guimaraens, about betraying that Place to him. which was accordingly performed. The Castle held out some time, but there being no hopes of Relief, at last, it furrendred. The City Braga mutinying, drove their Governour into the Castle, and sending to the new King, offered to receive him. He ordered Nunho Alvarez the Constable, to take Possession of the City, and force the Castle, which was accordingly performed. The same happened at Ponte de Lima. The King of Castile, now at Cordova, having twice fent his Fleet against Lisbon, ordered a firong Party to enter Portugal by the way of

The History of PORTUGAL.

Cuidad Rodrigo. They plundered all the Territory of Trancoso, and the City of Viseu; but as they returned laden with a Rich Booty, they were charged by a Portuguese Body, much inferiour to them in Number, yet with such Resolution, that of all the Castilians, only 200 escaped, not one Portuguese being lost in the Astion (if Credit may be given to fuch a Relation, after affirming the Fight was obstinately maintained.) In the mean while, the Fleet of Castile, consisting of Forty Ships, Ten Galeons, some Galleys, Twelve Barks and other small Vessels, rode in the Harbour of Lisbon. That The Casti-King also marched from Cordova with a numerous Army, lians enter and appeared before Elvas, which was resolutely de-Portugal fended; and now finding the general Aversion of the Portuguese to him, it was debated, whether Portugal ought to be invaded at all, but at last it was resolved to enter it by the way of the Province of Beyra.

4. The new Portuguese King understanding the approach of the Castilians, marched out of Guimarnens to give them Battle, having drawn together his Forces from Coimbra, Porto, and other Places. On the 14th. of August in the Morning he entred the Plain of Ajubarrota, where he Knighted several Gentlemen. The Ca. ftilians defigned not to fight, intending to march directly to Lisbon, vet after some Consultation, they resolved to To Fam. Engage. There was a great disproportion in Numbers, Brothe, for the Castilians are reported to have been 33000 strong, A.juharand the Portuguese but 6500; besides which Disadvan- rotal tage, they had the Sun and Dust in their Eyes. The Sun was going down when these two unequal Armies engaged. The Castilians at the first Charge broke through our Vanguard, but the new King then coming up, not only with Words, but with his Example, to animated his Men, that in less than an hour that multitude of Enemies was put to the rout. The King of Castile, who began the Fight on a Mule, being then troubled with an Ague, was forced to take a Horse to save himself. Most of the Portuguese who fided with Custile, and were in the Front of the Army, were put to the Sword, for no Quarter was given to them. The Royal Standard of Castile was taken, but many pretending to the Honour. it could not be decided by whom. The full Number of the flain is not known, but it was very great on the part of Capille, of whom about 3000 Horse are reckoned to have perished, and very many Men of great Account. I his is the Famous Battle of Aljubarrota, so called, for that it was fought near the Village of that Name. The Booty was vastly Rich.

5. The Victorious King continued three days in the Field of Battle, erecting Trophies, it being then the Custom so long to expect the return of the Enemy. The King of Castile fled with speed from Aljubarrota to Santarem, which is Twelve Leagues, and having refled there a short time, went down the River to his Fleet, then Riding before Lisbon, where he continued two days, and on the 17th. of August left that Port, attended by Seventeen Galleys. He arrived at Sevil, and tired there with the Clamours of the People, went away to Carmona. " Now we have heard what the Portuguese Au-" thors write of this Battle, which feems altogether incredible; but let us give an hint of what those of Cacount given " stile write, which is much more probable. They say, the King of Castile advancing towards his Enemy, " found him posted in an Advantageous Ground betwixt nish Histo. 44 two Morasses, out of which Place he could not be drawn, because much inferiour in Number; That he " was above 12000 strong, and before the Engagement made Overtures of Peace: That the Castilians would " not be disswaded from giving Battle in that Place, so difadvantageous to them, because they exceeded their " Enemies in Number; and in fine, that they lost the " Day through their own Pride and Rashness, in assail-" ing an Enemy so well posted, when they might have " ranged all the Country at their own pleasure. This, " I believe, to all Impartial Men, will appear nearer to " the Truth, for we must allow all Authors to magnifie " the Exploits of their own Country, and so let us return to our History. The new King coming to San. tarem, had it delivered to him, and finding there many Ladies, whose Husbands were in the Service of Castile, he gave them all Liberty to go to them, which they gladly embraced.

siers of Caffile.

of this

she Spa-

* 6 23 mg.

Battle by

6. The Portuguese King's next care was to Reward ble of Per- those who had fignalized themselves in the Battle, the tugal apon chief whereof was the Constable, to whom he gave large Possessions, and the Title of Count of Ourem. He, encouraged by this Honour, resolved to invade Castile. Having gathered 4000 Men, he met and defeated the Master of Calatrava, D. Martin Yanez de Barbuda. who had entred Portugal with a strong Party; and purfuing his Success, took the strong Town of Villa Garcia. Thence he marched to the Plain betwixt Magacela and Villa Nueva de la Serena, where he had a terrible and long. as well as doubtful Battle with D. Peter Moniz. Master of the Order of Santiago. Three several times the Fight was renewed, and lasted almost two days with incredible Obstinacy, but in the Conclusion, the Portuguese obtained a most Glorious Victory. This done, he went away to aid the King, then lying at the Siege of Chaves, which was furrendred to him. Moving thence, they laid Siege to Coria, but after having battered it some days with great Fury, were forced to rife and depart, the Constable to the Province of Alentejo, and the King on foot in Pilgrimage to Our Lady's Church at Guimaraens, as he had promised before the Battle of Aljabarrota. Most of them that held any Fortresses for Castile, furrendred themselves now to the new King. He laid Siege to the Town of Chaves, whereof Martin Gonzalez de Atarde was Governour, who held it out till he had no Water left, and then articled to Surrender in Forty days, if not relieved from Caltile; and by consent of that King he at length delivered up the Place.

7. The Portuguese Embassadors in England stirred up The Duke

the Duke of Lancaster to lay hold of this Opportunity of Lancato affert his Right to the Crown of Castile, to which he ster, invihad a most Legal Title by his Wife, the Lady Constance, ted by the Daughter to King Peter, from whom Henry the Bastard Portuhad usurped that Kingdom. The Duke having this guese. Right to the Crown of Castile, set Sail from Plymouth Lands in with a numerous Fleet, and arrived at Coruna in Galicia Galicia on the 25th, of July, where he landed 2000 Horse, and with 2000 3000 Archers, besides some other Forces, and several Horse, and Persons of Note. The Duke was Sixty Years of Age, 3730 Are without any grey hairs, was tall and well shaped, affable, modest in Discourse, of an excellent Deportment, and in all respects answerable to his Royal Extraction. With him came his Wife Constance, and his two Daughters, Philippa by his first Wife, and Katherine by the second. Scarce was he landed at Coruna, when that Place owned him for its Lawful Sovereign, as did the City Santiago, and the greatest part of the Kingdom of Galicia. Our King was at Lamego when the Duke landed

The New and Duke fter meer, landed in Spain. Thence he removed to Porto, and having King John agreed to meet the Duke at Ponte-Mauro, set forward with a numerous Retinue. They met upon the First of of Lanca- November, in a Plain near Melgazo. There it was agreed, That if the Duke succeeded, he should give the Towns of Ledesma, Montilla, Melyazo, Plazenzia, Grimal, Canaveral, Caceres, Mendao, Fuente del Maestre, Zafra, Torres de-Medina, Fegenal, and other Places with their Territories to the King of Portugal; as Dower with his Daughter Philippa. The Pope's Dispensation being come, whereby the King was loofed from his Yow of Chattity, made as Matter of the Military Order of Avis; and the Princess Philippa, being conducted to him they were solemnly married upon Candlemas-Day. Immediately the Queen's Household was settled, and a plentiful 1387. Revenue affigned her; which afterwards tome other Queens of Portugal enjoyed.

8. The King having Ipent Two Months with his Queen at Porto, went with her to fee her Father at Braganga, and thence fent her back to Coimbra. Many of the English were dead of Diseases. With the King, were 3000 Lances, 2000 Cross-Bow Men, and 5000 Foot. They entred the Dominions of Castile, and took Castro Calvo, Montila, Refules, Valderas, and Villalobos. Tho Galicia had received the Duke as lawful King, yet no Place in Cafiile admitted him, but by Constraint. Hereupon the King told, him, That to make an absolute Conquest, it was requilite he should return to England for greater Forces. The Duke approved of his Advice, and they returned to Cuidad Rodrigo. By the way, they defeated a Party of the Enemies, confilling of 500 Horse, and some Foot. Another Skirmish happened near the City, upon the Paffage of a Brook, with the same Success. The Duke being now in Portugal, Embassadors came to him from the King of Cifile, offering, that Prince Henry, Heir to the Crown, should marry Katherine the Duke's Daughter, that so all Pretensions to the Kingdom might cease. The Duke affented, and Articles being agreed upon and performed, the War betwixt him and Caltile ended. He being with the King at Coimbra, a Caltilian was there Lancaster, burnt, for contriving to Poyson him. Soon after, he returned to England.

9. The King having held the Cortes or Parliament at 1;88. Braga, fet out to recover some Places which still held for Castile. Melgazo having held out to the last; was then delivered up, the Defendants having only leave to depart without Arms. It was remarkable at this Siege, that Two Women, one of the Town, and the other of Acombas the Camp, challenged each other, and fought; the lat- betwixe ter was Victorious. Hence the King marched to Lisbon, two Woand in September, to the Province of Alentejo; where a- men. bout the middle of October, after a stout Defence, the Town and Castle of Campo-Major were taken by force. At the beginning of the following Year, the King being at Lisbon, one of the Queens Ladies, called Beatrix, was found to have admitted Ferdinand Alonfo, one of the King's Bed-Chamber, and his Favourite, to her Bed. Hereupon he was apprehended, and having made his Escape from the Officer, took Sanctuary in the Church. Thence the King himself went to drag him, and tho' he urged he was married, caused him to be burnt. The Lady went away to Castile to her Mother. Embassadors came to the King, being then in the Province between the Rivers Duero and Minho, proposing a Truce for some Months, and so Commissioners were appointed to treat with him; and in the mean while, the King, to lose no time, Befieged and took the City Tuy in Galicia. At length a Cessation was concluded for Three Years, and some Pla- A Cessation ces restored on both sides, but more to the Portuguese. of Arms, Nevertheless, the King of Castile ceased not to make mighty preparations for War; but his Deligns were prevented by Death, which happened to him by a fall from his Horse. After the expiration of the Three Years, the Years, Nobles of Castile, and the Governours to King Henry, Son to the late King John, by his First Wife, the Lady Ellenor, advised him to desist from his Pretensions to Portugal, since he was not Born of Queen Beatrix, on whom that Title was grounded. Embassadors were fent to this Effect to Portugal, where a Peace was concluded for Fifteen Years; all Prisoners on both sides to be released, and all Dammages done, during the late Cessation, to be made good; and then Hostages for performance, were given on both fides.

10. But these Articles were not faithfully performed The Truce on the Part of Castile, neither as to restitution of Dam- not any mages, nor releasement of Prisoners; wherefore the Por- observed. tuguese resolved to do himself suffice, by taking some Towns; and accordingly surprized Badajoz, and Allon-

1390. Spain and Portugal,

Henry of Castile. Peace is

Prince

concluded.

querque. Embassadors sent from Castile, promised performance of Articles upon Restitution of those Places: and it was only done to amuse the King, for at the same time Vessels were fitting out in Biscay against Portugal and two Portuguese Ships laden with Warlike Stores, were taken off of Cape S. Vincent. At the same time, the Castilians made Incursions, wasting all the open Country: But the Constable defeated a Party of 400 of them that was returning home with a rich Booty. Campo-Mayor was foon after taken by the King. Having thus fecured themselves against their Enemy, the King and Constable gave themselves some Repose. The latter distributed most of what the King had bestowed on him for his Services, on such Gentlemen as had always adhered to him. On the contrary, the King now established on the Throne, took back to himself much of what he had bestowed on many great Men for their good Service in the War. As the Constable had received most, this fell heaviest upon him; and therefore he resolved to depart the Kingdom; but the King returning part of what he had taken from him, with difficulty perswaded him to itay. The taking of Badajoz, and Albuquerque before mentioned, had renewed the War, and the Country was now again in Hostile manner wasted on both sides, wherein many notable Skirmishes happened.

CHAP. III.

The remaining Part of the Life and Reign of King John, the First of the Name, and Henth King of Portugal, from the Year 1393. till 1433.

Any great Men disgusted for that the King, as was before said, Had since his establishment recalled part of the Grants made to them during his Necessity, went over to Castile; where settling themselves, they became the Heads of Noble Families. The King having taken Salvatierra, layed Siege to Tay, which after a vigorous Defence, was furrendred to him. In the mean while, Prince Denis, Son to King Peter, by Lady Agnes Denis, Son de Castro; was by the King of Castile sent into Portugal to King Pewith an Army, and the Title of King. At the same time, ter, enters the Castilian Admiral, James Hurtado de Mendoza, enrred the River Tagus with a Fleet of Forty Ships, and Fifteen Galleys. Nunho Alvarez Pereyra, with all the Forces he could make, marched to oppose Prince Denis. who upon the News of his approach returned to Castile. The King had given to the Constable the sole Government of the Province of Alentejo, and Algarve, which he for some time held, but soon after resigned, and went away to the King to affift him at the Siege of Tuy; but it was taken before he arrived there. Misser Ambrosio Marines, a Genoese, was sent Embassador from Castile to settle a Peace; in order to which a Cessation was agreed upon for Nine Months. This Term expired, and nothing was concluded. Hereupon the King, about the middle of May, layed Siege to Alcantara; but was forced, after some Days, to desist from that Enterprize.

2. A Treaty of Peace was again set on Foot at Sego- Peace convia, where, after long Debates, it was concluded upon cluded bethe following Conditions: That no Money should be twist the demanded of Castile, on account of former Breach of Two Articles; That Towns and Prisoners should be exchanged on both sides; That the Castilian Hostages should be restored; That the Portugueses who fled to Castile should return to their Estates. On these Terms a Truce was concluded for Ten Years, and Hostages were Net obsergiven on both fides for Performance. But this Cellation wed. produced no more quiet than the former; continual Hostilities were exercised, the the Actions seem not very considerable; for there is no particular Account of them; but the 4th. Year after the conclusion of the last Truce, a perpetual Peace began to be discoursed of. King Henry of Caftile was then dead, and Queen Katherine, Sifter to the Queen of Portugal, had the tuition of King John the Second, not yet a Year Old. In her Husband's Life time, she had always advised Peace, and she now moved, That Embassadors from both sides might meet on the Frontiers of the Two Kingdoms; who did so accordingly, but came to no conclusion, because the Caltilians Demands ran high. After many Messages had pasfed on both fides, and much time spent, the Treaty was again let a Foot, and now Embassadors employed to manage it, who at length agreed upon Articles, whereof length eftablished.

1401.

1411. the chiefest was, That the Subjects of both Crowns, who had ferved against their Princes, should be restored to their Countries and Estates. Peace now established, and the Crown secured, application was made to the Pope for Absolution of the Censures laid on the Kingdom, upon Account of promoting King John to the Throne. he being a Bastard, and having professed in the Order of Avis. Pope Boniface the 9th granted his Request, and Absolved the Kingdom. The King had a Bastard-Son called Alonso, whom he loved no less than his lawful If fue, and therefore gave him to Wife Beatrix, the only Daughter of the Constable Nunho Alvarez Pereyra. They had a Daughter called Elizabeth, who was Wife to Prince John, Son to King John the First; and two Sons, which were Alonso, afterwards Earl of Ourem; and Ferdinand Earl of Arroyolos, and First Duke of the House of Bra-

3. The King now fixed in his Throne, had bent his thoughts upon folemn entertainments, and publick rejoycings, defigning to Knight his Five Sons with all imaginable Solemnity. But they advised him to expend that Money on some Forreign enterprize, since all was quiet at home, and it would be more honourable for them to be Knighted in the Field, than in the Court. The Defign they fixed upon, was the taking of Centa on the Coast of Africk, which they acquainted the King withal, and he approving thereof, enjoyned them to keep it secret To this end, Two Gallyes were fent to view the Place. and found the Port, and to conceal what they went about they continued their Voyage to Sicily, as had been at First given out. Great industry was used in fitting out Vessels at Lisbon; and many more of Galicia, Biscay, England, and the Low-Countries, were hired. The Young Princes at the same time, raised Forces in all Parts of the Kingdom. Various judgments were made of the Intent of these Preparations, Castile began to grow jealous; the Aragonian was not well satisfyed and the Moorish King of Granada feared all the Storm would fall upon him. The Rumour of these preparations drew many Martial Men from Forreign Parts, to The Plague gain Honour in this Enterprize. At this time the Plague in Lisbon, had spread it self throughout Lisbon, and having entred the Queen the Pallace, Queen Philippa died of it. Her Body was dies of is. found Fifteen Months after not only uncorrupted, but yielding

The King bent upon publick rejoycings for the Peace.

1412.

The History of PORTUGAL.

vielding a most Fragant smell. Her Life was a Pattern of Piety and Vertue; her happy Death was on the 18th. of July 1415, in the 64th. Year of her Age. Many looked upon her Death as an ill Omen to the Enterprize in Hand, and therefore advised to defift from it; but the King and Princes could not be moved.

4. On the last Day of July, the Fleet sailed from Lis- 1415. bon, the 7th. of August it came to Faro, and the 14th. A great the City Centa was taken, to the Wonder of all Europe, Fleet Sails and Terror of the Enemies of Portugal. The particulars from Lisof this Action, which are not many, the Place being ta-bon, for ken in Four Hours, are to be found in the Portuguese Af- the Confrick. The King returning home, created his Second Ceuta. Son Peter, Duke of Coimbra; and his Third Henry Duke of Visco. This done, he went to Ebora, and was there received in Triumph by the Princes John and Ferdinand, and the Princess Elizabeth. The Ratification of the perpetual Peace with Castile, had been delayed till that King came to the Age of Fourteen, and took the Government upon himself. He being at that Age, this Year 1419, Embassadors passed to and fro, and after much Debate, concluded a Truce for Eleven Years; conditionally, That both Kings should be obliged, if they designed to make War at the expiration thereof, to notify the same to the other Party Eighteen Months before. Several discoveries had been of late Years attempted through the industry of Prince Henry; and now this Year 1420, the Islands of 1420, Puerto Santo, and Madera, were First found; such were the beginnings that gave Encouragment to the Discovery of India and America. But of these Discoveries we have writ particular Books. In the Year 1422, the King changed the computation of time till then used in Portugal, which was from the Reign of Augustus, to that of the Year of our Lord, in imitation of King John the First of Castile, who had made the like Reformation there before.

5. This same Year, the Constable Nunho Alvarez Pereyra, being 62 Years of Age, took upon him the religious Order of the Carmelites, in the Monastery of Lisbon, built by himself. There he lived a very exemplary Life the space of 9 Years, and died aged 71 Years. To secure Peace ratithe space of 9 Years, and field aged 71 Years. To lettile field be-the Peace with Castile, the King sent his Embassaddens swixt Cathither; but one of them being overthrown, and almost stile and killed at the exercise of Tilting, the Castilian sent an Em- Portugal. ballador

1415.

1419.

1422.

bassador to Portugal, who exchanged the Ratifications.

War now ceasing, Prince Peter, the Kings Second Son, resolved to Travel; and setting out with a Train sutable to his Quality, he ran through a great Part of Europe.

Asia and Africk. Four Years he spent in this imployment.

having been nobly entertained in the Courts of all Princes. These Travels being then rare, especially in such Persons, gave occasion to many fabulous Relations thereof, afterwards foread abroad, which rendred the Truth

it felf fuspected. The King in the mean while applying 1424.

1430.

falls fick.

Parts of a good Christian, he gave up his Ghoft. ("Yet His Death. " with the Authors leave, I cannot conceive with what " Piety an Usurper can die, not having made Restieution.) The News of his Death being spread through the Gity, it is impossible to express the Sorrow the City was Fourteenth of August, 1433. having performed all the 1422. filled with. His Body was carried to the Cathedral on the Shoulders of his Sons, the Nobility, the whole Multitude of both Sexes, and all Ages, following.

himself to the Civil Government, Enacted many good Laws. Prince Edward was now 26 Years of Age, and Prince Ed. yet unmarried; therefore a Match was at this time conward con- cluded for him with the Princess Ellenor, Sister to Alontraffed to so King of Aragon, and Naples. Her Dower was 200000 Ellenor, Florins. At the same time also, the Lady Elizabeth. Sifter to Daughter to the Earl of Urgel, and Grand-Child to Pe-Alonfo ter the Fourth, King of Aragon, was contracted to Prince King of Peter, coming home after his Travels, and the following Aragon. Year she was Conducted to Portugal. This same Year, 1429.

Philip of Burgundy, Earl of Flanders, being the second time a Widower, sent to ask the Princels Elizabeth in Marriage; which was granted, and she sent into Flan. ders, with a Portion of 150000 Crowns.

6. The King sent two Embassadors to mediate a Peace betwixt the Crowns of Castile, Arragon, and Navarre, the two latter whereof were hard pressed by the other. The Castilian also, that he might not seem to proceed upon unjust Grounds, dispatched an Embassador to the Portuguese, to acquaint him with the righteousness of his Proceedings. Now at last came the final Conclusion of the long-defired perpetual Peace with Caltile; for the ratifying whereof, Peter Gonzalez Malafaya being fent thither, he accompanied that King in his Expedition against the Moors of Granada. At their return from that War, the Peace was proclaimed in Castile, and an Embassador came thence into Portugal, to see the same performed there. This was the end of those Pretentions which had alarmed these two Kingdoms for the space of almost Fifty Years. The victorious King John at length, King John overcome with Age, fell fick of his last Malady. He was removed to Alcouchete, to try whether the Air would do him good, but perceiving his Death draw on, he caused himself to be carried back to Lisbon. There on the Fourteenth

7. He had a pleasing Aspect; his Stature large, and His Chan his Strength proportionable; for his Helmet, kept to ratter. this Day, is too large for any Head, and his Battle-Ax too weighty for any Arm. Prosperity and Adversity he bore equally; was Constant, Magnanimous, Merciful, Bountiful and Religious. His Buildings were fair and sumptuous, as appears by the Monasteries of Penalinga and Carnota, and the Palaces of Lisbon and Santarem, and above all, the prodigious Structure of the Church of our Blessed Lady of Batalla, or of the Battle, erected in Memory of the famous Victory obtained at Aliubarrota. To describe this wonderful Pile would take up too much room in the small compals of this short History, therefore we shall pass it by. To this Place was the deceased King, with mighty Pomp, translated by his Son King Edward, just the Day 12 Months after his Death, that is on the 14th. of August, 1434.

8. King John had Eight Children by his Wife Phi- His Wife, lippa, Daughter to John Duke of Lancaster: 1st. Blanch, and Ifec. who died in her Infancy. 2dly, Alonfo, Born at Santa. rem, and lived but 10 Years. 3dly, Edward, who fucceeded him in the Throne. 4thly, Peter Duke of Coimbra, a Man so learned, that he wrote several Books; he also travelled a great Part of the then known World, as was said before, and married Elizabeth the Daughter of the Earl of Urgel, which also has been above intimated. Being Governour of the Kingdom during the Minority of his Nephew King Alonfo, he gained many Enemies, and was at their instigation put to Death by that King. 5thly, Henry Duke of Visco and Master of the Order of Christ, who being studious in the Mathematicks, fitted out Ships at his own cost, to discover the Coasts of Africk, wherein he made a great Progress, and occasioned the Discovery of India. To the end he might wholly addict himself to these Affairs, he settled his abode at Sagres, near Cape S. Vincent, in the Kingdom of Algarve, where he died. 6thly, John, Master of the Order of Sautiago in Portugal, and Constable. 7thly, Ferdimind. Matter of the Order of Avis, accounted a Martyr for his great Sufferings, and Death in flavery among the Moors of Africk. 8thly, Elizabeth, married to Philip the third, Earl of Flanders, and Duke of Burgundy, This King's Bastard-Children were, Alonso, Earl of Bar. celos, and first Duke of Bragança; and Beatrix, married to Thomas Earl of Arundel, in England.

His Arms.

9. This King reduced the ten Bezants, before used in each of the five Scutcheons of the Arms of Portugal, to five, the Crois of Avis appearing underneath, in Memore that he had been Maiter of that Order; and because he received the English Order of the Garter, which is of S. George, he used for his Crest, the Head of a winged Dragon; and from that time forward, the Portuguele use to call upon S. George in the time of Battle.

Discove.

10. Discoveries in this King's time were made by John ries, made Gonzalez Zarco, Tristan Vaz Teixeira, and Bartholomew in his time. Perestrello, who being drove they knew not whither by a storm, found the Island they called Puerto Santo, in the Year 1418; and two Year's after, that of Madera, where they found a little Oratory, and Inscription, declaring that one Muchin, an English-Man, had been there before. Giles Timez attempting what none durst before him, paffed beyond Cape Esjador, and there planted a Crois.

CHAP. IV.

The Life and Reign of Edward the First of the Name, and Eleventh King of Portugal; his Actions, and Death, from the Year 1391, till 1438.

ward

1. Ing Edward was Born at Fifeo, in the Year 1391. He was with his Father at the taking of Conta, and married Ellenor Daughter to King Fordinava the first, of Aragon, in the Year 1428. The Body of King John being deposited in the Cathedral of Lisbon, on the 14th, of August, the next Day his Eldest Son Edward was proclaimed King. An Astrologer advited him to pass by that An Astrounfortunate Day, for that all the Constellations were logical Pre-Conspired against him. But he religiously slighting these distion. Predictions, went on with the Solemnity, and was Crowned that very Day. Then began the Astrologer publickly (as he had before done in private) to denounce, that his Reign would be short as to time, but tedious for the Misfortunes which would happen in it. The New King went to divert himself at Sintra, where his Son Alonso, not full 20 Months Old, was Sworn Heir to the Crown by the Nobility. This was the only time the like Ceremony was performed without the Concurrence of the Commonalty by their Representatives. He was also the first that had the Title of Prince given him in Portugal; his Father Alonse. following the example of the other Courts of Chri- Son to King stendom. The first that used it, was that of England, Edward where the Heir of the Crown was called Prince of Wales. the first From Sintra, the King sent his Summons to all the Pre- that had lates and Nobles, for them to meet, in order to attend the Tiele the Translation of his Father's Body, to a noble Sepulchre designed for it in the Church of Batalla, belonging to the gal Dominicans, and of the invocation of the Assumption of gal. our Blessed Lady, built by that King, in Memory of the Victory obtained in that Place.

2. It will not here be amiss, in short, to say something The Faneof his Funeral, which may shew the Custom of those ral of King times. All the Nobility and Clergy Assembled at Lisbon, John. The Mourning then used, was either white Sack-Cloath, or raw Canvas. Such was the Apparel of all the Nobility, and their Families. The Pallace was all Hung with Black. On the 25th. of October, all the Company marched in orderly Procession, from the Pallace to the Church, with great filence; the Bells of all the Churches ringing. At the Church, after a short Sermon, the Body was placed on a Mausoleum, and then the Divine Office for the dead, performed with great Solemnity. Prince Peter, and many other great men, stay'd in the Church all Night with the Body, and next Day, after Mass and Sermon, a costly Offering was made of Gold, Silver, and rich Brocados. This done, the Body was placed on a Triumphant Charriot, which was drawn through the Streets by the King, his Brothers, and the Nobility. In the New Street, and in the great Place called Recio, Scaffolds were erected, on which Learned Men made Funeral Orations suitable to the Occasion. At S. Vincent's-Gate, Four Horses were put to the Charriot. Four times the Funeral halted betwixt Lisbon and the Church of Batalla; at Odivellas, Villafranca, Alcoentre, and Alcobaça, The Fifth Day it came to the Church of Batalia, whither the Cortes or Parliament was summoned and there all that great Assembly assisted at Mass, and the other Funeral Rites.

3. The King hasted away to Legria, slying from the Rinz Edment.

Council.

1435.

ward kolds Plague, for here began his Misfortunes. The Corres or * Parlia- Parliament was held at Santarem, where the King gave general Satisfaction. Then he applied himself to the cares of the Government. He caused also the Laws to be epitomized, and reduced to one Volume, taking special care that they should be put in Execution. His next care, was to moderate excess in Apparel and Diet; and then he Ordered, That only one of the Princes, and such of the Nobility as were named, should attend at Court at one time; the rest being sent away to their Estates. and they to relieve the others in their turns. Thus the en-A general string Year was spent. Pope Martin had before this time, fummoned a general Council to meet at Bafle, for Uniting the Greek and Latin Churches. To this Council were tent Six Embassadors from Portugal. The Union of the Two Churches took Effect, but was not lasting; for the Greeks not finding those Supplies they expected from the Pope against the Turks, soon fell off. The Portuguese Embassadors obtained a Grant of the then Pope Eugenius, That the Kings of Portugal might be Crowned and Anointed in the same manner as those of England, and France. This same Year, the King designed his Sons should receive the Sacrament of Confirmation, with great Pomp and Solemnicy; but News being then brought. that the Kings of Naples and Navarre, Prince Henry, and above 100 Persons of great Note, were taken Prisoners in a Sea Fight, by Philip Duke of Milan, all publick Joy ceased, and the Court was filled with Mourning; nevertheless the Young Princes were confirmed.

An Expedition against Tangier.

4. This same Year also it was, that the Princes, Henry and Ferdinand, having first gained the Queen to their Party, perswaded the King to take in Hand an Expedition against Tanvier, in Africk. It was long before they could prevail upon him; but at last, overcome by their importunities, he took the Fatal Resoluton. A Tax was laid upon the Kingdom, for the Expence of this War; and all the Preparations, for such an Expedition diligently made. On the 17th of August the Princes Embarked, and the 22th. they failed from Belem. The particulars of this Unhappy Undertaking belong properly to the Portuguese Africk, where they are to be teen at large; but the event was, That most of the Portuguese Ariny The Portuperished, and Prince Ferdinand remained in Captivity, guese Arhe being left as an Hostage, for restoring Centa to the my destroy-Moors, upon their suffering the Relicks of the Portu-ed by the guese to return home. Prince Henry the Adviser of this Moors, Enterprize, sent Notice to the King, how he left his Bro. and the ther in Servitude, and tho he was the chief Cause of his King's Brefalling into that Mistortune, yet advised not to Ransom ther taken. him at so dear a rate, as by restoring Centa, to the Infidels. Those many Portuguese who escaped out of Africk, most Wounded, Naked, and Starved, Landing on the Coast of Spain, in the dead of Winter, found such extraordinary Charity in the Towns of Castile, through which The Charithey travelled, that I dare avouch, they had not met the ty of the like in their own Country. They were all bountifully Spanistics. Cloathed, their Wounds dressed, and Money liberall stowed upon them. In every House they had the and Beds given them, and being well recovered, were supplied ed with all they could defire to carry them home. The King informed by these People, of the charitable Entertainment they had found, ceased not to extol the goodness of those who had shown such Favour to his Subjects, and to express his Gratitude, he sent Letters to Sevil, and other Places of Andaluzia, where his Subjects had been received, full of Acknowledgments and Commendations, and offering himfelf, and his Kingdom, ready to require them.

5. The King, before the News came of this Disaster, was removed from Lisbon, to Santarem, flying from the Plague that then raged in that City. Having Advice The Plague there of the danger his Forces were in at Tangier, he made at Lisbon all possible Preparations to relieve them, but too late, for before any could fet out, part of the vanquished Fleet returned. The following Year the King summoned the 14.3. Cortes or Parliament, to meet at Legria. He gave them in Charge, to confider what was to be done, concerning Prince Ferdinand, left an Hostage to the Atoors, for the deliverv of the Plague.

I ward ales

Differ nees delivery of Centa. He produced a Paper written by that in the Cor- Prince, fignifying that Centa could not be maintained, tes, about and therefore it was better to give it up, then fuffer it to be taken. The Princes, Peter and John, with all the forming of Commons, voted that the Place should be delivered, but Prince Fer- the Archbishop of Braga, said, That a Christian Town could not be given away to the Infidels, for one Man, without the consent of the Pope. Others were for deferring the Exchange for some time, and in the mean while, to offer a Summ of Money and all the Moors in Portugal which were many, for the Prince; and in Case this were not received, that the Pope and Christian Princes should unite their Forces against Africk, which it it could not be effected, then Couta should be delivered.

6. The King stood dubious amidst such variety of Opinions. At length he refolved to have recourse to the Pope, and all the Christian Princes, believing they would all together assist him to ransom his Brother. From them he received nothing but words of Comfort and Advice, not to fu render Ceuta. The Plague was now to diffused throughout the Kingdom, that the King wandred from Town to Town. Being on the way to Tomar, a Letter was given him, which he no fooner opened, but the infection it brought seized him. In that Town he die on the 9th. of September, in the 47th. Year of his Age, having reigned Five Years and near a Month. In his Will, he ordained his Brother should be ransomed with Money; but in Case that were refused, then Centa should be given for him. That his Wife, Queen Ellenor, should Govern the Kingdom, and the Prince his Son. He was well Shaped, Strong, his Visige round, his Beard thin, his Hair black, his Eyes heavy, but taken altogether, his Countenance was graceful. He loved gay Apparel, and always appeard in Publick with Splendour. As to his Inclinations, he was Merciful, and a lover of Truth and Justice. For outward Accomplishments, he was an excellent Horseman, loved Wrestling, and was much addicted to Hunting. He writ some Treatises in Latin, favoured learned Men, and was very Religious. Several New forts of Money were coined by him, and confidering how prodigal his Predecessors had been, in giving away the Revenues of the Crown, he confirmed a Law invented by his Father, That no Female should inherit any Gift of the Crown.

7. His lawful Issue (as he had no other) was as follows. His Issue. Ist. D. Alonso, his Successor. 2dly, Ferdinand Duke of Viseo, Master of the Military Orders of Christ and Santiago, and Constable of Portugal; and also Father to Emanuel, who was afterwards King. 3dly, Philippa, who died of the Plague at 12 Years of Age. 4thly, Ellenor, married to the Emperor Maximilian, who was Grand-Father to the ever renowned Charles the 5th. D. John de Silva and Meneses, fell passionately in Love with this Princess, and followed her till he saw her married; after which he became a Franciscan Fryar, and led a very exemplary Life, at Montorio near Rome. 5thly, Katherine, contracted in England and Navarre, yet never married. 6thly. Joanna, Born after the Death of her Father, and married afterwards to King Henry the 4th. of Castile.

CHAP. V.

The First Part of the Life Reign of King Alonso, the Fifth of the Name, and inelfth King of Portugal, from the Year 1432. till 1469.

Ing Alonso the 5th. Succeeded his Father being but The Birth Six Years of Age. He was born at the Palace of of King A-Sintra, in the Year 1432. His Father in his Will, or-lonto. dained, That the Queen should have the Government of 1+32. the Young King and Kingdom; but every Nobleman stri- His Accesving to draw the Power into his own Hands, caused all fion to the to run into Confulion, whence entued greater Destructi- Graws, and on than had been produced by the preceding Plague. Differently They blamed the King for committing the care of the Daniel Realm to a Woman, the a Forreigner, and what they Northey. most resented, a Cufillian, as they termed her, tho' she was Daughter to the King of Aragon. The Princes, Brothers to the late King, were the Heads of these Factions, and particularly Prince Feter, who was always an Enemy to the Queen. Prince Alonso being proclaimed King, in the Sixth Year of his Age, on the Tenth of September, in the Town of Tomar, the Second Day after his Father's Death, Queen Ellenor took upon her the Government, as had been ordained by her Husband's Will, and so far laid aside all former Animosity with Prince Peter, that they did nothing without his Advice, and defired him joyntly with her to Sign the Writs of Summons for the Cortes or Parliament. Before the Cortes could meet, Prince Peter, upon pretence of Zeal to secure the Succession, in Case the Young King should die before he was Marriageable, caufed his younger Brother Ferdinand to be Sworn Heir to the Crown conditionally, if the other died without Iffue. The Queen pleased with these outward shows of Loyalty in Prince Peter, discovered to him, That the King her Husband had declared to his Confessor, it was his Will, that the present King Alonso should marry Elizabeth, Daughter of the said Prince Peter; to which she willingly consented, and desired it might be immediatly performed. The Prince, tho aftonished at so great a favour, accepted the offer. No sooner was this noised abroad, but Alonso, Earl of Barcelos, Bastard-Brother to Prince Peter, designing to marry the King to his own Grand Daughter, prevailed with the Archbishop of Lisbon, the Queen's Fayerite, to diswade her from that Re-folution. Prince Per understanding the Design, asked the Queen to confirm her Promise to him under her Hand; which she, tho her mind was altered, easily granted.

7. His

The Corres meet, and instead of fettling Breach,

2. The Cortes being met at Torres Novas, where Peace ought to have been established, there Discord broke out, The Nobility envying Prince Peter the Honour of marrying his Daughter to the King, Conspired against him. Peace, wi- However, it was carried in this Parliament, That the Queen should have the Education of the King, and Prince Peter the Power of the Government. She was content; but his Adversaries stickled against this Resolution, so that they came to be divided; the Nobility affirming the Queen ough to Govern, and the Commons afferting it was their Right to nominate the Prince a Protector. Prince Henry mediated between them, allotting the Queen the Charge of the King and the Revenue, appointing the Prince to Defend the Kingdom, and allowing Earl Alonso to take Charge of the Administration of Justice, with the Advice of the Council, and Approbation of the Queen and Prince, directing the Cortes to meet Yearly to tettle all greater Matters. Prince Peter, tho' nothing was left him but the bare Title of Protector, submitted rather than embroil the Kingdom. Earl Alonfo, tho' he had more than he could have demanded, was dissatisfied; and the Queen, pushed on by the Prince's Adversaries. would part with nothing. The mutinous People obliged the Queen to accept of what was allotted her. Earl Alonso fent his Son to demand of Prince Peter the Note the Queen had given him, for Security of the King's Marrying his Daughter; he, in scorn, tore it in pieces, and so returned it.

3. Embassadors from Castile had been some time in Portugal, and could not be heard by reason of the pre- Embassa. fent Disorders. At length they had Audience of the dors of Ca-Oneen at Lisbon, where they proposed, in the Name of stile fent King John the Second of Castile, That the Bishops, ex- away withpelled during the Schism, should be restored; That the out an An-Military Orders of Avis and Santiago in Portugal, should Just. fubmit themselves, as they had been before, to those of Calatrava and Avis in Castile; That some Portuguese Bishopricks, formerly subject to the Archiepiscopal See of Sevil. should return to its Obedience. After some Debate, they were fent away without any Answer, which was to be given by Portuguese Embassadors appointed to follow them. The People were not at all pleased with the Queen's Administration, and pressed Prince Peter to take it upon himself. She slying from the Plague, then in the City, retired to Mount Olivet, where she was delivered of the Princess Joanna, afterwards Queen of Cafile, and received Letters from the Pope, condoling the Death of the King, and advising her not to deliver Centa for Prince Ferdinand. Prince Peter, stirred up by the V People to take upon him the Government, and advised to it by his Brother, Prince John, to prevent a Civil War. delayed the time. At length, the People, wholly averse The People to the Queen, ran in multitudes to oblige the Prince to werfe to enter upon the Administration of the Publick Affairs, and he, tho' displeased with the Queen, pacified the To Multitude, perswading them to put off that Design till the Meeting of the Cortes or Parliament.

4. The Queen privately writ to all the Members of Tumults as Parliament to come armed, that they might suppress gainst she the Rabble. But Prince Peter understanding it, as Pro-Queen. tector, charged them to be ready to obey his Orders. This done, he took leave of the Queen in a course manner, which President made her the more slighted, and a Cooper

in Portu-

g:].

the being sensible of it, speedily removed to Alenguer. The Citizens of Lisbon elected a Standard-bearer, and held Seditious Meetings, in contempt of the Queen's Letters. The Archbishop fortified himself against the Citizens, they stopped his Revenue, fent Complaints against him to Rome, and he was forced to fly to Castile. The Multitude, headed by a Cooper, declared Prince Peter should Govern, and a Taylor fatify'd this Decree. Thus the Kingdom was disposed of by a Cooper and a Taylor. The Governour of the Castle of Lisbon held for the Queen, but being fore pressed by the People, was forced to surrender it to Prince John. Prince Peter sent to Summons the Queen to the Parliament; she replyed, the would not go, unless he refigned all Claim to the Government; but he rather chose to stand to the Election Prince Per made of him by the Cooper and the Taylor. The Prince ter mane coming from Coimbra to Lisbon, accepted the Govern-Regent by ment at the hands of the Multitude, which was afterwards confirmed to him by the Cortes or Parliament, to and a Tay- which the Young King was brought, after sufficient Seior, He.ras curity given his Mother that he should be restored to of the Rab- her. Nevertheless, he was forcibly taken from her, and the retired to Sintra. Thence she craved Assistance of her Brothers, the Princes of Aragon, who fent Embasfadors to intercede for her, but they were dismissed without any Answer. She ceased not to make Friends in Navarre and Aragon, and the Prince secured Castile to his Party. The Queen, in order to make her Escape, fent away her Plate and Jewels, which were of a great Value, to be kept in the Castle of Albuquerque. Embassadors came from Castile to require she might either be restored to the Government, or have leave to depart rhe Kingdom. But no farisfactory Antwer being given them, the hereupon made her Escape, with her Daughcivil Wars of The Owner the Death of the King.

5. The Queen being milfing, all was in Confusion. Crato, and all the Castles subject to that Priory, held for her, and thus the Civil War commenced. Some Places were taken by the Prince, and he refolved to Befiege the Queen in the Town of Crate, but she having called some Castilian Troops to her Assistance, after making much havock, withdrew into Castile. Alonso, Earl of Barcelos, still held out for the Queen, but his Son following the Prince, brought him over to that Party, the' not without difficulty. Thus, for some time, all Storms seemed to be blown over. About this time was brought from Rome a Dispensation for the Young King to Marry Prince Peter's Eldest Daughter Elizabeth, as also the Orders of Santiago and Avis in Portugal were exempted from any Subjection to the Orders in Castile. The Dispensation being come, the King was marryed by the Confent of the Cortes, then fitting, to the Regent's Daughter, at Obidos on the 15th. of August, 1441. The 1111. Bridegroom was then Ten Years of Age, and the Bride The Young Seven or Eight. The Queen Dowager Hill pressed to King marbe restored to the Government, and the King of Castile ries the sent several Embassages in her behalf, which nothing Regent's availing, it was feared a War would enfue; but that Daugher. King dying, all that Negotiation fell to nothing. Thus the Queen Dowager being forsaken on all hands, and having spent her Treasure in solliciting to make War upon Portugal, went away at last to Toledo, where she lived upon Charity, and there died, as was suspected, poisoned by the Regent, tho others say, by D. Alvaro de Luna, then Favourite to the King of Castile. 6. The King of Castile being jealous of the Aragonian, asked some Supplies of Men out of Portugal. They were accordingly fent him, under the Command of the Constable Peter, Son to the Regent; but there being no use for them, they returned home. However, the Constable, while he was in Castile, concluded a Match betwixt that King and the Lady Elizabeth, Daughter to Prince John. King Alonso of Portugal being now Four- 1245. teen Years of Age, according to the Custom of Spain, King A. took upon him the Government in the Assembly of the lonfo taken Cortes or Parliament, thanked Prince Peter for his good upon him Administration till that time, and desired him to con-the Growntinue in it till he were of riper Years. Next, he ratified ment, and his Marriage with that Prince's Daughter, and then went that had away to Alcagaras, where the Embassador of Castile been done was Proxy for his Master in the Ceremony of Contract- by the Reing the Lady Elizabeth, Daughter to Prince John, to that gone King. There also the Lady Beatrix, Sister to Elizabeth, was contracted to Prince Ferdinand, Brother to that King. Prince Peter by this time thought he had wholly gained over all his Enemies that opposed his Advancement to the Government, but now it appeared it was but a counterfeit Reconciliation. The Duke of Bra-ganza, the Earl of Ourem, and the Archbishop of Lisbon prevailed with the King to remove him from the Government, laying Disloyalty to his Charge, and they at the same time displaced all Officers, as well Civil as Military, that had been preferred by him. Not so content, they accused him of aspiring to the Crown, and so far prevailed, as to have him banished the Court; which done, several Libels were dispersed abroad, fraught with nothing but Reflections upon him, and many Articles laid to his charge, were Iudicially examined. Prince Henry came from Algarve to Court, to vindicate his Brother's Honour, but to little purpose, because he was look'd upon to be no less guilty than the other, and both of them were charged with poisoning King Edward, Queen Ellenor, and Prince John. D. Alvaro de Almada, Earl of Abranchez, in the King's Presence challenged any Man that should lay blemish on the Prince's Reputation; but the King was carryed away to Sintra by his Favourites, that he might not give ear to those that favoured Prince Peter.

Q.172.2.

Prince Peter, the late Regent, in declared Rebel.

7. The King from Sintra issued out his Orders, forbidding all Persons to Converse and hold Correspondence with the Prince; also Summoning all the Queen his Mother's Servants, who had been discarded, to appear. Arms, and and put in their Claims; and Commanding the Prince not to depart from his own Lands without the King's leave. He was also commanded to deliver up all the Arms that were in Coimbra, which he refused to do. The Duke of Braganza being called to Court, was to pass through the Prince's Lands, and therefore intended to Travel well attended; but the Prince marched out with Forces to oppose him, and tho' several times Orders were brought him from the King, to return to Coimbra, he still advanced towards the Duke, who was forced privately to fly, and make his escape to Santarem, where the Court then was. Hereupon he was declared a Rebel and Traytor, and Forces were raifed with Expedition against him. D. Sancho de Noronha, Earl of Odemira, was sent with Forces against the Constable, Prince Peter's Son, who fled to Castile, where he found not such kind Entertainment as he expected. Queen Elizabeth being the Prince's Daughter, studied how to save her Father, and gave him Advice, that the Fifth of May was the day appointed to Besiege him. Then she went to the

The History of PORTUGAL.

King to beg Pardon for him, which the King faid he would grant, provided the Prince himself would beg it, acknowledging his Faults. He did so in a Letter to the King, but the Queen shewing him her Letter, wherein the Prince vindicated himself, and said, he complyed so far only to satisfie her; the King said, since he did not really acknowledge his faults, he merited no Pardon. The Prince's Enemies, to prevent the Queen's interceding for him, kept him as much from her as they could, and imprisoned D. Alvaro de Castro, a Man of a most beautiful Person, and excellent Behaviour, as standing accused of too much Familiarity with the Queen, but the King knowing well her Vertue, caused D. Alvaro to be fet at Liberty, and did him great Honour.

8. The King had now gathered a numerous Army, but could not set forward for want of Provisions and The Kine Carriages. But the Prince on his part fet forward from comes to & Coimbra with 1000 Horse, and 5000 Foot, and came Battle with within five Leagues of Santarem without meeting any she Rebels. Opposition. There he was advised to return to Coimbra, but he chose to advance towards Lisbon, and by the way put to Death about fifty Horse of the King's, that at a distance called him Traytor. Being come to a Brook called Alfarreveira, he there chose a convenient Ground for a small Body to oppose a greater, for he had not yet 8000 Men, and the King's Army confifted of above 30000. By that Multitude he found himself encompassed on the 20th of May. Proclamation was made, declaring all Traytors that should thenceforth adhere to the Prince; vet none forfook him, but some of the King's Army deferted to him. Some Shot of Musquets and Cross-bows flying from the King's Camp to the Prince's, he anfwered with some Cannon, one of the Bullets whereof falling near the King's Tent, so enraged his Army, that they immediately, without Orders, fell on, and in a moment broke and put to flight the Prince's Forces. He himself fighting resolutely, was shot through with an Prince Pe-Arrow, and died. His inseparable Friend, the Earl of ter killed. Abranchez, having sworn not to forsake him in Death, after having performed incredible Acts of Bravery, was there also slain. Most of the Prince's followers were either taken or killed. His Body was left three days in the Field, and then being laid upon a Ladder, four Country men carryed it to the poor Church of Alverca, where where it was buried. The King was received at Lisbon in Triumphant manner. Many Persons were executed on Account of these Troubles, and their Heirs, to the Fourth Generation, declared Infamous. The Prince's Enemies fearing the Queen might some time or other Revenge the Death of her Father, advised the King to be divorced from her; but he received her with all the marks of True Love and Affection. They begged of him some Towns that had belonged to the Prince, which he freely gave them; but the Cities of Porto and Portalegre would not submit to be given away to any Body. and were therefore annexed to the Crown. 9. The Princess Ellenor during this time was contra-delivered in the Month of August to his Embassadors,

They embarked at Lisbon, and landed at Leghorn, whence Albertus the Arch-Duke, and other Princes. Hence they travelled together to Rome, where they were crowned

The Princell Elle- Eted to the Emperor Frederick the Third, and was now nor contracted to the Empe- she was conducted to Sienna, where the Bridegroom met ror Frede- her, attended by Ladislaus King of Hungary, his Brother rick the Third.

1451.

with the usual Solemnity. Prince Ferdinand, who was 1452. marryed to the Lady Beatrix, Daughter to Prince John, privately built a Caravel, and went away in it to Centa, to employ himself against the Moors, but the King soon fent for him home, and to settle his Mind, gave him 1453. the Towns of Beja, Moura, and Serpa. The great Monarch of the Turks, Mahomet, having taken Constantinople, Pope Calixtus stirred up the Christian Princes to unite their Forces against the Common Enemy. Our King offered to ferve in Person one Year with 12000 Men, but all these Projects fell to nothing. Our Queen had before this time brought forth a Son and a Daughter, whereof the former died, and now on the third of May she was delivered at Lisbon of another Son, whom the called John, as the first had been, for the special Devotion she had to that Name. He was sworn Prince, being but a Month old, with great Solemnity. The Queen upon this Occasion obtained leave of the King, that the Body of her Father, Prince Peter, might be placed in the Tomb he had built for himself at the Famous Monastery of Batalla. At this time also a Match was concluded betwixt the Princess Joanna, King Alonso's Daughter, and Henry the Fourth, King of Castile. She was Seventeen Years of Age, and very beautiful, which was all her Portion, and she was conducted to Castile, by Count Alvaro Gonzalez de Atayde. Elizabeth our Queen died on the Second of December following, not The Queen's without suspicion of Poison given her, by her Father's Death. Enemies, fearing she might prevail with the King to Revenge his Death. She was carried to the Church of Batalla, with the greatest Pomp that had been used at the Funeral of any Queen. For Beauty, Patience, Obedience, and Piety, she was inferior to none. The Monaftery of Xabregas of the religious of S. Eloy, was founded by her. The King ordered the Body of his Mother, Queen Ellenor, to be brought from Toledo, to be buried at the Church of Batalla. As far as Elvas it was conducted by the King and Queen of Castile, and there they were met by our King.

10. The Bishop of Silves brought the Croisade from 1457. Rome, granted to Encourage Christian Princes to joyn The Croitheir Forces against the Turks. Our King made Prepara- sade tions for that Expedition, and recalled Peter, the Consta- brought inble and Master of Avis, Son to Prince Peter, who was to Portu-Banished to Castile. He also coined a New fort of pieces gal. called Cruzadoes, from the Croisade and the Crois on them. These were of pure Gold, and great Weight, that they might pass in Forreign Countries, but the other Christian Princes not answering on their Part, he bent his Mind upon Profecuting the Conquest of Africk. Tangier was first aimed at, but this Resolution was changed for 14.8. Alcaser. Twenty thousand Landmen were appointed for Alcazer. this Service, who fet fail from Setuval the 12th. of Octo- on the Coast ber, in Two hundred Sail of Ships. They no sooner ar- of Africk. rived than that they were Victorious, and reduced that taken by Place; the Particulars of which Action are in the King A-Portuguese Africk. A Peace was now established lonso. with the Duke of Britany, whose Subjects had taken 1459. many Portuguese Ships, which was repaid them in the fame kind. The following Year died Prince Henry, 1150 who first gave Encouragement, and promoted the Discoveries on the Coast of Africk. A Year after he was sollowed by Alonjo, Duke of Bragança, Bastard-Son to King John the First. The King being advertised. That it 1467. would be easie to surprize Tangier, set sail from Lisbon in Tangier November, and the he met with many difficulties he be- taken. came Master of that Place. The Catalonians rebelling against their lawful Sovereign, King Tehn of Aragon, fent to invite Peter, Son to the Unfortunate Prince Peter, to that Principality as being descended of the Ancient Earls of Barcelona. He hasted thither from Centa, but lived not long there, and lies buried in the Cathedral. King Alonso went over from Ceuta, to Gibraltar, to meet the King of Castile, who craved Aid of him against his Nobility; that not content with staining his Honour, sought

1476.

280

CHAP. VI.

The remaining Part of the Life and Reign of King Alonio, the Fifth of the Name, and Twelfth King of Portugal, and his Death; from the Year 1470, till 1481.

i. Nthe i8th of September, died at Setubal, Prince Ferdinand, Brother to King Alonfo, and Father tomany Children; whereof one was Emanuel afterwards King. Soon after his Death, his Daughter Ellenor was married to Prince John, he being Fourteen Years of Age. and the Thirteen. Twelve Portuguese Ships now coding from Flanders, were taken by the English; whereupon, our King ordered Reprifals to be made, and fent Embassadors to complain of it; which was followed by a lasting Peace. In the mean while, Persons were fent to discover the Port of Arzila, on the Coast of Africk, who brought an Account, that 30000 Men were requifite for that Expedition; 24000 Landmen, besides the Seamen, were shipped on Board 308 Sail of all forts. The King failed to Lagos in Algarve, before he discovered his De- 10 ng Align, then palling over to Arzila, took that Place, as he londorses. did Tangier, forfaken by the Inhabitants upon the first Arzi asma News of his approach. Upon this Conquest, the King He change. changed his Titles, which before were, King of Portigal, his Title Algarve and Centar for those of, King of Fortugal, and both Algarves, that on this fide, and that on the other in Africk. Prince Ferdinand, after he was taken in the former Expedition, against Tangier, lived Six Years in Slavery, and his Body remained Twenty more among the Infidels. But the King gave now in exchange for his Bones, Two Wives, and a Daughter of Miley Magne Lord of that Place; and afterwards King of Fix. The Bones were brought over, and buried in the Famous Church of Batalla. King Heavy or Capille, and our King Alonfo, had an interview between Bud ije, and Elvas, about a Match for the Prince of Portsey, with Journa, Princess of Castile, but it had no Effect; for the receldious Castilians, openly declared her a Baitard, and Eliadoub, that King's Silter was married to Forling of 1464 to deprive him of the Crown. Here it was agreed, King Alonso should marry Elizabeth, Sister to the Castilian; and his Son Prince John, the Princess Joanna, but all this took no effect. Queen Joanna of Castile, on whom those People cast all their Reproaches, accusing her of Adultery, only in malice to D. Beltran de la Cueva, the King's Favourite, whom she treated with Courtesie; came to the City Guarda to crave Aid of the King her Brother against the Rebels, who called her Daughter a Bastard, and had opprobriously used a Statue they had erected to the King her Husband. King Alonso intended to have succoured her, but was prevented by the Death of Prince Alonso of Castile, who had been proclaim'd King, in opposition to the King his Brother; whereupon enfued some tranquility in the Affairs of Castile. King John of Aragon, made great Interest that his Son Ferdinand might marry Elizabeth, Sister to the King of Castile. Our King Alonso, also sent Embassadors to demand her according to the Articles concluded at Gibraltar. But these Embassadors could not prevail, for she was already engaged to Ferdinand, and much more to those who advised that Match, in opposition to her Brother, that she might the better, with their assistance, deprive him of the Crown. That Match was concluded in February, 1469. This is that Elizabeth, 10 much admired by the Spaniards for Sanctity, and yet, by this it appears she aimed to Usurp the Crown from her Brother, and actually did it from his only Daughter.

CHAP

Aragon, by the Name of Princess of Castile. It it horrid to think, with what Impudence they durst Declare that Princess a Bastard, seeing she was Born in Wedlock; and for what they pretended of the King's Impotency, it was contrary to Reason; since it is notorious the Queen was Jealous of him, and the could have no occafion for jealousie, had she found the King unfit for the Company of Women. But the World is sufficiently convinced, there can be no true Reason given to justifie Rebellion, yet Rebels never want pretences to Colour their Villany.

Affirs of Castile.

2. King Henry of Castile met his Sister Elizabeth at Segovia, and he dying on the 11th. of December following, it was generally believed he was poisoned. In his Will, he appointed his Daughter Joanna to succeed him. and defired the King of Portugal, to take her to Wife. At the Hour of his Death, his Confessor pressed him to declare who was his lawful Heir; and he answered his Daughter Joanna. Nothing more could have been done to prove her Legitimate, but nothing will suffice against hardned Rebels. Scarce was the Princess Elizabeth assured of the King's Death, when she caused her self to be proclaimed Queen at Segovia. In the mean while, the Marquis de Villena, the Earl of Benavente, and the Bishop of Signenza, appointed by King Henry, to see his Will executed, fent to the King of Portugal, praying him to tet forward with all possible speed, and that not only they, but many more Nobles, and the principal Cities of Cafile, would declare for him. The King was then at Estremoz, where having consulted his Council, he resolved to accept of what was offered; and in order thereunto, sent his Lord Chamberlain, Lope de Albuquerque to Castile, who returned to him with fresh Assurances, in the Month of January, the King being then at Evera. Elizabeth the New Queen, sent some religious Men to advite our King not to engage in an unjust War (as she termed it) and to offer him another Joanna, Silter to her Husband Ferdinand, in Marriage. He answered he was resolved to stand by his Niece, being obliged to it, as an Unkle, as a King, and as a Gentleman.

Alonfo wage: War reguetal der

3. Whilst he made Preparations for War, he sent an force of the Embassador to Ferdinand and Elizabeth, to demand that Crown, who returning with fuch an Answer, as he had expected; he immediately advances to Callile, by the way of Arenches, with 5600 Horse, and 14000 Foot. With this Army he came to Plasencia, and was there joyfully received by many of the Nobility. There he found the true Queen, and was contracted to her, those there prefent, and many absent, by Proxy, swore Allegiance to him. The King then stiled himself King of Castile, and Portugal, and nothing was wanting for Bedding with the Queen, but the Dispensation from Rome, which Ferdinand and Elizabeth, with all their might opposed. No sooner was this known to the Castilian King and Queen. but they also took the stile of Castile and Portugul, and fent Forces to invade that Kingdom, which having made some spoil returned without any opposition. Queen Joanna sent her Letters, to all the Towns of Castile, exhorting them to return to her Obedience, fince they had twice sworn her lawful Heiress to the Crown. The King marched to Arevalo, and thence to Toro, which City held for him, and the Castle he took by force. Zamora was delivered to him, and thither he conducted his Bride. Thence they returned to Toro, where Queen Joanna, Mother to the Bride, and Sister to the Bridegroom, died on the 13. of June. Ferdinand and Elizabeth railed all the Forces they could, and had now gathered together 12000 Horse, and 30000 Foot. With this Force Ferdinand marched and encamped before Toro, where feigning Friendship, he sent to advise King Alonso to depart, or to decide the matter by fingle Combat; neither whereof, he well knew, could as circumstances stood be accepted. However, Peter de Avendanho so cut off the Castillian's Provisions, that he was forced to draw off his Army to Medina del Campo. Thither came Elizabeth to Ferdinand, reproaching him, that he had not accepted of a fingle Combat, on fuch terms as the Portugue fo allowed of. But Money beginning now to fail them, and they fearing to tax the People, had recourse to the Clergy, who gave them half the Plate of the Churches.

The History of PORTUGAL.

4. Some Overtures of Peace were now made, but came The south. not to any head. Our King marching to relieve Burges, on a me was recalled by the revolt of Zamora, which Elizabeth the Work of Castile, laying hold of, gave out that he fied, which drew many to her Party. The Portuguese now grew weary of being abroad, and the King wanting Money, his Subjects refused to furnish him upon that Account; so that all his Affairs went backwards. King Alonso thus streightned, discharged many of his Army, and many more went away without expecting a Discharge. The Governour of the Castles on the Bridge of Zamora, being corrupted by Ferdinand and Elizabeth, some advised to build a Wall betwixt them and the Town, and they would perish; but the Archbishop of Toledo, and other great Men, perswaded the King to remove to Toro, leaving behind in the Castle, all his Equipage, because he could not then Travel with fo much Baggage. Ferdinand immediately entred the City, and attacked the Castle, but without fuccess. King Alonso sent him a challenge, and he refused any single Combat, for which he was again, leverely reproved by his Wife Elizabeth; she being fitter to have been Ferdinand, than he was to be 1476. Elizabeth. In January the Prince of Portugal came to Toro, with some Troops, and was there received with great joy, except by the Duke of Arevalo, and Marquis de Villena, who began to incline to King Ferdinand. King Alonfo however resolved to put all to the issue of a Battle, tho the Archbishop of Toledo, of all the Castilian Novility that invited him, was the only Person that stood now by him. Fifteen Days after the Princes arrival, King Alonso marched towards Zamora to meet King Ferdinand, leaving his Queen behind at Toro. He attacked the Bridge, but to no purpole. Overtures of Peace were again made without any likelihood of fuccess, for it was decreed, no Accommodation should be purchased without Blood King Alonfo feeing he wasted his Army, lying before a Town in the dead of Winter, his Enemy lying close, returned towards Tore, his Forces braving the Castilians by the slowness of their March. Ferdinand asharned to have been so long dared, at length fallied out to fall upon the Rear of the Portuguese Army. Alonso suspecting no such thing, was now marched down a Hill in great diforder, as being at the Gates of his own City. It was debated among the Custilians, whither they ought to purfue their Enemy, who they faid fled, or return to Zamora; but the Cardinal, Peter Gonzalez de Mendoza, having from the top of the Hill, taken a view of the Portuguele Army, faid it would be a shame to return without bidding Battle, and thereupon their Army advanced.

5. King Alonfo perceiving the approach of the Enemy, ham at the drew up his Army. In the Van he placed the Castilians, we Kings and his own Houshold. He himself led the main Body, Prince Prince John the left Wing, and the Archbishop of Toledo the Right. D. John de Castro, Earl of Monsanto, brought up the Rear. The Sun was now going down, and a small Rain began to fall when the two Armies engaged. Prince John gave a vigorous Charge on his fide, and was received with no less Bravery, yet forced the Castilian Wing to retire to the main Body. At the same time the King advanced before his Men, and the Fight was maintained on both fides for the space of an hour before any gave Ground, both Referves coming up to second their Princes. The Portuguese, overpowered by the number of their Enemies, began to forsake the Royal Standard, which was taken, after both the bearer's Hands were cut off. King Alonso in despair would have cast himself into the midst of his Enemies, if not disswaded by some of his Followers. In Con-The Fortuclusion, the King, and those Gentlemen that could bear guete Arhim Company, fled to Castro Nunho, where they were my routes. honourably received by Peter de Avendano the Governour. Prince John, who had defeated the Enemy's Right Wing, seeing the rout of the Army, with what Forces he could gather, stood firm on an Eminence, where he continued all the day. Most of the other routed Portuguese cast themselves into the River Duero, where more perished by Water than had done by the Sword. King Ferdinand (who never loved Fighting) did not lead his Men, but stood with a strong Parcy on a riling Ground, to secure his own Escape, in case of need, and seeing his Right Wing drove by Prince John, and the main Body hard put to by King Alonso, he with that Body of Guards haited away towards Zamora, without expecting to fee the Event of the Battle. Thus he came at Night to Zamora in a Consternation, not knowing whether he was Victorious, or defeated. Such was his Cowardize and Precipitation.

6. The Prince continued all the Night on that Emi- The Pair. nence, we have already mentioned, by found of Trum- marches of pets, and the light of Fires calling together the Remains web sitof the scattered Army. In the Morning, when he ex- remains of pected to have been charged by the Cafillans, it appeared the they were gone after the King to Zimoni; whereupon he marched away in good Order, with Colours flying, to Toro. Finding no News of his Father there, all was in great Confusion, till Advice was brought him where he was. They met, and together received a courteous Mes. fage from King Ferdinand, who fent the King all his Equipage which he had taken in the Castle of Zamora. The Archbishop of Toledo, who only of all the Castilian Nobility adhered to the Portuguese, asked leave now to depart to defend his own Lands, which were wasted by King Ferdinand's Commanders. The Bishop of Evera with his Troops was fent to Conduct him on his way: who being come back, returned with the Prince to Portugal, to defend the Frontiers, then much infested by the Enemy. King Alonso had sent D. Alvaro de Atayde from Toro into France, designing to follow in Person, and crave Succour for carrying on the War, in case this Embassador found a favourable Reception. King Lewis entertained D. Alvaro with such feigned Friendship, that he eafily perswaded the King his Master to go over into France. The King having resolved upon that sourney, after fettling the Government of those few Places he held in Castile, about the beginning of June set forward for Portugal, carrying with him his Bride, that should have been Queen, Joanna, now spoiled of her Crown. K Alonso Being come to Miranda, she went away to the City Sails into Guarda, and he to Porto, where he intended to Embark for France. Thither repaired the Prince, Nobility, and Clergy, diffwading him from that Voyage, but he was not to be moved from that Resolution. He set Sail with 21 Vessels of several for , and in them 500 Gentlemen, and 2200 Men at Arms. By the way he touched at Central, next at Marfeilles, and landed at Colivre, where he was received with Respect by the Governour. At Perpignan, in Honour to him, the Prison Gates were set open. Thence he fent D. Francisco de Almeyda to King Lenk, to appoint the Place where they should meet; and great Honour was shewn him all the way he travelled through that Country.

Francs.

7. At Bourges King Lewis met him, and extraordi-France mary Civilities passed between them. They agreed, that on Per- King Alonfo should go to the Duke of Burgundy his ingalmeer. Coulin, to crave Aid of him, or in case he could not grant it, by reason of the War he was engaged in with Lorrain, then to pertwade him not to molest King Lewis, whilft he affifted King Alonfo. That to make the King's Title undeniable, the Pope's Dispensation should be iminediately obtained, for him to Marry Queen Joanna, true Heires of Castile. That each of them should appoint four Persons to adjust what Army and Treasure was requisite for carrying on their Design. King Lewis readily offered a good Sum of Money to Bribe all such Governours of Towns, as could by that means be drawn to their Party. Embassadors were immediately dispatch'd to Rome to obtain the Dispensation, and King Alonso set out to meet the Duke of Burgundy, who then lay at the Siege of Nancy in Lorrain. They met upon the River, then frozen over, and the King being conducted to the Army with all possible marks of Honour and Respect; the Duke there shewed him, how little Confidence was to be reposed in the Promises of the King of France, who the next day appeared with an Army in favour of the Lorrainer. The day after, the Burgundian was killed, and King Lewis being bent upon the Conquest of Burgundy, ient King Alonso to Parze, where he was received with the greatest Magnificence imaginable. All, the Embassadors could obtain of the Pope, was, that if the King of France would furnish King Alonso with a sufficient Force to reduce Castile, he would then grant the Dispensation. Hereupon the two Kings met at Arras, where Alonso plainly discovered he could repose no Trust in Lewis. He went away to Roan, and there fpent a great part of the Summer, waiting till his Fleet was fitted out to return home. He went down the River to his Fleet, then at Harfleur, but tearing to be stayed by the King of France, and ashamed to return home after that unfortunate Journey, he resolved to go K. Aloneo spend the rest of his Days in Hierusalem. On the 24th, resolver 19 of September before Day, he went out to a Chappel near old his the City, with only four Servants, having ordered his Day at Chaplain, Stephen Martinez, to expect him half a Lengue Mieruiafurther. There he dismissed one of the four, giving lem. him the Key of a Cabinet, in which were found four Letters; one for the King of France, giving him an Account of his Defign, and defiring him to favour those Servants he left in his Kingdom. Another for grince John his Son, charging him upon his Bleifing immediately to cause himself to be Proclaimed King. Another to the Kingdom in general, Commanding the People to receive him as fuch. The last was to those left at Harfleur, directing them to be Obedient to the Earl of Farm, till their return to Portugal. 3. Montairs

John er

8. Monsieur de Labret, by the King of France his Or. der, arrended upon King Alonso, who fent out every way to find him, and having met with him the fegond day, stopped him, but with all imaginable Respect. I here he received a Letter from King Lewis, by which he was perswaded to alter his kesolution, and to return to Portugal, where, on the Tenth of November his Son was Proclaimed King in the Town of Santarem, purfuant to the Letters he had fent to that effect. Only four days had he worn the Crown, when his Father arrived, and he in Confusion asking, how he should receive him? The Duke of Braganza answered. As your Fa-From me ther, and as your King. The Prince accordingly met rivs four him at Oeyras, where kneeling he killed his dands, and deviation religned the Government up to him, Hing Monfo would have contented himself with the time of king of Algarce, but the Prince perfitted he would accept of nothing during his Life. Whillt the King was abroad. Queen Elizabeth laid Siege to Toro, which was bravely defended, till one Bartholomem, a Shepherd, discovered to the Calillian Generals a Place, which being thought unacceffible, was left unguarded. Wherefore Six Hundred Men in the Night, conducted by the Shepherd, furmounted all those difficult Pailes, and got into the Town. The Count de Marialva, who was Governour, quitting the Castle, sled to Castro Nunho, yet the Lady Mary Sumiento, Widow of John de Ulloa, who had been Constable of that Fort, defended that Place, till feeing no hopes of Relief, she was obliged to surrender it upon most Honourable Articles. Presently after, Queen Eliwabeth caused the other Places that held for Portugal, to be befreged, and had them furrendred to her. In the mean while the Portuguese Forces wasted the Country shout Badagez and Cuidad Rodrigo; and A'onfo de Cardenas, Matter of Santingo, did the fame on the Portus suese Borders, both Parties executing the utmoth Cruel-Les ufual in War.

T273. Cafelle.

9. Upon the return of King Alonso out of France, the War was revived, and he thought of Marrying the Lady were with Joanna, having obtained a Dispensation; but Prince John bis Son used his utmost Endeavours to contruct it. The Biscop of Evera going into Castile with 700 Horse, and Number of Foot, to affift the Countels of Medellin; the followed the Partuguese Interest, was met by the following Year at Lisbon, and lasted Fourteen Years, less to be accounted of than Heavenly Vengeance. The Castilians, contrary to the last Articles of Peace, sent a Fleet to Trade on the Coast of Guinea. Our King sent a Squadron, under the Command of George Correa, to obstruct them. He met with 30 Ships of Castile upon the Coast called Mina, and after a sharp Engagement, obtained a compleat Victory, bringing several of them to Lisbon. 10. King Alonso, ever fince the Lady Joanna of Castile was constrained to take upon her a Religious Habit, fell into an extraordinary Melancholy, and had resolved himself to turn a Monk; but returning from acquainting his Son with his Defign to Cintra, he there fell fick of a violent Fever, which in a few days carryed him off. His Death was upon the Eighth of August, in the 40th, The Death Year of his Age, and 43d. of his Reign. He was of a of 15thg Graceful Pretence, somewhat bulky, had a thick Beard, Alonso. his Hair dark brown, and of Condition extreamly courreous. In War he was astive, in Peace negligene, a Lover of Learning, learned himfelf, and was the first King that collected a Library in the Palace. It was faid of him, That he was a better Man than a King; and on the contrary of his Son, That he was a better King than & Man. He was Bountiful to Prodigality, temperate in Eating and Sleeping, and of such Continence, that becoming a Widower at 23 Years of Age, he is faid

The History of PORTUGAL. Master of Santiago, routed, and taken Prisoner, yet bribing his Keeper, he escaped to Merida, and ever after did the Castilians much harm, till the Peace was concluded. Both Parties being fufficiently exhausted, easily condescended to Treat of a Peace, which was concluded at Alcasovas on the Fourth of September, excluding the 14-9. unfortunate Princels Joanna, who against her will was peace conforced to become a Nun. Yet she lived to see God's cluded be-Judgments fall upon them that drove her to that Ne- twint the cessity; for Frince John, who hoped to Marry his Son two Crowns to the Princels Elizabeth of Castile, and by that means to make him Heir to that Crown, faw that same Son dragged to Death by a Horie, and none of his Race ascended the Throne of Portugal. King Ferdinand and Queen Elizabeth outlived their only Son John, and had only a Daughter left, who conveyed that Crown to the House of Austria. Nor was the Plague, that began the 1480.

The History of PORTUGAL.

1475 ...

His Iffuc.

never after to have known Woman. His Lawful Issue. and he had no other, was, first, John, who died in his Infancy. Secondly, Joanna, who being contracted to feveral Princes, they all died before the could be marryed. and she became a Dominican Nun at Aveyro. Thirdly. John, who succeeded his Father.

Discoveries during his Reign.

11. The Discoveries in this King's Reign were as follows: Nunho Tristan, and Antony Gonzalez failed as far as Cape Blanco, in 20 Degrees of North Latitude, whence they brought some Moors, and also Blacks, then a Rarity in Spain. Nunho returned, and proceeded as far as the Illands of Arguin. Lanzarote and Yanez found the Island of Gargas, whence they brought 200 Slaves. Antony Gonzalez returning, pierced as far as the Island Tider: Alvaro Fernandez discovered Cape Matos, and going 100 Leagues farther, flew the Lord of that Country. Gonzaio de Sintra at Angra lost six Men, which was the first Loss sustained in these Discoveries. Denis Fernandez reached as far as the River Sanaga, in 16 Degrees of North Latitude, and discovered the Islands of Cabo Verde, Buenavista, Santiago, and S. Philip. Vincent de Lagos, and Lewis Cadamasto, a Gennese, found the Islands Terceras, being Eleven in number. The Islands of S. Thomas and Principe, the Kingdom of Beni, as far as Cape Catherine, and Sierra Leona, were also discovered. John de Santarem, and John de Escobar, found the Country called Mina. Ferdinand Po, that which bears his Name. The Islands Azores were now first known, so called from the many Hawks seen there, and are Nine in number, lying due West of the Rock of Sintra. In one of these, on the top of a Mountain, called Del Cuervo, or of the Crow, was found a Statue of a Man on Horseback, his Head bare, his Left Hand on the Horse's Main, the Right pointing to the West: It stood upon a stone Pedestal, which, together with the whole Statue, was all of one piece, and under it were certain Characters cut in the Rock, but could never be understood.

CHAP. VII.

The First Part of the Life and Reign of John, the Second of the Name; and Thirteenth King of Portugal; from the Year of our Lord 1455. till 1491.

I. IN the renowned City Lisbon, on the Third of May, Birth of 1 1455. was born the most excellent Prince John the King John Second, King of Portugal, firnamed the Perfect and the the Second. Great. He was baptized in the Cathedral, with the 1455. greatest pomp and solemnity, that had till then been seen. This Prince was educated and instructed in all Arts, that can accomplish a Person of that Character. This, and his personal Worth, moved King Henry the 4th. of Castile, to propose a Match between him and his only Daughter, the Lady Joanna. However the King his Father, gave him to Wife, the Lady Ellenor of Lancaster, eldest Daughter to his Brother Ferdinand; having obtained the Pope's Dispensation for it, and they were accordingly married on the 22th of January, 1470. Soon after his Marriage, the King preparing for his Voyage into Africk, the Prince asked, and obtained leave of him, to bear him company, where he behaved himself with fuch bravery, that his Father Knighted him in the Mefque of Arzila, then converted into a Christian Church, on the 24th. of August, 1471. Alonso the Prince's only 1471. Son being born on the 18th. of May, at such time as King Alonfo, was marching into Castile, to marry the Lady Joanna, rightful Heiressof that Crown; he ordained, that in case he had Issue by her, and his Son should die before him, then his Grand-Son should be tworn his Heir, which was done, and Prince John was left to govern the Kingdom. How he marched with Forces to the athitance of his Father, then at Toro in Castile; and how he behaved himself in the Battle between that Place, and Zamora, has been said in the Life of that King. Upon his return into Portugal, he recovered Alegrete, taken by the Castie lians. Having been, as was faid in the last Chapter, proclaimed King in his Father's life time, and by his order; upon his return out of France, he reftored to him the Regal

CHAR

Regal Authority, by the advice of the Duke of Bragança, and yet he thought to have put that great Man to Death afterwards upon that same Account.

¥ 478.

proclai.

ined.

2. King Alonfo having revived the War with Castile. Lope Vaz de Castel Branco, seized the Town of Moura. and called himself Earl thereof. The Prince resenting this Infolence, fent Six Men, who being admitted into his company, flew him as he was Hunting; which done. the Prince secured the Town, and gave it to the Princeis Beatrix, his Mother-in-Law, to whom it property appertained. The King lying on his Death Bed at Sintra, the Prince halted thither to see him, and his Father 1481. dying on the Three and twentieth of August, he was the King John second time proclaimed King the last Day of that Month. Nunho Pereyra immediately upon the New King's Aceision to the Crown, presented him with a Note he had given him under his Hand, in his Minority, promising to make him an Earl whensoever he ascended the Throne. The King confidering he had obtained that Note in his Infancy, when he had not judgment to know on whom he ought to bellow Honours, tore it, telling him, it was a fufficient Favour he did not punish him for having used tinister means to obtain it. He had resolved to build a Fown and Fort on the Coast of Africk, called Mina; to this purpose he fitted out a Fleet, commanded by James de Azambuja, who had with him 500 fighting Men, and 100 Masons, with all materials for the Work, to fitted, that at their landing there was nothing to do, but to put them together. Azambuja landing, caused Mais to be faid on the Shoar under a Tree, whither the George on King called Caramanfa, came to him, with a great Rethe Coaff of tinue, and was converted. The Fort was built, and called S. George; which done, Azambuja sent home his Ca-ravels with a great quantity of Gold. 2. Before this Fleet failed, the Cortes or Parliament had met at Ebora, where the Form of Obligation, that Lords and Governours of Places were to enter into with the King, was tettled, because till then the Nobility and Commanders exercised a despotick Power in their widictions independent of the Kings, and by their tyranniall Proceedings were grown burdentome to the People, and dangerous to the Sovereign, who had little more left him but the Name. King John being now at Peace abroad, ordered that no Lord should energing a judicial The History of PORTUGAL.

ASid, A 12 4

Power in Cases Criminal. This pleased the People, but made him odious to the Nobility. Soon after, he made a Law, That his Judges, and other Officers of ustice, should execute their employments throughout all the Territories of great Men that pretended exemption from them. All the Grandees opposed these New Ordinances; but the King was not so jealous of any, as of Ferdinand Duke of Braganga, a Servant of whom prefented to the King certain Letters from the King of Castile to the said Duke, which much increased the King's suspition, and caused him to decree his Death. In the 1482. mean while, the Plague beginning to diffuse it self at The Plague Lisbon, King John removed his Court to Monte-Mayor, at Lisbon. a more healthy Place. An Embassador was sent into England, to confirm the established Friendship with that King. Another was also dispatch'd to Castile, about concluding the Match designed betwixt Prince Alonso of Portugal, and the Princess Elizabeth of Castile, which was not effected till afterwards Embassadors came thence to Portugal on that Account. By his Embaliadors that had been in Castile, the King had farther information concerning the Duke of Bragança his holding Correspondence with that King. The Duke was warned by the King to forbear any farther proceeding in that Correspondence; yet he desisted not, but on the contrary, proposed to unnaturalize himself, in order to be at liberty to withstand his Sovereign. The King understanding that the Duke accompanied his Son Prince Alonso in his Journey from Moura to Evera, he resolved to apprehend him. After the Solemnity of the Princes Reception was over, the Duke coming to take his leave of the King, was, by his order, secured.

4. The Duke being now in Cuftody, the King called his Council, and laid before them the Copies of his Letters of Correspondence with Castile. Judges were appointed for his Trial, before whom he appeared twice, but refused to come the third time. They thereupon The Dake of past Sentence of Death upon him, which was publickly Braganca executed upon a Scaffold, by Evering his Head from his beheaded Body. D. Alvaro de Portugal, one of the Duke's Bro- fer Highthers, was banished, and found such Favour in Castile, Treason that he was made President of the Council. The Marquis of Monte-Mayor, his other Brother, having made his escape, was executed in Liffigy. This done, the

King's

Life.

King and Queen took a Progress through the Provinces betwixt Duero and Minko, and behind the Mountains. 1484. In February they returned to Santarem, where they found the Death of the Duke of Bragança, instead of security The Duke to them, was like to produce greater danger. The Duke of Viseo, of Viseo, Brother to the Queen, had conspired to Murder the King, in hopes to Succeed him; as he would have against the done, had he not endeavoured to anticipate the time. His Affociates were, the Bishop of Evora, and several other Persons of Note. This Treason was discovered to the King by Antony de Faria, who had it from James Tinoco, Brother to a Servant-Maid of the Bishop, that gave him the first information. James Tinoco gave the King a particular Account of the Defign, but found not entire Credit, till D. Vasco Contino confirmed all he had said. Three times the King escaped the Danger, being provided against it since the information given him; and yet none of the Conspirators perceived he knew any thing of it. On the 22d. of August being at Setuval, he sent for the Duke; and having taken him aside, asked of him, what he would do to the Man that designed to kill him. The Duke The Duke answered, I would kill bim first if I could. Then stabbed by replied the King, You have given judgment against your the King. self. At the same Instant he stabbed him, so that he fell down dead at his Feet. 5. Late at Night Proclamation was made for apprehending the rest of the Conspirators, and the next Morning the Duke's Carcass was exposed to publick view upon the Scaffold. Most of the Traitors were apprehended. The Bishop of Everabeing put into a Cestern, was there eaten alive by Worms. His Brother Ferdinand was beheaded; the same end had Peter de Albuquerque. D.Gutiere Contino died in Prison, and D. Alvaro de Atayde fled to Cuffile, and was afterwards pardoned by King Emanuel. The Count de Pena-Macor died at Sevil, and Ferdinand de Sylveyra was killed in France. D. Vasco Continho, one of the discoverers, for his loyalty was created an Earl; and Tinoco the other, being of less Quality, had 5000 Crowns down given him, and a Church Revenue worth 1500 a Year This done, the King bestowed all that had belonged to the Duke of Viseo upon his Brother Emanuel, and with it the hopes of Succeeding to the Crown, as also, of the Empire of Asia; for at this time, Burtholomow Diaz, by the King's order, difcovered The History of PORTUGAL.

The other Confrirators punished.

covered the Cape of Good Hope, which he then called Tormentoso, or Stormy, because of the ill Weather he met with there.

6. Whilst these things passed in Portugal, the City S. George in Guinea increased, and the Christian Religion diffused it self; whereupon the King, this Year, first stiled himself Lord of Guinea. Several forts of new 1485. Coin, as well of Gold and Silver, as of Copper, were King John now also spread abroad in Portugal. The King had sent stiles him-D. Peter de Noronha his Embassador to Rome, to pay his felf Lord Obedience to the Pope, and obtain of him the Croisade, of Guinea. in order to profecute his Conquests in Africk, for which he made Preparations throughout the Kingdom. Four 1486. Venetian Galleys being taken by the French, and the Men put ashoar almost naked at Cascaes, the King not only relieved them with Cloaths, and other Necessaries, but gave them fuch a Sum of Money, as redeemed their Galleys, wherewith they returned home. Whereupon that Republick fent a Solemn Embassy, with Presents, to return him Thanks for that extraordinary Act of Hospitality. The Town of Azamor in Africk sent this Azamor Year to submit it self to our King, and was taken into in Africk Protection. The way to India by Sea beginning to be submits to laid open, after the Difcovery of the Cape of Good Hope, the King. the King sent Alonso de Payva, and John de Cubillan, to take a Journey into India by Land. Others followed them; but the particulars of those Actions belong to the Portuguese Asia, where they may be found. The Catholick King and Queen falling fhort of Ammunition at the Siege of Granada, fent to defire a Supply of King John, which was speedily and plentitully conveyed to them. John Alonso de Aveyro discovered the Coast of Beni, and brought thence the first Pepper that was ever brought from those Parts; as also an Embassador from that King, who was honourably entertained, and fent back loaded with Presents. James de Almeyda, a Knight of Malta, Sailing for Africk with 30 Sail, in which were 1500 Horse, and 1000 Foot; and being put by his Port, landed near the City Anafe, where encountring a multitude of Moors, he killed 900, and carryed away 400 Prisoners. The King improved this Accident, by giving out he had chastised those Moors for their Disobedience to their Prince Ataley Beljabe, which that Prince believed, and ever accounted him il much obliged to King John. Barrery.

7. Barraxe, a Valiant Moor, with a Party of 400 Horse, and as many Foot, took a great Booty about Tangier; but the Governoitr of that Place, D. John de Meneses, instantly pursued him, took him Prifoner, and recovered all the Prey. The Jews, who in great Numbers lived in Castile, seeing themselves condemned to the Flames, by the erecting the Inquisition The Tews in that Country, swarmed into Portugal. King John at By out of first entertained them; but afterwards being sensible of Castile into their wicked Practices, for that pretending to be Chri-Portugal. stians, they ceased not to Judaize, he sent out his Officers, who burnt some, chastised others, and filled all the Prisons with them. This made many of them fly over into Africk, where they professed themselves openly Tews; whereupon the King forbid any more patting over thither, upon pain of Death; giving them Liberty, at the same time, to remove to any Christian Country. But tho' it happened fome Years latter, let us bere relate what was done in this case. In the Year 1492, vast multitudes of Jews came out of Castile into Portugal, engaging to pay the King a certain number of Ducats for each Head, and only defiring to be permitted to pass through the Kingdom. Eight Months were allotted them to stay; and certain Ports assigned them to Embark. The Term expiring, many went over to the Coast of Fez, where they were plundered and abused by the Moors, having been little better treated by the Portuguese. Many returned to Castile, pretending they were converted, and many stay'd in Portugal under the same colour. The King, the following Year, finding them obstinate in their > Ancient Portuguese. 8. The King, notwithstanding it was a time of Peace, ceased not to lay up Magazines in all his Garrisons, and fortified the Town of Olivenga, which alarmed the King and Queen of Castile; but he satisfied them, and went on with what he had begun. In Africk, D. Vasco Coutinho, Earl of Borba, with only 70 Horse, defeated 450 Moors, and took their Commander, who lay in wait to have surprized him. Upon the receipt of this News, the King fent over 150 Horle, and some Foot, to en-wicked Practices, made all that could be found Slaves;

and taking their Children away, fent them to the Illand of S. Thomas, to be there brought up Christians. Thus the Jews came first to mix their Race with that of the The History of PORTUGAL.

courage his Forces there. They passed the Bridge of Alcacerquibir, that had never before been passed by the Portuguele, and returned with Slaves and Cattle. In the Month of October arrived at Lisbon, Bemoy, King of Bemoy and Jalof in Africk, who being expelled his Kingdom, came African to ask Succours for recovering of it. He had Audience King. For of the King at Setuval, and having proposed the Mo- into Portive of his coming, was answered, That nothing could tugal. obstruct the affifting him, but his being an Infidel; for that it was not allowed Christian Princes to give Aid to Pagans. He replyed, he was ready to receive the Faith. and only forry that it might be thought he was moved to it by any Temporal Interest. On the Third of November, he, and fix of his principal Followers, were baptized; the King, Prince, and Duke Emanuel being Godfathers. On the seventh the King Knighted him, and gave him for his Arms, Gules, a Cross, Or, within an Orle of Portugal. Next, he did Homage to the King, and promised Obedience to the Pope. This done, the King fent him home with 20 Caravels well manned and provided, under the Command of Peter Vaz da Cunha, with Orders to erect a Fort at the Mouth of the River Zanaga. This Expedition succeeded not, for Helis more Cunha fearing to venture himself in that unhealthy Coun- American try, murdered the unfortunate Bemoy, and to returned Pater of the home with the Fleet, and the King unjustly connived at d'Acualia. this Villany.

9. At the beginning of the Year the King went into a second Algarve, and thence fent over fome Forces, with Ma- Aller in fons and Materials, to build a Fort at the Mouth of the Africk. River Larache, ordering it to be called Graciofa. Muley, King of Fez, in whose Territory it was, understanding how the Work advanced, fet down before it with 10000 Horse, and a vast multitude of Foot. King John sent Succours to the besieged, but all too weak to withstand fo great a Force. He thought of going over in Perion, but the Moors offering to duffer the Christians to dopart, the offer was accepted, and the Place abandoned. Barraxe that Moor who had been taken Priloner by D. Vasco Continho, being ranfomed, now held Correspondence with a Gentleman, called Lope Sanchez, about betraying the City Cents to him. Sanchez held him in hand, and gave Advice to the King, who fent to fecure that Place 50 Sail from Algarve, well manned and flored, under the Command of D. Ferdinand de Meneses. He and his Brother Antony, that was before at Centa, marched out with 150 Horse, and 1000 Foot, and falling upon the Town of Targa, eafily took it, as being abandoned. The Town they utterly destroyed, took some Ships, Cannon, and Ammunition, and releated some Christian Captives. This Action cost not one drop of Blood. D. Ferdinand marched away to Alcaçar, and joyning with the Governours of that Place and Tangier, he again set out with 400 Horse, and 1200 Foot, towards Camice, which the Moors call the Inchanted, because it was thought inaccettible, standing upon a craggy Hill. Now the Inchantment ceased, for the Place was taken by Affault, and razed down to the Ground, 400 of the Defendants, who hid themselves in the Mountain, being put to the Sword. But this Victory was not fo cheaply purchased as the other, for it cost the Lives of 70 Men. 10. Prince Alonso was now going into his Fifteenth 311.

1.490.

Year, an Age fit to Marry, and he was already contracted to the Princels Elizabeth, Eldelt Daughter to King Ferdiamid and Queen Elizabeth of Castile. The News of her being affianced to him by Proxy at Sevil, being brought to Evora, where the King then was, that City was filled with all publick Demonstrations of Joy. From thence foon after it was diffused throughout the whole The Plague Kingdom. The Plague then raging a Lisbon, and spreadin Portu- ing as far as Evora, as also the News brought of the Death of the Princess Joanna, the King's Sister, in the Monastery at Aveyro, might have been looked upon as ill Omens forboding the evil Success of this Marriage. The publick Joy was turned for some time into Mourning, but soon after refumed again. Nor did the Preparations for the Wedding cease all that time, and they were the greatest that had ever been seen in Portugal. The Palace at Evora being thought too little to Enter-

Trince A- tain the Bride, was much enlarged. On the 22d. of No-Ionso mar- comber the Bride was brought to the Borders of the two Kingdoms, and on the Bridge of the River Caya, the Cardinal D. Gonzalo Perez de Mend qu, Archbishop of zabeth, Toledo, delivered her to Emanuel, Duke of Beja, sent 10 th: King to receive her. Betwixt Eives and Estremoz the King and Prince met her. At the Church of our Lady of of Castile Espineiro, which is without the Walls of E. ora, they and Arawere marryed by the Archbishop of Braga, and in that COIL

Monastery the Prince bedded her. November the 27th. they made their Soleinn Publick Entry into the City. with such Grandeur, as is not easily to be expressed, no more than can the infinite Rarities that were ferved up that Night at Supper. Besides the Balls, Musick, and other extraordinary Divertifements, the King appointed a Solemn Tilting, in which he defervedly carryed away the Honour from all that ran. In May the King, Queen, and Princes removed to Santarem, the Divertisements never ceasing, till upon Tuesainy the 12th. of July, the 149. Prince riding abroad after Dinner, and being upon a The Prince Full-speed, his Horse fell upon and Mortally bruised killed by a him. He was pail all Remedy, and died the next day fall of bir at the same hour he had fallen. Thus was that Scene Horfe. of loy converted into a horrid Spectacle of Sadnets. The Prince was magnificently Interred in the Church of . Batalla. The Princess was sent back to Castile all clad in the deepest Mourning, and in a Horse-Litter covered with Sackcloath.

CHAP. VIII.

The remaining Part of the Life and Reign of King John, the Second of the Name, and Thirteenth King of Portugal; from the Tear 1492, till 1495.

i. N the 25th. of May, 1492. King John laid the 1192 Foundation of the Magnificent Church and Hospital of All-Saints in the beautifullest Square, or Market-Place of Lusbon, scattering some Money under the first Stones laid, having obtained leave of the Pope to incorporate all other Hospitals into this. The French. then at Peace with Portugal, had taken a Caravel bringing Gold from Guinea; whereupon the King seized all the Vessels of that Kingdom within his Ports, which caused the Caravel to be restored untouch'd. King Thin in the Year 1485 had fent James Cano with a Fleet to Farther Guinea. He came to an Anchor at the Mouth of the D. Reverse River Manicongo; lying in Seven Degrees of South in Guines Latitude.

Latitude, and understanding that King was far off in the In-land Parts, he fent some Portuguese to him with a Prefent, who not returning, he feized some Blacks. and brought them away to Portugal, affuring the People they should be restored; whereupon King John sent them back loaded with Gifts, which foobliged the Black King, that he faid, That must be the true God, whom a Prince of so much Honour adored. He sent an Embassador to him, offering Submiffion to his Authority, and defiring Priests to Instruct the People, and Workmen to build Churches, and a Fleet returned with all that had been defired. The King and a great number of his Subjects were baptized, as also the Queen and Prince. The King foon tell off again, because Christianity obliged him to adhere to only one Wife, and therefore he resolved to declare his Second Son, Panso Aquitimo, who continued an Idolater, his Heir. Aionso, the eldest Brother, the Lawful Heir, and a Christian, was absent when his Father died, but hasting to Court, was proclaimed King. His Brother Aguitimo thought to surprize him, but failed; for his great Army was overthrown by a handful of Portuguese and Blacks that followed Alonso. Many of the Prisoners declared they were overthrown by a glittering Army, led by a Commander that carryed a white Cross. Alonso being secured in his Throne, became the Apostle of that People, in which good Work most of his Successors have followed his Example.

Lisbon

2. In the Month of March, Christopher Columbus, Columbus after discovering the Islands of America, entred the Port after difer- of Lisbon, to Revenge himself, by shewing what he vering of had found, to King John, who had before rejected him America, when he came to offer his Service, and whom he thought services at it would now grieve to fee what he had loft. Some Gentlemen offered the King to Murder him, which he not only refused, but calling Columbus to him, honoured and made him Prefents. This Discovery alarmed all Spain, the Calillans fearing to be disturbed in their Conquests there, and the Portuguese pretending it appertained to them. Many Messengers and Embassadors passed Spain and between the two Kings, at last, their Ministers meeting Portugal at Tordefilles, divided the World betwixt them. To division the Portuguesse was allotted from 370 Leagues to the World by Weltward of Cubo Verde, all to the Eastward; and all ewhat them to the West from that Place, to the Castillius, drawing a Line there from North to South, so that commencing from that Point, one half of the Globe remained to each Crown. Many Persons of Note came about this time from Foreign Parts to see, and some to serve King Tohn. Among them was a French Prince, whom the Portuguese call Monsieur de Lion, who offered to serve in Africk with 300 Horse at his own cost. The King of Naples also tent his Embassador with Rich Presents.

3. This Year and part of the next the King spent in taking a Progress through his Kingdom, and tettling the Affairs of greatest Importance, for being grown fickly, he could not apply himself to Business of less moment. He also fitted out the Ships in the River of Lisbon, that were to Sail to discover the way to India by the Ocean, and gave the Command of them to Vafco de Gama, with Instructions how to proceed. His Distemper increased, and not only cost him his Life, but laid a lafting thain upon the Good Name of his Subjects. Some of those who designed to have murdered him by the Sword, now executed their Design with Poison. A King Tobu Woman, held in Esteem for her Sanctity, warned him to pullined. have a care of Poison, which nevertheless he drank out of a Spring near Evora, which Water he liked best. That this was true, appeared by that two Gentlemen. who drank with him at the same time, died as well as he. His Distemper seemed to turn to a Dropsie, and the Physicians advised him to go to the hot Baths at Alvor in Algarve. One of them opposed the rest, affirming, this would shorten his Days, but he was a Jim, and therefore found no Credit. The King fell into a Flux, which being stopped, he became wholly Lethargick. Coming a little to himfelf, he asked, how the Tide was; and being told, faid, he fhould die wirbin two hours. Just at Sun setting he gave up the Ghost on the 25th. of October. Paing fenfible he must die he com- Es Lemb manded the Plate furnished by the Churches for the late Wars, to be restored. He ordered Duke Emanuel should Succeed him, having first used all possible means to leave the Crown to his Bastard-Son George, which was the greatest Act of Injustice he was guilty of, or indeed that could be. Having offende I the Queen, Princess Bearrix, and the Cleryy in his Life time, he now begged Pardon of them.

4. Tho' the King earnestly defired to see Duke Emanuel before his Death, he could not compais it, some Perfons perswading that Prince, his Design was to kill him. There was a finall Box, whereof he always kept the Key, which was generally supposed to contain no-The proper thing but Poilon: But this Box being opened after his and a Saint Death, there was found in it a Book of Instructions for to make a good Confession, a Hair-cloath, and a Discipline stained with Blood. Hence the People took occafion to call him a Saint, as many before accounted him a Tyrant. In his Will the King ordered 3000 Masses should be faid for his Soul, that 41 Orphans should be marryed, that the like number of Captives should be redeemed. that the great to ofpital of Lisbon should be finished, that half the Plate taken from Churches by his Father for the War against Castile, should be restored, that Duke Emmuel should Succeed him in the Throne, that his Bastard-Son George should have the City Coimbra, with all the Royalties wherewith Prince Peter had it before, that in case Duke Emanuel died without Issue, the aforeviid George should Inherit the Crown, and that none of the Persons banished the Kingdom by him, should be restored. After his Death he had the Commendations of his very Enemies. His Body was conducted with great State from the Cathedral of Silves to the Monastery of Batalla, where it is faid to have been found long after uncorrupted, which increased the Opinion of his Sanctity. He marryed his Coufin-German, Ellenor, Daughter to Prince Ferdinand, Duke of Viseo, and the Lady Beatrix, Daughter to Prince John. She was a Princess endued with fingular Beauty, Wit, and Vertue, and lies buried in the Monastery of the Mother of God at Lisbon, founded by her felf, in the Cloitter among the Nuns is her Grave, without any distinction.

21.8 Forther 5. Let us now give some Specimen of the many Vertues that adorned this King. First, for his great Zeal in Matters of Religion, Pope Innocent VII. publickly called him The Eldeit Son of the Church. Daily he performed several Devotions upon his bare Knees, and in the Holy Week spent whole Nights in mourning before the Sepulchre. He forbid the use of Mules, and because the Clergy field, they would have recourse to the Pope on that account, he made it Death for any Body to was such, that he rewarded some Judges, before whom he was Cast in Law Suits; and hearing a Man was condemned to Death, who had been Fourteen Years in Prison, he pardoned him, saying, They better deserved to die, who had kept him so long, to Condemn him at last. Few ever exceeded him in Liberality and Gratitude, for having borrowed 1500 Ducats of Peter Pantoja, and kept them but five days, he then fent him his Money. and 250 Ducats for the Use of it. Pantoja complaining that the Interest was too great, he ordered him as much more, and faid, He would do so as often as he complained. James Fernandez Correa, his Factor in Flanders, having lent Maximilian the King of the Romans 30000 Ducats without his Order, he fent him Thanks for so doing, and gave him 1000 Crowns. Edward del Casal, a Man of Worth, having employed another to beg some Favour for him, the King seeing him, said, Since you have Hands to serve me with, why have not you .!

The History of PORTUGAL.

Tongue to speak to me?

6. There was nothing that daunted him, in so much More of his that others fearing to go aboard the Fleet, because of good Sourthe Plague, he went himself, and is said to have spoke dies. unconcerned with the Ghost of a Gentleman that was dead, and came to warn him of the Conspiracy of the Duke of Visco. Favourites he never had any, and was fuch an Enemy to those fort of Ministers, that the Cardinal George da Costa, who had entire influence over his Father, fled to Rome before his Accession to the Crown. None that deserved well, passed unrewarded, for he carryed about him a Table-Book, in which were the Names and Services of all those that mericed of him. All Men had access to him, their Business was heard and answered. Truth was so much admired by him, that he made D. Town de Menefes his Lord Steward, only because he said, He always spoke the Truth, the it were displeasing to him. As for Learning, he understood Flilotophy, was skilled in Mathematicks, well verted in Hiftory, and a great admirer of Poetry. Tho' his Countenance reprefented much of Gravity, and his Carriage had much of Majesty, yet at times he was pleasant and facetious. To conclude, his Government was inferiour to none or the best Kings that preceded him, and may be a Pattern to all those that come after him. Scarce any excelled him in all forts of Vertues, and for $\Sigma_{\mathcal{A}}$ from them, and to that Dipute ended. His leftice his Zeal to Religion, he was the first that propagated in in the Torrid Zone. In short, he was a Father of his People, Bountiful, Just, Merciful, Generous, Brave, a lover of Truth, and fure rewarder of Merit.

His Isue.

7. King John had only one Lawfully Begotten Son. which was Prince Alonso, born'at Lisbon in the Year 1475. and who died, as has been faid, unfortunately, by a Fall off his Horse in the Year 1491. being newly married to the Princess Elizabeth, Daughter to King Ferdinand, and Queen Elizabeth of Castile. This King had also One Battard-Son, called George, created Duke of Coimbra. Marquis of Torres Novas, Master of the Military Orders of Santiago and Avis, and Lord of the Lands that had belonged to Prince Peter. He had also the Town of Aveiro, and of him are descended the Dukes of that Title, who keep the sirname of Lancaster, taken by them in Memory of Queen Philippa, Daughter to the Duke of Lancafter. King John at length fixed the Arms of the Kingdom in the manner they are used at this Day, reducing the Castles in the Orle to the certain Number of Seven, and ferring the Five middle Escutcheons upright.

3. Discoveries in the Reign of Ring John were as folner varing low. James Cano failed to the River and Kingdom of ins Rossi. Minicongo. Junes Alonfo de Aveiro to that of Beni, and brought thence the first Pepper that came from those Parts. Bartin mew Diaz to the Cape of Good Hope, and passed be jond it, to the River called Del Infante. Perer Covillam, and Alonfo de Paiva, Men versed in many Languages, went to Grand Cairo in Egypt; then embarking on the Red Sea, faw the City Adem, where parting, Paiva went into Ethiopia, Covillan to Cananor, Calicut, Goa, Sofala, Mozambique, Quiloa, Mombara, and Melinde, then returned to Adem, and Grand Caire, where his Companion and he had appointed to meet; but the other being dead, he returned again to Adem, thence to Ormus, and then traversed Abissinia, being the first Alin that ever performed those Travels. Christopher Cofambus offer d his Service to King John, but not being encouraged by him, he discovered the West Indies for hing Ferdinand, and Queen Elizabeth of Custile and Aragon,

CHAP

CHAP. IX.

The first Part of the Life and Reign of Emanuel, the First of the Name, and Fourteenth King of Portugal; from the Year of our Lord, 1469, till 1509.

1. Hough the late King John laboured all that in him was to have left the Crown to his Bastard-Son George, yet neither the Queen, nor the Subjects would consent, because Duke Emanuel had a most undoubted Title to it. This Emanuel was Son to Prince King Eins-Ferdinand, Grandson to King Edward, and Great Grand- nuel kiss fon to King Alonso V. and Cousen German to his Prede-Birth and cessor King John, whose undoubted Heir he was, that Descent. King leaving no lawful Issue. He was born in the Town of Alconchete, in the Province of Riba Tejo, upon Thursday the last Day of May, being the Feast of Corpus Christi. His Mother being in Labour was delivered of him just at the time that the Blessed Sacrament pasfed by her Door, and therefore she called him Emanuel, the proper Name of Christ, which signifies, God is with us. During his Infancy Emanuel was one of the Holtages between the King of Castile, and Hing John the Second. The very Day King John killed James, Brother to this Emanuel, he gave him all the other's Estate, only changing the Title from Duke of Vifeo, to that of Beja. He also constituted him Master of the Order of Christ, Constable of the Kingdom, and General of the Frontiers betwixt the Rivers Tagus and Guadiana, to that his Revenue amounted to above 70000 Crowns per Annum, which was very great in that Age, and that Kingdom. His Family was encreased when he went the second time into Castile to conduct the Princes Plan beth, Wife to Prince Alonfo, into Portugal. Fing John, as is faid, dying without any lawful liftue, and not able to prevail for his Baltard-Son George, Emanuel was pro- nuel proclaimed King with the usual Solemnity, upon Tuchar the else non 27th. of October, 1295, and in the 26th Year of his Age.

2. The New King went away to About Marge of Vacvo, where James Econondez de Monda, Prior of Crato, presented to him George, King John's Bastard. Son, whom he received favourably, and treated as if he fled from the Plague, he received Embassadors from the State of Venice. The Jews whom King John had made Slaves, in great Numbers had now Liberty to depart the Kingdom; and though they offer d the King a Present of a confiderable Summ of Money, he would not accept it. A time was let for them all to depart, and it was order'd that they should leave behind them all their Children that were under Fourteen Years of Age. Many of them rather than deliver their Children to be bred up Christians, murdered them; and some there were that killed themselves as well as their Children. The time of their Departure being put off, they offer'd, if their Children were restor'd them, and Twenty Years allowed them in which they could not be punished for Offences against Religion, that they would become Christians. This granted, the greatest part of them was Baptized, the rest were sent over into Africk, together with the Mores then also expelled, but these were allowed to carry their Children with them. Those that remained in Parting il committed many Enormities, in contempt of the Christian Religion, and becoming Rich, had the Oppartunity of corrupting all the Nobility of the King-

Vo!

Vol. of the Portuguese Asia. The King, by his Embaffadors, having concluded a Match for himself with Elizabeth, Princess of Castile, Widdow of the Late Emanuel Prince Alonso of Portugal, in the Month of October she marries was brought to Valencia de Alcantara, where King Ema- Elizabeth, was brought to Valencia ae Alcantara, where Bing Inda Widow of much waited for her. Presently after the King and Queen the late were married, came the News of the Death of John, Prince As Prince of Castile, Brother to the new Queen, and Heir lonio. of that Kingdom. New Charters were now given to all the Cities and Towns of Portugal, which were all contained in Five Books, One of each Province. About the end of the Year, the Queen being with Child, Embassadors came from Castile to induce the King and her to go into Castile, to be sworn Heirs to that Crown. The King took the Advice of the Cortes, or Parliament therein; and it was resolved he should go. On the 29th. of March they set forwards with a small Retinue, not exceeding 300 Horse. All this Company was in Mourning for the Prince of Castile. The Duke of Medina Sidonia met themat Badajoz, with a Retinue somewhat less. Soon after the Duke of Alva, and Count de Feria, with a like Number. King Ferdinand came out of Toledo to receive them, and they were entertained with extraordinary Magnificence. On the 28th. of April King Emanuel and his Queen were sworn Heirs of Castile, in the Cathedral Church. This Ceremony being over, they travelled towards Zaragofa to be there sworn to the Succession of Aragon. They entred that City on the first of June, where many Disputes arole concerning the Privileges of that Kingdom. On the 24th of August the Queen of Portugal was delivered of a Son, and died before the could be laid in her Bed. She was buried in the Church of St. Hierome, without any Pomp, Lecauf. the had so ordered it in her Will.

4. King Emanuel returned to Fortugal, and was re- 30 her ceived at Lisbon with great Joy in October. He now un- on Rome of derstanding that his Son Wiebael, born of his late on finan Queen, had been sworn Heir of the Crowns of Cutile 12 + 62 and Aragon, refolved to have him tworn in like manner Carite. in Portugal. To this purpose he assembled the Cortes Aragons. or Parliament at Lisbon, on the 7th. of March, where as I Forall the Representatives took an Oath to him, as lawful tugal Successor, the ising confirming his former Grant, that the inno Coffilians should at any time be admitted to Places of

Honous

had been his own. Here the Cortes or Parliament mer. but did little Buliness, as well by reason of the Plague. as for that King John had left all Things in good Order. After fending Embassadors to Rome and Castile, the King gave the Tenth of all his Revenues in Africk, to the Churches there, and reinforced those Garrisons. At 1196. Setuval came to him the Sons of the late Duke of Braganga, executed by King John, their Unkle D. Alvaro. and D. Sancho, Son to Alonfo, another of that Duke's Brothers, who were all reitored to their Estates. He now tent another Embassador to Rome, to obtain the Pope's Difpensation for Knights of the Military Orders to marry, which was granted. At Torres Vedras, whither he Jews bawilled the Eingiana.

dom, by mixing their Families.

Wifee 12 3. At Fibremoz the King had it debated in Council, Gama for whether the Discovery of India ought to be prosecuted so the over or not; and after much contesting, it was resolved in the Affirmative. Vales de Gama was thereupon pirched upon to command Four Ships defigned for that Voyage. The Porticulars of his Success may be feen in the first Edition 2

Honour and Trust in Portugal. About the end of this Year, which was the 4th. of his Reign, the King resolved to translate the Body of King John his Predecessor. from Silves, where he was buried, to the stately Church of Batalla, the burial Place of the Portuguese Princes. He went in Person to Silves, and found the Body whole, as it was feen Fifteen Years after by the Cardinal Henry, and others, which confirmed the Opinion of Sanctity that was conceiv'd of him. The Body was honourably conducted to the Church of Batalla, and there laid in a Marble Tomb. This Year also the King dispersed several forts of new Coins of Silver and Gold, as he did again in the Years 1504, and 1517. He had before given large Revenues to George, the late King's Baltard-Son. and this Year 1500 gave him the City Coimbra, with the litle of Duke, made him Lord of Montemayor c! Viejo, and bestowed on him the Mastership of the Military Orders of Santiago and Avis. Next he married him to the Lady Beatrix de Villena, Daughter to D. Alvaro, the Brother of Ferdinand Duke of Bragança. Beheaded by King John.

3000 350 A.Pichael

5. Now came the News that Prince Michael, King Emanuel's Son, and sworn Heir of all the Kingdoms of Spain, had departed this Life at Granada, being not yet I wo Years of Age. It was requifite the King should marry again, and a Match was accordingly concluded with Mary, Daughter to King Ferdinand, and Sifter to King Emanuel's late Queen. Her Portion was 200000 Crowns down, and 10000 a Year fettled upon the Revinue of Sevil. The Archbishop, D. James Hurtado de Maranza, conducted her to the Borders, where the Duke of Programmes, attended by feveral of the Nobility, a convenient. The Marriage was folemnized at Alcacer and the goth of October. No fooner was the King #1 The married but he refolved to make an Expedition into are a Link in Person, and to that effect had assembled an Fore- Army of 26000 Men. The Venetians at this time, hard Is for by the Torky, made use of the Pope's Mediation, the to obtain of our King to defift from the Enterpize he had in Hand, and to employ his Forces in their Athitance. The King contented, and fent them Thirty Sail, under the Command of D. John do Menefes, Son to the Earl of Vima; and for his Encharagement before his De-Parture he was created Herl of Turerea. In this beacdron were 3500 fighting Men. Another Squadron followed, being designed for the Coast of Oran, in order to attempt taking the Fort of Mazalquivir. They failed from Lisbon about the middle of June, and having affaulted that Place in July, with the loss of 20 Men, and no prospect of Success, the Squadron, provided for that Expedition, returned to Lisbon. D. John de Meneses, with his 30 Sail off of Tunez, took 3 Genoese Ships full of Turks, Moors and Jews, the Genoese he set at liberty. Near Corfu he was met by Twenty five Venetian Galleys, and five Galleons, where both Fleets faluted each other with great Joy. The Turks understanding the Fleets were joyned, retired to their Ports, and the Portuguese Squadron returned home.

6. The King had yet reaped no Advantage from Inalia, He greate but the bare Discovery of it by Vasco de Gama, and yet as the acif the Treasures of that Empire had been brought him, who are he in Thankfgiving laid the Foundation of that wonderful Structure of the Church and Monastery called Below, or Beildem, on the Banks of Tagus, about a League from Lisbon. This Fabrick is Magnificent for its Greatness and Workmanship, but above all for the largeness of the Arch above the Chancel, where, after the manner of all Cathedrals, it opens into a Cross, which Arch, tho vastly spacious, has no Pillar to support it. This Monastery was given to the Fryars of the Order of S. Hierome, and is plentifully endowed. Opposite to the Monastery, in the very River, the King erected a Fort, which, tho not large, is Beautiful, and Commands the River, serving at the same time for a Rampart to the Church; it is called the Fort of S. Vincent. D. Jayme, or James, Duke of Bragança, who was restored to that Honour by King Emanuel, laboured under fuch a deep melancholy, that he sometimes forbore taking his natural Sustenance. Nevertheless, through the King's Ferfwasions he married the Lady Evenier, Daughter to D. John de Guzman, third Duke of Medina Sidonia. But no sooner was he married, than he abiented himself with only one Servant; leaving a Letter for the King, in which he begged of him to beltow all his Pertessions upon his Brother Denis, because he was resolved to found his days at the Holy Sepulchre at Fornfalem. Mellengers were fent feveral ways with orders to bring him back. Some of them found him at Calmayad, in the kingdom of deagon, and prevailed upon him to return.

Being brought back, he had by his Wife a Son called Theodosius, who succeeded him; and a Daughter named Elizabeth, married to Prince Edward, Son to King Emaunel. His first Wife dying, he fell in Love with the Lady Joanna de Mendoza, Daughter to the Governour of Mouram, and having obtained leave of the King, married her: and by her had Four Sons, and as many Daughters.

The History of PORTUGAL.

ITOZ.

7. Queen Mary, second Wife to King Emanuel, was The Cheen delivered of her first Son on the 6th. of June, 1502. delivered. At the time of his Birth happened a violent Storm of of a Son. Rain; and when he was Baptized a Fire broke out in the Palace; we shall see in his Life what these Prodigies portended. A Fleet failed from Lisbon, under the Command of George de Melo, and Gaspar de Aguilar, designing to take the City Targa, on the Coast of Africk, but returned, having sustained Loss, and effected nothing. The King for the Success of his Fleet, undertook a Pilgrimage to Santiago in Galicia; ptesented that Church with a rich Silver Lamp, made in the Form of a Castle, and gave Bountiful Alms. In his return, at Coimbra, he resolved to erect a stately Tomb for Alonso, the first King of Portugal, whose Body lay there in a very mean Sepulchre. At Porto he finished the Silver Shrine of S. Pantaleo, Patron of that City. The King had now a fecond gal.

A Famine time resolved to pass over into Africk, and had all things in Portu- in readiness for the Expedition, when he was again prevented; being obliged to attend to the Relief of his own Kingdom, labouring under a Famine. He remedied this Evil, by bringing in Plenty of Corn from all the Nor-Discoveries thern Countries. In the Year 1500, sailed from Lisbon, Gaspar Cortereal, to attempt some Discovery in the Nor-America. thern Seas. He discovered a Country, which by Reason of its delightful Groves, he called Verde, that is Green. The People were but Barbarous, of a middle Stature, very Swift, expert at shooting with the Bow, and skilful at catting Darts, whose Points are hardned in the Fire, cloathed in Skins, living in Caves and Cottages, and Inving no Religion, but believing in Auguries, and very jealous of their Women. The following Year, he returned thither to make some farther Discovery, but he Having long, his Brother Michael went out in Quelt of him, with two Ships, in Aliv 1502; and neither returning, another Brother prepared to feek them, but was hindred by the King. It being believed both these Brothers thers were lost in that Country, discovered by the first, the Name of it was changed to that of Tierra de Cortereales. About the middle of this Year, the Cortes being Assembled, the King caused his Son to be sworn Heir to the Crown. The Gountry, tho Poor, gave the King 50000 Duccats, to carry on the War in Africk. On the 4th. of October, was born at Lisbon, the Princess Elizabeth, her Birth being attended with the same Prodigies of Storms, as her Brother's was; she was afterwards married to the Emperor Charles the Fifth, her Dower above a Million of Ducats, 900000 in Money, and the rest in Jewels.

8. Elizabeth, Queen of Castile and Arazon, died this Year 1504, at Medina del Campo. Her Death was concealed from Elizabeth, Queen of Portugal, her Daughter, because she was near her time of Delivery, and accordingly on the last Day of December, was brought to Bed of a Daughter, called Beatrix, after Dutchess of Savoy. There followed upon it such Terrible Earthquakes, that whole Towns being swallowed up, the People fled Distractedly to the Mountains. The New The Salars Year began with Threats from the Soldan of Egypt, that of Egypt he would destroy the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem, un- threatens less the Portuguese desisted from their Conquests in India, Jerusawhere Edward Pacheco was now doing Wonders, and Iem. King Ferdinand of Castile from invading the Moors. But An Account these Menaces were little regarded, both Kings proceed- of the Poring in what they had undertaken. Now returned the tugueie King's Embassadors, sent to Pope Julius, and with them Conquests came a Merchant Ship, which being infected with the in India Plague, spread it throughout all Spain. Edward Pacheco returned at this time from India, leaving that Part of the World, aftonished at his Actions. King Emanuel himfelf went out to receive him at landing, with a numerous Train; he walked under a Canopy with the King, his Actions were set out in the Church, by the Bithop ef Viseo. An Account of them was also given to all Forreign Princes, and they were made known to all the Kingdom. After all this Honour, the same Pacheco was call into Prison loaded with Irons, and tho be cleaved himself of all that could be laid to his Charge, he was only turned out of Goal, and left to live upon Charity, as did his Son and Grand-Son after him; till in the time of King Sebastian, the prime Minister Giles Yanez de CoffA

313

Costa, obtained him the grant of a Commendary, and because none was then Vacant, gave him that he had obtained for sis own Son.

1506. Birth of the King's tourth Son.

A great

Mutiny

en Ac-

lupposed

Son ache.

9. On the third of March, 1506. at Abrantes was born the King's fourth Son, Lewis, an admirable Prince for his ludgment, Learning and Valour. So addicted to Warlike Affairs, that a Fleet of 60 Sail was provided for him, to go into India, but the Defign was disappointed. He ferved under the Emperor Charles the Fifth, at the taking of Tunus, and gained Honour. He was never married, but had a Baltard-Son by the Lady Violante Gomez, this was Antony, who afterwards, upon the Death of Henry the King and Cardinal, aspired to the Crown. Upon the 6th of April, it being Sunday, certain Persons in the Church of S. Dominick, fancied a Crucifix in one of the Chappels, cast forth a miraculous Light; a New count of a Convert that had been a Jew, said it was the Resection of the Sun from a Window. Hereupon, without farther Examination, they dragged him out of the Church and burnt him. The Rabble assembled about the Fire, one of the Friars with vehement Speeches Encouraging them. Two other Friars ran about the Streets, crying out, Heresie! Heresie! with Crucifixes in their Hands. Above 500 Men gathered in Arms, who slew as many of the New Converts, burning their Bodies. The number increasing, upon Monday Morning they murdered Men, Women, and Children, dragging them from the very Altars, whither they fled for Sanctuary; fo that this Day above 1000 perished. This was continued the third Day, to the number of 400 being destroyed, so that in all they amounted to 2000 murdered, among them many that were not New Converts; for the defire of Plunder was more than the Zeal of Religion, as it is in all Mutinies, whatever the Pretences be. The King then at Avis, was highly offended at this Infolency. He took away the City Charter, and fent thither the Prior of Crate, and Baron of Alvito to punish the offenders. Some were hanged, others had their Goods confilcated, and the two Friars burnt, all that belonged to the Monastery were banished.

1507. Birth of

10. James de Azambuja was sent to erect a Fort on a Point of Land in Africk, opposite to the Island Magador, the King's it was called Fort Royal. July the 5th. the King and Queen being at Abrantes, was born their fifth Son, whom they called Ferdinand. He was a great lover of History, and no less addicted to Warlike Affairs. The following Year, the Limits of the Conquests, on the Coast of Africk, were settled betwixt the two Crowns of Spain and Portugal. All Eastward of Belez de la Gomera was assigned to the Spaniards; thence Westward was allowed to the Portuguese. This Year 1509, was born the Prince of Portuguese Poets, Luis de Camoens. On the twenty third of April, the Queen was delivered at Evora, of her fixth Birth of Son, called Alonfo. At Seven Years of Age, Pope Leothe Camoens, Tenth, sent him a Cardinal's Cap; afterwards he had both Portuthe Archbishopricks of Lisbon and Evora, and the Abby of Alcobaça, all at one time. This Year also the Work continued from the time of King John the First, and Founder of the famous Church and Monastery of Batalla, which ought to have been finished, was interrupted, and nothing done to it fince, to that ever after, that mighty Fabrick remains Imperfect. Mondragon, a French Pirate, having the foregoing Year, taken a Rich Ship coming from India, had now fitted out Four great Galleons upon the same Design. The King sent out some Ships against him, under the Command of the Renowned Edward Pacheco, who after a sharp dispute near Cape Finisterre, sunk one of the Pirate's Galleons, and took the other three. Mondragon was presented to the King, who freely forgave him.

CHAP. X.

The remaining Part of the Life and Reign of Emanuel, the First of the Name, and Fourteenth King of Portugal; from the Year of our Lord 1510, till 1521.

1. Othing remarkable happened the Year 15 to, but 1510. It that many Moors, and Hords of Arabs, along the Coast of Africk, submitted themselves to King Emanuel, and became his Tributaries. The following Year threatned a Breach between Castile and Portugal; because King Ferdinand fitted out a Fleet at Malaga, with Defign to invade the Portuguese Conquests: The Pope calling upon him for Succour against the French, obliged him to defift from that Enterprize. Nevertheless, that Faithless King as if his Designs had not been known. folicited King Emanuel to joyn with him against France, and highly resented that he Courteously entertained a French Squadron in his Ports. Henry the 8th. King of England, who had married Katherine, Sister to the Queen King Ema- of Portugal, now sent King Emanuel the Garter, having received him into that most Noble Order. On the last to be instructed in the Christian Faith. With them came

1528

Peter, that King's Cousin, whom he sent as his Embassador to Rome, to submit him and his Kingdom to the Pope. King Emanuel lent the Black Prince Henry with crives the Day of January, was born at Lisbon, Prince Henry, the Order of King's Seventh Son; a mighty Snow falling just before the Garter, his Birth, which is a thing rarely feen in Lisbon. We from King shall have more occasion to speak of him hereafter, when Henry the he ascends the Throne. Alonso King, and Apostle of Congo, this Year fent his Son Henry, and his Brother England. Emanuel, with many Young Noblemen into Portugal,

I 5 1 2. Harry, Congo. comes into the Embassador; they arrived at Rome the following Portugal, Year, where they were courteoully received, and dismis-

1513. fed by Leo the Tenth, then fitting in 3. Peter's Chair. 2. D. Alvaro de Castro, was Lord Steward of "the punishes his Houshold, and in great Favour. He finding a Servant Lord Stew- of his own, whom he had turned away, talking with a ard for his Slave in his House, caused him to be so cruelly lashed, cruelty to a that all his Body was but one continued Sore. The Servant putting nothing on but his Cloak, came into the King's Presence, where letting it fall, he said, Ecce Homo; Your Lord Steward has done this to me, only for talking to one of his Slaves. The King aftonished at this Barbarity, immediately sent Andrew Perez Landin, his Clerk of the Closet, to acquaint D. Alvaro, that he deprived him of his Charge, ordered he should remain a Prisoner in his House till farther order, and pay 500 Crowns to that Man. D. Alvaro's Kindred came to the King to intercede for him, but finding the King implacable, they went away Discontented, and returned not to Court; whereupon the King ordered the Two Sons of D. Alvaro, to be struck out of his Books. At last upon the humble Application of D. Alvaro's Wife, he was fent for to Court, severely reprimanded, and then pardoned. Last Year began the Preparations, and now was fitted out a 1514. Fleet of above 400 Sail, carrying 18000 Foot, and 2600

Horse, all under the Command of Jayme or James Duke of Bracança. He failed from Liston about the middle of August, and landing on the 28th. of the same Month in Africk, took the City Azamor. Those of Tite and Azamor. Almedina, being abandoned by the Inhabitants, he also conthe Conf. possessed himself of with ease. Then having ravaged the of Africk, Country, without any opposition, he returned to Lisbon taken. The Particulars of this Expedition, properly belong to the Portuguele Africk.

3. King Emanuel resolving to Dedicate to God, the Presents of

First Fruits of India, thought the shortest way was to the First present them to the Pope, his Vicegerent. With this Fraiss of Present he sent Three Embassadors, the chief whereof India, fent was Tristan da Cunha, with a most magnificent Retinue. to the Page. The Present consisted of an Elephant covered with Cloth of Gold, and governed by an Indian; a Persian Horse with rich Furniture; a Panther that would Hunt, and was at Command like a Dog; and a whole Suit of Vestments, for all occasions, all of Cloth of Gold, so thick Embroidered with Pearls, and precious Stones, that the Ground of it could not be discerned. The whole was valued at 500000 Crowns. Bernardin Freyre, and Francis Pereyra Pestana, arriving now from India, the King caused them to be cast into Prison; being informed how unworthily they had treated Mathem, Embassador from Ellen, Grand-Mother of David, Emperor of Ethiopia, and Regent of that Empire, during her Grand Son's Minority. There they remained till the faid Embassador interceded for them. He was an Armenian Christian, Iudicious, Learned and Bold. The King received him with Respect, and by him a Letter, from the Empreis, Five Medals of Gold, and a great Cross made of the Wood of that our Saviour suffered upon; and kept in a Gold Case. In her Letter the Empress offered her affistance towards forwarding the King's undertakings in Asia; and defired fince they were both Christians, that their Families might be allyed by mutual Marriages, that so they might be the better enabled to destroy the Turks, and Moors, in those Parts. On the 7th. of September, 1515, was born at Lisbon, Edward, the King's 8th. Son, of whom more at the end of this Chapter. Embassadors bern. were sent to Castile, to condole with Queen Germana, upon the Death of her Husband King Ferdinand; and to Flanders, to Charles, afterwards the 5th. of that

Name,

Name, Emperor, to offer him Elizabeth, Daughter to King Emanuel, in Marriage; and ask his Sister Ellenor, for Prince John. This Year ended with the Birth and Death of Mary, Emannel's Ninth Child.

1517. Birth of tenth Child. The Queen diss.

4. Prince Antony, the King's Tenth Child, was born at Lisbon, on the 9th. Day of September. He lived bur the King's a few Days, and left his Mother so Weak, that she died the 7th. of March following, of an Impostume in her Bowels; being but 35 Years of Age. She was generally lamented, being extreamly beloved for her Fruitfulness. her great Love to the King, her liberality to the Poor. her Devotion, Affability, Modelty, Piety, Industriousness in the good spending her Time, and special care of Instructing her Children. As to Features, she was neither beautiful, nor deformed. She founded the Monastery of S. Hierome, in the Berlings; and lies buried in the Church of Belem. Before the Queen's Death, the King put an Elephant, and a Rhinoceros together, to fee the manner of their Fight, being naturally Enemies; but the Elephant being young was frighted, and forcing his way through a Place that was barred, ran about the City. overturning all he met. The Rhinoceros was afterwards fent as a Present to the Pope, but the Ship was cast away; however the dead Rhinoceros being cast a Shoar, was taken up, and the Skin stuffed and carried to Rome, John Diaz Golez, a Portuguese Pilot, flying from Justice, escaped into Castile; where he perswaded certain Merchants to fit out Two Ships, and Trade into Brasil. King Emanuel complaining to the Young King Charles, these Encroachers were punished. John Wallop, an English Gentleman of Worth, afterwards Governour of Callis, came into Portugal, offering to serve in Africk upon his own Expence. He ferved Two Years at Tangier honourably, and then returned home; having received the Order of Knighthood of Christ, and other considerable Favours, and continued always a great Favourer of the Affairs of Portugal.

5. Soliman the great Emperor of the Turks, having Eaken Grand Cairo, and all the Dominions of the Egyptian Soldans; King Emanuel pressed the Pope, to excite all the Christian Princes to joyn their Forces against him, but without success. The Body of S. Auta, one of the 11000 Virgins, was now brought to Lisbon, and placed in the Monastery of the Mother of God, where it

The History of PORTUGAL. is held in great Veneration. The King being extreamly afflicted for the Loss of his Queen, had thoughts of retiring to Algarve, contenting himself with that little Portion of his Kingdom, and leaving the rest to the Prince his Son. But the Prince led away by his Favourites, being too forward, and dropping some disrespectful words of his Father, moved him to change that Resolution; and not only to retain the Power in his own Hands, but to marry the Wife he had designed for him. To this pur- 1518. pose, D. Alvaro da Costa was sent Embassador into The King Castile, and the Treaty so privately managed, that the marries Bride was contracted to the King by Proxy; before the again.

Design of the Embassador was known in Portugal. Her Portion was 200000 Crowns down, and 5000 per Annum; during her Life. She was conducted to the Borders of the two Kingdoms by several Noblemen of Spain, and there received by Jayme or James Duke of Bragança, accompanied by a great Train of Persons of Quality on the Twenty third of November. At Crato, the next Day, she was married by the Archbishop of Lisbon. Thence they went to Almeyrin, because the Plague was brief at Lisbon. Here the King, on St. Andrew's Day, received the Order of the Golden Fleece, fent him by his Brother-in-law King Charles.

6. Ferdinand Magellanes a Gentleman of Worth, who had served well in India and Africk, being refused some fmall Addition to the Pension he enjoyed for his good Services, some envious Persons disswading the King from showing him any Favour, discontented at this hard Ufage, solemnly Unnaturalized himself as the Custome was then, and went over to Castile, at such time as the Molucco Islands were thought to appertain to the Conquests of that Crown. He there offered to find out a New way to those Islands, and being furnished with Five Ships, failed from Sevil about the beginning of August, and Magelian discovered those Streights, which will Eternize his Name, discovers being of him called the Streights of Magellan. The he Particulars of this Voyage, as more properly appertain- society ing to that History, are to be seen in the Portuguese After of ble The King laid a Duty upon Corn, to which imposition Name some Places consented. John Mendez Cecceso, Mayor of Eyora, opposed it. The King sent for, and promised to reward him if he would comply; but he perfitting obtinately was confined to his House. Soon after he commended him for his Refolution, and remitted that Tax. The Commonalty of Castile now rising in Rebellion against their King, who was gone into Germany, being chosen Emperor upon the Death of Maximilian, sent the Dean of Avilato offer the Crowns of Castile and Leon to King

The History of PORTUGAL.

Emanuel. He believing no Confidence could be reposed in those that were Rebels to their Lawful Sovereign, not only advised them to return to their Obedience, but sent Supplies of Ammunition and Money to the Cardinal Adrian, afterwards Pope, the Constable, and Admiral.

then Governours during the King's Absence. 7. Ellenor the new Queen of Portugal was the last Year at Evora, on the 18th. of February delivered of a Prince called Charles, who lived but Fifteen Months. This 2521. Year on the 18th. of June, at Lisbon, the brought forth the Princess Mary. Many Matches were proposed for this Lady, but none took Effect, so that she died a Maid at the Age of 57 Years. After long Debates, and Three teveral Embassies sent by Charles Duke of Savoy to obtain Beatrix, King Emanuel's second Daughter for his Wife, the Match was concluded. She had 150000 Crowns Portion, and was conducted to Savoy with extraordinary Expence. Eighteen Sail were fitted out to trans-Emanuel, port the Princess, and a most splendid Retinue accompamarried to nied her. In fine, she embarked on the 5th. of August, lay Five Days a Board on the River, and then fet Sail on the Day of the Feast of S. Laurence. By this Princess the Duke of Savoy had his Son Emanuel Filibertus, from whom the Dukes of that House are descended. Beraurdin Ribeyro, a Man well born, and an ingenious Poet, was in love with the Princess, and she favoured him for his Wit. Seeing her depart he became a Hermit at Sintra; thence he went a Pilgrim into Italy, and returming through Savoy he received Charity of the Dutche's, who knowing him, ordered he should not stay in the City. He returned Home, and ended his Life with his Pilgrimage. The Venetians, who had for many Years enjoyed all the Trade of Spice, being now depriv'd of it by the Portuguese having discovered India, sent an Embassador to pray they might be allowed all that was above what the Kingdom confumed, at a certain Rate. This Embassador was honourably entertained, but received not a fatisfactory Answer.

Peatrix. Danghter to King

8. Such was now the flourishing Estate of Lisbon. that it was thronged with Forreign Embassadors and Merchants from all Parts. In the height of this Prosperity and Grandeur King Emanuel fell fick of a Lethargy, then the epidemical Distemper reigning. Perceiving his End draw nigh, he performed all the Acts of a good Christian, and died the 13th. of December, 1521. King Emathe Ninth day of his Sickness, the 53d. Year of his Age, nuel dies. and 27th. of his Reign. His Body was Interred in his Church of Belem, where his Son built him a stately Tomb. Before his Death happened a most cruel Famine, and after that, a terrible Plague. The Pestilence continued the following Year, and fuch prodigious Earthquakes shook the Island of S. Michael, that Mountains fell upon some Villages, and others were overturned into the Sea, with great slaughter of the Inhabitants. King Emanuel, as to Stature, was tall, somewhat lean, his Hair dark-brown, his Forehead high, his Eyes green and pleafant, his Arms fo long, that when hanging. down, his Fingers reached below his knees. He was much addicted to all Sports, as Riding, Dancing, Mufick, and Feafting; very Devout, and therefore on Holydays went to several Churches; extraordinary Charitable, a lover of Astrologers and Jesters. He reformed several Religious Houses, that lived not regularly.

9. His Structures were so many, and so great, it would His Struswell to a Volume to particularize them; in short, they stures, and were Thirteen Monasteries in Portugal, besides all those other in Asia, Africk, and America; and besides Repairs in Works other Places, Eight great Churches, the great Hospital of Lisbon, Five Palaces, Custom-houses, Store houses, many Magazines plentifully stored, and above Twenty Forts of confiderable Magnitude, besides many of less note. Also several Bridges, Moles, Fountains, and other Works were begun and finished by him. To encourage Gentlemen to serve in Africk, he instituted new Commendaries to Reward those that deserved well, and allowed Wages to an Hundred Knights for their Entertainment there. He first gave the hundredth Penny of his Revenue to Pious Uses. By him the Laws of the Kingdom were digested into Method, and Registers made of all Estates and Foundations, as also a Book of the Arms of the Nobility. Kings at Arms, and Rules of Blazon, were of his introducing into Portugal, Antony

Rodriguez,

Rodriguez, the first Master of that Science here, being tent to most Courts of Christendom, to inform himself perfectly therein. The Chronicles down to his own days he caused to be corrected, Rewarding Edward Gal-vam, and Ruy de Pina, who laboured in that Affair. He had three Wives; the first, Elizabeth, Widow of Prince Alonso, in her Right he was at Toledo sworn Heir to the Crowns of Castile and Leon. The second was Mary,

Sifter to the former, both Daughters to King Ferdinand and Queen Elizabeth of Castile and Aragon. The third was Ellenor, Daughter to King Philip the First of Spain,

Sister to the Emperor Charles the Fifth, and Niece to

CHAP. XI.

The First Part of the Life and Reign of John. the Third of the Name, and Fifteenth King of Portugal; from the Year of our Lord 1502. till 1543.

I. Ing John the Third, was Second Son to King Ema- King John nucl, and the First, by his Second Wife, born the Third at Lisbon on the 6th. of June, 1502, about Two in the his Birth. Morning. It was observable, that this being the midst of Summer, when the Weather is usually settled fair, just at that time, there arose such a terrible Storm of Wind, Rain, Thunder and Lightning, that none living had ever feen the like. Whilst this Prince was Baptizing, there broke out such a Fire in the Palace, as alarmed the whole Court, and gave occasion to various Conjectures on what it might Prognosticate. The Prince was just a Year old, when his Father Assembling the Cortes, or Parliament at Lisbon, caused him to be sworn Heir to the Crown. At three Years of Age lie was weaned. Being come out of his Infancy, he was given in charge to Gonzalo Figuegra, a Noble Citizen of Lisbon, the Queen his Mother still overseeing his Education. The Bishop of Tangier taught him his Grammar, and Lewis Texxeyra instructed him in the Laws, yet he profited little in either, never thoroughly understanding any Book that belonged to them. Nor was he more successful in Astrology, taught him by Thomas de Torres, then Famous in that Science and Physick. In short, at the end of his Studies, the Prince was found very ignorant; for tho he had an excellent Memory, he never applyed himself to Learning, and his Mafters feared difobliging him. In the Year 1512. the Prince fell down from a Gallery in the Palace, so that for 24 hours the Doctors despaired of his Life. After that, he came to himself, and recovered, a finall fear of a hurt received in the fall remaining on his forehead. Next, he had a violent Fit of Sickness, which once passed, he continued healthy all the remaining part of his Life. At this Age the King both his former Wives. His Wives 10. By his First Wife he had Issue, Prince Michael who died at Zaragoga, not quite Two Years of Age, having been Sworn Heir to all the Kingdoms of Spain. By the Second Wife, he had, First, John, his Successor. Secondly, Elizabeth, Wife to Charles the Fifth, and Mother to King Philip the Second. Thirdly, Beatrix, Wife to Charles the Third Duke of Savoy. Fourthly, Lewis, Duke of Beja, and Constable of Portugal, Father to Antony, Prior of Crato; who tho a Bastard aspired to the Crown. Fifthly, Ferdinand, Duke of Guarda, who left no Issue. Sixthly, Alonso, the Cardinal and Archbishop of Lisbon. Seventhly, Henry, the Cardinal and Archbishop of Braga, Lisbon, and Evora; who afterwards was King. Eighthly, Edward, Duke of Guimaraens, who married Elizabeth, Daughter and Heiress of James Duke of Bragança, by whom he had two Daughters; Mary the eldest married to Alexander Farnesius, Duke of Parma; and Katherine, Dutchess of Bragansa, from whom, tho the younger, are Descended the late Kings of Portugal. Ninthly, Mary. Tenthly, Antony, who both died in their Infancy. By the Third Wife, First, Charles, who died an Infant. Secondly, Mary, who died a Maid at rhe Age of 57 Years, having been disappointed of several Matches that were proposed for her.

CHAP.

began to make himself acquainted with Business, to which he applyed himself better than to his Book.

2. The King, later than had been expected, fettled Ĭ (I (. the Prince's Family, and appointed all the Officers of his Houshold, among which, his principal Favourites were D. Lewis de Silveyra, and D. Antony de Ataide, D. Lewis de Silverra was suspected to incense the King against his Father, after his marrying Queen Ellenor, Sifter to Charles the Fifth, once designed for the Prince, as was said in the forgoing Chapter. Hereupon D. Lewis was banished the Court, but as soon as ever King John came to the Crown, he was recalled. It being the Custom to Proclaim the new King the third day after the Death of his Predecessor, this Solemnity was, for several urgent

King John Reasons, deferred till the fixth day, when it was perproclaim'd, formed with the usual Ceremonies. The new King understanding that a Fleet was fitting in France, in order to make new Discoveries in India and Brasil, and that several French Pirates infested the Portuguese Seas, sent D. John de Silveyra to put that King in mind of the Ancient Friend hip betwixt those two Crowns, and require redress of those Wrongs. This Embassador had an Honourable Reception, but no Success in his Business. Ayres

ae Sonsa went Embassador to the new Pope Adrian, then at Zaragoga, in his way to Rome, to Complement him upon his Promotion to S. Peter's Chair. D. Lewis de Silverra, King John's Favourite, was fent to the Emperor Charles the Fifth, to offer him Elizabeth, the King's Eldest Sister, in Marriage. Yet of a sudden his Instructions were altered, and he ordered only to Complement that Prince upon his happy Arrival in Spain. The cause of this fudden change was this: The Ship, called the Victory, the first that sailed round the World, and the only one that escaped of those that discovered the Streights of Magellan, arriving at the Islands of Cabo Verde, the Inhabitants understanding she came from the Molacco Illands, defigned to secure her; but they on board having some Jealousie of it, immediately set Sail, leaving behind their long Boat, with thirteen Men, who were sent away Prisoners to Lisbon, whilst the Ship made her Voyage, and arrived fafe at Sevil. The Emperor complained hereof to the King, and he again that the Emperor's Ships invaded his Conquests, demanding the Lading of the Ship Victory. D. Lewis de Silveyra spent Eight

Eight Months in his Embassy at the Emperor's Court, without dispatching any Business, and then returning to Portugal, found the King at Almeirin, where at his first access, forgetting or neglecting to kiss his Hand, he found himself quite out of favour; for D. Antony de Atayde, making his Advantage of the others absence, had quite worked him out of his Master's Affections. Nevertheless, D. Lewis continued at Court, without ever expresfing the least Resentment for his Fall.

3. D. Antony de Atayde, now the only Favourite, was The Chaa Person well deserving that high Honour for his singular ractor of Prudence and Moderation. There are sufficient Testi- D. Antony monies of the former, and I will bring one that may de Arayde fully evince the latter. The Lord of Azambuja, Head the King's of one of the ancientest Families in Portugal, designed Favourite. to fell that Town to supply his present wants. The King told D. Antony, it would be proper for him to buy it, because it joyned to his Estate. He answered, It was more for his Highness's Reputation, to supply the wants of so Ancient and Honourable a Family, than to suffer it to fall to nothing, by selling an Estate of that Antiquity. The King took his Advice, and so generously relieved that Gentleman, that he was enabled to preserve his Patrimony. This is a good Remark for those, who, to advance their own Fortunes, are so far from regarding any Private Person, that they stick not to ruin Kings, and overturn Kingdoms. It was now thought time that the King should Marry, and James, Duke of Bragança, proposed to him Queen Ellenor, his Mother-in-law, as Wife to the late King, who was vally Rich. This Proposal being noised abroad, was so well liked, that the Council of Lisbon addressed him, in behalf of themfelves and the whole Kingdom, praying he would condescend to it. The King could not approve of Marrying his Father's Wife, and was freed from their Importunities by the Emperor's defiring he would suffer his Sister to return to Castile, which was accordingly performed.

4. A Ma ch being proposed for the King with Kathe- 15:4 rine, Sitter to the Emperor Charles the Fifth. Embassadors King John were fent to Burgos, where that Prince then kept his Marries Court, to treat about it. The Articles agreed upon were, Katherine, That the Bridegroom should pay the Charge of the Di-Sister to the spensation; the Emperor should be at the Expence of Emperor her Journey; That she should have 200000 Ducats Charles down, the Fifth.

down, and 5000 a Year for her Portion, besides Jewels and other Necessaries. That the third part should be given to her at her Marriage, and that her Joynture should be 10000 Ducats a Year, with all the Lands and Towns the Queens used to possess. The former Peace was confirmed, and Supplies promised reciprocally in case of need. About the end of the Year she was conducted to the Borders by the Bishop of Signenea, and Duke of Vejar, and there delivered to the Princes Lewis and Ferdinand, fent to attend her. The King received her at Crato, and she proved one of the best Queens in the World. She was happy in bringing forth many Children, but unfortunate in the shortness of their Lives, which gave occasion to the Multitude to say, It was a Judgment of God on the King, for the Familiarity he was suspected to have with the Queen his Mother-in-1525. law. At the beginning of the Year a motion was made The Emper of a Match betwixt the Emperor and our King's Sifter, the Fifth Marries Sifter to 1531.

A great

Earth-

quake.

ror Charles the Princel's Elizabeth. Embassadors of the Emperor and the King's Commissioners meeting upon this Subject, agreed, That the Emperor should be at the Ex-Elizabeth, pence of the Dispensation, and the King defray the Charge of her Journey, as had been done in the Marriage King John. of the Emperor's Sifter; but the Portion now given with this Princels, far exceeded that, for it amounted almost to a Million of Crowns. In November the Emperor's Embassador was contracted for the Emperor to the Princels, and the day after they fet forward with the King and Princes.

1525.

5. The Empress's Journey into Spain was delayed till the Dilpenfation came from Rome, and then being attended to the Frontiers by many of the Nobility, she was there delivered to the Spanish Noblemen fent to receive her. She was conducted to Sevil, and there received with Pomp suitable to so great a Princess. Soon after came the Emperor, and in March the Marriage was foiemnized.

We must now pals over seven Years, without men-Year 1531, there happened a most terrible Earthquake, which overthrew many Buildings, but chiefly at Lisbon, and round about it, where whole Towns were overtioning any thing of the Affairs of this Kingdom, becaute we find nothing Remarkable, except that in the whelmed. About this time also the Tribunal of the Inquifition

The History of PORTUGAL. Inquisition was erected for suppressing of the Jews.

Muley Hazen, expelled the Kingdom of Tunis by the Famous Pirate Hariaden Barbarossa, fled to the Emperor Charles the Fifth for Succour. The Emperor undertook his Protection, and in order to it, desired Assistance of King John, particularly praying him to fend an extraordinary Galeon, then Famous for its greatness, called the S. John. The King fent him that, and two others of great Bulk, besides 20 smaller ones loaded with store King John of Ammunition, and bravely manned. The Command of fends Sucthis Squadron was given to Antony de Saldana, who had cours to the served well in India. At B. rcelona he joyned the Eth- Emperor. peror, and was by him Honourably received. Prince Lewis stole away from Court, to serve under the Emperor Charles the Fifth; but of this we spoke at the time of his Birth, in the Reign of King Emanuel. The King fent him 100000 Crowns, and the Emperor received him at Barcelona with all possible marks of Honour. They fet out with 400 Sail, and made themselves Masters of Guletta and Tunis.

6. From the Year 1535. we find nothing worthy of 1529. Memory till 1539. a Year Remarkable for the Death, Death of first, of Prince Philip, who was scarce Six Years of Age, Prince Phiwho departed this Life at Lisbon; and then of the Em-lip, and of press Elizabeth, who ended her days at Toledo. Nor the Empress was the following Year less fatal, fince in it were fnatch'd 1510. away, first, Antony the King's Son, being but Eleven And of Months old, then the Cardinal Alonso, and lastly, Prince others. Edward, both Brothers to the King. D. Michael de Silva, Bishop of Portalegre, and Clerk of the Closet, at this time fled privately to Rome, where he had before negotiated for a Cardinal's Cap, which was given him immediately upon his arrival at that Court. The King was to highly offended at this Contempt, that he difclaimed him as a Subject, and deprived him of all the Benefices and Honours he enjoyed in the Kingdom. All Persons that should presume to hold Correspondence with him, were subjected to the same Penalties; yet the Cardinal's Brother, D. George, transgressed against this Decree, and was therefore committed Prisoner to the Fort of Belem, to answer that Misdemeanor. The Princess Mary, the King's Daughter, at the time of her departure to Castile to Marry Prince Philip, begged and obtained of her Father that the said D. George might be 1534.

1541.

15.12.

pirdoned,

pardoned, only upon the Penalty of going to serve at 1543. Arzila, where he behaved himself in such a manner, as gained him great Reputation.

Prince Portugal.

7. The Match betwixt Prince Philip of Spain and the Philip of Princess Mary of Portugal was concluded by the Spanish Spain Mar- Embassador, Lewis Sarmiento de Mendoza, who stood ries Mary, Proxy for the Prince at the Ceremony of Contracting Princess of the Princess to him, which was performed by Prince Henry. About the middle of October the Princess set forward towards Castile with a most Splendid and Honourable Retinue, confisting of 5000 Horse, and 2700 Sumpture Mules. Francis, King of France, hearing of this Match, whereof the King had given him no Account, was highly offended, and expressed his Resentment to D. Francis de Noronha, the Portuguese Embasfador at his Court. That Gentleman, tho unacquainted with the Affair, so mitigated that King, and soothed him with fuch convincing Reasons, that he appeared wholly fatisfied, and by his Prudence, a Breach that might have happened between the two Crowns, so strictly allied for many Years, was prevented. In August, Edward, the King's Bastard-Son came to Lisbon, and was received with general Applause by the King, Queen, and all the Court. He was Born in the Year 1525. and brought up in the Royal Monastery of S. Hierome da Costa. He was a promising Youth, but cut off in his Prime, for he lived not much above two Months after his coming to Court, and died in the 22d. Year of his Age.

CHAP. XII.

The remaining Part of the Life and Reign of John, the Third of the Name, and Fifteenth King of Portugal, from the Year 1544, till 1557.

1. THE Years 1544 and 1545 passed without any thing Remarkable, or at least Historians do not 1546. receives the give us Account of any Passages in them. Nor is there any thing of more note in the Year 1546, besides that King Golden John received the Order of the Golden Fleece, sent him Fleece

The History of PORTUGAL.

by the Emperor Charles the Fifth. In March following, the King being at Almeyrin, King Henry of France fent Monsieur de Biron to him, desiring he would stand Godfather to a Son he had newly born; which the King granted, and D. Constantine of Bragança, Brother to that Duke, went to represent his Person. It was found necessary, for the security of the Conquests in Africk. to erect a Fort over the Bay of Alcaçar. The King ordered his Embassadors residing at Brussels with the Emperor, and with Prince Maximilian, then Governing Spain, to encline them both to fend some Auxiliary Galleys for carrying on that Work, the particulars of it may be seen in the Portsiguese Africk. Prince John was now Twelve Years of Age, and still continued under the Government of Women, when the King began to think of fettling his Family, which was accordingly done in February following. Antony de Pesquera had some Years fince fet out a Ship at S. Lucar, and traded in the Portuquese Conquests of Guinea and Brasil, and was now returning to those Parts. King John sent out Vasco Lorenço, with Orders not to take him, unless in the Conquests, but he over-hastily seized him in the Canary Illands; whereof Prince Maximilian, who then governed Spain, complaining, he was released, and Vasco Lorenço for a time confined to the Castle of Ovidos, but foon discharged. George, Bastard-Son to King John the Second, who had absented himself from Court all the time of his Youth, came now to it at 70 Years of Age, and fell in Love with one of the Queen's Ladies, not above 16. They were privately contracted, yet never married, the King obstructing it, and so the Young Lady was left under some Scandal.

2. The King confidering long Peace had difarmed the Onlinances Kingdom, ordered all People should furnish themselves medebr with Arms. Such as had 2500 Royals per Annum, were the King. obliged to keep compleat Armour, a Sword and Spear; every Man that had double this Yearly Income, to keep a Musqueteer; and so forward for every time that Revenue was doubled. Because Horses were scarce, he forbid Mares engendring with Asses for Mules. The Wolves being numerous, and destroying much Cattle, general Huntings were appointed upon certain days, and Rewards affigned to fuch as brought in the Skin of a Wolf. The King, weary of multiplicity of Bufiness, remitted

remitted a great part of his Care to the Council, and from this time the Kingdom began to decline. Pope Paul III. dying about the end of this Year, Dr. Baltafar Faria, the Portuguese Embassador at Rome, used all his Interest for Prince Henry of Portugal, but on the 17th. of February, Cardinal John Maria was declared Pope, 1550. by the Name of Julius the Third, and King John lent D. Alonso de Lancastre to Complement him upon his Promotion to S. Peter's Chair. Most of the Copper Coin of the Kingdom having been carryed out, because the Metal was worth more than it was coined for, the King new coined other Pieces, which being much under the value, the Kingdom was foon filled with it counterfeit

The History of PORTUGAL.

from other Parts. The Prince John had his Family settled before, yet he kept not House apart from his Fa-1551. ther till this Year 1551. Certain French and Turkish Pirates infesting the Coasts of Spain and Portugal, the 1552. King prevailed with the Emperor to fit out some Ships to scour those Seas; he did the same himself, and they were appointed their feveral Stations, with Orders, upon occasion, to joyn and affift one another.

1553. Prince ries Joanna, Daughter to Charles the Fifth.

1554. Prince John dies.

The Princess delivered of a Som.

3. A Match being concluded for Prince 70hn with the Princess Joanna, Daughter to Charles the Fifth, and Eli-John Mar- zabeth, the Prince's Aunt, and her Portion settled at 360000 Ducats; the Duke of Aveyro, and the Bishop of Coimbra went with a numerous and splendid Retinue to receive her upon the Frontiers. She came to Elvas about the end of November. At Barreyro the King met and conducted her thence to Lisbon, where a few days after the was marryed to the Prince, to the general Joy of all the Kingdom, hoping a numerous Issue from them. But all Humane hopes are vain, for the Prince died the Second of January following. His Diftemper was an inward confuming Fever, which being supposed to proceed from too much use of his Wife, she was removed from him to the Queen's Apartment. There the Prince's Death was kept from her knowledge, the King visiting her without Mourning. The Princess was left with Child, and on the 19th. of January brought forth a Son, who was called Sebastian. The Princess being out of danger, was acquainted with the Death of the Prince, and went into firict Mourning. She would have cut off her Hair, in token of Sorrow, but the King would not permit it. Being one Night in Bed with her Husband, Husband there appeared to her a Woman in Mourning, who giving one blast vanished, as if she had foretold all her Delights would vanish into Air. Other Nights she perceived the Lights in her Chamber put out without feeing any Body to do it. Twice being at a Window with her Ladies, she saw many Men cloathed after the Moorifb Fashion, with Torches in their Hands, cast themselves into the River. All these were looked upon as unhappy Omens of the Prince's Death, and other Calamities that ensued.

4. Prince Philip of Spain, Brother to the Widow Princess, being upon his Departure for England, to marry Mary the Heiress of that Crown; by his Embassadors desired of King John, that he would suffer the Princess to return to Spain, to Govern that Kingdom. In May, the Prince's fet forward from Lisbon, attended by Prince The Prince Lewis, as far as Arroyolos; where he delivered her to the cels Go-Duke of Bragança, who conducted her to the Borders of corns the Kingdom, and there gave her up to the Bishops of Spain. Osma and Badajoz, and to D. Garcia de Toledo, who was Lord Steward. She Governed Spain with Discretion, and Founded a Monaltery and Holpital in Madrid. This Summer sailed from Lisbon, D. Peter da Cunha with Five Ships and Four Galleys, to Guard the Gast of Algarve. Being in the Bay of Tavira, he discovered the famous An En-Turkish Pirate, Xaramet Arraez, with Eight Galleys. Eagement D. Peter gave orders to engage them, but the Ships not being able to come up for want of Wind, he engaged with only his Four Galleys. The Admiral Galleys attacked one another, and at first the Portuguese had the worst; whereupon the Turks boarder her, but were beaten out; and Fortune changing, D. Peter took the Turk. The other Three Christian Galleys boarded as many of the Infidels, whereof they took two, and flink the Third. The remaining Turkish Galleys, seeing these lost, fled. Of the the Turks 150 were killed, and 100 taken, 230 Christian Slaves were released, and 40 Portuguese perished. Two Portuguese left ashoar when the Galleys went out to meet the Enemy, swam aboard with their Swords in their Mouths. D. Peter returned Victorious to Lisbon, where he maintained the Turk his Prisoner, till he was exchanged for a Turk, who turning Christian, was called Peter Paul, and had behaved himself so well, that the Command of the Galley was given him; but he being taken by the

Infidels

Infidels and carried to Mazagam, had certainly been put to Death, but was spared only upon Account of Xaramet, for whom he was exchanged.

The History of PORTUGAL.

1555. Prince Lewis dies.

5. On the the 27th. of November, 1555, died Prince Lewis the Delight of Portugal, and a Person of singular Learning, Judgment, Courage, Generosity, and Pietv. He went twice into Castile, once to agree with the Emperor about reducing the King of France to forbear trading in the Portuguele Conquests, which he effected. The Second time, to Conclude a Peace betwixt the Emperor dies.

and King of France. He built a stately Palace at Salva. terra, but lived not to finish it. The following Year. the King settled the Rules of Precedency, about which there had been great Contests; ordering that all Titles should take place according to Seniority. Now the Misfortunes of this Crown seem to be Compleat, for the King died aged 55 Years, when he was ripest for Government, and lest the Crown to Prince Sebastian then unsit for Kule, as being but Three Years old. He was suddenly fnatched away, yet not so but he had time to end his Life like a Christian. He was of a mean Stature, rather inclined to Fat than Leanness, his Complexion ruddy, his Eyes dark Blew, but lively, In matters of Juftice he always inclined most to Mercy, was a great lover of Peace, made an excellent choice of Ministers, and loved not to heap many Employments upon one Man. In the Year 1553, he founded the University at Cointera, and afterwards with great charge brought Professors to it from Paris. The Ancient Aqueduct, built by Sertorius at Evora, was by him repaired; much was added by him to the Building of the Monastery of Belem; by him also the Custome House, and Arsenals were erected; as also the Churches of our Lady of Grace, S. Francis, and S. Rocque; besides many other publick Works. All the religious Orders were by him reduced to live up to the rigor of their Rules; and Houses founded for all sorts of Women to retire to. He instituted the Council of Conscience, and that of the Military Orders. No want ever prevailed with him to lay heavy Taxes on his Subjects. Tho' he heard the Advice of many, he always followed his own Opinion, which was the Cause he often erred.

6. To conclude, King John proved an excellent Prince, and fingular Champion of the Catholick Religion. His Children were as follows: First, Alonso, who died a Child. Secondly, Secondly, Mary, First Wife to Philip the Second of Spain, Thirdly, Elizabeth. Fourthly, Beatrix. Fifthly, Emanuel. Sixthly, Philip. Seventhly, Denis, all which died young. Eighthly, John, who married the Princels 70anna. Daughter to the Emperor Charles the Fifth, and died soon after. Ninthly, Antony, who lived not out a Year. His Bastard Issue was: First, Emanuel, who died a Child. Secondly, Edward, Archbishop of Braga, a Prelate of Piety and Learning.

7. In India Nunho da Cunha overthrew the King of Actions a-Monbaça, and sew him of Cambaya. D. John de Ca- broad disfro with fuch wonderful Courage, as rather seemed ing his Rashness, Engaging a vast Multitude at the Second Reign. Siege of Din, obtained one of the most wonderful Victories that raised the Renown of the Portuguese Valour. Hector de Silveyra, besides many other remarkable Actions, subdued the King of Adem. George de Albuquerque with only 80 Men, held out a Siege against the King of Bintam, who had 12000. D. Simon de Meneses burnt the City Braçalor. Peter de Silva defended M.s. laca against the Power of Five Confederate Kings. Thus many others in Asia and Africk, and even the Portuguese Women at Zafin, thewed their Valour, helping to defend that Place against the Moors. The Particulars of these Actions belong to the Books of the Portuguese Asia and Africk, to which we refer the Readers; our intent

The END of the Fourth Book, here being to Treat only of the Portuguese Affairs in Europe.

THE

The Fifth BOOK.

CHAP. I.

The Life and Reign of Sebastian the First of the Name, and Sixteenth King of Portugal; with the total Destruction of him and his whole Army in Africk, from the Year 1554. till 1578.

De Birth of King Sebaffiair.

Prince John, Son to King John the Third dying, lest his Wife the Princes Joanna, Daughter to the Emperor Charles the Fifth, with Child On the 18th. Day of her Widowhood, she was delivered of Prince Sebastian, at Lisbon, it being the 20th. of January, 1554. This Prince's Birth cleared up the Clouds of Sorrow contracted by the Death of his Father, and all the Kingdom refounded with Expressions of Joy. On Account of his Name, Pope Paul the 4th fent him one of the Arrows taken out of the Bady of S.Sc bastians

The History of PORTUGAL.

bastian, which this Prince took for his device, and instituted the Military Order of the Arrow, which lasted not long. He was Three Years of Age, when, by the Death of his Grand-Father, he inherited the Crown, being left under the Government of his Grand-Mother Queen Katherine, a Princels extraordinarily qualifyed for that 155-Charge. Yet the Queen, thinking it a dangerous Em- His Acceptaploy, quitted it when she had held it little above Two on so the Years. From her the Government was transferred to Crown. the Cardinal Henry, the King's Unkle, who was judged Cardinal to undertake it with a willing Mind. He being much Henry, affected to the Jesuits, sent for F. Lewis Gonzalez de Ca- Regent. mara from Rome to be the King's Preceptor, and joyned with him F. Amador Rabelo, and F. Maurice. D. Alexius de Meneses was appointed his Governour. He took upon him the Government on the Day of S. Sebastian. which was his Birth Day, he being then just Fourteen Years of Age, and was warned by Peter Nunez, the famous Mathematician that it was an Unhappy Day. 2. King Sebastian, tho he shewed great Zeal in mat-Odd Alliters of Religion, yet had some actions so Extravagant as one of thing teemed to foreshew his Destruction. After going to Bed Sebastian. he would rise at Midnight and go out with D. Alvaro do .

Meneses his Page, whom also he would leave behind and fpend an Hour or Two by himself, on the Shoar, after which he returned home. Other times he would cross the River Tagus in a Boat with Sancho de Toar, at the fame time of Night, where landing, a Boat was feen to bring another Man from towards Belem; they two would walk together two Hours, and no Body could tell who the Man was, or what they discoursed about. Near Sintra there is a thick Wood where he used to spend two Hours, at Night, alone. At Almeirin he lav in wait on a Tree, for a wild Boar, and hearing the Boughs fliake, he discovered a Bulk which he ran at, and laid hold of it; fome of his Company coming in, found him Wreitling with a wild Black, who having fled from his Matter, had lived long on the Mountain. Having ordered that none should be suffered to pass by the Forts of Below und S. Julian, without being obliged to come in and give an Account of themselves; To see it his orders were observed he went into a Boat, patfing both thete Horrs through showers of Bullets feat after him, and returned without discovering himself. He would put out to sex in a Galley, when the Weather was most Stormy, and laughed at the Danger D. Alvaro de Castro, his Favourite, dving, he went some Nights to his Grave, where he was heard to talk, and returned with Tears in his Eyes. Most of his time he spent among the wild Beasts in the Woods. feldom applying himself to Business, for the dispatch whereof, by the Advice of Cardinal Henry, he made choice of two Gentlemen, which were D. Martin Pereyra, and Martin Gonzalez de Camara a Priest. These two discharged that Trust with much Honour; but Martin Gonzales wholly Monopolized all the King's Favour to himself.

India.

3. Tho the Kingdom was miserably exhausted, the King, prepares who had fixed his Mind upon the Conquest of Africk, for an Ex- ceased not to make vast Preparations for that Enterpedition in prize. All that Flattered him, upon this score, were ad-20 Africk, vanced to his Favour; but such as more prudently reprefented the mighty difficulties and dangers of that Enterprize, were foon removed from his Presence. Even his Grand Mother, for giving Advice against this undertaking, became so irksome to him, that she was upon departing to Castile; yet he was again reconciled to her. Whilst the Kingdom was thus tossed with various agi-Exploits in tations at home, Teveral Fleets arrived from India, and brought Advice of the Progress the Portuguese made in those Parts. D. Constantine, Son to James Duke of Bragança, had taken the City Damam. D. Lewis de Ataide made Bragalor Tributary, and with 600 Portuguese defended the City Goa, against Hidalcan, who Besieged it with 100000 Indians, 2000 Elephants, and 400 pieces of Cannon. D. Francis Mascarenhas held out nine Months in Chaul, against Nizamaluco, who Besieged it with 140000 Men. George de Moura, and Antony Chale, raised the Siege of Onor, the same was done at the Town of Chale. D. Leonis Pereyra defended Malaca against the King of Achem. D. James de Meneses destroyed many Places on the Coast of Malabar, and all the Kingdom of Margafor: These, and many other such notable Victories, which may be seen at large in the Portuguese Asia, excited the young, unadvised, but ambitious King, to attempt the Conquest of Africk, that he might not be outrun in glory by any of his Subjects.

4. Inflamed with thele aspiring Thoughts, he went the first time into Africk at twenty Years of Age. To this purpose he sent D. James de Sousa, Governour into the King- 1571. dom of Alfarve, with Orders to Ship off the Forces rai- Sebastian sed for that Expedition. Antony, Bastard-Son to Prince passes over Lewis, was sent before to Tangier; many Gentlemen into followed him, so that he made up a Body of 800 Horse. Africk The King was resolved for Africk, and yethad no Fleet. and all his Friends dissiwaded that Voyage. He feigning he went to divert himself at Sintra, ordered D. Alvaro de Noronha, with Three Galleys, to meet him at Calcais, where on a fudden he Embarked, ordering Simon de Vega, who guarded the Coast, with one Galley and five Ships to follow him. All that tollowed him, feeing themselves shipped just in their Hunting Apparel, stood amazed. From Cape S. Vincent the King sent Messengers with Letters to all Cities, Towns, and the Gentry, informing them with his Defigns, that they might follow him. Many from all Parts resorted to him, both by Sea and Land. The Cardinal, Prince Henry, was left Governour of the Kingdom. The King was received in Africk with great Joy by his Subjects; but not with much Terror of his Enemies, for they perceived his Preparations were not fuitable to the Undertaking. He hunted there as if he had been at home, and made several Inroads into the Country, which provoked the Moors in great numbers, under the Command of the Accayde Cid. Admubenania, Viceroy of Mequines, to draw together to oppose him. The Multitude was great, and advanced Confidently, seeing the small number of Christians. Our Cannon plaied upon them, and the Infidels gave the first Onfet, in which many of them that were foremost fied. The King was always in the Front, and with his Example, fo encouraged his Men, that they cleared the Field of the Enemy. Next Day the King expected the Enemy in He difeats the same Place, but they thought not good to attack the Moors, him; nor did he profecute his Victory, faying, He came and renot to make War, but to visit his Garrisons. He retur- Lisbon. ned to Lisbon in November, at fuch time as it was ! feared he was loft; for News was brought of his embarking at Tangier, and a violent Storm had, long tofted him at Sea.

5. Before this time a Match had been propoled for King Sebastian, with Margaret, tecond Daughter to Henry the lecond, King of France. An Emballador was Sent to King Philip the fecond of Spain, by King Sebastian, at his return out of Africk, to incline him to give him his Daughter Clara Engenia to wife; The was afterwards married to the Archduke Albertus, and the refule of the Embassy was, That the two Kings should meet Hi has an at Guadalupe. To fave expence, King Sebastian travelled by the Post, with several Persons of Quality, and assoon as he came into the Borders of Castile, was Magnificently Entertained at the Cost of King Philip, who had also ordered all the Keys of the Towns he passed through to be delivered to him. Nine Days after the King's Departure, the great Warehouses of Merchant Goods, next to the King's Palace, were accidentally Blown up, with fuch force, that the Noise was heard at Santarem, which is fourteen Leagues distant, and great Stones, and pieces of Timber were cast far from the Place, and many remote Buildings were shaken. King Philip met our Sebastian the Day before Christmas-Eve, half a League from Guadalupe. They embraced friendly, and then Philip saluted the Portuguese Noblemen; Sebastian as the Stranger went first into the Coach. Fifteen Days they staied at Guadalupe. Philip endeavoured to disswade the Portuguele from his designs upon Africk, but not prevailing, promited to affift him with 50 Galleys, and 5000 Men; and contracted at his return from that Expedition, to 1577. deliver to him his Daughter. After this they parted, with the same expressions of Love and Affections as they had met, and King Sebastian in his return home, presented the Spanish Gentry and Officers that attended him.

במינוש למינוש למינוש mich the King of S ain.

Preparatiage into Africk.

6. Being come to Lisbon, he hasted his Preparations ens for a for a fecond Voyage into Africk; to which he was the Jesond Voy- more encouraged by Muley Hamet, who was at War with his Unkle Muley Maluco for the sovereignty of Morocco, and being worlted offered to remain Tributary to Portugal, if enthroned by the King. Cid Adelcherim, Lord of Arzila having fided with Hamer, delivered up Arzila to Edward de Meneses, Governour of Tangier, who fending for Succours to the King, there was scarce enough found in the Magazines to furnish him; whereby, King Sebastian perceived how impossible it was for him to fit out a Royal Fleet that Year. Nevertheless, he ceased not to use all possible means for forwarding his Design. To this esteet he had a free Gift of 15000 Duccats from the Clergy. The Croifade was fee on foot to roll. Money a Tax laid upon Salt, Donatives required of the People, Money borrowed of rich Men, the Revenues of the Crown anticipated, and a great Summ raised of the Convert Jews, on Account of a general Pardon granted them. Besides this, they listed none but the basest sort of People that had no Money to buy themtelves off, and were carried away by force. King John Several the Third's Ghost is said to have appeared to F. Lewis de Prodigies. Moura, foretelling the ill fuccess of this Enterprize. About the same time a vast number of Fishes called Espada's, or Sword-fish, were cast a Shoar, one whereof of an extraordinary Bigness, had upon it a Cross, from the Arms of which hung two Scourges, and the number of that Year, which was 1578. Armies were feen fighting in the Air; in the Province bewixt Duero and Minho. Colonel Vasco de Silveira always heard a doleful Voice following of him; and one Night, in the Field of Almegria faw a great Fantome it proceeded from, which being by him asked the cause of its Groans, answered, I bemail my felf and you, feeing you and those I always loved, engaged in so great a Disaster. This same Hobgoblin was feen by him near the King's Tent, in the Field of Alcacer, the Night before the Battle.

7. Notwithstanding all these Preparations, there wan- The King ted not some who urged the King ought not to ex- not to be pose his Person; but he, to divert them, caused Edward moved de Meneses, Governour of Tangier, to signifie by Letters possibilities to him, that the Moors were wholly unprovided. Thefe he shewed in Council, and because D. John Mascarenhas perfished to contradict him, he caused a Consult of Phyfitians to declare, That tho a Man had been brave in his Youth, he might become a Coward in his old Age. D. Lewis de Ataide known for his brave Exploits in Lidia, he fent thither again, after having choten him General of his Army, and this because he advited him to be very circumfpect in this Affair. The Citizens of Linear prore sted to the King, that if he perfisted in his Resolution they would detain him by force. The King of Morocca, tho he were well provided against this Invasion, failed not to exhort King Schaftian to Peace; but neither thefe Motives, nor King Philip of Spain his failing to fend the promifed Supplies of 50 Galleys, and 5000 Men, could ftop this unfortunate Prince from runing headlong to his Ruin. All things being in readiness for his Departure, she King would have appointed Henry the Prince Cardinal to Govern the Kingdom in his Absence; but he refusing. Five Governours were appointed, viz. D. George de Almeyda Archbishop of Lisbon, Peter de Alcacova Surveyor of the Revenue, Francis de Sa, D. John Mascarenhas. and the Secretary Michael de Moura.

The King lity Embark. A Fleet of

8. On the 14th. of June, King Sebastian, attended by and Nobi- all the Nobility and Gentry, rode to the Cathedral, where his Standard was Blessed, on which was the Figure of our Saviour Crucifyed. He returned not to Court, but to expedite what was yet wanting, went directly a-1000 Sail. board his Galley. The River was covered with 1000 Sail. all filled with fuch gaudy, but ill disciplined Forces, that they seemed rather to carry a rich Prey to the Enemy

Landmen. 18000

than Weapons to Fight. On the 24th. of June, the Fleet failed from Lisbon. The Land Forces made up the number of 18000. At Cadiz the King staied Seven Days to gather all his Fleet, and failing thence, anchored before Tangier on the 6th. of July, about Midnight. The More Hamet sent his Son Muley Xeque that Night to visit the King, and came himself in the Morning. Hence the King removed to Arzila, where the Moors that were of his Party joyned him. Larache is Five Leagues distant from this Place; Thither he was first designed to go by

The Army lands at Arzila.

Sea, and now the Resolution was taken to March by Land. The Forces landed, and numerous Troops of the Enemy approaching to discover, the King threw himself into all Dangers, envying others every opportunity of gaining Honour. Here he staied longer than he ought to have done, and Provisions began to grow scarce. Having given all necessary Orders, and taking five Days Provision, the King advanced on the 25th of July towards Larache, and continued his marches till the 4th. of August, when he encamped between the Rivers Hainad Macharim, and Lucus, and where he was informed that the King of Morocco was himself at hand, which was not then expected. The Enemy immediately passed the River Lucus, covering the Hills and Plain with 150000 Men, most of them Horse.

The Chri-Moorith Armies engage.

9. The Christians had marched Seven Days with only flian, and Five Days Provision, and therefore it was thought necesfary not to delay the Fight till next Day. The Enemy perceiving ir, advanced in the Form of a Half Moon to enclose the Portuguese Army, which was drawn up in the best manner time would permit. Both Kings having with their

their Presence in all Parts encouraged their Men, the signal of Battle was given on both sides. Having well nigh encompassed the Christians, the Infidels began to play their Cannon, which disordered those that had charge of it in the Portuguese Army. After a short pause, the King gave the Charge; others following his Example, great slaughter was in a short time made among the Moors. Yet the Multitude began to prevail, when the Castilians, Italians. and Germans, falling on, routed a multitude of Barbarians; so that the Christians, in the heat of the Action, began to cry Victory. On a sudden a Voice was heard to cry, Halt, Halt; which most Men obeyed, till seeing the Enemy return upon them, they renewed the Fight with almost as great Success as before, the King in Person doing Wonders. He of Morocco thinking all loft, advanced a Horseback to Encourage his Men, but soon fell down The Kine of dead. Hamet Taba, a Renegado, put him into a Litter, Morrocand feigned he gave out Orders from him. Halican, a co stain. Renegado Portuguese, Encouraged the Infidels, and was by some taken for the King himself. The Germans did Wonders, but the Portuguese Foot being undisciplined was disordered by the Enemies Cannon. Now all began to The Rout be in Confusion, which the King perceiving, he perfor- of the med Actions beyond belief, rushing into the midst of his Christians. Enemies, not as a General, but as the bravest of Soldiers. George de Albuquerque meeting him gave him his Horse to carry him off, but he mounting Charged again into the thick of the Enemy. D. Antony, Bastard-Son to Prince Lewis, was much wounded, and the King offered him his Horse, as did Christopher de Tavora. King Sebastian meeting Lewis de Brito, with the Royal Standard stripped and wrapped about him, cried out, Hold it fast, and let us die uponit. Christopher de Tavora advised the King to fuffer himself to be taken, but he being offended at the Advice, fell in again among the Moors; where being feized, Brito rescued him, and was himself made Prisoner, and with him the Standard was taken, which afterwards certain Portuguese bought at Fez, for a small matter. Brito taken faw the King at a distance, no Enemy pursuing him; and afterwards D. Lowis de Lima met him making towards the River. This is the last time he was feen by any of his People, tho others fay he was found dead after the Battle; and others more fondly expect his return to this Day; but where he died only of 18000. 10. To reckon what Men of Note were flain, were tedi-Men, only ous and needless, since of 18000 Combatants, that com-50 escape. posed that Army, only 50 escaped being killed or taken. The Body of Hamet the Moor being carryed to the new King of Morocco, he caused it to be flea'd, and hung on the Walls of Fez; his Son Muley was brought to Portugal, and became a Christian. Some will have it, that the Body of King Schastian was also found, but others deny it. A rumour of this Disaster was spread abroad at Lisbon before any body brought the News, till at last D. James de Sousa the Admiral returned home, after having waited two days at Larache to take up any that escaped, and chiefly in hopes of the King, who was not known to be dead. Some would have it, that he came in the Fleet, but Landing, had absconded for shame. However, there being no tidings of him, till an Account was brought from Africk, that his Body was found, it was resolved that the Cardinal, Prince Henry, Same Coun- should succeed him in the Crown. Nevertheless, upon the vain Rumour of King Sebastian's being still alive. four or five base Fellows had afterwards the Impudence. to Personate him causing thereby no small Troubles Many other Prodigies are reported to have happened. besides what we before related; but being very dubious, it will be needless to repeat more of them.

God knows. Hamet the Moor, that fided with him: was drowned in passing the River ..

Ling Sebastian.

terfeits

Personate

The Chara-

11. King Sebastian, as to his Inclinations, was Reli-Err f King gious, Merciful, a Lover of Justice, and no less Bountiful than any of his Predeceffors. As to Stature, he was of the largest size, and well proportioned; fair of Complexion, his Eyes blue, his Countenance Majestick, his Strength more than ordinary, and his Heart undannted. He died in the 25th. Year of his Age, and orld. of his Reign, but the 11th after he took the Government into his own Hands, and lies buried in the Monastery of Belem. In his Time the value of Copper Money was abated, to prevent the Importation of it from Foreign Parts. On the contrary the Silver was railed, which drew much out of Spain. King Schaftian coined some Pieces of Gold, worth 1000, others of the value of 750 Royals, for himself to give away with his own Hand.

CHAP. II.

The Life and Reign of Henry, the First of the Name, and Seventeenth King of Portugal; from the Year 1512, till 1580.

1. Ardinal Henry, Eighth Son to King Emanuel, and Birth of Seventh by his Second Wife, Queen Mary, was K. Henry. Born at Almeyrin on the last day of January, 1512. Pope Paul the Third fent him the Cardinal's Cap, and he was at once Archbishop of Braga, Lishon, and Coimbris, Abbot of the Famous Monastery of Alcobasa, and twice Governour of the Kingdom; tho unfit for the Crown, so fit for the Mitre, that upon the Death of Pope Paul, he had many Votes in the Conclave to fucceed him. Whilft Governour, he never ferbore to Act as a Prelate; and tho a Prince of the Church, he performed all the Duties of a private Priest. He was at Alcohaga when the News was brought of the loss of the King his Nephew, and his Army. The Governours fent him this Advice by D. John Serran, Provincial of the results He immediately set out for Lishon, where, upon his arrival, the publick forrow, was renewed, upon the Confideration that the Inheritance of the Crown should fall to him, then 67 Years of Age, and the last of the Male Line. Henry being come to Lisbon, called to him the Duke of Braganga, and other Persons of Knowledge and Experience; and feeing there was yet no certain Account of his Nephew's being dead or alive, the Council, and a number of able Lawyers were ordered to Confult what was to be done in that Case. They agreed, the Cardinal, tho a Priest, was capable of Inheriting Cardinal the Crown; but it being yet doubtful what was become of the King, he should therefore take upon him the Henry Government, with the Title of Protector, which he red Proteaccordingly did in the Palace of the Duke of Braganga Gor. on the 22d. of August.

2. Soon after his entring upon the Government, the He is News of the King's Death was brought, and his Funeral crowned Obsequies were performed with general Lamentation. King On the 28th. of August, after having said Mass, the new King and Bishop, Henry, proceeded to the Church of All-Saints Hospital, where he had before received the Mitre, now to put on a Crown. He was the second Melchisedeck, for since the first, till him, none ever was at once both Priest and King. The Ceremony of his Inauguration was performed with no less Lamentation than Pomp, and he returned from the Church to the Palace a Temporal as well as Spiritual Prince. A few days after his Exaltation, came the News, that Antony. Bastard-Son to Prince Lemis, having escaped out of Slavery, was at Arzila, and tho' much offended at him before, he extreamly rejoyced to hear of his Safety. Amony by his Affability had gained the Affections of all Men, and the People looked upon him to have as good a Title to the Crown as King John the First had almost two Ages before; and in Truth, the Right was the same, for they were both Bastards. Antony had fallen into the Hands of a poor Moor, who ransomed him for a small matter, being told, he was a Priest, and if not presently redeemed, would lose his Benefice, and thereby become incapable of paying his Ranfom. About 16000 Persons remained in Captivity, to Redeem whom, 20 Trinitarians were fent to Fez and Morocco. F. Francis da Cofta fettled the Ransom of 80 Gentlemen at 400000 Ducats, and paid down 300000, remaining himself an Hostage for the rest; yet those Gentlemen getting home, never thought of releasing him, till he was bought off by the Kingdom, the Moor refusing to take any thing for him but Pearls. F. Amador Rebelo, a Jesuit, was sent to Argiers, to Ransom those that had been sold thither. King Philip of Spain obtained of the Moors the Body of King Sebaftian, which he afterwards brought into Portugal. He also redeemed the Duke of Barcelos, Son to John, Duke of Bragança, and afterwards entertained him with all possible expressions of Affection in Castile.

350

Several

Ingrati-

sude of certain Gentlemen.

3. No fooner was the new King enthroned, but all Pretenders those who pretended a Right, began to put in their to the Suc Claims to the Inheritance of the Crown. Philip the Second of Spain, afterwards the First of Portugal, sent the Crown, D. Christopher de Moura to condole with King Henry for the late Lois, and to Congratulate his Accession to the Crown, without mentioning his Title to the Succession, but with private Instructions to advance his Interest. The Candidates were, First, King Philip of Spain, as Son to the Empress Elizabeth, Daughter to King Emanucl.

nuel. Secondly, the Lady Katherine of Braganca, Daughter to Prince Edward, who was Brother to the Empress. The difference betwixt these two Pretenders was, that the Lady, tho' a Female, claimed the Crown, as descended of the Male; and the King, as being himself the Male, tho' descended of a Female. Of these the former was the better Title without dispute, but neither so good as that of Alexander, Prince of Parma, in the Right of his Mother, who was elder Sister to the Lady Katherine. The Duke of Savoy had a Title, but not so good, by his Wife, the Princess Beatrix, Daughter to King Emanuel. Antony, Prior of Crato, pretended to be Lawful Son to Prince Lewis, Brother to Prince Edward, the Empress, and Dutchess of Savoy; but having never been owned as such by his Father, or any other Person, that was meer Pretence. The People pleaded, the Right of Election was in them, and shewed Prescription, as in the case of their first King, of King Alonso the Third, and King John the First, all which in reality were but Fortunate Usurpers. The Pope also would Inherit this Crown, as being now devolved to the Church, being in the Hands of a Cardinal, and urged, that it had been Tributary to the See of Rome; which was true, but a poor Title for Inheritance. Katherine of Medicis, Queen of France, alledged, she was descended of King Alonso the Third, by his first Wife Mand, Countess of Bologne, on whom he had a Son; but her Title was rejected, as over antiquated, being above 330 Years standing. Savoy and Parma were foon thrown out, because too weak to carry on their Pretences, not because they wanted a Title. The People attempted to carry it by Election, but miscarried. The Dispute rested betwixt Philip of Spain, Katherine of Braganga, and Antony, Prior of Crato, we shall soon see where the Controversie ended.

4. Several Methods were proposed to determine these Mans pro-Differences. Some would have one of King Philip's Posed to re Sons Marry the Daughter of the Duke of Bragança, cincile the Others, more inclined to Antony, would have that Daughter given to him. Others there were, who advited the Cardinal, tho' old, and a Priest, should Marry. Many Pamphlets were spread abroad, some of them against King Philip, and others for him, which last were so well penned, that they feem to have inclined King Henry to his Interest, as they did many others throughout the Kingdom.

Kingdom. But the City of Lisbon openly declared its aversion to him, offering to raise 20000 Men, and threatning to burn the Houses of those that favoured him. Antony, Grand Prior of Crato, that is, of the Knights of Malta in Portugal, laboured in vain to prove himself Legitimate, and King Henry seeing him persist obstinately in that Design, banished him the Court. The City of Lisbon now again pressed King Henry to obtain a Dispensation of the Pope to Marry; he excused himfelf on account of his Ecclesiastical Dignity, rather than his Age or Infirmities. No Excuses availing, D. Duarte de Castello-Branco, and Dr. Ruy de Castanheda were appointed to go Embassadors to Rome; but they went not, for the King still urging his Inability, and his Infirmities being apparent, his Excuses were at last received.

Five Perfons appointed to Gowern after the King's Death.

appointed to decide

5. Since there were no hopes of Issue in King Henry, he was pressed to declare who ought to Succeed him, which he refused, leaving it to Governours and Judges to determine after his Death. For appointing of them, he presently summoned the Cortes or Parliament, who named Fifteen Persons for Governours, of whom the King chose five, which were D. George de Almeyda, Arch, bishop of Lisbon, D. John Mascarenhas, Francis de Sa, James Lopez de Sousa, and D. John Tello de Meneses. Also 24 Lawyers were nominated, and of them 11 elected to be Judges; and the Names of them all to be kept close, till the Death of the King. All swore to itand by these Decrees. The substance of the Oath The same was, That the King dying, they would obey the Governours appointed, and would acknowledge him for their Lawful Sovereign, that should be declared such by them. The Duke of Bragança, as one of the Candidates, swore to stand to their Determination; the same did Antony, the Grand Prior, yet afterwards he recanted before the Pope's Nuncio, alledging, he had Iworn for fear of his Unkle. King Philip's Embassadors refused to take the Oath for their Master, pleading, he was Lawful Heir of the Crown, and therefore not obliged to allow of that Decision. The Cortes being broke up, each of the Candidates, which were now but three, viz. King Philip, the Duke of Bragança, and the Grand Prior, began to speak their Thoughts more boldly. The two latter were foon banished the Court by King Henry, who perceiving that Antony grew haughty, having obtained obtained a surreptitious Judgment of his Legitimacy. got leave of Pope Gregory XIII. to inspect into and determine that Affair. After some time spent in enquiring into it, he at length positively declared him 11legitimate. The Grand Prior, dismayed at this Sentence. and the great Power of his Adversary, proposed to King Philip's Embassadors, that he would be content with the Kingdom of Algarve, and Title of King, or else that he might have the Government of the Kingdom for Life, with a Revenue of 300000 Ducats, half of them to remain to his Heirs. King Philip answered, That Kingdom was too imall for fo many Kings.

6. King Henry ceased not to prosecute the Grand Prior, and fent Orders to Apprehend him at Coimbra, where he then was, but he made his Escape, and lurked about in the Province between the Rivers Duero and Minko. Next, he issued out his Proclamation, Summoning him to Surrender himself, but he obeyed not. The King was now at Almeyrin, whither he fled from the Plague that raged at Lisbon, and spread it self through- The Plague out the Kingdom. There he summoned before him the "Lubon Principal Members of the Cortes or Parliament, and the Embaffadors, before whom he declared himself for King Philip, ordering them to Capitulate with him. The Lords Spiritual and Temporal were easily brought to approve of the King's Proposition, but the Commons opposed it. Soon after, the King Assembles the Cortes. intending to put an end to this Controversie; but all he or the Nobility could do, availed not, so that the Division ran as high as ever it had been. The King's Death now drawing on apace, Katherine, Dutchels of Braganes, came from Villa Viciosa, to try if the could prevail with 1580 him to declare her his Heiress. He heard her, and soon K Henry after, without returning any Answer, gave up the Ghott. dies.

7. King Henry was of a middle Stature, in shape like his Father, of a lively Spirit, patient of Labour, and in his Youth trained in all the Exercises that belong to a Prince. Dumiunus de Goes fays, he understood Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, and was well read in Mathematicks, Philosophy, and Divinity. He says further of him, That he had an absolute Command over his Passions. was temperate in Speech, a great lover of Truth, a notable keeper of Secrets, an Enemy to Derraction, an admirer of Justice, free in giving Advice, averse to Fayourites, and inclinable to all Vertue. Notwithstanding all these Qualities, he was a better Priest than King. His first Spiritual Promotion was to the Priorship of Santta Cruz. which Monastery he reformed, and increased its Revenue. Next, he had the Archbishoprick of Braga, where he tpent his Revenue, relieving the Poor in time of Famine. The same he did at Evora. He maintained many Foundlings, gave Portions to Young Maids, redeemed Captives, and performed himfelf all the Duties of a private Priest. At Braga he affembled a Synod. endowed Schools in that City, repaired the Monasterv of S. Fructuofus, punished severely all Crimes in the Clergy, especially Incontinency. The See of Evorabeing added to his other of Braga, he did the fame good Offices there, and founded the University under the Jurisdiction of the Jesuits. Many other notable Works he performed, and being created Cardinal and Legate to the Pope, still increased in Works of Piety.

A a

Observa-Rife and FAIL of Portugal.

8. In this Henry expired the Kingdom, erected by tions on the another of the same Name; the first died in the Year 1112, and the latter was born in 1512. So that the Name of Herry, and Number 12, were the beginning and end of this Monarchy. Thus the Seventeenth was the last Native King of Portugal. The Moon laboured under a great Eclipse when he died, in the 68th. Year of his Age, and second of his Reign. His Body was deposited at Almeyrin, where he died, till King Philip translated it to the Monastery of Belem.

CHAP. III.

The foore Maministration of the Five Governours. Antony, Grand Prior of Crato, or the Order of Malta, proclaimed King by the Multitude, the (bort time of his Ufarpation.

the Five Governours began to exercise the Power. The Commons held their Affemilie times, and appeared inflexible; Azartia

The History of PORTUGAL.

Camara was fent to appeale them, and promise they should have all the Records relating to the Succession. It was proposed the Governours should remove to Santarem, and disband the Forces they entertained. The Prior of Crato drew near to Lisbon, thinking the City would receive him; they ordered him to remove farther, yet he approached nearer, and at last was admitted. The Governours and Commons were at variance, and could agree upon no one Point. King Philip wrote to the Governours, Parliament, and chief Cities, admonishing them to Proclaim him King, and at the same time sur Philip of specting them, gathered his Forces. He chose Ferdinand Spain Alvarez de Toledo, Duke of Alva, then a Prisoner at arms to Uzeda for Miscarriages in Flanders, to be General of this secure the Expedition. Philip removed to Guadalupe on Pretence Comment of Devotion, thither came to him the Portuguese Em- Portugul. bassadors, desiring him to forbear Force, and stand to the Determination of the Judges; But he told them he could not lay down Arms till he was proclaimed King. The Governours, weary of the Commons, fent them word, they were diffolved, and might depart. They doubted at first, but soon after obeyed. This done, the Governours, to rid themselves of such as opposed King Philip, fent them away to the Frontiers and other Parts, on pretence of fecuring the Kingdom.

2. King Philip, now at Merida, spread his Forces along the Borders of the Kingdom, ordering the Commanders to treat such Portuguese as resorted to them, courteoully. The Portuguese, tho' they knew of these Preparati-Preparations, eyet because the King courted them, they end in Porthought he was weak. Such of the Governours as fa- tugal to voured him, were afraid to discover ir, and therefore uptof Phi-Francis Barreto was fent into France to obtain 6000 Foot he of that King, which done, he was to go to Rome, to move the Pope to Mediate that King Philip might stand to Judgment. D. Elisio de Portugal was fent to the Emperor. The Fleet was also ordered to be fitted out. D. Emanuel de Portugal erected a Wooden Fort on a Bank of Sand at the Mouth of the River, to seeme the Harbour. There being great want of Men, the Fryars but from the Pulpits encouraged them to take up Arms, and ogal became more infolent when they incenfed the Rabble to Refeue Antony Suarez, who was hanged for murdering E Ferdinand de Pica, an Ancient Grave Man, and Alderman Philip.

Antony.

the Batector by the Rab-

Bla.

of the City, for that he opposed Antony the Grand Prior by whose order he was affassinated, and he now pressed the Governours to declare him Legitimate. D. John Tello. one of the Governours was fent to Belem with absolute Power, and there joyned with D. Emanuel de Portugal, both of them being Mortal Enemies to Castile. These Two wanting Money designed to sell the Crown Jewels but Christopher de Moura deterred any from buying. affirming. They would lote their Money, for that the King would take them from them, and their Persons would be in Danger.

3. The Pertuguese Embassadors followed the King to Badajoz, where he dismissed them, with the same An-Iwer as before. The Governours still remained irrefo. lute, but refolved to fecure themselves, and therefore removed to Setuval, that being a stronger Place. The Duke of Braganga and Spanish Embassador followed them, and they began to talk of fummoning the Cortes or Parliament, as if the Duke of Alva were not now upon Elvas, and his March. In the mean while, the City Elvas was deliother Pla- vered up to King Philip, there being Two Parties in the ees, delive. Place, and Sixty Horse appearing before it and cutting red to Kins off its Water. The fame happened at Olivenza. Serpa, Moura, Campo-Major, Aronches, and Portategre did the fame. Antony, the Grand Prior at Santarem, was by the Rabble proclaimed Protector of the Kingdom, and he going to lay the Foundation of a Fort, a Base Felfara, de- low called Antony Baracho flourishing a Clout on the point of his Sword, cried out Antony, Antony, King of Portugal. All the Multitude took the word, and purfued it, so that none durst contradict them. Only he made some seeming Opposition, which was but to heighten their Defires. Mounting on Horseback he was conducted to the Church, and thence to the Town-Hall, where all prefent fwore Allegiance to him. This done, he refolved to fet forward for Lisbon, believing himself secure if received there. This News was soon carried to the Governours at Setural. But before we proceed, let us give fome further Account of this Mob King.

4. Antony, Prior of Crato, that is of the Order of Adulta, was born at Lisbon in the Year 1531, being Bastard Son to Prince Lewis, the Son of King Emanuel, by Mainte Gomez; yet he made efforts to prove himself Lealtimate, but all unfuccessfully. He was bred to Learning, but made but little progress, only understood La- 1521. tin, and had fome rudiments of other Sciences. His The Birth Particular Talent was a smooth Tongue, which was very and Edu-Attractive. Incontinency was so predominant in him, carion of that in the depth of his Misfortunes he could not refrain Antony, from it. Upon some Distast given him at Court, he Prior of went into Castile and was kindly Entertained by King Crato. Philip. At Tangie he served against the Moors, and gained Reputation; and Accompanied King Sebastian in both his Voyages to Africk, where, as we have feen, he remained in Captivity. Being rantomed, he returned to Portugal, and foon began to aipire to the Throne. Finding King Philip fo powerful an Enemy, he offered to Compound, but his Proposals were rejected. What followed till his being proclaimed King at S.int. arem, we have feen above. The Governours hearing thereof, and fearing he would foon be upon them, Fortifyed themfelves. At Lisbon all things were in the greatest Confufion imaginable. King Philip was at Badaioz, and the power of his Army much extolled; which is urred all Antony's Followers to press the Kingdom to Declare for him, that so united, they might the better oppose the Spaniards. The Council of Lisbon, refused to admic Antony as King, but would receive him as Protector; which he refufing, they prepared to oppose him.

5. Antony advanced to Lisbon, and the but flenderly Antone. attended, entered the City; all that faw him faluting enters lishim as King. He went to the Town-House, and being bon, and there proclaimed; all that were prefent twore Alles in falance giance to him, which done, he immediately fent to acquaint the Duke of Braganga, the Governours, and other Noblemem, of his Exaltation. His next care was to raile Men, and dispatch Expresses to England, and France, to crave Succours. Having gathered 1500 Men. he fet forward for Setucial, where the Governours were, tending before the voung Count de l'imi je, his great Favourite, with a Letter, admonishing them to submit. They thought to have defended themselves, but the Gount being possessed of the Cates, they sled away privately, and met again at Capiromaria, where they gave their definitive Sentence in Favour of King Philip. Ac-1301/ hasked to Seturnal, and having secured the City, returned to Lisbon, where the Forts of S. Jalian, and C. can were singendred to have. The Dube of Light as who had retired to his Town of Portel, fent thence to King Philip, offering to come to Composition, but it was now too late, for that Prince was too far advanced. The Duke ac Alva had passed the River Caya in June, which parts the two Kingdoms, with 20000 Men, 6000 Carts. and 25 pieces of Cannon. He marched peaceably as if it had been through a Country subject to his Master, all Places submitting themselves as far as Estremoz. This Town was ioon perswaded by D. Christopher de Moura to furrender, but D. John de Azevedo held out in the Ca-Itle, till feeing the Cannon planted against him, he endeavoured to escape, and being taken, was sent Prisoner to Villa Viciosa; the Duke of Alva declaring he spared his Life in regard to his want of Experience. Hence the Army moved, and took in Evora, and Monte-Mayor, and fo proceeded to Setuval, without committing any wafe in all the Country.

6. The grand Prior provided for his Defence, but wanting Men, and no Succours coming from France, he fent the French Conful residing at Lisbon to hasten them, and The Spa- he went to spend the Money he carried. Now perceiving rith Forces, the Duke approached, having taken Alcager do sal near ma Duke Setuval, and being wholly unprovided to oppose him, he Alva, Juffered his Officers to commit many Extortions to raise Lisbon. Money was coined of less Weight than usual all the Arms, Money was coined of less Weight than usual, all the lewels of the Crown were fold, the Money defigned for Redemption of Captives seized, Convents were searched for Money deposited in them, and the Plate of the Churches was feized. The Frvars took Arms, and went about the Streets, exciting others to do the like. Setuval was foon furrendred to the Duke of Alva, and only a Tower held out that secures the Haven, under which lay Three Galleons. D. Alvaro Bazan, Marquets of Sama Cruz, coming up now with 60 Galleys, and 25 Ships, and some Cannon being planted on an Eminency, at the first shot the Galeons surrendred, and soon after the

Tower. The Grand Prior seeing the best Part of the

forme

Kingdom in the Power of King Philip, and the Nobility daily refort to him, began now to suspect his own Followers. The Duke of Almafter long confulting where Alva. paf to pass the River Tuenes, at length took the Advice of the for the Ri- Peringuele that adhered to him, which was, to go over ver Tagus, in the Galleys to Cafeais. D. James de Mereles lying with some Men behinda Mountain, did not hinder the landing, and was therefore accused of Cowardize. The Grand Prior marched out to Belem, with some few ill armed Troops, but foon retired. The Duke took and plundered Cascais, where D. James de Meneses, being taken, had his Head cut off. This put Lisbon, and the Grand Prior, into a great Consternation; and he gathered about 8000 undisciplined Men, with which he marched towards Beiem on the 5th. of August. On the 4th Day after, he removed and posted himself on an Advantageous rising Ground over against the Bridge of Alcantara. In the mean while the Duke advanced to batter the Fort of S. Julian.

The History of PORTUGAL.

7. D. James de Cazamo, a Spaniard, who had ferred the Grand Prior, came now to him, and prevailed with him to fubmit himself to King Philip, but the King remitted the whole Affair to the Duke of Alva, who broke off that Negotiation. The Castle of S. Julian, after be- The Forts ing Two Days battered, was delivered up to him. The up in the Wooden Fort at the Bar was abandoned by the Defen-Report, dants, and the Spaniards possessed themselves of it. King kin by the Philip now published his general Pardon to all Persons whartoever concerned in these Broiles, except the Grand Prior, and some other of the Heads conditionally that they submitted by a Day appointed. Lisbon was willing enough to emorace this offer, but feared as much to be plundered by its armed Rabble, as by the Enemy. Eight Days the Two Armies lay close by each other, without doing any thing. At length the Duke sent Sancha de Avila with 15 Horfe, and fome Foot, to discover which way the Tower of Belem might be attacked. A greater number of Portuguese met them, and a Skirmish paried, the not confidencele, the Spaniards retiring. That Angles they planted their Cannon, and the next Day the Tower was delivered to them. The Duke perceiving the Grand Prior kept his Ground, which prevented the City Linear from furrendring, he went in Perion to take a view ?? his Camp, and round it well feated, but not formyed. He refolved to attack it at Midnight, and gave férice Orders that the City should not be plundred; King Piells having given it him particularly in Charge. At the time appointed he marched, the Spanish Slabs and Galle s then riding in the River. The Grand Frior encourage his Min, which were now but a finall number, and its armed and dissiplined. The Spanish Army confitted of 20000 Men, the Portuguese were not above 4000. The Antony's Cannon having played on both fides, the Spaniards Arm, rout. affaulted the Bridge, where was a sharp dispute, but that once gained, the Portuguese soon sled to the City, where Antony opened the Prisons, and then with some few that would tollow him, shifted for himself.

1:1.

Lisbon ‡lundered by the Spamiaids.

A . R 35.

Gond.

8. Notwithstanding the contrary Orders, the Spaniards during Three Days plundered Lisbon, which so displeased King Philip, that he threatned to punish all the Officers. and to feverely reproved the Duke, that he is thought to have died of Grief Antony having staied at Sacavem near Lisbon, removed to Santarem, which Place, tho the first that declared him King, refused now to admit him. Thence he fled to Coimbra, where he fortifyed himself. and having gathered 5000 Men, sent Orders to the Province betwixt Duero and Minho, to own him King, and entered Aveyro by force. The Towns in Africk immediately submitted, but the Tercera Islands stood by Antony. Sancho de Avila set out from Lisbon, with 400 Horse. forces to fly and 6000 Foot, to purfue Antony. Coimbra opened her Gates to him, and Antony removed to Porto, which Place refusing him admittance, he began to batter, and thereupon it was surrendred to him Sancho de Avila tollowed the Grand Prior close, and coming to Porto, battered it from the same Place the other had done, and entring plundered it. Antony escaping thence, and being forfaken of all Men, absconded for a long time in the Mounrains. Being close pursued at the River Lina, he had certainly been taken, but that one Thomas Cacheyro, who still followed him, Swam over the River with him on his Back. In this manner he fled from Place to Place, narrowly escaping in several Disguises. King Philip offered 80000 Crowns in Gold to any that could discover him, and the many poor People were concerned in his Escape. none ever offered to betray him. Antony came in difguile to Liebon, and thence to Setuval, where a Woman affilted to hire a small Vessel for him, which carried him into England; whence he passed into France, and was there favourably entertained by the Queen Mother Katherine of Medicis, and her Son the Duke of Alenson, > who affired to a Crown, and hoped if he could get Forces into Portugal, to secure that to himself.

T : 8 %

9. The Torceral flands still held for Actory, and at the farme time expected King Sebaltian, who was killed in ufficier,

Africk, and many pretended to prophecy the Day he The Tercewould come to them. King Philip being about to make ra Islands his Entry into Lisbon, received this News from the for Anto-Islands, and therefore sent thither Peter Valdez with 600 ny. Men and some Cannon to reduce them. He found a very ill Reception, and therefore kept at Sea, not knowing what to do. Advice was brought him, That D. Lope de Figueroa was preparing at Lisbon to follow him with a greater Force; and he, that the other might not have any share in the Honour of subduing those Islands. rashly adventured to land. With much difficulty he got ashoar upon S. James his Day, and at First took some pieces of Cannon from the Portuguese. But Cyprian de Figueyredo, the Governour, coming out of the City with all the Force he could make, drove before a Herd of Oxen, which being pricked forwards upon the Spaniards, put them into disorder, and he then falling on, drove them into the Sea, where 450 of them perished. Many Barbarities were committed towards the Dead. some being cut in Pieces, and others dragged about the Streets. Valdez was in this miserable Condition, when D. Lope de Figueroa came to be a Witness of his rashness; for he could do nothing after that Loss. Upon the News that Levies were making in England, France, and Flanders, to bring Antony into Portugal, the King fent the Prior of Malta, to secure the Province betwixt Duero and Minho. Ambrose de Aguiar, and Peter Peixoto, were fent to the Terceras. The Marquis de Santa Cruz returned from Sevil, with Twelve Galleys, and Twenty Galleons, and found there Thirty Veilels gathered from Portugal, Biscay, and other Places. With this Force he failed towards the Islands in July. Antony Antony at the same time sailed from France with Fifty eight arrives at Sail, in which were above Seven thousand Men, com- the Ter manded by Philip Strazi, and Monfieur de Brifto. He cerar with arrived at the Island of S. Michael, before the Speciards, affect from and plundered the Town of Lanna. The Inhabitante Grance. and plundered the Town of Laguna. The Inhabitants of Punta Delgada, the chief Town of the Island, fled to the Mountains. Ambrose de Agniar, who had been Go vernour, was dead, and now Peter Peixoto, and Lawrence Nogueyra commanded. They marched out with about Three thousand Spaniards and Portuguese, to meet the French, by whom they were defeated, and Niguerra Hying to the Fort, died there of his Wounds. Antony, after fummoning the Fort, in vain prepared to batter it when the Spanish Fleet appearing, diverted him from that Design.

1582. Elect de-Broved by the Spanish.

10. After several Essays made, the Two Fleets joyned Antony's Battle on the 26th of July. The Engagement lasted Five Hours, in which the French Admiral, and Vice-Admiral, being taken, Two great Ships funk, and about Two thousand of their Men slain, the rest fled. Philip Strozi being taken died of his Wounds, as did D. Francis de Portugal, Earl of Vimioso. John de Jaen, Chaplain to the Major General, frighted by the Cannon, randown into the Hold, where he died with fear. Anthony thinking some of his Commanders had not done their Duty, as being corrupted by the Spaniards, cut off D. Duarte de Castro's Head, on suspition that he was one of them. He was not himself in the Fight, being then received ashoar in the Island Tercera, where he was received as King. Some of the French Ships returned to France; others plundered the Island of Fayal. The Marquess after his Victory, having Twenty eight Lords, Fifty Gentlemen, and a great number of Marriners and Soldiers, Prisoners, beheaded all the former, and hanged the latter. This done, he returned to Lisbon, carrying with him Two India Ships he met in the way. Antony coined Money, much under Weight, wracked the People to raise more, incited the religious Men to take Arms, and forbore not too, in the midst of his Misery, to endeayour to corrupt Nuns. He failed thence in November, with Thirty Sail for France, but some of them for sook him by the way. About the middle of February, King Philip'r turned to Castile. As soon as the Season was fit for failing, Monsieur de Chartes, a Knight of Malia, came from France with 1200 Men to secure the Islands to Account In July arrived there the Spanish Fleet, conriffing of Sixty Sail, and among them Twelve Galleys, which can'ed admiration; for that those Vessels had never before been used in the Ocean, but for Coalkers. In this Fleet were One thousand two hundred Men commanded by the Marquels de Santa Cruz. On the 24th. of this Month, the Admiral would have proclaimed a general Pardon, but could not be heard. He landed as The Ter- Ther Mole, and after Three Days refiltance became abwrash do folute Mafter of the Idacis, the Defendants flying to the Montaines. Monfiere de Chartes articled to depart with the French, leaving their Colours. D. Emanuel de Silva the Governour, after absconding some time, was betrayed by a Slave, taken and beheaded. His Head was put up where he had fet up that of Belchior Alfonfo. for fiding with King Philip, and it is remarkable, he had faid it should be taken down when his were fixed in the Place. Some were beheaded, others hanged, and all that had any Honours or Employments conferred by Antony. were deprived of them. All the other Islands were easily reduced. 11. Antony having left all he possessed in the Seas, and Antony

having no hopes of Succour in France, went over into flies into England, the differences betwixt King Philip and Queen England. Elizabeth encouraging him to hope for affiftance there. The Queen was eafily perswaded to embrace this Enterprize, and offered her Ships, and Two thousand Men that had served in Holland, but upon very hard Terms, which were granted, and are these; That the Queen should furnish 120 Sail, 15000 Landmen, and 5000 Marriners, for which Antony within Two Months after he was in possession of Lisbon, should pay down Five Millions, and 300000 Duccats a Year for ever. That the English should Traffick freely in Portugal, and India. That the Queen might bring her Fleet into Lisbon River, and Antony should be obliged to assist her against King Philip. That the Garrisons in Portugal should alwalys be in the hands of English, maintained by the Kingdom. That Bishopricks should be conferred on English Catholicks, and so others too tedious to relate. Sir Francis Drake had the Command of the Fleet, and Sir John Norris of the Land Forces, which were 22000 Men. They failed from Plimonth, and arrived at Coruna the arth, of Alar, where they landed, and having spent Five Days before the Place without any success, returned to their Ships with lots. In the mean while King Philip fent Advice to Lisbon, That the Cardina, Albertus who was Governour, and the Count de Facet : who was General, might be in readinefs. The English landed fome Horfe, and 12000 Foot at Posicie, which Place they took, and thence coasting along, entered th River of Lisber. The Count de Frentes, with forms Troops of Horse, endeavoured to secure the Country, vet Norris marched with a great Body of Troops to wards Lieben, and fortyfied himfelt clote to the City. There

There he lay some time, but still finding that not one Portuguese came over to him, nor that Drake did not come up the River, he marched back and embarked his Forces. Many of his Men died by the way, of the Plague, which was got among them in Portugal, and the rest arriving at Plimouth, spread it through all England.

12. Antony seemed now only to have come to take his last Farewel of his Country, for ever after he resided in France, tho never quitting his claim to this Crown, till He dies in he died at Puris in great Poverty, and the 64th. Year of France. his Age. His Body was buried in the Church of the Nuns of Ave Maria, and the Inscription on his Tomb. calls him King. He was endued with feveral good Qualities, his Perion was comly, and his Countenance pleafing. He was not unlearned, especially in Divinity, and wrote a Paraphrase upon the Penitential Psalms. He could not marry, as being of the Military Order of Malta; but by several. Women had the following Bastard Children: First, D. Emanuel de Portugal, who married Emilia, Daughtet to William Prince of Orange. Secondly, Ciristopher, who died in France. Thirdly, Peter, who became a Franciscan Friar, and was called of the Defart, remarkable for Piety and Learning. Fourthly, Denis, who took the Habit of S. Bernard, in the Monastery of Valbuena. Fifthly, Alonso, who served in the Galleys of Naples, where he died. Sixthly, John, who died very Young. Seventhly, Philippa, a Bernardin Nun. Eightly, Luisa, a Franciscan Nun. Ninthly, and Tenthly, Two Daughters, whose Names are not extant, but they were both kept in the Monastery of Huelgas, near Eurgos, by King Philip the Second.

CHAP. VII.

The Reign of Philip, the Second of Spain, and First of Portugal; and Eigthteenth King, from the Year 1580, till 1598.

Ring Phi- Son to the Emperor Charles the Fifth, and the Empress Elizabeth, Daughter of King Empirel of Pok-

ingal, was born at Valladolid on the 23th. of March 1527. After the loss of King Sebastian in Africk, he sent Don Christopher de Moura to condole with the New King, and Cardinal Henry, offering his affiftance in reeftablishing the Kingdom in its former Splendor, and Money for the redemption of Captives. The First he ransomed, was the Duke of Barcelos, Son to him of Bragança, and with him feveral Gentlemen. King Henry dying, and the Kingdom being in a Confusion, for that the Governours feared to declare who was the next Heir, and the Multitude began to declare for Antony the Grand Prior; King Philip came to Badajoz, hoping his approach would induce the Portuguese to declare for him; but being deceived of his Expectation, he sent the Duke of Alva who reduced all the Country with much eafe, as we have feen in the foregoing Chapter. At the time the King intended to enter the Kingdom in Person, he fell so dangerously Sick that he was given over. He suddenly recovered, and Ann his Queen who was with him died. Being restored to his Health, he was received at Elvas, D. Christopher de Moura, and Nunho Alvarez He enters Pereyra, attending upon him as Ministers of State for Portugal. this Kingdom. Lisbon was not yet quite clear of the Plague, and therefore he ordered the Cortes or Parliament to meet at Tomar on the 15th. of April. In his way thither he met the Dutchess of Brayança, and they were long together, tho' their Discourse was not over pleasant; for the King treated her not with all the Complement she expected, and she never gave him the stile of Majesty. Being come to Tomar, before the opening of the Parliament, he caused himself to be Sworn Ring, according to the Portuguese manner, and his Son Prince James Heir of the Crown. Next he granted a general An Am-Pardon to all that had fided with Autony the Grand Pri- notes. or, only excepting Fifty two Perfons, and excluding all religious Men, that elpoused his Quarrel, from Spiritual Promotions.

2. The Parliament was opened the 19th of April, the He holds a King sitting on his Throne. The King boundfully be-Parliationed his Favours upon all there, and yet there were ment more discontented than pleased. It was proposed to suppress the University of Coimbra, because it had supported the Grand Prior, but the King would not suffer it to be done. What the King granted of his own will to

the

1/11/3.

tugal.

Priviled- the Kingdom in general, was as follows. That he will ges gran- keep all their Ancient Priviledges, and Immunities. red to Por- That the Parliament shall always meet within the Kingdom. That none shall be Governour of Portugal but a Native, unless it be a Prince of the Blood. That all Places of Trust and Honour, shall be given to Natives. That all the Officers of the Houshould shall be kept un. and none but Natives shall be fuch. That the same be observed in India, and America, and none but Portuguese Ships shall be allowed to Trade thither. That all the Money coined in the Kingdom, shall be stamped with only the Portuguese Arms. That all Church Preferments. and Commendaries of Military Orders, shall be given to Natives. That no New Imposition shall be laid upon the Church. That there shall be always a Portuguese Council with his Majesty, for the Affairs of the Kingdom. These are the Principal Heads, the others being much of the same Purport, or less Material, I omit for brevity fake. They were in all Twenty five Articles. King Philip bound himself by Oath to perform them, left his Bleffing to fuch of his Heirs as preserved, and his Curse to those that violated them.

Philip's publick Entry into Lisbon.

3. The Cortes being broke up, King Philip resolved to make his solemn Entry into Lisbon, but because the City had not yet finished the Works designed for his Reception, he staid some Days at Almada, a Town on the opposite side of the River. On the 29th. of June he entered the City, attended by all the Nobility, with the greatest Splendor and Majesty imaginable. Thus ended che Calamities of this Kingdom, which had lasted Two Years, during which short time there may be reckoned Five feveral Reigns; which were that of Sebastian, of Henry, of the Five Governours, of Antony, and now of Philip. For the easier dispatch of Business, the King ordered there should be but Two prime Ministers, viz. Ancony Pincyro, Bishop of Leyria, and D. Christopher de Moura, the former because he had no Kindred, and the latter because he made no Account of them, for Moura was never known to prefer any of his, tho' he had many. Nunko Alvarez Pereyra was made Secretary, and was equal in Power to them. tho' not in Title. The King had appointed to return to Castile in November, but Prince Tames dying, he was forced to call a Parliament, to caute his Second Son Milloto b. fivern Heir to the Crown.

Crown. The Parliament met the beginning of the 1582. New Year, and swore the Prince; and among other Another things the King granted leave for wearing of Silks. Parlia-Mary the Empress, Sister to King Philip, and her Daugh- ment held. ter Margaret, came to meet the King at Lisbon. The Portuguese expected the former would have been left to govern them; but the King made choise of her Son the Philip re-Cardinal Albertus, Archduke of Austria. On the 11th. turns to of February the King set forward for Castile, carring Castile. with him the Lady Juliana de Lancastro, Heiress of the

The History of PORTUGAL.

Noble House of Aveiro.

4. All Men began to observe how the Cardinal Alber- Cardinal tus was qualified, and they found his Inclinations were Albertus, good. Only two things remarkable happened during Governour the time of his Government. One was the English In- of Portuvasion, under Antony the Grand Prior, before spoken of. gal. The other the counterfeit Sanctity of a Nun. She pre- The Hipstended to live without eating, and indeed had no other crife of a Suftenance, but what she got out of artificial Candles she Nanpretended to burn in her Oratory. Shealfo imprinted on her Body the Five Wounds of our Saviour, to artificially, that the cheat was scarce to be discerned, even after fhe was discovered. During the short time this Hypocritical Scene was acted, the wrought fome Miracles. Being at last examined, she was punished, and from thenceforth led so Godly a Life, as almost purchased her the Opinion of Sanctity, she before endeavoured to gain by Hypocrifie. The King tho' he left the Cardinal in Portugal, governed the Kingdom himself with the affiltance of his Portuguese Council, composed of very worthy Persons, in the choice of which he never erred. The conceit some People entertained that King Sebastian was 1500. yet living, gave Occasion to some Persons to take upon Commerfeld them his Name and Character. The Son of a Tiler, Sebaltian. born at Alcobaza, who had been Apprentice to a finall Turner of Heads, in Lisbon, and expelled the Order of Curmelites in his Noviceship, went away and lived like a Hermit, on the Borders of the Kingdom, near Addaquerque. After some time the People centuring his courle of Life, he left it, and putting on good Apparel, he travelled about that Country well mounted. Some presently gave out he was King Sebastian, which he at first denied, but finding them positive, at last complied with their Humour, and fuffered two of his bollowers to call themselves, the one Chaiffepher as Taxwa, and fiderable Booty, and all the Cannon of the Fortifications along the Sea-coast. Thence he sailed to Santo plundered. The fame he did at Cartagena, and then nassed over to Florida. About the beginning of this Year King Philip fet out the Proclamation for regulating the Stile to be used in Letters, which till then caused much Confusion, every one alpiring to greater Titles than belonged to them. King Philip, provoked by the many Wrongs done him by Queen Elizabeth, resolved upon the Conquest of England, and to that purpose gathered a Mighty Fleet in the vast Port of Lisbon. It contained 130 Sail, most of them very large, under the Command of D. Alonso Perez de Guzman, Duke of

Medina Sidonia, and Generalissimo. The Land Forces amounted to 20000, the Mariners above 11000. They failed from Lisbon the 27th, of May, and after being dispersed by a Terrible Storm, met again at Corana.

Sailing thence, the greatest part of this Mighty Fleet was destroyed, either by the English, or by violent Storms, which drove it round Scotland and Ireland, for that the Duke of Medina Sidonia with a very few returned to Santander. In Revenge of this Attempt. Queen Elizabeth sent the Fleet, we before spoke of in the Life of Antony the Grand Prior, to Invade Portagal.

The Disappointment she met there, made her think of Intercepting our India Fleet. To this purpose she fitted out 50 Sail, commanded by the Earl of E/2v, who failed directly to the Islands Azores. King Phillo tent out his Fleet, under the Command of D. Alonso Bazan, against him. Near the Island Flores the two Fleers engaged, with fo much Advantage on the part of the Spaniards, that they took the English Vice-Admiral, yet presently after, some of the Spanish Fleet perished in a Storm. However, the English took the Flag-Ship of three that came from India in the Year 1593, tho' D. dienso Bazan sailed from Lisbon to prevent them. He the other the Bishop of Guarda, both which had been Ilain with the King in Africk. Some few days they lived well among their Adherents, and gathered Money, but being apprehended by Order of the Arch-Duke Albertus, the Counterfeit Sebaltian, after having been shewed at Lisbon, was fent to the Galleys, and his Companion, the pretended Bishop, hanged.

5. Scarce was the last Impostor punished, when another started up in his place. This was one Gonzalo Alvarez, the Son of a Mason, who, like the other, became an Eremite, and did much feeming Penance, lashing · himself, and then crying out, where he might be heard, O unhappy Sebastian, all thy Penance is but little, in respect of thy Crimes. A Rich Farmer, called Peter Alfonso, joyned with him, and concealed him, giving out Orders in his Name. At length he gathered 800 Men, calling himself Earl of Torresnovas, Lord of Cascais, and Governour of Lisbon. None saw the pretended King but the Daughter of the false Earl, she being designed Queen, and also the Wife of Antony Simoens, a Rich Man. Whenfoever this Pageant King was forced to appear abroad, he wore a great pair of Spectacles, which covered most part of his Face. He sent a Son of Simoens

The falle Sebastian executed.

to the Governour Albertus, to Order him to quit the Palace, for that he was coming to undeceive the People. This Messenger being taken, and then let go, increased the Opinion of the People, that it was King Sebastian. because Antony Simoens having known him, would not otherwise have suffered his Son to go on that Message. The ludge of Torresvedras was ordered to Apprehend them, but he attempting it, was, together with his Clerk, cast headlong from a High Place, and killed: Gasper Pereira, for reproving them, was also murdered, with his Son and Nephew, and his House plundered. Antony Fonseca, an Alcalde de Corte, went next with 400 Spaniards, commanded by Captain Calderon, who, after killing a few of the Mutiniers, took the Upstart King. At Lisbon he was hanged and quartered, as was the falle Earl, Peter Alfonso, with others. Some were sent to the Galleys, and the Towns of Ericeyra, Carbonero, and Mafra were left almost desolate, the Inhabitants flying for fear of Punishment. Yet after all this, many thought King Sebastian must come out from the Desart, and there was scarce any that lived an Eremitical Life in Portugal, who was not imagined to be that King. 6. Elizabeth

6. Elizabeth, Queen of England, not regarding that Queen Elithe owed her Life to King Philip, joyned with the Re-zabeth's bels of Holland against him. She sent over to their As- Provocafiltance Robert, Earl of Leicester, with 3000 Men. Sir tions, and Francis Drake also sailed from Plymouth in August, and King Phi-Landing at Bayona, was beaten off thence. Next, he lip's Design fell upon the Islands of Caboverde, where he took a con-against her Domingo in the West-Indies, which City he mok and 1586.

1231

found

found seven English Ships in the Island Flores waiting for the other two that came from India, and he took them.

1594. Portugal governed by Commissioners.

7. The Arch-Duke, Cardinal Albertus, being called away to Madrid, to receive the Archbishoprick of Toledo. the Government of Portugal was committed to D. Mi. chael de Castro, Archbishop of Lisbon, the Counts D. John de Sylva of Portalegre, D. Francis Mascarenhas of Sancta Cruz, D. Duarte de Castelobranco of Sabuyal, and Michael de Moura, Secretary. The English Fleet again appeared before the Tercera Islands, hoping to meet with the Ships from India. The Earl of Effex was Admiral, he destroyed Fayal and Pico, then Landing upon S. Michael, plundered Villafranca. Lattly, one of the India Ships falling into his Fleet, he thought to have carrved it off, but was disappointed by her being fired. This done, he failed from the Islands. Prince Charles, Son to King Philip, was naturally of a turbulent Spirit. and is faid to have held Correspondence with his Father's Enemies, and to have practifed against him. Hereupon he was cast into Prison, and Judges appointed to inspect into the Cause, who passed Sentence of Death against him. His Father allowed him no other Favour, than to choose what Death he would die; and he said, they might kill him as they pleafed. Being prepared for it. four Slaves strangled him with a Silken Rope. D. John of Austria, tho'a Bastard, was no less haughty, and aspired first, to the Kingdom of Tunis, then, to that of England; but the King lowered all his haughty thoughts, and he is believed to have died a violent Death. King Picilip having been some time sick, at last was confined to his Bed, as well by reason of Weakness, as that the Gout was broke out in Sores upon his Hand, Foot, and Knee. Fifty three days he lay in fuch condition, that his Bed could not be made, and on the last of them he died. His Patience in his Sufferings was wonderful, for he pityed those that attended him more than he did himself. Having performed all Offices of a good Christian, he gave up the Ghost the 13th. day of September, being Sunday, at Five in the Morning, in the Year 1599, King Phi- in the Famous Monastery of the Escurial, the 71st. Year of his Age, the 18th of his Reign over Portugal, and 415t. over the rest of Spain. He was the first King, fince the Goths, that possessed all this Monarchy entire.

I (99. lip dist.

S. King

The History of PORTUGAL.

8. King Philip was of a middle Stature, an awful His De-Presence, had a high Forehead, blue and beautiful Eyes, scription. a handsom Nose, thick Lips, the lower somewhat fallen. as is usual to the House of Austria, fair Hair; and taken altogether, his Person was Majestick. He wanted the Sense of Smelling, or at least had very little of it. He had four Wives; First, Mary, Daughter to King John the Third of Portugal. Secondly, Mary, Queen His Wives of England, Daughter to Henry the Eighth, by whom and Ifue. he had no Issue. Thirdly, Elizabeth, Daughter to Henry the Second, King of France. Fourthly, Ann, Daughter to the Emperor Maximilian. By the first he had Charles, whom he put to Death, as has been faid. By the third, Elizabeth Clare Eugenia, Countess of Flunders, Wife to the Arch-Duke Albertus. Also Katherine, Wife to Charles Emanuel, Duke of Savoy. By the fourth, first, Ferdinand; secondly, Charles Lawrence; thirdly, James, all three died young; fourthly, Philip, who succeeded his Father; fifthly, Mary, who died an Infant.

CHAP. V.

The Reign of Philip the Third of Spain, and Second of Portugal, and Nineteenth King, from the Year 1578. till 1621.

I. CIngular was the Wisdom of the late King, and O consequently the loss of him was extraordinarily. lamented by all his People. Their Sorrow was much mitigated by the great hopes conceived that his Successor, Philip, would prove no less capable to wield the Sceptre than his Father had been. This Prince (being the Birth of Seventh Child of his Father, and Fourth of his Mother Philip the Queen Ann) was Born in the renowned Town of Ma-Third. drid, on the 14th. of April, 1578. and was the Second 1578. of the Name in Portugal, and Third in Spain. He was sworn Heir of Portugal on the first of February, 1583. and afterwards of his other Kingdoms, this being the first of them that took an Oath to him. The many Embassages he received with singular Grandeur, the Fleets he set out, the great Supplies he sent to Pope Paul the Fifth,

The Mo.

rifcoes

Spain.

banilhed

The History of PORTUGAL.

Fifth, and the Emperor Ferdinand, and many other particulars of his Reign, as appertaining more properly to the History of Spain, where he resided, are purposely omitted here, because we design only to adhere to what particularly belongs to Portugal. His Resolution was wonderful in banishing the Moriscoes, or those that were deicended of the Race of the Moors, who pretending to become Christians, committed many Villanies and Sacriledges, at the tame time underhand holding Correspondence in Africk and Turky, in order to bring over the Moors into Spain again. Charles the Fifth, Ferdinand and Philip the Second, had all of them entertained thoughts of putting this fame Design in execution, but the many Inconveniences that attended it, still deterred them. 400000 of these base People were dispersed throughout the Kingdom, who all upon the King's Edict departed the Kingdom, having liberty to carry away with them all they were worth. Upon the Birth-day of this King, a Preacher Prophetically foretold the Banishment of the Moriscoes, threatning them with the New-born Prince.

2. Often did this King promise to Visit his Realm of Portugal in Person, but still failed, being put by his Refolution by his Favourites, who for their private Ends diffwaded this Journey, not regarding how much a King loses the Affections of his People, who never suffers himfelf to be seen by them. At length, when least expected, Philip the he suddenly set out in April, 1619. bringing with him

Third comes Prince Philip, and the Princesses Elizabeth and Mary, and (as his Father had done) he made his Publick Entry into Lisbon on S. Peter's Day. His Reception was the greatest that ever till then had been heard of; for the Portugues, ravished with Affection and Joy to see their Prince among them, erected fuch Fabricks on the Land, and made fuch mighty Works on the River, as feemed to fill up both those Elements of Land and Water, and scarce left room for the admiring Multitude to behold him that all those

His Recept Expendes were made for. It is impossible to describe the particulars of this most Glorious Entry. The River Tagus was covered with an innumerable multitude of Velfels, built in the shape of several Fishes and Sea-Monsters. The King was brought in a Galley (attended by many others) built with fuch admirable Workmanship, that the like was never before seen, and it obliterated the Memory of the Famous one made by Ptolomy, King of Egypt, which at that time was the Wonder of the World. Whilst this multitude of Veffels rowed down the River. the thundring of the Cannon from the Vessels themselves. and from the Castle, shook the Earth, and rent the Air. Being come on shoar, the King proceeded to the Cathedral, and thence to the Palace, entertaining his Eves with fuch prodigious Sights of Gold and Silver, that the time falling short to view all, he returned the next day to behold the lofty Fabricks, which expressed the greatness of their Affection who received him. Such was the Magnificence of the Piles erected, such the Cost bestowed on them, and fuch the folid Strength of them, that they feemed as if deligned for many Ages, not for the use of one only day, which was too fhort a space even to demolish them.

3. The Majesty of these Works was so amazing, that the King, the used to Regal Entertainments, faid, He never till that day thought himself a great King. Hereby feeming to call Lisbon, Felicitas Philippica, as once Julius.

Casar gave it the Name of Felicitas Julia. In the Palace heperformed the two Solemn Acts of Swearing the Prince He holds and holding the Cortes or Parliament, which met with Parliaextraordinary Joy and Satisfaction of all Men, but is the ment end disappointed them of their hopes. First, for that the King was scarce seen by his Subjects, and next, for the unsatisfactory Answer he gave to their Demands. The Reason of it was, that his coming to the Kingdom, and calling the Parliament, were Actions proceeding from his own Inclination; but the difobliging of them, was wholly the product of the ill Advice of his Ministers. His Favourites fearing he should take an Affection to the Partuguese, and perhaps continue among them, were uneasis at the Splendor of his Entertainment, and fo much Influence had they over him, that he gave more Credit to their Words, than to those marks of Respect and Loyalty he saw with his Eyes. This is the greatest Missortune can befal a Prince, to be so led away and infatuated by the Flatteries of Favourites, who only attend their private Interest, as to forfeit the Affections of their People. This is the height of Tyranny in Ministers, to cover all for themselves, and allow nothing to others. 4. Seven Months the King spent in his Journey to Por- His stay, tugal, staying there, and returning home. Being come to and remen Madrid, he departed this Life the last day of March, in to Madrid.

Bb3

into Portugal.

tion.

1621. the Year of Grace 1621. the 43d. Year of his Age, and His Death. 23d. of his Reign. His Body lies buried with his Predecessors in the Royal Monastery of St. Lawrence, commonly called the Escurial. His Picture, drawn as he appeared at the Cortes or Parliament held at Lisbon, in his Robes, with the Collar of the Golden Fleece, and the Steptre in his Hand, represents him of a pleasing Aspect, yet full of Majesty. Of Stature, he was rather little, but proportionable; his Forehead high, his Eyes blue, his Lips thick, his Complexion fair, with a fresh Colour, his Hairyellow, his whole Countenance beautiful, and representing much Grandeur. He was a most Holy Prince, and at his Death feemed to have only one thing to lament, which was, that he fulfilled what his Father had Prophetically foretold, viz. That he suffered his Favourites to have so much the Ascendant over him. Had he given less Ear to his Ministers (who always mind their own Advantage, tho' with the loss of their Master's) and been more absolute in taking his own measure, he had proved one of the greatest and most succeisful Princes in the World. For he was fo Fortunate, that notwithstanding all the Miscarriages of those that governed him, he still came off with Honour and Reputation, adding new Conquests to his Dominions, both in India and Africk.

His Wife

5. His only Wife was Margaret of Austria, Daughter and Isue. to the Arch-Duke Charles and his Dutchess Mary. She was one of the most Renowned Queens this Kingdom ever had, and it enjoyed many that deserve Immortal Fame. After her Death, the King in Continency imitated his Predecessor Alonso the Fifth, for he never would Marry again; and it is generally believed he never had to do with any Woman but his Queen. His Issue was, First, Ann Mary Mauricia, Wife to King Lewis XIII. of France, her Dowry 500000 Crowns in Gold. Secondly, Philip; who succeeded him. Thirdly, Mary, born at Valladolid the 18th of August, 1606. afterwards Queen of Hungary. Fourthly, Charles, born at Madrid the 14th. of September, 1607. Fifthly, Ferdinand, born at the Escurial May the 17th. 1609. he was a Cardinal, Archbishop of Toledo, Prior of Crato, and Abbot of Alcobaça. Sixthly, Margaret, born at Lerma in M.y 1610. and died the 11th. of March 1617. Seventhly, Alonfo, born at the Escurial September the 22d. 1611. and died the following Year. His Mother also died in Childbed of him, leaving leaving her Subjects in unspeakable forrow and want of

The History of PORTUGAL.

6. In this King's Time the Plague raging in the City Prodigies. of Lisbon, was observed to cease immediately after the Image of the glorious Martyr S. Sebastian had been feen to sweat plentifully. A Year before the King's Journey to Lisbon, two Comets of a wonderful Magnitude appeared in the Signs of Virgo and Libra, one of them so prodigiously great, it renewed the Memory of that which appeared at the Birth of Mithridates, that extended over one quarter of the Heaven. After them ensued the Death of Popes and Kings, the overturning of States, and the fall of Great Ministers, whose Ruin is by nothing more evidently foretold than by the unlawful means they use to rise, and yet none takes warning by him that went before, to avoid the Precipice. At the City Bagaim in India there happened such a violent Storm, as carryed away Churches, Houses, Trees, and Mountains. Several Apparitions were seen in the Air, representing Men, Fires, and Battles. The Holy Man, F. Bartholomew, of the Martyrs, Archbishop of Braga, was beatified; his Body is in the Town of Viana. Margaret de Chaves now flourished in Sanctity, and made a miraculous end.

CHAP. VI.

The Reign of Philip the Fourth of Spain, and Third of Portugal, and the Twentieth King, from the Year of our Lord 1605, till 1628.

Ing Philip the Third of Spain, and Second of Por- Birth of tugal, being at Valladolid with his Wife Queen Philip the Margaret, their Son Philip the Fourth of Spain, and Third Fourth of of Portugal, was born upon Good-Friday, which fell then Spain, and upon the 8th. day of April, in the Year 1605. His Birth Third of was celebrated with the greatest Demonstrations of Joy, Portugal. and most of Expence, that had ever till then been seen. His Father dying, he retired to the Royal Monastery of S. Hierome, whence a few days after he returned to take Possession of his Crowns left him by his Ancestors, his Magnificent Entry dispelling the Clouds of Sorrow that from to the Crown.

The History of PORTUGAL.

hung over the Heads of the Subjects, and filling their Hearts with Joy. He entred upon the Government, giving ample Testimonies of a more pregnant Judgment than could have been expected at those tender Years, for he reformed the Councils, established wholsom Laws, punished evil Ministers, and ordered that all those who were in Office, should give in true Estimates of what they were worth, that it might afterwards appear how their K. Charles Estates were advanced in his Service. On the 16th. of the First of May, Charles, Prince of Wales, afterwards King of Eng. England, land, came incognito by the Post to Madrid, and went to then Prince Lodge at the English Embassador's House, and by him of Wales, made known the defign of his coming. The Catholick King made a Publick Entry with him from the Escurial with that Solemnity that is only used at the Reception or the Spanish Kings, giving him the Right Hand under the Canopy, and attended by all his Court, every Man the day vying to outdo the rest in Splendor, and in teitity not his loy. Afterwards, several Sports were made, to Entertain the Prince, the King himself, at the Riding used with Canes instead of Spears, signalized his Dexterity. The Match betwixt the Prince and Princes Mary being proposed, learned Men were consulted, and agreed upon the Conclusion, but not the Formalities. It was hoped it would have succeeded, but Providence had ordered otherwife. -

The Dutch

2. The Arms of Spain were at this time employed in in Brassl, several Parts, in all which many Portuguese served with fingular Reputation. The Rebel Hollanders having Intelligence of the evil Posture of Affairs in Brasil, resolved to attempt the Conquest of that Country, and to that effect, moved feveral of the Northern Princes, grown envious of the Power of Spain, to affift them in the Enterprize. They fitted out a Flest in Holland and Zealand, it confilling of 35 Sail, under the Command of Admiral John Vandort, and carryed 3000 chosen Men, a good Train of Artillery, with all other Necessaries. The Design was kept very private. In December the Fleet set Sail, and having passed the Line in 6 Degrees of South Latitude, according to the Orders given, the Admiral opened his Instructions, and found he was commanded to invade Baya de Todos Santos, or the Bay of All-Saints. This Bay is thought to be the greatest in the World, and is the Fort to the City S. Salvador, seated on a rising Ground along that Mountainous Shoar, extending out in length from North to South. It has a Cathedral Church, and had once a Court of Chancery, which has been taken away with good cause; for the greatest Injustice that can be in a State is to be peftered with too many Officers of Justice. This City is the Metropolis of all that vast Province of Brafil in America, and on the East side of that Continent, stretching forth 1200 Leagues along the Coast, being a Delightful, Rich, and Fleasant Soil.

2. The Fleet entred this Bay, and began to batter the Suburb next the Sea, where was begun a Fort in the Wa- The Dutch ter, in which Antony de Mendoza, Son to the Governour Land, and James de Mendoza, commanded, but was forced to aban- take the don it, because in no condition then to withstand the fury Capital of the Enemy's Cannon. In the mean while 1000 Mui- City of all queteers landed, and advanced towards the City without Brafil, cal. any Opposition. They halted in the Suburb of S. Benedict. led Baia. Night came on, and all the Inhabitants fled out of the City, which the Enemy took Possession of in the Morning. The Governour staid This House, and was thence carried away aboard the Admiral. All the People had forfaken their Houses, leaving an inestimable Booty to the Rebels, who polluted the Churches, and committed all manner of Sacrilegious Outrages. D. Mark Teyxeira the Bishop with his Clergy had offered to withstand the Enemy, but none adhering to him, he retired to a Village. Mathias de Albuquerque, who was next in Command to the Governour then a Prisoner, was 100 Leagues off at Pernambuco. He sent an Account of what had happened into Portugal, where the Advice arrived in July. The King writ to the Governours of Portugal a Letter with his own Hand, in which he expressed how much he valued the Portuguese Loyalty, and what returns he expected from them upon fuch an Exigency. The Portu- AFleet fent guese, to answer their King's Expectation, speedily resor- against the ted from all Parts of the Kingdom to Lisbon, and in the Dutch. space of three Months fitted out a Fleet of 26 Sail, in which was most of the Gentry of the Kingdom, all at their own Cost, without putting the King to any charge. D. Emanuel de Moura Corte Real, Marquels of Castel Rodrigo, gave the Example to others, raising a fightly Company of Musquetiers, which he sent upon this Expedition at his own Expence. This stirred up others to do the like, for among the Portuguese Emulation is more prevalent

Other

after ta-

than Vertue. D. Alonso de Noronha, tho' old, that had been Governour of India, listed himself, and many Gentlemen of Quality followed his Example. I shall not name them. because among the Portuguese every one had rather his Name should be omitted, than that his Neighbours should be inserted with him. 4. The Portuguese not being a sufficient Power to recover Brasil, a Spanish Fleet was at the same time sitting out, but not so soon ready, for the former stay'd a Month for the other in the Port of Lisbon; and failing thence in November, expected it at the Island of Santiago the chief of those of Cabo Verde till February, which delay proved not a little advantageous to the Enemy. The Portuguese Squadron confisted of 26 Ships, and in them 4000 Men: in the Spanish were more Ships, and 8000 Men; the former commanded by D. Emanuel de Meneses, the latter by D. Frederick de Toledo Osforio, Marquels of Valdueza. Whilst these Squadrons, now united, make their Voyage, let us see what was doing at Baia. The Hollanders, posfess'd of the City, took several Vessels, which knowing nothing of what had happened, fell ignorantly into that the Dutch Port. They fent five Ships laden with Booty to their Country, with the News of their Success, and with the Governour, and Provincial of the Jesuits, that had been taken Prisoners. After the taking of the City, D. Mark Teixeira the Bishop took upon him the Command of General, for the Defence of the Country, and drew near to the Place with 1500 Men, the third part of them Blacks. Several Encounters happened betwixt his Men and the Enemies, in which he loft 7 or 8 Men, and the Rebels above 300. In one of these Skirmishes Capt. Francis de Padilla killed Col. John Dort, and cut off his Finger, on which he wore a Ring, the Soldiers stripping his Body, cut off his Privities to shew them to his Men. These Barbarities were a greater shame to them that acted, than to him that suffered them. Two runagate Portuguese repenting, and deferting back from the Enemy, were received by our Men upon the points of their Swords; and cut in pieces. The Port of Tapagipe was recovered from the Rebels, and the Commander of it sent Prisoner to Lisbon. The Bishop fell fick, and died, and Francis,

Nunez Marinho succeeded him in the Command, who behaved himself well till D. Francis de Moura was sent thither by the King with fome Supplies, till the Fleet could

could come. He pent up the Enemy within the Town, recovering from them the Suburbs of the Carmelites and S. Benedict, but the City was strong; and in the Port were 26 Ships well manned. Their whole Force confifted of 3000 Men of feveral Nations, and 500 Blacks.

The History of PORTUGAL.

5. The Spanish and Portuguese Fleet arrived at Baia 1626. upon Good-Friday, to the great Terror of the Rebels. The Spa-4000 Men landed immediately. The General, D. Emanuel nish and de Meneses, and the Admiral, D. John Faxardo, remained Portuaboard, drawing up their Fleet like a Half Moon, to hin- guese der the flight of the Enemy, Peter Roiz de San Estevan, Fleets ar-Marqueis of Cropani, marched with the 4000 Men to the rive at City, D. Frederick de Toledo, the Spanish General, follow- Brafil. ing him. They took their Posts, and began to carry on their Works, when about 300 of the belieged fallying, killed 50 of our Men, most of them Persons of Note, yet they were forced to retire. The Cannon being planted, the Bullets flew so thick, that in a few days all was full of Ruins, and the belieged began to be difmay'd. The same Fate attended their Fleet, for D. Emanuel de Meneses landing, from a Battery he raised on the Shoar, funk feveral of their hips, destroying many Men. The Enemy's only hope was in the Succours they expected, but they came only to be Spectators of their shameful quitting the Town. Their Soldiers began to complain they had been decoyed thither, and were weary of the Service, their Commander in Chief proclaimed, that all fuch as would go over to the Portuguese Camp, should have leave, but two that declared for it, were hanged. This selenced them for a while, but foon after they proposed the furrendring the City, and the Governour opposing them, was not only affronted, but wounded. To prevent their deferting him, he defigned to burn the Fleer, but before he could put it in execution, they surrender'd, Articling only for their Lives. In the Town was found an extraordinary Baia reca-Rich Booty, which the Spanish Soldiers made the most of. wered. The Merchandize found there was valued at above Three Millions, in Money 300000 Ducats, 2000 Quintals of Powder, each Quintal is an Hundred Weight, an infinite quantity of Ball, 230 Pieces of Cannon, 3000 Musquets, 800 Corslets, the same number of Saddles, 600 Blacks, 6000 Bushels of Meal, 50000 Hides, and 2000 Pipes of Wine. The two Squadrons returning home, suffered by Storms, some perished, the rest arrived in their Ports.

King Philip Remards the Portuguele.

6. King Philip most generously rewarded the Portuguese, who so signalized their Zeal upon this occasion, for his Council Advising, that he should grant to the Sons of those that were killed in his Service, all that they possessed belonging to the Crown, he not only confented to it, but afterwards, without being asked, he added more with his own Hand; That forasmuch as he was desirous such Subjects might live, he not only allowed that Favour to those that were killed, but to all that went in the Fleet. This same Year a Fleet of above 100 Sail of English assaulted the Island of Cadiz, whither many Portuguese Gentlemen, after providing for the Security of their own Coasts.

Cadiz af-Saulted by the English.

resorted, to express their Zeal for the King's Service. After some time, the Enemy was repulsed with loss, and retired, leaving many of their Men dead behind them. Before this Invasion of the English, the Famous Bell of Villilla in the Kingdom of Aragon, is said to have rung Two great out of it self. Portugal sustained two inestimable Losses, the one before the Passages we have spoke of happened, Portugal. the other after. The first was the taking the City Ormuz by the Persians, with the assistance of the English. The other, the Destruction of its Fleet, which being set out to Convoy the Ships from India, was wrecked on the Coast of France, where all the Ships, and most of the Men, among whom were many of Note, perished. Since the loss of King Sebastian in Africk, this Kingdom had not so great a Misfortune.

The Conclusion.

7. Here our Author, Emanuel de Faria, puts an end to his History. He composed the whole at Madrid, and being there at the time of the Revolution, durst not proceed any further, because as a Portuguese, he would not write any thing that should derogate from the Honour of his Country; and as being in the hands of the Spaniards, it was dangerous to fay any thing that might be offensive to them. He only adds an Account of the Children King Philip had till that time, and some short Remarks upon the Publick Affairs of the World, which make nothing to this History. Let us therefore put an end to this Part of the History, and proceed to the Supplement, wherein will be found all that was worth our Knowledge, from the Time where he leaves off, to our Davs.

The End of Emanuel de Faria y Soula his History of PORTUGAL. The The Supplement to Emanuel de Faria e Sousa bis Hifory of Portugal, from the Year 1640, where he left off, till this present time, collected from the best Authors that have written thereof, and from Authentick Information of Eye-Witnesses ..

Anno 1640.

HE Spaniards had now been near 60 Years 1640. possessed of the Kingdom of Portugal. Phi- The Canlip the Second of Spain, after the Death of dition of Henry the Cardinal-King, had carryed it against the Portugal House of Bragança by force of Arms, tho' with no good Title, and that Kingdom was insensibly become a Province of Spain, without any appearance that the Portioguese could ever be able to withdraw themselves from that Foreign Subjection. The Nobility of the Kingdom durst not appear in that Splendor which became their Quality, or claim all the Priviledges due to their Birth, for fear of raising a Jealousie in the Spanish Ministers, at a time when Riches, Birth, or Merit-were thought sufficient to render a Man suspicious, and cause him to be perfecuted. The Gentry were in a manner banished to their Country Houses, and the Commonalty groaned under the heavy Burthen of the Taxes. The Count Duke de Olivares, Prime Minister of State to Philip the Fourth of Spain, thought a new Conquest could never be too much weakned. He knew that the Natural Antipathy which was betwixt the two Nations could not but render the Sovereignty of the Spaniards odious to the Portuguese. That it must be ever offensive to them to see all Places of Trust filled by Strangers, or else by Men of no Extraction, who were wholly devoted to the Interest of Spain. Therefore the thought to secure his Masters Authority by keeping the Nobility out of Employ, the Gentry remote from Bufiness, and the Commonalty so poor, that they could not have the heart to aspire to any change. Besides, he drew out of the Kingdom all the Young Men that were fit to bear Arms, employing them in Foreign Wars, lest those turbulent Spirits should disturb the Peace of the Government. Yet this proceeding, which might have succeeded, if not pushed on too far, had a far different consequence than was expected. both by reason of the ill Circumstances the Court of Spain then lay under, as also because of the Prime Minister's Character, who was naturally morose and inflexible. No pleasing Methods were now used in raising of Taxes. but they were rather collected as if they had been Contributions gathered in an Enemy's Country. The Portuguese having now nothing more to lose, and as little to hope for, thought of casting off that Subjection, which they always believed unjust, and was now become insup-

Margaret Mantua, Gowerns

2. Margaret of Savoy, Dutchess of Mantua, governed of Savoy, Portugal with the Title of Vice-Queen, yet she bore only Dutchess of the Title circumscribed within a limited Power. The whole Intrigue of the Government, and all the Authority was in the Hands of Michael de Vasconcellos, a Por-Portugal. tuguese, who, under the Character of Secretary of. State, was the absolute Minister in the Kingdom. He received his Orders immediately from the Count Duke, whose Creature he was, and became most acceptable to him by finding Methods to draw great Sums of Money out of Portugal, and by fowing the Seeds of Sedition among the Nobility, favouring some, and depressing others, which raised implacable Enmity betwixt them. This Discord was the Minister's Security, he believing they could never Plot against the Government, who meditated how to exercise their Revenge upon one another.

Only the Duke of Braganza could give the Spaniards Jealoufie.

3. In all Portugal there was none but the Duke of Bragança who could give the Spaniards any Disturbance. That Prince was of a foft and agreeable Temper, much given to his Ease, his Judgment rather found than piercing; in Business he aimed at the main Point, and could eafily dive into fuch Matters as he applyed himself to, but loved not application. His Father, Duke Theodosius, who was of a fiery Temper, had laboured to ingraft in him his Natural Hatred to the Spaniards, that he might regard them as Usurpers of his Right, and had done all that in him was, to inspire into him Ambition and Resolution enough to attempt the Recovery of a Crown which was due to him. D. John had imbibed his Father's Sentiments, but that in such measure as was most most suitable to his Peaceable Temper. He hated the Spaniards, but not so as to seek Revenge with the Expence of his Quiet. He was ambitious, and did not defnair of ascending the Throne of his Ancestors, but was not so impatient as his Father had been. He thought it enough to keep within Prospect of his Hopes, without hazarding an easie Life, and more than Private Fortune in Possession, for a Crown that was very uncertain. Doubtless, had he been the Man Duke Theodosius would have had him, he could never have compassed what he aimed at. His Actions were so narrowly looked into by the Count Duke's Order, that if he had not been so entirely given up to his Ease and Pleasure, he must of necessity have been discovered; and if once discovered. his Repote and Fortune had both been facrificed. The Court of Spain would never have put such Power into his hands, and fuffered him to live in the midst of his Country. Nature made him more Politick than Art could have done. His Birth, Estate, and Right to the Crown, were no Crimes, but his being Formidable, was Crime enough, according to the Laws of true Policy. He was not ignorant of it, and found there was no way to wipe off that Guilt, but by rendring himself less to be feared, and appearing wholly devoted to his Pleafure. Nothing was to be feen at Villaviciosa, the ordinary Residence of the Dukes of Bragança, but Hunting, Feasting, and fuch-like Country Divertisements, as if Nature and Fortune had conspired to qualifie him for those Times. In short, such was his course of Life, as gave not the Spaniards the least Umbrage of his aspiring to the Crown, and yet it furnished the Portuguese with assured hopes of a wise and mild Government, if they themselves would attempt to Enthrone him.

4. His Conduct could breed no Suspicion, but an Ac- The People cident that happened some time before, in which he had of Evora no hand, had begun to raise a seasousie in the Prime Mi- Mutiny. nister. The People of Evora, provoked by certain new Taxes, had mutinied, and in the heat of that Fury, amidst their Complaints against the Tyranny of the Spaniard, some Acclamations had been heard for the House of Bragança. Here it first appeared how much Philip the Second erred in leaving within the Kingdom a Family so Powerful, and that had so good a Title to the Crown. Hereupon, the Council of Spain resolved to secure the Duke of Bragança, or at least, to remove him out of Portugal. Immediately the Government of Milan was offered him, which he refused, pleading want of Health, and Knowledge in the Affairs of Italy. The Prime Minister seemingly approved of his Reasons, but found out another Method to draw him to Court. The King being about to March to the Frontiers of Aragon, to punish the Rebellion of the Catalonians, he wrote to the Duke, exhorting him to be present in that Expedition at the Head of the Nobility of his Country. The The Duke of Duke, who was upon his Guard against all Artifices of Braganza the Court, answered, He was not in a Condition to derefuses to fray the Expence he must be at in that Expedition, to go into Ca- support the Grandeur of his Family. These repeated Denyals gave the Prime Minister ground to fear the Duke, notwithstanding his Natural Propension to Ease, had still some thoughts of a Crown. Considering therefore of what Importance it was to the King his Master, to secure his Person, he omitted nothing that might conduce to the compassing his Design. But it being dangerous to use Force, because of the great Affection the Portuguese always bore to the House of Bragança, he resolved to bring him to his beck by all imaginable exterior marks of Affection, and of an entire Confidence in him. 5. There was War at that time betwixt France and Spain, and the French Fleet having appeared on the Coast of Portugal, furnished the Prime Minister with a fair Pretence for carrying on his Designs. It was requisite there should be a General to Command the Forces that were to Guard the Coast. This Commission was sent to the Duke with fuch an Absolute Power, as seemed to put the whole Kingdom into his hands: Yet this ferved only the better to hide the Bait. For at the fame time, D. Lope de Ossorio, Admiral of the Spanish Fleet, had Orders to put into the nearest-Port to the Duke, as if he were drove in by stress of Weather, or on some other Pretence, and having drawn him aboard, as to an Entertainment, to carry him away to Spain. But Fortune ordered it otherwise, for the Spanish Admiral lost several Ships in a Storm, and the rest being dispersed, he could not gain the Coast of Portugal. This no way discouraged the Count Duke, who looked upon the Disappointment as meerly accidental, and therefore he laid his Project another away, writing to D. John in such terms, as expressed expressed the greatest Confidence, lamenting the loss of the Fleet, which left the Coast open to be insulted by the Enemy, and advising him to visit and strengthen those Places that were most exposed. At the same time he fent him 40,000 Ducats to raife new Forces, if requifite, and to defray the Charge of his Progress. In the mean while, the Governours of all Strong Holds being for the most part Spaniards, had private Instructions to secure him, if a favourable Opportunity were offered, and fend him into Spain. D. John suspecting these extraordinary marks of Kindness, made the Minister fall into the Snare he had laid for him. Tho' he returned Thanks for the Trust reposed in him, and gave special Assurances of Fidelity; yet he made use of this Opportunity to prefer his Friends to fuch Poits as might be most for his mun Interest. He made use of the Money to Purchase new Creatures, and always visited the Forts so well attended, that there was no hopes of feizing his Person.

The Duke made General.

6. All the Court of Spain, being ignorant of the De- The Dake fign it was grounded upon, loudly exclaimed against the in his Pro-Prime Minister for putting such Power into the hands gress lays of a Person so suspitious; the King liked the Project the Foun-the better, because no Body could dive to the bottom of dation of it. Thus the Duke of Bragança, under colour of exe- his future cuting his Employment, freely traversed all Portugal, Greatness. laying at the same time the Foundation of his future Greatness. He had a Magnificent Retinue, which drew the Eyes of the People after him; he heard all Men with extraordinary Courtesie; he cyrbed the Insolency of the Soldiers, and at the same time commended the Officers, and used all possible means to oblige them. His Behaviour charmed the Nobility, for he received them with obliging marks of Distinction, according to every Man's Merit and Quality. To be short, he bestowed Favours where-ever he came, and yet gained more Friends upon the hopes of what they might promife themselves from him, than what at present they received. So that those who faw him, thought they prayed for their own Interest, when they offered up their Vows for his exaltation to the Throne. His Partisans did not neglect at the same time to do all things that might be for the establishing of his Reputation. John Pinto Ribeiro, the Comptroller of his Houshold, was the Man that laboured most to reduce to an exact Niethod the hopes of his Master's Exaltation, which were yet but in Prospect. This was a vigilant active Man, expert in Business, and pallionately zealous for his Master's Promotion, as hoping to have no small hand in the Government, if the Dake afcended the Throne. His Malter had owned to him, that he would willingly embrace a fair Opportunity of feizing the Crown, but would not do it like one who had norhing to lofe; that therefore he gave him leave to manage that Affair, yet so, as it should never appear that he was any ways concerned.

Maller a

7. Pinto had long applyed himfelf to discover what Duke's A discontented Persons there were at Lisbon, and to increase gent, Con- their number. He spread Complaints against the prefpires with tent Government. . He put the Nobility in mind of the form of the Honourable Employments their Families enjoyed under their Natural Princes, and represented their being summoned to the War in Catalonia, as an Honourable Banishment. Among the Merchants and Shop keepers he complained of the loss of their Trade, discoursed of the Tyranny they lay under, and extolled the Dutch and Catalonians, who had afferted their Liberties. The Clergy he stirred up, by shewing how the Priviledges of the Church were infringed, and enefices given to Strangers, which cught to be the Reward of Merit and Learning among the Natives. Such as he knew to be Malecontents, he discoursed about his Master's Qualities, to found their Inclinations. So cunningly did he manage their feveral Humours, that after having secured many in private, he at last gathered a Number of the Nobility, and among them was the Archbishop of Lisbon. This Prelate was of the Family of the Canhas, which is one of the best in the Kingdom; a Man of Farts, beloved by the People, but hateful to the Spaniards, for whom he had no less aversion, because they had, through the Interest of the Vice-Queen, given the Archbishoprick of Braya to D. Sebastian de Matos de Noronha, and made him Prefident of the Council, called dO Paco. The rest that made up this Assembly, were D. Michael de Almeida, so great an Enemy to the Spaniards, that he could never be perswaded to appear at Court, D. Antony de Almada, and his Son D. Lewis, D. Lewis da Cunha, Nephew to the Archbifliop, Alelo, the great Malter of the Game, D. George his Brother, Peter de Mendoza, D. Roderich de Saa the Great Chamberlain, and many Officers of the Houshold, whose Employments were become only Titular, fince Portugal had lott its Native Kings. To thefe, the Archbishop, who was naturally a well-spoken Man, made a Speech, representing the state of the Kingdom, fince it fell into the hands of the Span ards, in its most hideous form. He shewed them, how Philip the Second, to secure his Conquest, had put to Dearh many of the Nobility, not sparing even the Clergy, having to that effect obtained a Bull from the Pope. How the Spaniards had ever fince followed the same Maxims of Government. That no Man's Life or Estate was safe. That the Nobility was slighted, Benefices given to unworthy Persons, the People confumed with Taxes, the Country lav waste, and Towns defart, the Men being carryed away by force to the War in Catalonia. That the last Orders from Court for Summoning the Arrier-Ban, served only to draw away all the Nobility, that they might end their days in Exile, whilst their Estates were given away to Strangers. In fine, that he would rather wish to die, than survive the utter Ruin of his Country, and hoped so many Worthy Persons were not met there to no purpose.

WIJOR

8. This Discourse renewed the Memory of every man's The Confident private Grievances, but above all, they referred the Sum- rators inmons for Catalonia, as defigned for their utter Ruin. cenfed, re-These Considerations, and the desire of Revenge, made Johnson put them resolve to take the necessary Measures for shaking their Deoff so heavy a Yoke. They blamed themselves for ha-figns in ving suffered patiently to long, and concluded it was execution. absolutely necessary to expel the Spaniards, but were divided upon what Form of Government to choose. Some were for a Commonwealth, like that of Holland. The others were for a King, but differed about the Perfon; some proposing the Duke of Prigues, others the Marquess of Villareal, and others the Duke of Accies, all three Princes of the Blood-Royal of Portneys; every Man speaking according to his private Affection, or prospect of Advantage. The Archbishop, who was entirely devoted to the House or Bragenga, making use of the Authority of his Character, declared to them, that the choice of a Governour was not Arbitrary, fince they could not in Conscience break the Oath of Fidelity they had taken to Spain, unless it were to enthrone the Rightful Heir to the Crown, which was the Duke of Braganga.

Qo ₃

Belides

Besides that, his Power and Interest was such, that without him, they could hope for no Success, tho' he were not, as indeed he was, the first Prince of the Blood. Then he descanted upon the Duke's good Qualities, and so managed the Assembly, that they all resolved to make him their King, and that every Man should use the utmost of his Endeavours for carrying on that Design. Thus the Assembly broke up, having first fixed the Time and Place for another Meeting, wherein they should take the necessary Measures to secure a speedy and happy Success to their Enterprize. Pinto seeing all well disposed in favour of his Master, writ privately to him, to draw near to Lisbon, as well to encourage the Conspirators by his Presence, as to take Order with them about putting the Design in execution. Upon this Advice, the Duke some days after set forward from Villaviciosa, and came to Almada, a Village opposite to Lisbon, on the other fide the River, as if he had fallen in there accidentally in his Progress through the Kingdom. He had so splendid an Equipage, and was followed by fuch a Numerous Train of Perions of Quality and Officers, that he looked more like a King going to take Possession of his Crown, than a General that was visiting the Posts under his Charge. Being so near Lisbon, he could not omit paying The Duke his Respects to the Vice-Queen. When he entred the Vice-Queen Great Court before the Palace, all the Avenues were thronged with People flocking to fee him, and all the Nobility came to Conduct him before the Vice-Queen. Such was the Joy throughout the City at the first fight of him, that he seemed either to want only a Herald to Proclaim him King then, or else courage to seize the Crown. But he was too wife, to commit his Fortune to the wild Sallies of the giddy Multitude; and therefore having vifited the Vice-Queen, he inflantly retired to Almada, without so much as entring the House of Bragança, for fear of heightning the Jealousie of the Spaniards, who were already too much alarmed. 9. Pinto having made the Conspirators observe his

9. Pinto having made the Conspirators observe his Master's fearful Cautiousness, said, they must make their The Conspirators De- Advantage of his stay at Almada, and use a fort of Viorators De- lence to oblige him to accept of the Crown. His Advice being approved of, they gave him in charge to know of the Duke his Master, when they might wait upon him with their at Almada Proposals; which he did, upon Condition only three of the Conspirators should come to him. Michael de Almeida, Antony de Almada, and Mendoza, were accordingly privately conducted into the Duke's Closet at Almada. Antony de Almada represented to him the miserable state of the Kingdom, the little Security any Man had of his Life or Estate, and that even he himself had no other Refuge to fly to but the Crown. He shewed him the low Condition the Spaniards were reduced to, the Affistance he might expect from Foreign Princes who were Enemies to the House of Austria, and particularly from France, the Conveniency of the Sea for bringing of Succours; and lastly, the small Number of Spaniards that were left in Portugal, the Garrisons being drained to supply the Army in Catalonia. This Discourse was pleasing enough to the Duke, yet nevertheless keeping himfelf within the Bounds of his Natural Timidity, he answered so as they might not have cause to despair of him, nor to hope much more than they did before; telling them, He was sensible of the deplorable Condition of the Kingdom, and of his own Danger; that he commended their Zeal for their Country, and was beholding to them for their good Wishes towards him; but that it was not as yet time to think of applying such violent Remedies, which might prove of Fatal Confequence. To this dubious Answer, he added such Caresses and particular Thanks, that they could no longer doubt but that their Proposals were acceptable, and yet they found he would make no advances till the Success of their Enterprize was past all danger. After some private Conference with Pinto, he returned to Villaviciosa, but not with that inward quiet which he used to enjoy as a private Man, and therefore immediately communicated the whole Affair to the Dutchess. This Lady was by Birth a Spaniard, and Sister to the Duke of Medina Sidonia, a Grandee of Spain, and Governour of Andaluzia. She was naturally ambitious, and her Father had endeayoured to improve that Inclination in her. Besides her Knowledge in other Languages, she was so perfect in her own, and had tuch an infinuating way, that she drew all mens hearts. All the Customs of Portugal she had made Natural to her felf, and had by her extraordinary Application and Carriage gained an absolute Ascendant over her Husband, who never undertook any thing of moment without her Advice, and therefore could not proceed proceed farther in this Affair without consulting her. To her he revealed the whole Conspiracy, the Parties concerned, their Zeal in carrying it on, and all that had happened to him at Lisbon, and at Almada in the Conference. He told her how much the Nobility were offended at the Expedition against Catalonia. That nevertheleis, the greatness of the Danger discouraged him, as did the fear that the Great Ones, out of Envy, would oppose him; that the Power of the King of Spain was • formidable, and little Confidence to be reposed in Foreign Princes. These Considerations weighed more with the Duke, than the defire he had of a Crown. But the Dutchess, whose And ion was more rooted, presently embraced the hop of a Crown, and used all the Arguments her Rhotorick could furnish her with to perswade him, yet 10, as that Le should see a greater Number of Conspirators engage, and never openly espouse the Cause, till the moment it should be put in execution. 10. The Court at this time was not free from Care, Minifier of The extraordinary Joy the People express'd at Lisbon, at the fight of the Duke, alarmed the Prime Minister. He Spain refolives to suspected there were Private Cabals held at Lisbon, and draw the certain groundless Reports, which are commonly the, Duke out of fore-runners of great Revolutions, increased his Jealousie. Portugal. Several Councils were held hereupon, and it was finally resolved to call the Duke of Braganga to Madrid, that so the Portuguese, wanting a Head, might have no hopes left of succeeding in their intended Revolt. On the 20th. of October, 1640. the Count Duke de Olivares sent 1640. an Express to the Duke of Bragança, to acquaint him, the King expected him at Court, to be informed by him of the Posture of Affairs in Portugal, assuring him he should receive all marks of Honour that were due to his Birth and Quality. This Positive Command strangly turprized him, as knowing, should be refuse to Obey, the next Orders would be, for carrying him away by force; and thinking he was betrayed, concluded himfelf The Duke's fallen into the depth of all Misfortunes. Nevertheless, of his Danger, by the Advice of his Dutchess, he sent a Gentleman to Madrid, to assure the Prime Minister of his Resolution to appear suddenly before the King. This Gentleman had private Instructions to find some counterfeit Excuses for his delay from time to time. Being Arts in re- that he might gain time, and advertise the Conspirators fusing.

coing

The History of PORTUGAL.

come to Madrid, he affured the King that his Mafter followed him. He hired a great House, bought Rich Furniture, hired Servants, and lay'd out much Money, as if he daily expected his Master. Soon after, he pretended he had received Advice, that his Master was sick; and finding this Fraud would not last long, presented a Memorial to the Prime Minister, desiring that the King would ascertain in what manner his Master should be received at Court. This was done, in hopes that the Grandees opposing him, the Dispute might be held on foot some considerable time. But the Count Duke, to avoid all delays, perfwaded the King to decide the Controversie in favour of the Duke of Bragança; so that he could prolonger doubt of as Honourable a Reception as he could himfelf defire.

11. As soon as the Conspirators understood what Orders the Duke had received from Court, they fent Mendoza to affure him of their stedfastness, and to perswade him openly to joyn with them. They met a Hunting, and being withdrawn into a Wood, Mendoza made ule of the most prening Arguments to engage him to espoule his own Quarrel. The Duke answered, He approved of their Proceedings, and was fully resolved to Head them. Mendoza returning to Lisbon, informed the Conspirators how he had feed, and that the Duke would have Pinto repair to him. He was fent, and with him the whole Scheme of their intended Proceedings. Pinto acquainted his Matter, how great a Mitunderstanding there was betwixthe Vice-Queen and the Secretary Vasconcellos, and withil told him, nothing could have fallen our more advantageously for advancing his Affairs. The Duke, who was fully convinced of the force of his Reafons, found himfelt more preffed forward by the Gentleman he had fent to Alabid, for he writ, that the Prime Minifter would admit of no longer delays. This made him refolve to lose no time. However, he writ to that Gentleman, that he should acquaint the Count Duke de Olivares, that he would have been at Albirid long fince, but for want of Money to support his Dignity, which as foon as it could be raifed, he would fer our towards the Court. The Duke carryed Pinto to the Dutchels's Apartment, where feveral Methods were propoled about the Execution of their Defign. At length the Duke concluded that Lisbur should be secured, for that being the Capital City, would shake the whole Kingdom, and that the same day it was done, he would cause himself to be proclaimed King in all the Towns that depended on him. That fuch of his Friends as were Governours of Towns should do the like where they commanded; and that the People should be made to rise, even in the Villages that were subject to any of the Conspirators; to the end that the Conslagration being general throughout the Kingdom, those few Spaniards that were in it might not know which part to have recourse to first. That he would march his own Regiment into Elvas, the Governour of which Place was wholly at his Devotion. That as to the securing of Lisbon, he must leave it to them to Act as Opportunity should offer. Nevertheleis, his Advice was, that their first I thould be made against the Palace, that having seized the Vice-Queen, and all the Spaniards, they might ferve as Hostages to oblige the Citadel to Surrender, which might otherwise incommode the City. He gave Pinto two Letters of Credence, directed to Almeida and Mendoza, only requiring them to give entire Credit to the Bearer, and to be faithful and couragious in putting what they had promised in execution.

rators contrive how so incense the Citizens of Lisbon against the Spaniards.

392

12. Being come to Lisbon, Pinto delivered his Credentials to Almeida and Mendoza. Then they fent for Lemos and The Conspi- Correa, two Citizens of the Duke's Faction, who employing many Workmen, and having gone through all the Offices of the City, were in great Reputation among the People. They had before made it their business to incense the Citizens against the Spaniards, by spreading Reports of new Taxes to be raifed, and had defignedly discharged many of their Workmen, pretending that the Trade being lost, they had no Business for them; but in truth, that Want might make them the readier to rife, and yet from time to time they relieved them, that they might be entirely at their Devotion. Besides, they held Intelligence with the chief Men of every Quarter, to that they affured the Conspirators, that having but one day's Warning, they could raise the greatest part of the People at an hour appointed. Having made fure of the Tradesmen, Pinto admonished the other Conspirators to be ready upon the first Notice given them, and to secure as many Friends as they could, as it were upon some Private Design, without entrusting them with the Secret.

All things being disposed as they could desire, Almeida, Mendeza, Almada, Melo, and Pinto met, and fixed Saturday, the first of December, for putting their Enterprize in execution. Advice was immediately fent to the Duke, that he might the same day cause himself to be proclaimed King throughout the Province of Alentejo, which for the most part held of him; and it was agreed, they should have one Meeting more, to fix their ultimate Resolutions. On the 25th. of November they met at Night, as had been agreed, in the Palace of Bragança. They found they could make up near 150 Gentlemen, most of them Chiefs of Families, with all their Servants, and about 200 Citizens and Tradesmen, who by their Reputation could eafily draw the greatest part of the People after them. It was resolved Vasconcellos should fall a Victim to the Resentments of Portugal. Some there were who proposed that the Archbishop of Braga should undergo the same Fate, as being a great Friend to the Spaniards, and Formidable for his great Parts. But D. Michael de Almeida opposed it, representing how odious the Murder of a Person of such Dignity would render them to the whole World, and that it would draw the Indignation of all the Clergy upon the Duke of Bragança. Nothing remained now but to order the manner of their Rendevouz, and giving the Attack. It was agreed, that they should divide themselves into four Bodies, which at one and the same time should rush into the Palace. that having possessed all the Avenues, the Spaniards might be kept asunder, and so disabled from relieving one another. That D. Michael de Almeida should Attack the German Guard at the Palace Gate. Melo, the Great Master of the Game, his Brother, and D. Stephen da Cunha, at the Head of the Citizens, were to Attack a Company of Spaniards that mounted daily at a Place, called The Fort, Tello de Meneses, Emanuel de Saa, the Great Chamberlain, and Pinto, were to secure the Apartment of Vasconcellos, and to make him away immediately. D. Antony de Almada, Mendoza, D. Charles de Noronha, and Antony de Saldanha had it in Charge to seize the Vice-Queen, and all the Spaniards that were in the Palace. to be kept as Hostages, in case of need. That whilst they were bulie in making themselves Masters of their several Posts, some Horsemen should be detached to Proclaim John, Duke of Bragança, King of Portugal, about the City. That having gathered the Multitude into the Streets, they might make use of them as there should be occasion. The Asfembly broke up, having agreed to meet on Saturday the first of December, some at Almeida's House, and others at those of Almada and Mendeza, where the Conspirators were to Arm themselves.

The Duke

preffes the

frirszy.

13. Whilst the Duke of Bragança and his Friends thus pursued their Ends, the Prime Minister, alarmed at his De. lays, fent away an Express to him, with positive Orders for him to come away instantly; and that he might have no Excuse, sent him a Bill upon the Treasury for 10000 Ducats. This Command admitted of no Demurs, and therefore in the presence of the Gentleman that brought the Ex. press, he gave Orders for his Family to set forwards towards Madrid, and dispatched a Gentleman to the Vice-Queen, to acquaint her with his Departure. He writ to the Prime Minister, assuring him, he would be at Court within Eight Days, and at the same time acquainted the Conspirators with what had happened, shewing them the absolute necessity there was of executing their Deligns on the day appointed. of the Con- Nor were the Conspirators backward; but some odd Accidents had like to have put off the Execution, if not broke all their Measures. Almada revealed the whole Design to a Man of Quality, that used always to rail violently against the Spaniards, but finding him timorous, with his drawn Sword made him swear Fidelity. Nevertheless, suspecting the Man, he kept his Eye upon him, and acquainting his Associates with his Jealousie, they resolved to delay their Enterprize; yet the next day perceiving all was quiet, they were ashamed to have been so easily terrified, and persisted in their first Refolution. Another thing fell out, which cast a great Damp on them; for on the Eve of the Day appointed to rife, Vafconcellos the Secretary was feen to cross the River, which they imagined he did upon some Intimation of the Design, and that he went to bring over some Forces from the other side; but he returning at Night, having only been at an Entertainment, all was calm again. It was late before the Conspirators parted. George de Melo, who lodged at a Kinsman's House out of the Town, thought he would take it ill, that he had not been acquainted with the Defign, and therefore at his return home, gave him a full Account of the whole Matter. The other, tho' furprized, seemed to rejoyce at it, and thanked Melo for repoling fuch Confidence in him. They parted, and Melo being in his Chamber, began to blame bimtelf for his rashness, in trusting a Man he was not well offured of. Walking in his Room full of these troubled Thoughts, he heard some noise, and looking cut of his Window, could perceive his Kinfman ready to take Horfe. He ran down in a rage with his Sword in his hand, and by force made him return to his Chamber, then taking the Keys of the House, secured him till the next day, at which time the other > fpirators. 44. At length the Day came which was to decide whether > complyed, and resolved to joyn with the rest of the Con-the Duke of Bragança should deserve the Title of King, and The Conspi-Deliverer of his Country, or be called Rebel, and Enemy to rators meet the State. The Conspirators met early at the Houses of Al- and execute meida and the other great Men, where they were to Arm their Dethemselves. In all their Countenances appeared such Consi- sign. dence, as gave affured hope of Victory; but what is most Remarkable, is, that among fo many Perfons as were concerned, and some of them Women, none should fail of their Word, or betray their Trust. All being armed, they repaired to the Palace by several ways, and most of them in Litters, the better to conceal their Number and Arms. They were divided into four Bodies, as had been agreed, and expected the Clock should strike Eight, which was the moment appointed to fall on. As foon as the Clock struck, Pinto gave the Signal agreed upon, by firing a Pistol, and then all Parties fell to their Work. D. Michael de Almeida fell upon the German Guard, which being surprized, for the most part unarmed, was overcome without much strugling. The Great Master of the Game, his Brother, and D. Stephen da Cunha charged the Spanish Company before the Palace, at the Place, called The Fort. Most of the Townsmen, who knew of the Design, were in this Action, and boldly fell in with Sword in Hand upon the Court of Guard. None fignalized himfelf more than a Priest, who carrying a Crucifix in one hand, and a Sword in the other, amidst his loud Exhortations ceased not to A& beyond the most desperate of the Conspirators. None could stand before him; fo that after fome small Resistance, the Spanish Officer and his Soldiers were forced to Surrender themselves, and for fafety of their Lives, to cry out with the rest, God fave the Duke of Bragança, King of Portugal. Pinto having made his way into the Palace, headed those that were to Attack Vasconcellos his Apartment. At the foot of the Stairs they met Francis Soarez de Albergaria, Judge of the Civil Caufes, who feeing this Tumult, would have interpoted his Authority to appeale them; but hearing all cry. God fave the Duke of Bragança, he thinking it the Duty of his Office, cty'd. God fave the King of Spain and Portugal. This cost him his Life, for one of the Conspirators shot him with a Pissol thinking it meritorious to punish that Fidelity which now became Criminal. Antony Correa, first Clerk to the Secretary, ran out upon the noise, and was stabb'd by D. Antony de Menefes, yet ye turned up his Eyes full of Revenge, and faid, What! dare you firike me? All the Answer Menefes returned, was to flab him three or four times again, till he fell, yet he furvived all these Wounds, to die some time after by the hand of the Hangmank, Being quit of this Obstacle, the Consparators pressed forward towards the Secretary's Chamber. James Correst Balcis, a Captein of Foot, was then with him, who

The Vice-

others

Seized.

feeing fo many armed Men, and supposing they sought the Life of Vasconcolles, the he owed no Obligation to that Mi. nister, yet out of meer Generosity he endeavoured to keep the Door with his Sword, till the Secretary could make his escape: but being wounded in his Right Arm, so that he could not hold his Sword, and over-powered by the Multitude, he leaped out at a Window, and had the good Fortune to escape. Immediately the Conspirators broke into the Chamber, and not finding the Secretary, tho' they fearched all corners, they threatned an Old Woman-Servant with present Death, if she did not discover him; and she, to save her Life. pointed to the Place where he was, being a close Cupboard or Closer, taken out of the thickness of the Wall, where they found him covered with Papers. Fear prevented his uttering one word, and D. Roderick de Sas gave him the first Wound. firing a Pistol at him; after which, several of the Conspirators having struck him, they cast the Body out at the Window, crying, The Tyrant is dead, let Liberty live, and D. John.

King of Portugal.

15. The Multitude, who had flocked to the Palace, gave great shouts of Joy, seeing the Body cast down, and falling upon it, every one endeavoured to have a stroke at it. Such was the end of Vasconcellos, a Man of great Parts, and indefatigable, who had gathered vast Riches, part whereof was plundered in this hurly-burly. Pinto losing no time, hasted to joyn the Party that was to seize the Vice-Queen, and found Queen and they and all the rest were already successful. Those who were to enter that Princess's Apartment being come to the Door, and the enraged Multitude crying out, they would fet fire to it, if not opened quickly, the Vice-Queen with her Ladies, and the Archbishop of Braga, appeared in her Chamber, believing her Presence would appeare the Nobility, and cause the Commonalty to retire. Whereupon advancing some steps towards the chief of the Conspirators, she said, I confefs, Gentlemen, that the Secretary has justly incurred the hatred of the People, and your Indignation, by his Austerity and infoliant manner of proceeding. His Death is a sufficient Revenge. Believe that what has hitherto passed, may be attributed to the hatred conceived against the Secretary, but if you proceed in this Uproar, you cannot avoid being reputed Rebels, and you will deprive me of means of excusing you to the King. D. Antony de Menefes answered, That so many Persons of Worth were not met only to punish a Wretch, who ought to have died by the Hinds of the Hangman; that they came to do Right to the Duke of Braganza, to whom the Crown of Right appertained. She would have replyed, but Almeida fearing the Conspirators might cool, said, Portugal had no King but the Duke of Braganza; and then all the Conspirators cryed out,

God fave D. John, King of Ports The Vice-Queen feeing them past reclaiming, thought to find more Respect in the City, but as the offered to go down, D. Charles de Noronha prayed her to retire to her Chamber, and not expose her self to the fury of the incenfed People. In a Rage, finding her felf forcibly detained, she cryed out, Why, what can the People do to me? To which Noronha rudely answered, Nothing, Madam, but throw your Highness out at the Window. The Archbishop of Braga, enraged at what Norenha said, fnatched a Sword from a Soldier, and offered to run upon the Conspirators in Vindication of the Vice-Queen; but D. Michael de Almeida laid hold of and told him the danger of provoking those, who, but for him, had decreed his Death. This made him curb his Passion, in hopes of a more favourable Opportunity of Revenging himself upon Noronha. The rest of the Conspirators seized the Spaniards that were in the Palace, or City. The Marquess de la Puebla Steward to the Vice Queen, D. James Cardenas, Major-General; D. Ferdinand de Castro, Intendant of the Sea, the Marquess de Bainetto, an Italian, Master of the Horse to the Vice-Queen, and several Sea-Officers, were made Prisoners; which was done with as great ease, as if they had been apprehended by Order of the King of Spain. No Man stirred to defend them, and they were in no condition to do it, being most of them taken in Bed.

The History of PORTUGAL.

16. This done, Antony de Saldanha led the People to the Courts of Judicature, where he made an Harangue to them upon the present Happiness of Portugal, in being delivered from Tyranny, and restored to their Natural Prince. His words were received with general Applause, and all Proceed- All Proings for the future ordered to run in the Name of D. John, ceedings King of Portugal. In the mean while, D. Gaston Coutinho ro. ordered to leased all those out of Prison, who had been committed run in the through the Severity of the Spanish Ministers; and they thus Name of unexpectedly delivered, formed themselves into a Body, no D. John, less Formidable than that of the first Conspirators. Amidst King of this general Joy, Pinto and the other Principal Men were Portugal. not free from Care. The Spaniards were still possessed of the Chadel, whence they might Canonade the City, and whilff it held out, the King of Spain had always an inlet at Command. Therefore thinking they had done nothing, till they were Masters of that Place, they went to the Vice-Queen, demanding of her an Order for the Governour to The Citadel deliver it up to them. She rejected them with scorn; but taken from Almada swearing, if she persisted, he would instantly Mur- the Spader all the Spaniards that were taken; For fear of Sacrifi- niards. cing so many Persons of Quality, she signed the Order, believing the Governour knew his Duty too well, to obey an Order, he could not but be convinced, was extorted from her. It fell not out as expected, for the Spanish Governour, D. Lewis del Campo, a Man of no Resolution, seeing all the Conspirators in Arms before the Citadel, vowing they would put the Garrison to the Sword, unless they instantly surrendred, was glad to depart with so good a Pretence to hide his Cowardize. The Citadel being furrendred, and the Conspirators now secure on all sides, they immediately dispatched Mendoza, and the Great Master of the Game to carry the Happy News to the Duke of Braganza, and affure him there wanted nothing to compleat the People's Happiness but the Presence of their King. Yet was not his Presence equally defired by all Men. The Nobility looked upon his Exaltation with an envious Eye; The Gentry, who had no hand in the Conspiracy, stood dubious. Some faid, they knew not whether he would justifie those proceedings. The Creatures of Spain were in a Consternation, and only took care to fave themselves from the Fury of the Multitude. The Duke's Friends, knowing his Intention, profecuted their Bufiness. They met at the Palace to fettle Affairs till the Arrival of the King, and unanimously chose the Archbishop of Lisbon President of the Council, and Lieutenant of the Kingdom. He refused at first, saying, there was more need of a General, than a Person of his Character, but soon complyed, upon Condition, the Archbishop of Braga should be joyned in Commission with him. This subtil Prelate's Design was, to make the other as guilty, in respect of the Spaniards, as himfelf, if he accepted; or if he refused, to render him odious to the new King and People. He of Braga perceived the Snare, but being wholly devoted to the Spaniards, positively refused to have any share in the Government. Thus the whole Power fell into the Hands of the Archbishop of Lubon. D. Michael de Almeida, Peter de Mendoza, and D. Antony de Almada, were appointed his Counfellors.

The History of PORTUGAL.

ons seized River of

in the Lisbon.

17. The Governour's first care was to make himself Manish Gale- ster of three great Spanish Galeons that were in the Port. Several Barks were fitted out, and manned with the choice Youth of the City, each endeavouring to fignalize himself, but they met with no Opposition, the Officers, and most of the Soldiers having been secured ashore, at such time as the Conspiracy took effect. Expresses were sent the same Evening to all the Provinces to excite the People to give Thanks to Heaven for the Recovery of their Liberty, and Commanding all Magistrates to cause the Duke of Braganza to be proclaimed King, and to fecure all the Spaniards. The next care was to dispose all things for the Reception of the new King. The Archbishop acquainted the Vice-Queen she must withdraw, to make room for the King and his Family. He Gauled.

The History of PORTUGAL.

caused an Apartment to be furnished for her in the Roval Mansion-House of Xabregas, which is in the Suburbs. The Vice Queen, upon the first Order, lest the Palace. but with a Countenance full of Indignation, and without fpeaking one Word. Only a few of her own Servants. and the Archbishop of Braga, though with the hazard of his Life, attended her. Still the Duke of Braganza was in suspense, not knowing how Affairs had succeeded at Lisbon. till Melo and Mendoza arriv'd at Villaviciofs. By the joy of their Countenances, and their casting themselves at his Feet, more then by their Words, he understood he was King of Partugal. He conducted them to the Dutchess, to relate what had happened, and they gave her the Title of Majesty; whereas the former Kings and Queens of Portugal had only the Stile of Highness given them. That same Day D. John The Duke was proclaimed King in all the Towns that depended of him. proclaimed Alfonso de Melo did the same at Elwas. The new King set King in the forward for Lisbon with the same Equipage he had provided Towns of to go to the Court of Spain He was attended by the Marquess his Depende Ferreira his Kinsinan, the Count de Vimioso, and many dance. other Persons of Quality. The Queen was left at Villaviciola to confirm that Province in its Obedience, by her Prefence. All the ways as he went were thronged with People, that ran to fee him. pouring Bleffings on him, and Curfes on the Spaniards. All the Nobility, Officers of the Crown, and principal Magistrates went out to receive him far from Lisbon, where he made his Entry amidst the joyful Acclamations of the Multitude, on the 6th. of December. All that Night the City was enlightned with Bonfires and Illuminations, which gave occasion to a Spaniard to say. That he was a happy Prince, fince all that Kingdom had cost him but one Bonfire.

18. The whole Kingdom followed the Example of Lisbon, The whole, as if there had been a particular Conspiracy in every Town. Kingdom Expresses arriv'd at Court daily, bringing the King Advice, follows the of Towns, and whole Provinces that had expelled the spar Example of minrde, and full mitted themselves to him. The Governours Lisbon. of other strong Places had no more Courage than he of Lisbon, most of them shamefully marching away without so much as firing a Musket. Thus within Fifteen Days the Spaniards were drove out of all the Kingdom of Portugal, Fort St. In-Only D. Firdinand de la Cueva, Governous of the Coffle of Jian, ar ile St. Julian, at the Mouth of the River Tagur, appeared refolarely fee down to keep that Fortress for the King his Mafter. The Garrison confisted only of Spaniards, comman- the River, ded by brave Oilicers, who made a vigorous Resistance at the taken. first Approaches of the Parsuguele. There was no remedy but to beliege the Place in form. Heavy Cannon was brought from Lisbon, the Trenches opened, and carried on to the Counterfearp, notwithstanding the continual Fire, and frequent Sallies of the besieged. But Treaty being the surest. and often the shortest way, the King made such Advantagious Proposals to the Governour as he had not the Power to withstand. The great Summs the King offered him, together with a Commendary of the Order of Christ, prevailed with him. The Treaty was concluded, and the Fortress surrendred, upon pretence he had not a sufficient Garrison to defend it, notwithstanding the principal Officers refused to fign the Capitulation, and principally D. Roderick Chalon, a young Gentleman of Andaluzia, of great Courage, and Colonel of a Regiment, who offered to hold out three Weeks longer to expect the Succours from Spain, which they heard to be at Sea, under the Conduct of the Duke of Maqueda. The King thought it not fit longer to delay his Coronation, that his Royal Authority might become the more Sacred, and his Person more respected among the People. This Ceremony was performed on the 15th. of December, with all possible Magnificence. The Duke of Aveire, the Marquess of Villareal, the Duke de Caminha his Son, the Count de Monsanto, and all the Nobility of the Kingdom affisted at the Ceremony. The Archbishop of Lisbon, at the head of his Clergy, and attended by feveral other Bishops, received the King at the Gate of the Cathedral, and there all the Three Estates took the Oath of Fidelity to him. A few Days after the Queen came to Lisben, having been received at a distance by the whole

Anno. 1641.

How the S⊋ain.

Court, and the King himself. 19. The News of this Revolution being foon carried to News of his the Court of Spain, struck to the Heart of the Prime-Minirevolt-was ster; yet making the best of that Disaster, he accossed the received in King with a Countenance chearful, and full of Assurance, faying, Sir, I bring you happy News, your Majesty has just now gained a great Dutchy, and a considerable parcel of Lands. The King, in a furprize, asked in what manner. Sir, replied the Minister, the Duke of Braganza is run mad, be has suffered himself to be deluded by the Multitude, who have proclaimed him King of Portugal, now all his Lands are forfeited to the Crown. and that Family being extirpated, your Majesty will, for the future, possess that Kingdom in Peace. The King was not much taken with these plausible Words, and only told him, That Care must be taken to suppress a Rebellion that might prove of dangerous Consequence.

1. THE new King of Portugal omitted nothing that might conduce to his Establishment on the Throne. . After his Arrival at Lisbon, he presently appointed Gover- New Gonours for all the Frontier Towns, choosing for that pur-vernours pose Men of Fidelity, Valour and Experience, who im-placed in mediately went away to their Posts with what Forces the Frenthey could gather, and used all possible diligence to put tiers. the places committed to them into a posture of defence. Commissions were given out to raise Forces, and immediately after the Coronation, the Cortes or Parliament was Summon'd: They met the 28th of Fanuary, and by a folemn Act acknowledg'd King John to be their lawful and rightful Soveraign, as descended by the Princess his Mother from Prince Edward, Son to King Emanuel. In this Affembly of the three Estates, the King declared, that for the support of his Houshold, he would content himself with his own private Revenue, and would lay apart all those of the Crown to supply the necefficies of the Kingdom, and that the people might relish the sweetness of his Government, he abolished all new Taxes imposed by the Spaniards. The most considerable employments he gave to fuch of the Conspirators as had best deserved, yet, Pinto had no share in this promotion, but nevertheless, had so great an influence over the King, that though he had not the Title of a Minister of State, nothing of moment was done without him. Having fettled all things at home, the King next bent his thoughts towards Foreign Princes. He dispat- Ambassached Ambaffadors to all the Courts of Europe, to move dors fent to them to own him, and at the same time to gain Allies all the and raise new Enemies to the House of Austria. A Courts of League offensive and defensive was concluded with the Europe. Hollanders and Catalonians, both at that time in Rebellion against the King of Spain. That Monarch not being in a condition to use immediate force for the reducing of Portugal, still hop'd he might by fair means or threats work upon the new King, and to that end writ a Letter to him in the Stile of a Sovereign, but in most_ affectionate terms. The Answer was such as no less touthed the King of Spain, than the News of the Revolt had done before. He had his hands full in Flanders. Italy, Roussillon and Catalonia, and yet rather than seem to abate any thing of his Royal Grandeur, resolved to hazard all, rather than fuffer this Affront to pass unrevenged. The Duke of Medina Sidonia was order'd to raise Forces in Andaluzia, the Count de Monterey in the two Castiles, and the Marquels de Valparaiso in Leon and Galicia. And because a Fleet was the most absolutely necessary, the Duke de Maqueda Admiral of the Ocean, had Orders to gather all the Vessels that were fit for Service, and to infest the Coast, whilst the others

Anno

7 ta Bijk p o∈ Lame-ુ∋, *gખા*ઢ Anbaya-

acted by Land. 2. Of all the Ambaffadors fent by the King of Portugal to the Christian Princes, only the Bishop of Lame go defigned for Rome, miscarried: The Master of the Vessel that carried him, put into Cartagena, a Port of the Kingdom of Murcia, and delivered him up to the Spain by the mards, for which Treachery, he received a Reward of Fanishes. 2000 Crowns. That Prelate's Life was in great danger, for he had certainly been Executed but that the King was put in mind that the Marquess de la Puebla and five or fix other persons of Quality were Prisones at Lisben. This Confideration mov'd him to order the Bishop thould be civilly Treated, leaft, the Prisoners a Lisbon might fuffer for his fake. Fortune, which the Year before had to highly favoured the new King, full feemed wholly devoted to his Party. All the Forts a the Coast of Africk, (except Ceut.a, and Tangier, which at last afterwards submitted) upon the first News of what had hapned in Portugal, withdrew themselves from their Obedience to the Spaniards, and fent to acknowledge King Jehn, and affure him of their utmost Fide lity. Norwasthis all, for the Vice-Roy of Brail, ha ving Intelligence of the Revolution, fent his Sente Lisben to take the Oath of Allegiance to the new Ising in his Name, and in the Name of all the Inhabitants of that Coast, who testified an extraordinary satisfaction for that Change. The Mands Azores, resolved not to be the last that declared for the King, and to give him fome proof of their Fidelity, at the very beginning of his Reign, they feized to Ships coming from India, that knew nothing of the Revolution, and fent them to Lisbon, after having taken of all the Soldiers that were aboard them. In May also this Year, a Corposed disper-< h23

The History of PORTUGAL!

ched Express from India, by John de Sylva Telle, the Vice-Roy, brought the News that the King had been Proclaimed in all his Dominions in Asia, and as far as Kine Tohn the Coast of China. The Hollanders at this time were Proclaimvery powerful in those Seas, and being at War with edinIndia. Spain, did all the harm they could in the Portuguese Colonies and Factories, endeavouring with the affiftance of the Indians, utterly to extirpate all others, that they might themselves ingross that Trade. To this purpose. they omitted not any manner of Villainies that might conduce to their advantage, and particularly though they had afterwards certain Intelligence of King John's being Proclaimed, and being in amity with their State, vet they ceased not to prosecute their ends in those remote parts, as shall appear in the Sequel of this History. However, before the Revolution reached India, they had got footing in Ceylon, 'laid Siege to Malaca, which they took, and had their defigns against Goa, and all other the Portuguese Conquests in India. In America also they were possessed of Pernambuco, Paraiba, Rio Grande, Ciara, the Islands of Tamaraca and Ferdinand de Noronha, and towards the South of Porto Calvo and Segeripe, all places appertaining to the Crown of Portugal. But after they had information of the Truce concluded betwixt Portugal and Holland, they perfidiously made themselves Masters of Angola, and the Island of St. Thomas in Africk, of Maranhao in America, and of Malaca in India. To compleat this Prince's Happiness, though before there was a mortal Enmity betwixt the Portuguese and the Hollanders, yet now on the 12th of June a Cessation of Arms betwixt the two Nations was agreed upon and concluded, at the Hague, for 10 Years, A Cessation and foon after the States fent an Ambaffador to Con- of Arms gratulate the King, upon his Accession to the Crown. with the The Portugal Ambaffador returning, brought with him Two Regiments of Horie, and confiderable supplies of Arms and Ammunition. The Catalonians also fent the Lord Sala on the fame Account, and to Ratifie the League before concluded by the Pertuguese Ambassador.

3. All new erected Monarchyes are subject to a thoufand accidents, and unless protected by some Heaven- A Conspiraly power, can scarce continue long in their full splen-the New dor. The King of Portugal was raised to the Throne King, discoof his Ancestors, in a manner almost miraculous, he vered. mounted Dd 2

The History of PORTUGAL.

mounted without any opposition, 600 Towns, and 15000 Villages, submitted to him in less than eight days, and all the people of the Kingdom declared they were never happy till his Accession to the Crown. Nevertheless, no sooner was he seated on the Throne, but he found many Enemies, and among them some of those who had helped to raise him to that Grandeur. About 100 of the Greatest Men in his Kingdom, Conspired to destroy him, and if Heaven had not protected him, there had been but a short space betwixt the Birth and Grave of his Sovereignty. The Arch-Bishop of Braga, the chief Inquisitor, two other Bishops, the Marquels of Villareal, and his Son, the Duke de Caminha, were the principal Conspirators: D. Lorenzo, Pidez de Carvalle, the Count de Armamar, and D. Augustin Manuel, were brought in as Affociates, the Jews of Lisbon were concerned in the Defign, and there was a party in the Fleet then lying at Belem, one Man being aboard every Ship, in order to Fire it upon a fignal given. Laurence Pidez de Carvallo, was to break into the Queens Apartment with 100 Men, to secure all there. It was given in Charge to the Jews, to fire the City in 8 or 10 places, that the people being busied there, they might have time to force the Palace. The Inquisitor General sent Letters into Spain to acquaint the King with the Dofign, that the Forces on the Frontiers might be ready to March to Lisbon, upon the first Advice, and the Duke de Maqueda to enter the Port with the Fleet of Spain. Concerning the manner of discovering this Conspiracy, there are three feveral Accounts. One is, that the Letters being directed to the Marquess de Ayamonte, who was Governour of the Spanish Frontiers, he broke them open, and fent them back to the King of Portugal, when he had feen the Contents, which is most probable; he being afterwards Convicted of High-Treason, and pur to Death, at Segovia, for Conspiring against his King, with the Duke of Medina Sidonia, and the new King of Portugal. Another fays, that a Spy employed by the King to go often into Spain, 'meeting a Bohemian who was employed to carry the faid Letters, and suspecting something by his Discourse, made him Drunk, then Stabbing him, and having taken the Packer, brought it to the King; but this feems not to have any thing of probability, or consequently of Truth. The third is, that D. Alfonso de Portugal, portugal, Count de Vimioso, being deprived of his Command on the Frontiers, and grievously refenting that Affront; the Arch-Bishop of Braga, conceived the desire of revenge would eafily engage him to enter into the Conspiracy. He therefore discover'd the whole design to him, and the Count seeming to embrace the propofition acquainted the King with the whole matter. The Conspiracy being discovered, the King so ordered the Affair, that most of those persons therein concerned were apprehended, without the least noise or confusion. The sth of August, at 11 at Night, was the time appointed, for putting the Conspiracy in execution. That very morning the King caused all the Troops that Quartered in the neighbouring Villages, to march into Lisbon, upon pretence of a review to be taken in the large place before the Palace. He with his own hand, gave several Billets Sealed up, to persons he could confide in, with positive Orders to every one, not to open his Billet till 12 at Noon, and then punctually to obey what it directed. Then having sent for the Arch-Bishop of Braga, and Marquess of Villareal under colour of communica- The princiting some important Affairs, they were both seized in pal Conspithe King's Lodgings about Noon, without any noise: At rators the same time a Captain of the Guards publickly appre- seired and hended the Duke of Caminha, in the place before the Pa-punished. lace. Those who had received the Billets having opened them, found each an Order to take up one of the Conspirators, and secure him in such a Prison, till surther order, which was so punctually executed, that 47 were taken without any difficulty, none endeavouring to escape. When the News of the Conspiracy was noised abroad, it is not possible to express the rage conceived by the multitude against those that were the fomenters of it, every Man defiring to be the Executioner of them, as is the nature of the Rabble, wherever they conceive a harred. The Wrack, forced a Confession from many of the Criminals, and the Arch-Bishop, the Inquisitor, the Marquess of Villareal, and Duke de Caminha, to save themselves that misery, owned the whole Design. The Marquels, the Duke, the Count de Armamar, and D. Augustin Manuel, were sentenced to be Beheaded. The Arch-Bishop and Inquisitor, because of their Character, the King Condemned to perpetual Imprisonment: All the others were adjudged to be Drawn, Hanged, Dd 3

The History of PORTUGAL

Hanged, and Quartered, and they all suffered according to the Sentence pronounced against them, upon the 20th day of August. It is remarkable, that when the Marquess on the Scaffold had spoke to the people, they cried out furiously, let him die, let him die : To which the Marquess answered; So the Jews cried out against Christ.

Several Military

4. These Executions having secured the Prince, he bent all his Thoughts upon War, and having to that expeditions. purpose obtained of the King of France five Colonels of Horse, three of Foot, and two of Dragoons, he ordered them to be ready to march to the Frontiers, and raifed new Troops to reinforce his Army that lay then before Badajoz: However, they were otherwise employed, for the Council not thinking it experient to wast an Army before a Town that did them no have, those Troops that besieged it were recalled to have elsewhere. The first Act of Hostility I meet with betwixt the Spaniards and Portuguese, was in the Province of Alentejo, near Elvas. A Party of Spaniards having broke into that Province, exercised all manner of Cruelties to terrifie the People, sparing neither Age nor Sex, nor even the Churches. D. John de Acosta, who Commanded at Elvas, having notice hereof, fent out five Companies of Foot under the Command of Gaspar de Sequeira Manuel; These were followed by 400Men under the Conduct of Luis Mendez de Vasconcellos: These being joyned by certain Troops three Leagues from Campo Major, marched towards the Spaniards, who still continued their Ravages, and Charging them, killed 200 upon the spot, pursuing the rest to the Gates of Badajoz, where they took shelter. This fortunate beginning was followed by like consequences; 600 Spaniards advancing into the Province of Alentejo to surprize the Town of Montalvao; Mascarenhas, Collonel of a Portuguese Regiment, with only four Companies Attacked them before they came to the Town, and with fuch good fuccess, that having killed 18 or 20, the rest retired to the Pass on a small River, and he fearing some ambush, because Night drew on, pursued no further. In the morning perceiving they were quite gone, he followed them as far as the Town of Ferreira in Castile, which he Plundered and Burnt without any opposition, though it might eafily have been defended against a greater power. Beyond the Mountains, the Spaniards had fack-

The History of PORTUGAL.

ed and Burnt four open Towns, to revenge which, Lewis Gomez de Figueiredo passed over into Galicia, rook the Town of Monterey, and having pillaged reduced in to Ashes. To requite this, another party of Spaniards fell into the Countrey about Braganza, but the Inhabitants and Soldiers who Quartered thereabouts affembling, cut most of them in pieces, and then piercing into Castile, burnt seven Villages, and the Town of Geronda, of which, they left nothing standing but the Walls: At the same time, Luis Gomez de Figueiredo with 1500 Foot and 300 Horse fell upon the Marquels of Tarrasona, who marched towards Valverde with 2000 of the former, and 200 of the latter, and after a Fight, which lasted about four hours, obtained the Victory, which had been greater but that Night coming on hindred the pursuit.

5. Daily Action more and more incented the two Na- Other War tions, and an implacable hatred had taken possessi- like exon of their hearts, so that the Frontiers were never free ploits. from slaughter and Rapine. D. Gaston Coutinho the Portuguese General, being informed that 6000 Spanish Foot, and 800 Horse had fortified themselves in two Villages, one whereof was in Galicia, the other in Portugal, he marched with 30 Horse to view them, and finding their Works weak enough to be overthrown, if Attacked with vigour, ordered his Foot to advance: A Party of the Enemies Horse that advanced, was easily Repulsed, which causing some Consternation in the main Body, gave time to plant two pieces of Canon against them. These two pieces having played some time, D. Gaston who had made four Batallions of his Foot courageously affaulted the Works in as many places: The Soldiers being as forward in the pursuit of Honour as their Officers, nothing could withstand them: They forced the Entrenchments, took four redoubts, entred the place and took all the Baggage, but not contenting themfelves with this Victory and the gaining of 11 Colours, they burnt all the Villages for two Leagues about. Above 400 Spaniards were killed upon the place, 14 Officers, and 70 Soldiers were taken. Nor was this all, the Portuguese General making his advantage of the Enemics Consternation, the next day marched into Galicia, and pursuing those that having escaped, had fortified themselves in another Village, forced them again to retire, burnt nine Houses, and then returned home with Dd 4 with Honour, and his Soldiers enriched with Plunder. In the mean while, Vasco de Azevedo Coutinho, and Emanuel de Soula de Abreu, being continually infested by the Excursions of the Spaniards, gathered all the Forces they could and marched to Lobos, in the Castle of which place, the Spaniards always had a safe retreat, after committing their ordinary Ravages. This Castle they affaulted and carried with the loss only of 22 Men. which done, they burnt 700 Houses, as well in the Town of Lobos, as in the neighbouring Villages. This was not yet the last stroak of ill fortune the Spaniards felt. Martin Alfonso de Mello, understanding a great body of them was marched from Badajoz to Attack Olivenza, a Town seated on the River Guadiana, which parts Spain and Portugal, affembled all the Forces he could to relieve that place. Being on his March, an Express came to him from the Governour, giving an account that they had affaulted the Town in two places, but met with fuch a vigorous opposition that they were forced to retire with the loss of 200 Men; nevertheless, he defired some succour, least they should return. They accordingly returned, hoping to surprize the place, feigning themselves a Portuguese Convoy with Provisions, yet met they with no better success, being again repulsed with the loss of 140 Men. Martin Alphonso, still hoped to be able to overtake them in their return, but they taking another way than was given out, he missed of them, and therefore dismissed his Troops to their feveral Garrisons.

It was a generally received Opinion throughout all Spain, though the Author of it was not known, that the The Duke Of Medina Sidonia, held secret Correspondence with the King of Portugal, and favoured his Cause. The na Sidoni- ground of this Suspicion was, that King John had to his Queen the Sifter of that Duke, and upon this Jealousie, it is thought the King of Spain talking one Day with the Count Duke de Olivarez, complained to him, That he had three or four times observed the Family of Guzman was fatal to his Grandeur: The Count Duke who was himself of that Family, immediately dispatched an Express to the Duke of Medina Sidonia, summoning him to appear at Court with all possible Speed. He obeyed, and being come to Madrid, he was perswaded, that to clear himself of the impuration of Disloyalty cast upon him, he should publish a Manifesto, containing a Challenge to the new King of Portugal. Others are of Opinion, that the Duke knowing himself to be in some measure guilty, published the said Declaration and Challenge of his own accord, to blot out the ill Opinion conceived of him: Whatfoever the grounds were that moved him to it, Certain it is, he published and disperfed throughout Spain and Portugal, a Cartell in Vindication of his Honour, charging the new King with the Crime of Rebellion; and challenging him to fingle Combat with all the Pormalities used in those Cases. This Cartel was dated at Toledo, the 29th. day of September, 1641. and is too long to trouble the Reader with in this place; nor is it fignificant, fince as it happens to most things of that Nature, no Notice was taken of

The History of PORTUGAL

7. The Bishop of Lamego betrayed to the Spaniards, The Portuas has been faid above, being now exchanged for certain guese Am-Spaniards of Quality; continued his Journey to Rome bassador a on his Embassy to his Holiness. Upon his Arrival, the Rome. Spanish Embassador protested, that he would immediately return to Spain, in case the Pope received him as Embassadour from Portugal. Hereupon the Pope to prevent Disorders that might happen, ordered he should come to Town by Night, but suffered him to be visited as an Embassador. He of France sent his Coach to fetch him from Civita Vecchia, with a Guard of all the Portugese and Catalonians that were then at Rome. Being come thither, he took up his Lodging at the French Embassadors, who received him at his Door with all possible marks of Respect: We shall see what became of this Embassy in its proper place. On the 27th. of September, arrived at Lisbon a Fleet of 18 Sail from . Angola, richly laden; two days after came in another from Rio de Janeiro of no less value in sundry sorts of Commodities.

Anno, 1642.

THE Mand Terzera was the only Place which had The Island refused to submit to the new King of Portugal, the Terzera Governour thereof proving more faithful then the rest to reduced. the King of Spain. He began to want Provisions and Ammua, being suspeEted in Spain, Challenges King John.

The History of PORTUGAL.

Ammunition, which being known in Spain, two Shine were fent to him loaden with all Necessaries for his Relief. These Vessels were taken by the Ships of Portusal, which lay about this Island, on purpose to intercept all Succours. D. Alvaro de Viveiro who commanded in the Fort, being now reduced to great streights, and feeing no likelihood of being reliev'd; capitulated. and march'd out with 263 Men, two pieces of Canon. and all other marks of Honour, leaving behind 800 fick Men, who according to Articles were to be taken care of, and sent away as soon as well. D. Emanuel de Souza Pacheco was fent to govern that Island. The Portuguelo Fleet confifting of 13 Sail, sailed together with the Dutch defigning to intercept the Spanish Galeons; but the Dutch treacherously forlook the Portuguele, who in a Stom loft their Admiral and Vice-Admiral, the other Ships being much shatter'd.

Forreign Alliances concluded.

2. Soon after the Surrender of the Island, News was brought that the Portuguese. Ambassador in Sweden, had concluded an Alliance betwixt the two Crowns, which the King for the farisfaction of his People, caused to be proclaimed by his Heraulds. To confirm which, in a few Days there arrived at Lisbon four Swedish Ships la den with Naval and Warlike Stores, sent by the Ambalfador; and Letters were brought from the Queen of Sweden, in which she gave their Portuguese Majesties af furances of her firm Adherence to them in all that should be for their Service. Tristan de Medoza had in like manner established a firm Friendship and Alliance with the Hollanders. However, the Dutch Fleet that was up on the Coast of Gea in India, took some Portuguese Ship commanded by Sancho Faria de Silva, who was kill'd in the Action with 50 of his Men. At the same time they rook several places in Brafil, driving out the Portuguese. D. George Mascarenhas, who was Vice-Roy there, sent Advice to the King, and he immediately writ to France de Andrade Leitan his Ambassador in England, ordering him inftantly to go over to complain to the States of the taking of those Places. The States considering how uncapable the King was at that time to do himfell right, made small account of his Ambassador demanding restitution. God was at the same time Besieg'd by the same Fleet, which not being strong enough for such an Enterprize, begged the affistance of a Neighbouring King

King: That Prince blocked it up by Land, but as foon as he understood of the Revolution of Pertugal, he rais'd the Siege, joyn'd in League with the Portuguese Vice-Roy, and by this Means, the Dutch Fleet was forc'd to

3. All this while the Frontiers of Castile and Portugal The Prowere full of Soldiers: The Garrison of Campo Mayor of- gress of the ren broke into Estremadura. Parties of Horse from Ba-War in the dajoz appeared frequently at the Gates of Elvas, and the Province of Governor of this last Place, as often drove Cattel from a- Alentejo. bout Badajoz. Though these inroads were not very considerable, yet they were not performed without Blood-

fied; Time heightning the hatred betwixt the two Nations, both Parties encreased their Troops. The King of Portugal erected fix places of Arms on his Frontiers. and put 5000 Men into each of them. The Spaniards affembled on all fides, and four or five Armies appeared in as many places to oppose and infest the Portuguese. Hereupon daily Action enfued, fometimes the one, and fometimes the other being superior: Ferdinand Tellez de Meneses Governor of the Province of Beira, was one of the first that gained upon the Spaniards. He made an inroad into Old Castile, where he took and burnt the Towns of S. Martin and Elgas, with the Castle of the latter, which commands all the Territory of Gata. Having made himself Master of Valverde, and finding it conveniently seated to annoy the Enemy, he left in it a Garrison well provided. A small Body of 2500 Spaniards endeavouring to give a check to his Proceedings, was put into Disorder at the first Charge; and the Portuguese using their Advantage, cut in pieces most of their Enemies. Martin Alphonso de Melo Governor of Elvas, was no less successful about the same time. For having received intelligence that a party of 300 Spanish Horse ravaged the Country betwixt Badajoz and Valverde; he sent out a good Body of Horse, with 150 Musquereers, ordering them to attack the Enemy wherever they met them. This was so couragiously performed, that most of the Spanish Horse being slain upon the place, the rest quitted their Horses to save themselves in a small Wood hard by; so that 274 Horses became a prey to the Victors. These were yet but small Advantages; D. Francis de Melo General of the Portuguese Horse in the Province of Alenrejo, entred Estremadura, where finding no Forces to op-

Ammunition, which being known in Spain, two Shine were fent to him loaden with all Necessaries for his Relief. These Vessels were taken by the Ships of Portus gal, which lay about this Island, on purpose to intercent all Succours. D. Alvaro de Viveiro who commanded in the Fort, being now reduced to great streights, and feeing no likelihood of being reliev'd, capitulated and march'd out with 263 Men, two pieces of Canon. and all other marks of Honour, leaving behind 800 fick Men, who according to Articles were to be taken care of, and fent away as foon as well. D. Emanuel de Souza Pacheco was fent to govern that Island. The Portuguele Fleet confifting of 13 Sail, failed together with the Dutch designing to intercept the Spanish Galeons; but the Duch reacherously forsook the Portuguese, who in a Stom loft their Admiral and Vice-Admiral, the other Shim being much shatter'd.

Forreign Alliances concluded.

2. Soon after the Surrender of the Island, News wa brought that the Portuguese. Ambassador in Sweden, had concluded an Alliance betwirt the two Crowns, which the King for the satisfaction of his People, caused to be proclaimed by his Heraulds. To confirm which, in few Days there arrived at Lisbon four Swedish Ships la den with Naval and Warlike Stores, sent by the Ambal fador; and Letters were brought from the Queen of Sweden, in which the gave their Portuguese Majesties at furances of her firm Adherence to them in all that should be for their Service. Tristan de Medoza had in like manner established a firm Friendship and Alliance with the Hollanders. However, the Dutch Fleet that was up on the Coast of Goa in India, took some Portuguese Ship commanded by Sancho Faria de Silva, who was kili'din the Action with 50 of his Men. At the same time they rook several places in Brasil, driving out the Portuguest. D. George Mascarenhas, who was Vice-Roy there, sent Advice to the King, and he immediately writ to Francis de Andrade Leitan his Ambassador in England, ordering him inftantly to go over to complain to the States of the taking of those Places. The States considering how uncapable the King was at that time to do himself right, made small account of his Ambassador demanding restitution. God was at the same time Besieg'd by the same Fleet, which not being strong enough for such an Enterprize, begged the affiftance of a Neighbouring The History of PORTUGAL.

King: That Prince blocked it up by Land, but as foon is he understood of the Revolution of Portugal, he rais'd he Siege, joyn'd in League with the Portuguese Vice-Roy, and by this Means, the Dutch Fleet was forc'd to

3. All this while the Frontiers of Castile and Portugal The Prowere full of Soldiers: The Garrison of Campo Mayor of-gress of the ten broke into Estremadura. Parties of Horse from Ba-War in the dajoz appeared frequently at the Gates of Elvas, and the Province of Governor of this last Place, as often drove Cattel from a- Alentejo.

bout Badajoz. Though these inroads were not very considerable, yet they were not performed without Bloodfied; Time heightning the hatred betwixt the two Nations, both Parties encreased their Troops. The King of Portugal erected fix places of Arms on his Frontiers, and put 5000 Men into each of them. The Spaniards assembled on all sides, and four or five Armies appeared in as many places to oppose and infest the Portuguese. Hereupon daily Action enfued, sometimes the one, and sometimes the other being superior: Ferdinand Tellez de Meneses Governor of the Province of Beira, was one of the first that gained upon the Spaniards. He made an inroad inw Old Castile, where he took and burnt the Towns of S. Martin and Elgas, with the Castle of the latter, which commands all the Territory of Gata. Having made himself Master of Valverde, and finding it conveniently leated to annoy the Enemy, he left in it a Garrison well provided. A small Body of 2500 Spaniards endeavouring to give a check to his Proceedings, was put into Disorder at the first Charge; and the Portuguese using their Advantage, cut in pieces most of their Enemies. Martin Alphonso de Melo Governor of Elvas, was no less faccessful about the same time. For having received intelligence that a party of 300 Spanish Horse ravaged the Country betwixt Badajoz and Valverde; he sent out a good Body of Horse, with 150 Musquereers, ordering them to attack the Enemy wherever they met them. This was so couragiously performed, that most of the Spanish Horse being sain upon the place, the rest quitted their Horses to save themselves in a small Wood hard by; so that 274 Horses became a prey to the Victors. These were yet but small Advantages; D. Francis de Melo General of the Portuguese Horse in the Province of Alenrejo, entred Estremadura, where finding no Forces to oppole pose him, he took Aroches, Villar del Rey, Codissera and Ancinasola; deseated some Troops that adventured to oppose him, took a vast Booty, and so many Prisoners, that the King of Portugal ordered many of the least considerable to be set at Liberty. D. John de Garay Governor of Badajez, ient out 800 Horse, and 2000 Foot, with design to surprize Olivenza, but D. Francis de Melo charging them by the way, put them to flight with the flaughter of 300 Men.

.4. These continual Incursions kept the Spaniards al-Other Mi- ways upon their Guard, and made them think of feculitary Alli- ring themselves. To this purpose they began to fortifie Aldea del Obispo; but Ferdinand Tellez de Meneses being unwilling to suffer that Work to go forward, marched with 500 Foot; and four Squadrons of Horse, attacked the Place, and carryed it, though obstinately defended: 140 Spaniards were kill'd in the Assault, and 116 taken, and all the Works, as well Old as New, were levelled with the Ground. Then passing on, he did the same to the Town of Castillejo, which was no less offensive to the Portuguese Frontiers, then the other would have been The King to shew he was no less formidable by Sea then by Land, even in the first rise of his Greatness; fitted out 13 great Men of War, under the command of Antony Tellez, ordering him to feek out the Spanish Fleet, or in case he found it not, to attempt some Sea-port Town; the Spaniards, though weak, omitted not to make their utmost efforts, and infest their Enemies Country, as much as in them was. Chelas, a confiderable Town of Estremadura, and seated near the Frontiers of Alentejo, did often fend out Parties, which did incredible damage in that part of the plain Country subject to Portugal. Francis de Melo who had the charge of thole Frontiers incensed hereat, marched with all the Force he could gather, with a resolution to carry that Place; nor did he fail of his Design altogether, for meeting a Squadron of Spanish Horse he cut them off, and then applying his Scaling Ladders, after a Dispute of five Hours, entred the Town. His Men immediately fell to the Plunder, which lost them the opportunity they might have had of entring the Castle with the flying Enemy. Francis de Melo seeing nothing more could be done then plundering the Town, returned leaving the

The History of PORTUGAL.

Streets full of dead Bodies, and having lost but 16 of his own Men.

5. Whilst the War continued in this manner betwixt Alliances these two Neighbouring Nations, those of a greater di- in Africa stance fought the Friendship of the new King of Portugal. and Asia. That King near Goa whom we mentioned before, was the first that moved for this Friendship, when he rais'd his Siege from before the City: The King of Morocco was not long behind him, for he understanding how fast the Crown was settl'd by the unanimous approbation of the whole Kingdom, and so many Alliances with most Princes of Europe, except those that were devoted to Spain, sent now into Portugal, to desire leave of the King that an Ambassador might come to put an end to the Animofities which had been produced by the violent procedure of the Spaniards.

6. The ill Fortune of the Spaniards raised in them an Military implacable defire of Revenge. They affembled 1500 Action in Foot, and 300 Horse, to take a Fort that Ferdinand Tel- the Prolez de Meneses had built in Val de Mula, on the Frontiers vince of of the Province Tralos Montes, and march till they Tralos came in fight of the Fort; there discovering Portuguese Montes Horse, and 400 Foot, they halted to consult what was to be done. D. Sancho Manuel, the Portuguese Camp-Master having obtained Leave of Ferdinand Tellez; though so unequal in Number, charged the Enemy so vigorously, that at the first shock the Foot sled, and the Horse seeing the Rout, durst not come up to support them. Having with such ease overthrown those Troops, the Portuguese General resolved to make use of the Advantage, being informed they were retired to Fuentes in Castile, where some Fortifications were begun to be thrown up. Being too weak to attack them there, he stayed till 500 Foot more had joyn'd him, and then advanced; he planted some Canon against the Place, and began to batter it, but feeing no effect, thought of fending for more Troops to carry it by Escalade, when he was told the Spaniards affembled in great Numbers from all parts to cut off his Retreat. His danger drew D. Alonso Furtado de Mendoza to his Aflistance, but being still much inferiour to the Enemies, they retired with Speed, and unmolested by the Spaniards. Nor was there any more quiet on the Frontiers of Galicia; for D. Martin Daradin the Governour of that Kingdom, not being in a condition to oppose two Portuguese Armies that broke in up him into the ambush. He was at first surprized, seeing on him at once, they burnt 150 Villages in that Country, and returned home with a confiderable Booty.

vince of Beira.

7. It was now but reasonable the Forces should have been put into their Winter Quarters; nevertheless the In the Pro- Duke d'Alva having gather'd all the Power he could fent them under the Conduct of his Son to wast the Province of Beira. Ferdinand Tellez de Meneses having Notice hereof, formed a Body of 7000 Foot and 2700 Horse, resolving to prevent the Spaniards, whose Forces were no less Considerable; he marched to Val 4 Mula, and encamped before the Town of Guardan which he Summoned, and finding no Disposition in the Governor to furrender, batter'd it with two pieces of Canon. The Battery was of little effect, and therefore Ferdinand Tellez commanded Perer Sousa de Castro to attack the Out-works with all the Musqueteers, and Gas par de Seixas with some other Battalions to sustain him; The Attack was begun with great Resolution, and continued for three Hours, at the end whereof the Be fieged put ma white Flag, and fent a Drum to offer to Capitulate The Garrison marched out upon sorry Terms, the Governor and Officers being only allowed to carry their Swords, and all the Souldiers to the number of 340, being fent Prisoners to Liston. The Boory was grear, besides much store of Provision and Ammunition found in the Place; but the main Consequence of taking this place was, that it fecured the Portuguese Frontiers, and laid those of Castile open to Incursions. Whilst this was doing, about the Province of Beira, without the Spanish General, who had taken the Field, his attempting to fuccour the Town; D. Antony Mascarenkes commander of Valladores, took Quintas and Corgra. D. Sancho Manuel plunder'd and burnt the Towns of Sorvo, Avilar and Chalenga; the Captains, Edward Miranda, and Emanuel de Andras, did the same to those of Basquilla, Villar del Puerto, and Saranitho, and fo did others all along the Frontiers. D. Francis de Melo, General of the Cavairy in Allentejo, being abroad with 300 Men, the Governour of Badajoz upon Notice of it, marched out with 700, and leaving half of them in Ambuth, with the other half advanced to draw on the Portuguese: Melo thinking he had no more Enemies to deal with but what were in fight, charged them, and they as foon retired, till they drew himself Attacked by that fresh body, but recovering himfelf, divided his men, and sent one part to charge those that had drawn him on whilst the other engaged those that lay in ambush. In this manner the Fight continued a confiderable time, after which, fresh Troops appeared, coming from Badajuz, to the affiftance of the Spaniards, and others from Elvas, to sustain the Portuquele. These last were 1600 Foot, and four Squadrons of Horse, under the Conduct of the Count de Obidos. Now the face of Affairs was changed, for the Portuguese obmined a Compleat Victory. The first of the Spanish Troops were cut in pieces, and the last retired with the los of 176 Horse. Of the Portuguese, 37 were killed in the ambush, and 16 in the Engagement after it. 8. The Assembly of the States, or Parliament of Por-

The History of PORTUGAL:

Crown, and raise such supplies as were necessary for or Parliathe support of it; the King fixt their Meeting for the ment betd, 18th. of September, and that day the Session was commenced with all the Ceremonies usual upon such occasions. The Bithop of Elvas performed the Office of Chancellor; acquainting that Affembly in the King's Name. with the causes of their being convened: He represented the great Bleffing of Liberty, the King's extraordinary Care to repair the Harms done by the Spaniards, the mighty Power he had, as well by Sea as Land'; the Alliances he had made Abroad, and put them in mind how he had never lay'd any Impositions upon his People, but maintained the expence of his Houte upon the private Patrimony of his Family; and that being now much exhausted, he recommended it to them to find out means to support so great a Charge, affuring them of his Royal Protection, and that their Liberties and Privileges should be religiously preserved. Great was the expectation the his Care in afferting their Liberties, for delivering them from the Yoke of Spain; for the Alliances he had made Abroad, and for all his good Intentions, offering him their Lives and Fortunes, and tending him a Blank Pa-

King had conceived of this Atlembly, nor was he disappointed, for they gave such Testimonies of their Duty, as exceeded even his Hopes. They returned Thanks for per, that he might dispose of their Estates as he thought fit for the support of the State, and purchasing his Brother's tugal, being the only Authority that could establish the The Cortes Liberty, who was kept Prisoner by the Spaniards even fince the beginning of the War, having been put intelled their hands by the King of Hungary, in whole service he had been nine Years. The King returned the blank as it was fent to him, and had more plentiful supplied granted him than he himself would have demanded The Parliament settled two Funds, the one for Land the other for Sea-Service: All other expences were to be supplied out of the Patrimony of the House of Bras cured.

9. D. John Rodriguez de Souza, y Vasconcellos Count A Conspi- of Castelmelhor, went over to Brazil in the Spanish racytoseize Fleet, in the Year, 1639. In 1641. he was sent by his Carthage- General to the Spanish Plantations, in the West-Indies. na, disco- The News of the Revolution of Portugal, being then wered; and brought to the Fleet, the Spaniards cryed down the New the Portu- King's Title, and exclaimed against the Portugueses as gueles se-Rebels. This sensibly touched the Count de Castelmet bor, yet he was forced to bear with it, being in no condition to make his referement appear without his certain destruction. There were seven Portuguese Gallions in the Fleet, and in them 3000 Men. With the Officer of these Ships, he conspired to seize the Fleer; as all the Town and Cittadel of Cartagena, in new Spain, be fore which, they were then at Anchor. Most of the Off ficers were already engaged in this Defign, and all difposed for putting of it in execution, but the Count lad ving communicated it to Antony Tenezedo a Portuguele. in whom he confided, as having done him many fignal favours; he discovered the whole matter to the Governour of the Citradel, who immediately apprehended the Count, and had him Condemned to Death. This Sentence had been executed within two days, had not the Count appealed to the Court of Madrid, and the Admiral of the Fleet having had the Sentence confirmed by the Council there, no hopes remained for his deliverance but in God. Whilst the Admiral sent into Spain to have the Sentence confirmed, the King of Portugal got intelligence of what had hapned. He immediately fent away a Caravel, Commanded by a Captain, in whole Conduct he had great confidence, ordering him to fall for Cartagena, and use all possible means to deliver the fign, the Captain Arrived safe, and found means to let the Count know he was come to rescue him. To this purpose, he agreed with a Dutch Captain who Commanded a Frigat in that Port, for the Caravel being fo leaky, that it could not be put to Sea again, he burnt it. In the mean while, the Count with ready Money and large promises, corrupted a Corporal; and two Spanish Soldiers, that had the keeping of him, and they altogether got aboard the Duich Frigat, which carried them fafe to the Island of Tortuga, where they were favourahly received by the French Governour. Thence they went over to the Island Tercera, and lastly arrived at Lisbon, where they were bountifully rewarded by the

The History of PORTUGAL.

Anno, 1543.

I.THE hatred the Spiniards and Portugueses bore to one another, was too great to suffer them to lie fill: Though the Season was not yet fit for Action, the Frontiers were never free from incursions. *D. Santhe Manuel a Portuguese Major-General, thinking no difficulties too great to be furmounted, marched out with 150 Horse, judging that a sufficient number to plunder the Town of Fieuro in Castile, four Leagues from the Frontiers of Portugal. His Design being divulged, and the Spaniards believing his Forces greater than they were, they abandoned the Town, leaving it to be ranfacked by the Soldiers without the least opposition. But the retreat proved not without danger, for the Spaniands of the neighbouring places attembling to the number of 200 Horie, Charged them before they could recover their own Frontiers, and that with such resolution, that the Portugueses were at first forced to give ground. But having quitted all the Booty which encombred them, they rallied, and giving a fresh Charge, worsted those by whom before they had been drove. ing on, put an end to the Battle. The number of the Dead was equal, and the Victory had been dubious, but that the Spaniards got away in the dark, leaving the Booty and the Field to the Portugueses. This small Action was the cause of a greater, for the Marquels de Prisoner. The Weather proved favourable to the De Biecha, General of the Spansh Horse, resolving to revenge that loss, entred Portugal with 300 Horie, and 200 Muske-

300 Musketiers, surprized the Town of Sabugal, fired 13 Houses, killed seven of the Inhabitants he found in Arms, and drove away all the Cattle he found. Not content with this, he returned by the way of Alfayates to brave the Garrison, but this boldness cost him dear. Ferdinand Tellez de Menezes the General who was within two Leagues of that place, gathering 200 Horse and three Companies of Foot, sent to the Governour of Alfayates to joyn him with the best men he had, which was accordingly performed; that Governour bringing with him 200 Men. With this force they pursued the Spaniards, and having overtaken, fell upon them: The Fight was bravely maintained, for the Spaniards and Portugueses gave three several Charges in such a manner, that it was not discernable who had the better: being now fallen in after the Fire, with Sword in hand, and the Marqueis de Elecha, the Spanish General, and D. Francis de Erasso, who was next in Command to him, being both Slain, Victory began to incline to the Porsugueses, for the Spaniards dismayed at the loss of their Commanders fled, leaving the Field strewed with Dead Bodies, Arms and Plunder which they quitted to fave their Lives. The Portugueses were forward enough to have pursued them, but Ferdinand Tellez held them in, fearing to fall into some ambush, being to pass before the Enemy. The Duke of Alva's Enterprize redounded more to the honour of the Spaniards. He being desirous of do ing something considerable in Portugal, drew together 8000 Foot and 900 Horse, with which he entred Portugal, burnt four open Towns, pur many of the Inhabitants to the Sword, and finding a vigorous refistance at Eschallam, which place, he had caused to be Attacked at the same time, he retired again, to avoid meeting all the Troops of the Frontiers drawn together to oppole

2. It was not only the success on the Frontiers that rendred the King of Portugal fortunate. Two Jesuits being procurators for the Provinces of Cochin and Goa in India, arriving at this time, brought him an Account how well affected the people in those distant Provinces were to his interest. This happy News was a great addition to the joy of his success in War, for they assured him that most of those Eastern Princes had joyned in League with his Vice-Roy, as foon as they underflood flood he was restored to the Crown of his Ancestors. The King who omitted nothing that might encourage his faithful Servants, and gain him new Friends, sent away two Gallions, and fix other Vessels, with all neceffaries to the former, and with affurances to the latter. that they should always find in him a brotherly return of affection, as long as they continued their friendship towards him.

The History of PORTUGAL.

3. Francis de Lucena, Secretary of State ever fince the Revolution, had upon complaints preferred against him The Secreby his Enemies been committed Prisoner to the Castle tary Franof St. Julian, but nothing being proved against him, cis Luceafter a long Imprisonment, the King had resolved to ea, put to after a long Imprisonment, the King had resolved to re- Death upon ftore him to his Honour, when an unfortunate accident account on a sudden brought him to an untimely end. The of a suppo-Count de Obidos General of the Province of Aleitejo hap- fed Confpined to take a fellow coming from Badajez, who proverace. ed to be Servant to Peter Bonete Adjutant to the Major-General. Upon examination, this Man declared that his Master held Correspondence with the Spaniards, and he being thereupon Apprehended and put upon the Rack, made a Confession, which at his Death, he declared to be falle; but wherein he accused D. Joseph de Meneses, Governour of Fort St. Julian of a Design of betraying it to the Spaniards, Francis de Lucena, the Secretary of holding Correspondence with them, and feveral others of joyning with them in these Treasonable practices. All the persons accused being put to Torture, some of them to the last, denied their knowledge of any fuch Treason, but others, to be eased of their misery, owned all that was laid to their Charge. Upon this weak evidence, several were put to Death. D. Joseph de Meneses, endured the Rack constantly, denying it, and being cured, the King offered him again a Command, but he refused it; saying, He was now resolved to serve him, who knew how to Reward services, and punish Offences. The unfortunate Secretary, Francis de Lucena, being put upon the Rack, and being weak with Age fainted away without Confessing. Neverthelefs, though all had recanted that accused him, he was Condemned to Death as a Traytor, and fuffered accordingly, positively denying any guilt in the matter he was accused of, to the last minute of his Life. The Rabble would have torn him in pieces when he was brought brought Prisoner from the Castle of St. Julian, for in all Countries they are ready to devour the innocent, bur he was then preferved by the Guards, to be made a Sacrifice to that many headed Monster in a more solemn manner, being publickly beheaded upon a Scaffold. 4. Whilst due Examination was making into this piece of Treachery, the King of Portugal made geneande that rous acknowledgments to the Count de Castelmelhor, on fuffered for account of his good Endeavours and Sufferings beforethe Conspi-mentioned. The post of General of the Frontiers, betwixt the Rivers Duero and Minho, given him as the first Reward of his Fidelity in the West-Indies, seeming too small a Recompence for a Service of such Consequence; he added to it a prefent of a confiderable Sum of Money, a Commendary of the Military Order of Christ, worth 2000 Crowns a Year, gave the reversion of it to his Children, and confirmed that Earldom to his third Generation. To Father Ambrife a Benedictin, concerned in the Counts Escape, he gave a Benefice. To Antony de Abien, Captain of the Caravel, that went for him a confiderable Commendary. And because Dominick de Sylva, Antony Rodiguez the Spanish Corporal, two Souldiers that were upon the Guard, and the Dutch Captain that lent his Vessel to forward the undertaking, had all contributed to the Earl's Deliverance; they also were made parmkers of the King's Bounty. The Dutch Captain had 2000 Crowns, Dominick de Sylva was Knighted, and had a Company in a Marine Regiment with a Pension. The Spanish Corporal had also a Company in the Land-Service, with a Pension as the other. The two Souldiers were likewise made Captains, but without any other addition of Honour or Pension. These Acts of Generofity in the King, redounded much to his Honour, as did no less his Prudence in placing good Commanders upon the Frontiers. George de Melo General of the Galleys, was put into the Fort of St. Julian, to secure that Place, whilst D. Joseph de Manezes the former Goververnour was proceeded against. D. Francis de Sousa Coutinho, returning from his Embassy of Sweden, had the Government of the Island Tercera conferred on him. D. Alvaro de Abranchez was appointed General of the Frontiers of Beira, and D. John de Soufa, of those of the Province Tralos Montes.

:14.

The History of PORTUGAL.

5. About this time News was brought to Lisbon of The King two several Accidents which moved different Passions in of Spain's the People. One was, that the Count Duke de Oliva- Favourite rez had lost the favour of the Catholick King, whose diffraced. prime Minister he had been for the space of 22 Years; and because his Government had appeared Tyrannical to the Portugueses, there were sew of them, who did not express extraordinary satisfaction at his fall. The other piece of News produced great Compassion in such as were least Zealous for Religion. F. Antony Francis Car- Several din a Jesuit, and general Procurator for the Society in Persons sufthe Province of Japan, gave an account, that four Por-fered Martuguese Ambassadors from Macao, being at the Town of tyrdoin in of Nangassaqui, with 66 Persons in their retinue, for Ispan. the settling of Trade, and to endeavour the planting of the Faith there; the Emperor of that Island, whose Name was Toyogun, had cast them all into Dungeons, chief of their Retinue, and sent home the other 13 in derifion of the Apostles, to carry the News of that Bloody Execution to Macao. The Dutch norwithflanding the Cessation of Arms, betwixt the Crown of Portugal and the States of Holland, entred the City Negapatan in India; the Portugueses not being able to withstand them, and obliged them to ransom it for 110000 pieces of Eight. A Treaty was afterwards fet on foot for settling a Truce betwixt the two Nations in those parts, but the Hollanders thinking it more for their Advantage to continue the War, foon broke it off. The next Act of Hostility they committed, was in the Island Ceylon, where thinking to surprize the Portugueses quarter'd in the Village Curaza, as relying on the Truce betwixt then put to Death the four Ambassadors, with 53 of the fes in that Island quiet for some time. But still the War was continued in other parts. After the Durch had left Negapatan, it was befieged by a Neighbouring Nayque or Prince of the Indians, but he meeting with a vigorous opposition, soon desisted.

the two Nations, they marched against them; but they having intelligence of their coming, charged them with fuch Bravery, that of 400 Hollanders, scarce any escaped being kill'd or taken. This Victory gave the Portugue-

6. In America, the Portugueses under the command of Antony Teyxeyra, after a long Siege, recovered from the Durch the City St. Luis of Maranhao, they being forc'd

E c 3

The History of PORTUGAL. to abandon it for want of Provisions, and most of them afterwards perished by the hands of the Indians, whom they had barbaroufly used. Our Affairs were nor for fuccessful in Angola where our Men under the Command of Peter Celar were worked by the Dutch, who afterwards concluding a Truce with them, treacherously fell, upon them, killing 40, taking 187 Prisoners, and forcing the rest to sly for safety to the Mountains. Our Fort at Mozambique enjoyed most Peace, for the Emperor of Monomotapa having been lately converted to the Faith, by the religious of the Order of St. Dominick. professed an inviolable Friendship towards the Portugueses, and had obtained a number of them of Julius Mo-niz, the Governor of that Fort for his Guard.

7. The Pope always continuing fix'd in his Resolutiguese Am- on, not to give Audience to the Bishop of Lamege, fent baffader at by the King of Portugal, with the quality of his Ambal-Rome not sador to Rome, that Bishop was at length oblig'd to return home. He was conducted by some of the Duke mitted, re- of Florence's Horse to Leghorn, where tour Portuguese. surns home. Ships lay ready to carry him to Lisbon. D. Luis Pereira de Castro Counsellor in his Majesties Council of Con-. science, was nevertheless chosen to undertake another. Voyage to Rome. But because the rejecting of a second Ambassador might be of ill Consequence to the Crown of Portugal, this Counseller took only the stile of Deputy of all the Clergy of the Kingdom, to reprefent their wants, and how prejudicial it was to refuse to admit an Ambassador from his Portuguese Majesty, who had omitted nothing that might tend to convince the Christian World of his Zeal for Religion, and his Respect to the Holy See.

Anno. 1644.

Great Fre- 1. IN pursuance to the League concluded betwirt the Kings of France and Portugal; the former excited Parations the latter, to invade the Territories of Spain with all both in Spain and his Power by Sea and Land, that to he might be put into a Condition to make the greater progress in Catalonia. Hereupon King John gave Orders for gathering an Army of 12000 Foot and 2000 Horse, which was to enter Castile by the way of Alentejo. The Catholick King having having Advice hereof, the better to fecure his Dominions on that side, whilst he attended the Affairs of Catalonia, gave the command of his Army in Estremadura, to the Marqueis de Torrecusa. Mathias de Albuquerque having ferved the King of Portugal well, was by him continued General of the Frontiers. The first attempt made by the Marquels proved unfortunate, for he could not make himself Master of Ougela, a little Town in Portugal, which after the Gate had been forced with a Petard, was bravely defended by the Inhabitants, for the space of fix Hours. Among the other Defendants, a The Por-Woman did Wonders with a Baker's Peel; and though tuguese arwounded, could never be perswaded to retire till the my in E-Affault was given over .. The Portugueles after this were firemadunot flack to return the Spaniards their Visit at Mentejo; ra. which place, though well fortifyed and defended by four Companies, they affaulted and took by Scalade, where falling disorderly to Plunder, the Spaniards took the opportunity to rally, and fell upon them fo resolutely, that they had all Perished, but that the Monteiero Mor came in opportunely with his Horse, and forced the Spaniards to retire to the River Guadiana, where many of them were drowned. Hence the Portugueses advanced, and 12sed Membrillo an open Town, save a Trench that had been thrown up about it. The same they did to Villa Nueva de Barcarota, but attempted not the Castle, in which was D. Francis de Velasco, Lieutenant General of the Horse of Castile, who having but 500 Horse with him, was not able to appear in the Field against the Porsugueses. They being now 6000 Foot and 1100 Horse; with 6 pieces of Canon, took and destroyed Villar del Ray, Roca de Almanacite and Puebla, all Towns of Estremadura. These Actions of the Poreugueses struck to the Heart of the Marquels de Torrecusa, as perceiving a fort of Faintness in his Soldiers, which looked like infatuation, being wholly opposite to the natural Bravery of the Spaniards. He called a Council of War, in which he proposed to take the Field, and give the Enciny Bartle. Many applauded his Propositions, yet others advised to besiege Olivenza, as the strongest of the Enemies Garrifons, which would draw their Forces out of Spain, and perhaps necessitate them to give Battle upon Terms of Disadvantage. This opinion wanted not some to support it, but the Marquels and others persisting in the Refolution of hazarding a Barrle, their Authority prevailed. The Spanish Army confisted of 7000 Foot, and 2600 Horse in 34 Troops, under the command of the Baron de Molinguen, who was now to command the whole Army, because the Marquels was to stay at Badajoz. These Forces met the Enemy sooner than they expected.

The Spadefeated.

2. On the 26 of May, 1644, Albuquerque the Portunish Forces guese General, finding himself reduc'd to that necessity. that he must either fight or fly, chose rather to hazard a Battle, than forfeit his Reputation. He performed the Office of a Major General, ordering his Battle himself. The command of the Right Wing he gave to the Monteiro Mor, and the Left to the Commissary General, who had under him the Dutch Horse, commanded by Captain Piper. The two Armies ingaged, and the Spaniards gave such a furious Charge on the Portuguese Lest Wing, where the Commissiary commanded, that the Dutch Horse fled, and running upon their own Foot, so disorder'd that part of the Army, that the Spaniards drove them from their Ground; their General being in danger to be bruised to Death, his Horse falling upon him, but a French Captain faved him, giving him another Horse that ran lole, and sustaining the shor of the Enemy till he mounted. Being delivered from that Danger, he had recourse to the Body of reserve, which advancing to the Place, which the Spanish Horse had left to pursue the Dutch, and others that fled, made such Havock among the Foot, before Victorious, that they were forced to fly. The Horse returning from the pursuit, and seeing the Foot broke, could never be brought to a Charge, but berook themselves to their Heels, quitting their Cannon and Baggage. Of the Spaniards, about 2000 Foot and 700 Horse were killed and taken, with about 40 Colours and Standards. Of the Portuguese, 750 were flain, and among them two Collonels. The Partugueses continued a Day in the field of Battle, least the Spaniards should return and vaunt they had kept it. King John rejoycing at this Victory which secured his Crown, created the General Earl of Alegrette, giving him a Pension of 4000 Crowns, and rewarded many other of the Principal Men in the Army. The Marquels of Torrecula laboured to gather all the Forces of Estremadura; being grieved he was not present at the Battle, as believing it tences to carry on the War; and landing a great num-places in lost for want of Conduct, and it troubled him the more. because he was the adviser of it.

The History of PORTUGAL

2. Whilst these things hapned in Estremadura, several Incursions were made on all the Frontiers of the Kingdom, but in them was nothing Memorable, for the Ports oueses were most upon the Desensive, and the Spaniards only kept the War afoot, till the affairs of Catalonia might be settled, that then they might turn their whole Force to this fide. About this same time. D. George de Mascarenhas, Count de Monte Albano who was of the Conspiracy, Council of State, and had other great Employments. was impeached of Conspiring with others against the King, for which he was committed to the Castle of Belem, and the rest to other Prisons. Upon Examination. the Acculation was found malicious and groundless, whereupon he and all the others on the second of Nonumber were honourably discharged, and restored to their Estates and Honours. At this time also dyed the Arch-bishop of Braga, one of the managers of the first Conspiracy against the King. Dying, he made it his request to the King, that he would pardon his Treachery, and grant that his Body might be Buryed without some Parish Church, without any inscription upon it, to the end, no Memory might survive of one that hath been Traytor to his King.

at length concluded a Truce with the Count de Nassau, of Ameriwho governed at Pernambuco for the Hollanders. Yet to ca. far were they from observing the Articles of it, that they rais'd a new Fort at Segeripe, took several of our Ships. and committed many Barbarities against the Portugueses; that according to composition, remained under them at Pernambuco. These things moved John Fernandez Veigra. and Francis Berenguer, to lay the defign this Year of expelling them that Province; the fuccess of their Enterprize belongs to another place. In Africk, Tangier had till this time held for the Spaniards, but now the Garrison secured their Governor, sent him Pritoner to Lisbon, and declared for King John. The Moors thought The Dutch to have surprized that City, and gave a desperate As-contrary to fault, but were repulled with great Loss. The Dutch Faith giin India, notwithstanding their repeated Orders from ven, take the States to cease from all Hostilities, still found pre-several

4. The Portuguese Governors on the Coasts of America The Affairs

ber of Men in Ceylon, took the Fort of Negumbo, having first overthrown the Portugueses that were to defend it: they presuming, though much inferiour in Number, and contrary to their Orders to meet the Enemy in open Field, who pursuing them after the defeat, entred the Fort in that Hear, putring above 300 of our Men to the Sword. The City Macao in China was near falling again into the Hands of the Spaniards; many of the Inhabitants favouring their interest, and raising a dangerous Tumult to promote the same, but by the Courage of Sebastian Loko the Governour, who fired from the Castle upon the Cay, together with the Inresposition of the Jesuits, it was again reduced to Obedience. Gonzalo Sequeyra was sent Ambassador by the King to the Emperor of Japan, but through the Instiganon of the Hollanders was not received.

Anno, 1645.

AStions in the Brovince of Alentejo.

His Year the King having regard to the good Service done by the Ford of Godd War And the single vice done by the Earl of Castello-Melhor, in the Province betwixt Duero and Minho, appointed him Genegal of Alentojo. In April he took possession of that Command, and at the same time received intelligence that the Marquess de Leganez was come to Badajoz, to command the Spanish Army. Soon after the Counts Argival at Badajoz, 500 Spanish Horse made an Incursion into the Territory of Campo Mayor, whence they retired with great Booty. In their retreat, the two Cappains Emanuel de Gama Lobo and D. Charles Fordano, charged them with 300 Portuguese Horse, recovered the Prey, and took from them 80 Horses. The Count de Castello Melhor, presently after attempted to drive the Country about Badajoz, and to that purpose marched with 800 Horse and 1500 Foot, but returned without doing any thing more, than driving the Enemies advanced Parties to the Walls of Badajoz. In return, the Spaniards with a Body of 700 Horse, fell into the Country of Barbacena and Sancta Olaya, which is two Leagues from Elvis and Campo Mayor; the Horse of both which Places, to the Number of 500, joyning, charged them in their Retreat, recovered all the Booty, and took 60 of their Horses. The Count

Count de Castelmelhor having thoroughly examined the strength of Badajoz, thought to have surprized that place! and in order to it marched with 5500 Foot, and 1200 Horse, two Petards, and eight pieces of Canon, which last being useless for a surprize, were the cause he failed of his defign, for the Carriages breaking by the way. (as was thought rather through the malice of those who had them in charge than neglect) so much time was spent in fixing them again, that it was day before he could reach the Fort of Telena, which being a League from the City, he was forced to return without attempting any thing to Elvas.

2. The King having certain intelligence that the Spaniffs Army daily increased at Badajez, gave our all the necessary Orders for his Troops to Rendelvouz at Elvas, and to be himself the more at hand, went over to Aldea Gallega, which was the cause that many of the Nobility and Gentry repaired to the Army. On the The Spa-25th day of October, the Marquels de Leganez, marched nife Army from Badajoz, with 12000 Foot, 3000 Horse, 10 pieces on the Porof Cannon, and a Train proportionable, and halted in tuguele fight of the Bridge of Olivenza, and Fort St. Antony. In Frontiers. two days he took the faid Fort, and another at the foot of the Bridge, both which, he demolished, and broke several Arches of the Bridge, to cut off the Communication of Olivenza. Whillt the Spaniards were bufie at this work, a Party of 600 of their Horse, meeting 400 of our Foot, under the Command of Major John da Fonseca Rarreta, within two Leagues of Estremoz, cut most of them off, the Major being the first that Fled; whereas, he might have easily drawn his Men within an Inclosure which was by, and have thereby secured them against any Horse. The King of the Maldivy Islands, in India, being now come to Portugal, to crave Aid of the King against a Brother who had Usurped the Crown; served in the Army this Campaign, and was treated with all imaginable respect. Count Castelmelbor, having drawn together all the Force he could, and being yet Inferiour to the Enemy, kept himfelf still within the Olive-Gardens at Elvas, but continually fent out Parties to Alarm the Enemy. D. Roderick de Castro, with 1000 Horse, and 500 Musketiers, sustaining one of those Parties, the Enemy Charged it, and pursuing too far, he cut off 90 of their Horse. Another nother of our Parties being beyond Badajoz, took the Count de Izinguen, who came to be Lieutenant-General of Horse, in the Spanish Army, and being sent to Lisbon, continued a long time Prisoner in the Castle of Relem. The Marquels de Leganez, having done nothing more than break the Bridge, and demolish the two Forts, returned towards Badajoz, and in 12 days erected a new Fort at Telena, near that City, destroying at the same time a Tower, in which, was an Ensign and is of our Men, a League from Elvas. This is all that was done of moment, in the Province of Alentejo, and both Armies went into Winter-Quarters.

The War in 3. In the Province betwixt Duero and Minho, there the Provin- was no memorable Action; only finall inroads made ces betweet on both fides: But the Province Trales Montes, enjoy-Duero and ed perfect Peace, both Parties lying still, each fearing to provoke the other. D. Ferdinand Mascarenhas, Count and Traios de Serem, Governed Beira. At his first coming thither, the Spaniards drove a Prey from about Villa Tropim, and Malpartida, but Captain Ruy Tavarez de Brito, overtaking them with 100 Horse, recovered all, though at the cost of his own Life. Soon after, the Enemy layed Siege to Salvaterra, but without success; for the Count having drawn together all the Force he could make to relieve it, and being reinforced from Alentejo, they broke up the Siege and departed. They being gone, the Count fortified the Frontier places, and obliged the Countrey People to retire farther from the bore ders, because he was inferiour to the Enemy in For-

Actions of John Fernand∈z Vieyra in Brazil against the Dutch.

4. We left John Fernandez Vieyra, the last Year in the Mountains of Pernambuco, expecting succours from Batia, to make War upon the Hellanders. They laid foveral defigns to take him, but he having timely notice, still escaped their hands. They promised 1000 Florins Reward for his Head, and he on the other fide offered 8000 Crusados for any of the Heads of those of their supream Council. Henry Hus was sent with 1 500 Dutch, and 800 Indians, into the Mountains, to cut him off with all his Party; but he having gathered 1200 men, whereof only 200 had Fire-Arms, posted himself so advantageoufly, and received them with fuch refolution, that after a dispute of several hours, they were totally routed with much flaughter, and had not the Night sheltered rered them, none had returned to carry the News. The Arms taken in this Action were the principal part of the Boory, because of the great want of them there was among the Portugueses. John Hus, revenged himself upon the innocent Inhabitants of the Towns of St. Lawrence and Apopucos, who lived under the protection of the Dutch, robbing and putting them to the rack. Soon after Antony Philip Camarao, and Henry Dias, with the Rlacks and Indians under their Command, joyned Folim Fernandez Vieyra. Andrew Vidall, also sent with some Foot, by Antony Tellez, Governour of Bahia, to apprehend John Fernandez, for breaking the Truce with the Dutch, took part with him against them. Advice being brought them that the Hollanders plundered Varzea, and carried away the Women that were therethey marched with all speed and defeating them in the Field, obliged those that retired into a House to surrender themselves. Though the Hollanders complained: that Andrew Vidal being fent to their affiftance, had joyned their Enemies, yet they as foon as he was landed, had burnt the Ships that brought him from Bahia.

The History of PORTUGAL

5. The Dutch going about to disarm the Portuguese Faithless Inhabitants of the Town of Sirinhaem, they were to in-proceedings. censed, that gathering together under Hypolito de Ver- of the coza, they drove them not only out of the Town but Durch in out of the Fort, whither they had fled for fafety. At Brazil Pontal de Nazareth, our Men had also Besieged the Dutch in the Fort, and Martin Sourge Moreno, with his Regiment coming to the affiftance of the Besiegers; Theodolius Straet, the Governour, underhand contrived how to deliver it up to them, and he with most of his Men entred into their Service. Andrew Vidal, who had been in this last Action, having again joyned John Fernandez Vieyra, they resolved to block up the place called Arrecife, and the City Mauricea, which was immediately put in execution, all the Forces being posted in the most convenient places, to cut off the Enemy from all relief by Land. They Attacked and took the Fort St. Cruz, seated betwixt the Arrecife and the Town of Olinda, the Commander with 60 Men taking Service among the Portugueses. The Fort of Porto Calvo, was also taken by Christopher Lins, the Garrison being fireightned for Provisions, and he having intercepted a Venel coming to their relief. 6. Whilit

6. Whilst these things were doing, the Portugueses of the River of St. Franck, following the example of the rest of their Countrey-Men, falling upon the Dutch, who would have fecured the principal Men among them, flew some, and drove the rest out of Town. Then befleging them in the Fort, and being reinforced by some Companies fent by the Governour of Bahia, they obliged them to surrender, and rased the Fort, that the Enemy might never think of recovering it. Andrew de Rocha de Antas, and Valentin de Rocha were the principal promoters and managers of this enterprize, who having delivered their own Provinces marched with the Soldiers and fuch others as would follow them, to joyn John Fernandez, and his Forces before Arrecife. Here it was resolved to Attack the Island Itamaraca. whence the Befieged had all their sustenance. The Defign was put in execution with 800 Men, who falling to plunder before they had secured the Victory, were repulsed, 80 of them being slain, and many wounded. The Besieged made a great sally upon the quarter where Henry Dias Commanded, but his Blacks received them with such bravery that very few returned to the Town, Nevertheless, having agreed with a Regiment of Dutch, that served the Portugueses, that in the heat of the Action they should fall upon them; they ventured to make another Sally, but with no better success, the Treachery of the Hollanders being timely prevented by their Collonel, who suspected their fidelity. A few days after, 130 of them Deserted, whereupon the rest were disarmed, and fent away to Bahia, except only the Colonel, Theodofius Straet, who was found innocent, and served to the last. But it is time we leave them to the next Year.

7. At Tangier, the new Governour D. Gaston Continho. made an inroad into the Countrey, with 150 Horse, overthrew a Party of Moors, and returned with a great booty, which proved fatal to Tangier; for the Plague then raging among the Moors, was brought into the Town, and in half-a years time carried off 1700 persons; a great number for that small place. The Affairs of India we related in the last Year, and have nothing more, but that D. Philip de Mascarenhae, the new Vice-Roy Arrived at Goa, from Ceylon, and entred upon the Government. The Truce with the Hollanders is the cause there will be little to say relating to these parts. Six Ships failed this Year from Lisbon for India. and arrived in safety.

Anno, 1646.

John Mendez de Vasconcellos, the Portuguese Ge-1. D. John Mendez de Vajconceitos, the Loringuisto Ar- The Portuneral for the Province of Alentejo, had an Ar- The Portugueses ramy of 10000 Foot, and 2000 Horse, about Elvas, ra- gueses rather to serve the interest of the Catalonians, than for vage the any defire King John had to make any incursion into Estrema-Estremadura. D. Roderick de Castro, General of the Horse, dura. and his Lieutenant, D. John Mascarenhas, were ordered to march with 600 Horse, carrying 300 Foot behind them to Olivenza, where they should receive farther Orders, of what was to be done on the 17th of 7uly, at Night. They marched with great secrecy, and having there received instructions, continued their march thence all Night, and at break of day without meeting the leaft opposition, entred, plundered and burnt the Town of Sta. Marta, bringing away a great booty, though the place was eight Leagues up the Countrey, betwixt Badajoz and Cafra. The Portugeses of the Province of Beira, The same were not idle, but made a road as far as Valverde, driving from the away all the Cattle, and taking many Priloners. Not Province of content with what was done, they advanced to Silleros, Beira. a place fix Leagues higher in the Countrey; but here they met not with their usual success, for after some skirmishing, they were forced to retire. The Spaniards to divert the Enemy from ravaging Castile, on the 5th of August, Attacked Fiaces, but to no purpose, for tho' the Wall was low and weak, it was to resolutely defended that they were forced to quit the enterprize.

2. Wherever the Poweugueses came, they utterly destroyed all before them, that the Enemies Frontiers be- The Portuing bare and desolate, they might find the greater difficulties, if they attempted to invade Portugal. Now to remove the Spaniards still farther off, and in case the War continued to employ them about recovering of their own, or if a Treaty of Peace were let on Foot, to have fomething to reftore, they were refolv'd to attempt tie taking of Codiffeira. This place was confiderable as well for its Riches, as the Strength of the Cattle and Number of its Garrison. The Count de Alegrette. who as has been faid, was rewarded with that Title by the King, to show himself worthy of it, resolved to use his utmoit Endeavours to gain this place. It was difficult to carry it by open Force and a Seige, and therefore he concluded upon a Surprize. Having chosen 600 Foot, and some Troops of Horse, backed by a good Number of Voluntiers, and provided Scaling Ladders. Petards, and all other Necessaries, he Marched by the way of Portalegre and Elvas to Aronches, where he was reinforced by other Troops and Voluntiers, with which Forces he posted himself within a League of Codisteira. There he halted till Night, having secured all the Men he met by the way; That none might carry Intelligence to the Enemy. His eagerness made him think it dark enough tooner than really it was; And therefore approaching the Place, whilst yet some glimmering of Light was abroad, he was discovered at a distance, by a Sharp fighted Sentinel, who giving the Alarm in the Town, was foon answered by the Castle, in both which Places, As well the Inhabitants as Souldiers, Ran to the Walls, and put themselves in a posture of Defence. Notwithstanding, all the opposition made from the Walls, the Portugueses boldly made up to the Gate, and Fired the Petards at the Town and Cafile Gares, which were torn in picces, and they Entring put to the Sword, all they found in Arms. D. Foon de Guevara, was retired into the great Market-place with many of his Officers, hoping there to Maintain his honour; but the harm they did among the Portugueses, enraged them the more, to that they were scarce satisfyed to disarm and make their prifoners of War. The Danger being over, they fell to plundering the Town, and not so content fer fire to it, reducing to affect the place they defigned to have maintained. This fuecess made the Victors think of attempting Badajez. They marched to Telena, a Fort Built the foregoing Year, by the Marquels de Leganez, as an out-work to Badajoz. There were in it, 150 Speciality, who at the first Summons, basely Surrendred upon discretion; and the Fort was demolished. Whilit the Lowers were at work, the Forces advanced to Badafier, where the Marquels de Molinguen was Governour, who prefently marched out with 7000 Foot, and the Home. The Portugues the much inferior in for the future. Having burnt the Baracks, and the mamber number stood their Ground, and obstinately defended themselves for the space of seven Hours, but were at last forced to retire, having lost many Men, besides many more wounded. The Spaniards say, the Fort of Telena was not Demolished, but left in the same Condition the Portugueses found it, they wanting time to ruin the Works, or remove any thing out of it, being forced to retreat with Precipitation.

The Hiltory of PORTUGAL.

3. Nothing better was the success of the Marquess de Attions in Aytona, the Catholick King's General, betwixt the Ri- the Provers Duero and Minko, in his defign of surprizing Salva- vince of terra. He marched with 600 Foot, and 500 Horse, Beira. but the Count de Castelmelhor, who commanded the Portuqueles in that Province, understanding his Design, posted himself under the Walls of that Place; and the Marquess perceiving his Intentions had taken Air, posted himself not far off, and being master of the Field, erected a Fort upon an Eminence, that might serve as a Bridle upon the Garrison of Salvaterra, and where he might be at Hand upon any Opportunity, to throw himself into that place which was very confiderable, as being upon the Frontiers of Beira. Some considerable Action might reasonably be expected here, the Spaniards keeping to their Strength, and the Portuguele to theirs, and the Forces on both fides daily encreasing. The Spanish Army grew up to the Number of 10000 Foot, and 3000 Horle, which on the 20 of November, undertook the Siege of Salvaterra, and preffed it so vigorously, that they foon lodged themselves upon the Ditch, and had begun to mine, hoping in few days to carry the place, This was the polture of their Affairs, when understanding that all the Forces of the Province of Beira, commanded by Count Seren, reinforced by others of Alentejo, under the Conduct of D. Sancho Manuel, were marching with all possible speed to the Relief of the Town, they raifed the Siege with fuch Precipitation, that they left behind; them much Provision, Ammunition, their Baracks, and about 300 fick and lame Souldiers. The Portugueses coming later then they had hoped, as those who were stayed by the violent Rains, were much troubled to be disappointed of meeting the Spanish Army, the routing of which they had promised to themselves, and greater Security to their Frontiers

They A -tempt Ladajoz.

Country round about, they returned to their Winter-

Bath fides ceafe from Holtilities.

quarters, as the Spaniards had done on their fide. 4. Thus stood all the Affairs on both sides, when as well the one as the other perceived that this fort of Action fer yed only to harrass themselves. The Catholick King seemed to maintain an Army to no purpose, since in 5 or 6 Years time, he had done nothing but waste Mony, and loofe Men and Ground. All the Portugueles did, was to destroy Towns, frighten the Country People, and kill some few Soldiers. These Considerations moved both Parties to put their standing Forces into Garrisons, and forbear farther Hostilites. Whilst the Catholick King attended the Affairs of Catalonia, and made his Interest at Rome, to obstruct the new King's being treated as such by the Pope, and the vacant Bene-fices in Partugal, to be filled by Men of that Princes presenting; he laboured to heap up Treasureof the Riches brought him from India, that whenever the Catholick King should renew the War, he might not want Money, which is the Life and Sinews of all Armies. He also took care to strengthen himself with Friends and Confederates, and having secured the King of France, his Ministers endeavoured to joyn in Amity with the new Common-wealth of England. It remained to folli-Portugues. cite the Friendship of the See of Rome, not only by per-Affairs at forming the publick Act of Obedience, and filling the Rome. vacant Churches, but by fatisfying that Court, as to two Points, which it feemed to refent. One was, that King Fohn perfifted in retaining some Revenues taken from the Church. The other, that he kept the Arch-bishop of Braga Prisoner, for which he was excommunicated, thould be reftored, and the Arch-bishop put into his Hands, as being his proper Judge. To those things the Pertuguese Ministers answer'd, that had the Pope sent his Nuncio, the Dispute about those Revenues, might and therefore the Pope demanded, that the Revenues have been eatily accommodated; it being made appear, that the Crewn was in possession of them for about 600 Years. And as to the Arch-bishop, that he being guilty of High-Treason, what the King had done, was justifiable according to the Canons, and therefore he could incur no Centure of the Church. Nevertheless, the King was ready to commit the Tryal of that Caufe to such Judges, as his Holine's thould appoint; but not to deliThe History of PORTUGAL.

ver his Perfon, because of the danger there was, that he should be set at Liberty by the way, if he touched at any port of Spain; as also, because King John nor being yet owned as such at Rome, they would not adjudge the Arch-bishop guilty of High-Timeason. The Court of Rame seemed satisfyed as to this Point, but not as to the other.

5. In this place it will not be amiss to relate the end of Edof the Misfortunes befallen to Edward, Brother to King ward Bro-John. It was said above, how he was taken in Germa-ther to ny, where he served the Emperor, and delivered up to King John the Ministers of Spain, as guilty of being privy to the revolt of Portugal. It was layed to his Charge, that being a Subject of the King of Spain, he had not discovered to him the defigned revolt of that Kingdom. On this account, he was put into the Castle of Milan, where fresh Evidence was found against him. He was kept with Guards upon him in the very Room, all his own Servants being removed from him, upon Suspicion that they contrived his Escape. The Governor of the Castle imagining that his Confessor who was a Jesuit, might have a hand in that Contrivance; fent him word to chose. another, so it were a Subject of the King of Spain, and no lefuit, letting him also know, that every now and then he must change his Consessor. This Message being delivered by the Lieutenant of the Castle. D. Edward broke out into a Pailion, which he had never done before, and among many other rash Expressions, said. His Comfort was, that he Suffered for the King his Brother, for his Family and Country, for which he was willing to lay down his Life. This the Lieutenant deposed against him; and several Soldiers also teltifyed, that being upon his Guard, they had heard him drink a Health to the King his Brother. The Governor having taken those depositions, there came a Commission from Spain, appointing three Judges to try him, and they again examined all the Witnesses; then they proceeded to examine the Prisoner himself, who being asked what he knew of the design of revolting in Portugal; utterly denyed he had any knowledge of it, but unadvitedly in his Discourse, added, that being at Lisbon, F. Birtholomew Gerreiro a Jeiuit had told him, that many Sebastianists (so they called those affected to the line of Braganzza)defired him not to depart Portugal, because they thought his Presence necessary for carrying on their Designs; that nevertheless he would not see any of them, but went away for Germany. Next, they asked him whether he had given the King (meaning the Catholick King) an account of those Words; he faid he had not, as making no account of them, but had immediately departed the Kingdom. They also put Questions to him about the Healths he had drunk, and the words he spoke upon the changing his Confessor, but they laid the chief stress on the words spoke by F. Guerreiro, and his not discovering them to the King, for which they pretended he was guilty of High-Treason, and consequently deserved Death. D. Edward pleaded, that he being a Knight of the Military Order of Christ, the judgment of secular Judges against him was void. To this they answered, that in cases of High-Treason, those Priviledges cease; besides that, two of the Judges were also Knights of Military Orders. Death put an end to this Controverfie, for the Prisoner falling Sick, either through his long Suffering, or some other Cause, put the same period to his Life and Imprisonment.

The Corres

6. For the better settlement of the Affairs of the Naor Parlia- tion, then in some disorder, through the long continument meet, ance of the War; the King had summoned the Cortes or Parliament to meet in Desember, of the foregoing Year. They being accordingly affembled, redreffed many Grievances, occasioned by the Army; ordered, that for defence of the Frontiers, there should be kept in Pay. 16000 Foot, and 4000 Horse, and as well for the payment of them, as other Expences of the War, affigned 2150000 Cruzados, which in English Money, is 286666 t. 13 s-4 d. allowing 3000 Ren to the pound, according to the common Computation.

The War in Brazil.

7. We left the Portugueses at Pernambuco last Year, fuccessful on both fides, and belieging the Hollanders in their Towns, all along the Coast. These last, erected a new Fort, to secure the Communication between Sinco Poitas, and Affigados, but their Garrisons attempting to cast down the Woods that were in the way, were obliged to quit that Work, with the loss of many Men. At the same time, D. Antony Philip Camarhao, who was gone to reduce the Indians of Rio Grande, gave a great overthrow to the Dutch, who came to attack him with 500 Men of ther own, and 1000 Indians. The News of this futcess, being brought to John Ferdinandez Viegra, he sent for Andrew Vidal, with fix Companies to reinforce the Victors. To the end, the Enemy might not perceive his Forces were lessened, he kept them in continual Alarm; and Henry Diaz, who commanded the Blacks, with only his own Men, took the new Fort the Dutch had erected, putting all within it to the Sword. Andrew Vidal, at Paraiba, having laid himself in Ambush, fent out 40 Portugueses, who drew 220 Dutch and Indians into the Snare, where they all perished. Both the Besieged and the Besiegers at Pernanibuco suffered great Want, but several methods were found to relieve the latter. The former had no hopes, but in a Fleet they expected from Holland. They had three Ships, which lay to secure their passage to the Island Itamaraca, and other parts of the Continent, which John Fernandez Vieyra perceiving, he attack'd them with 500 Men in Boats, who took one, and burnt the other two, then passing over to the Shore, he drove the Defendants from leveral small redoubts, and erected a Fort at the Port St. Mark, in which he left 200 Men with 18 pieces of Cannon, which he had taken from the Enemy.

8. The Dutch were now reduced to the last Extremi- The Dutch ty, when 3 Ships arrived from Holland, bringing Provi- in Bratil sions, Ammunition and Men; as also an Account, that receive two Fleets were fitting out, the one to secure Per-Succers. nambuco, the other to conquer Bahia. Near the same time, a small Ship and two Caravels, brought some relief to the Besiegers from Portugal. John Farnandez Vieyra, was feveral times warned, that a Conspiracy was carryed on against his Life; yet he still slighted the Advice, till being one day advanced from his Company, he faw three Fire-locks levelled at him, whereof only one gave Fire, and shot him through the Shoulder. Nevertheless he pardoned the Conspirators, contenting himself with only a verbal Check, given them Face to Face. Now at length, arrived a great Fleet from Helland, under the Command of Sigismund Van Scop, with 4000 Men, and all other Necessaries. To oppose this great Power, the Portuguese Commanders gather'd all the Souldiers and Inhabitants, that were before dispersed in places of less Consequence, and so considerably encreased their Force, that they stood no longer in sear of their Enemies. On the 5th, of August, Sigismund Van Scop marched with 1200 Men, to attack the Town of Olinda; but a pass that led to it, being well fortifyed, he twice affaulted ir, and was as often repulsed with great loss, and himself wounded. The following Night, 1000 Men fallyed upon one of the Portuguese Quarters, but with with no better Success. After this, Sigismund raifed some small Forts in convenient places, as well to fecure that Coast, as to amuze his Enemies; his design being as foon as his Fleet could be made ready, to fail for Babia, and make himself Master of that Place, but that belongs to another Year.

ched

Affairs in India.

9. Africk this Year affords us nothing remarkarble. Africk and only some Incursions of D. Galton Coutinio, Governor of Tangier, and the Martyrdome of Sebastian Gomez, who fuffered Death with exquisire Torments, for his conitancy in the Faith. D. Phillip Masc wenhas, continued in the Government of India, where likewife there happened little of moment, by reason of the Truce with the Dutch; only about the latter end of April, 46 Sail lying at Anchor, wi hour the Bar of Goa, ready to fail the next day; such a sudden violent Storm arose, that not a Veilel, or so much as one Man was saved, but all together perished in the Sea.

Anno, 1647.

1. 40hn Mendez de Vasconcelles, who still commanded J in Alentejo, finding his Forces too weak to withenthe From stand the many Incursions of the Enemy, applyed himtiers of A- felf with great diligence to fortifie the Frontiers, and particularly Ouguela, and Campo Mayor; but upon Advice, that the King had appointed Martin Alfonso de Melo, Governor of that Province, he retired to Lisbon, being unwilling to serve under him. Andrew de Albuquerque, General of the Artillery, commanded during the Abience of the Governour. No fooner was he vested with this Power, but the Spaniards made an Incursion with all their Horse, into the Country, berwixt Geromenta, and Elvas, and carryed away a great Prey; Albuquerque, though he drew out of Elvas, being too weak to oppose them. To revenge this, he sent Henry de Lamorle with some Troops, to draw out the Spaniards of Albuquerque, which he managed so dexterously, that bringing them into an ambush they were totally routed, and 120 Horses taken. The Enemy made another Incursion towards Olivenza, but as they retired, 200 Portuguese Horse Charging them in the Rear, recovered all the Booty. At this time came to Elvas, Martin Alfonso de Melo, the new Governour. The Baron de Molinguen General of Horse, Commanded the Spanish Forces. He gathered 1200 Horse, and advanced towards Elvas, 800 Horse, and three Regiments of Foot marched out upon the alarm. Martin Alfonso sent the Horse before, ordering Andrew de Albuquerque to Attack the Enemy, if he found them on this fide the Rivers Guadiana or Caya. Albuquerque Detached the Commissary-General, D. John de Ataide, with four Troops, and the fame Orders. D. John finding only a part of the Enemy on this fide, would not Charge them, which Antony Jaques de Payva perceiving, he fell on with his Troop, but being overpowered, his Men fled; those with D. Tobn, instead of seconding, followed their example, as did also those that were with Albuquerque. The Spaniards pursued, till they discovered our Foot, and Andrew de Albuquerque rallying his Horse under their shelter, when having no Foot, they drew off carrying away 40 Prisoners. John Paschasius Cosmander, our principal Ingenier, paffing betwixt Estremoziand Elvas, was unhappily taken by a Spanish Party. The King coffered the Count de Singuen in exchange for him, but the Spaniards left no methods untried to bring him to their Service, till at last they prevailed.

The History of PORTUGAL.

2. The Count de Castello Melbur, who Governed Adiens hethe Province betwixt the Rivers Duero and Minko, Un-raint the derstanding that the Count do S. Estevan, General of Rivers Du-Galicia, was to March with 1500 Foot, and 400 300 and Horse, to visit the Frontiers, sent out of Salvaterra, Minho. Collonel Francis de Franca Barboza, with 450 Foot, to possess himself of an Advantageous Post called Maleytas, near the River Minho, and a Mulquet Shot from Salvaterra. The Adjutant Labarta, was Ordered with 20 Horse, to attack the Enemies Scouts, and as if he were Overpowered, to retire and draw the Enemy within the reach of the Foot. Labarta Executed his Orders, and was purfued by 5 Battalions of the Enemy. With Francis de Franca, were 100 Dutch, who fled at the fight of the Enemy, and many Porugueses followed Ff4 their example, however Francis de Franca with such as flood by him made good his ground till the Spaniards retired. The Province Tralos Montes still preserved its quier, both Parties being inclinable to admit of it. Count Seren who Governed Beyra, having Obrained Leave to quit that Post, the King divided it into two Parts. Appointing two Generals because the Province was Large. D. Roderick de Castro had the Territory about Guarda, Pinhel and Lamego. D. Sancho Manuel that about Castelbranco, Viseu and Coimbra. D. Roderick being come into his Province, immediately disposed all things for the Defence of it, and repulfed a Party of the Enemy that broke in by the way of Alfayares. His next design was to take the Fort of Galegos, 4 Leagues from Almeyda, and 2 from Cuidad Rodrigo. To this purpose he gathered 60 Foot of the Standing-Forces, and 2500 of the Militia, with 160 Horse, and 3 pieces of heavy Canon. On the 23d of August, he marched from Almeyda, and the next day came before Gallegos, Planred a battery, and began to play upon the Place, but perceiving it required more time to make a breach than he could well spare, and Understanding the Garrisons of all the Neighbouring places were marched to Cuidad Rodrigo, to Relieve Gallegos, he thought a Fair Opporrunity was offered him of taking St. Felices, a Place of more consequence. Wherefore they Instantly broke up, and marched towards it with 120 Foot, and 120 Horse, and by the way Understood, that all the Garrison of the place was marched, except 300 Foot, and 800 of the Country People. Upon this advice he hasted forwards, and giving the Assault at several places rogether, Entred the Town, Plundered and Burnt it. D. Antony de Isasse, the Governour having Lost 150 of his Men retired with the rest into the Castle, and D. Roderick, Returned with great Honour to Almeida. Severall other small Skirmishes hapned, in which the Portugueses still had the better, which so Encouraged D. Roderick, that gathering 800 Foot, and 150 Horse, he made an inroad into the Territory of Cuidad Rodrigo, Burning all the Open Towns, and interly destroying the Country, without meeting the least opposition. D. Sancho Manuel, Governour of the other part of the Province, was not idle, but cut off 100 Spaniards, that had taken a prey in his diffrict, and Fortifyed Salvaterra, upon advice that the Enemy were affembling a confiderable body, which he was not able to Oppose in the Feild.

2. This Year the King created his Eldest Son Theo- A Design dolius, Prince of Brafil, and began to Assign the Reve- to Murder nues of the House of Braganza, for the maintaining of King John. his House. As the King studied all means to secure his Crown, so the Ministers of Spain omitted not by all ways, the never so unjust, to contrive his destruction, and had now infallibly compassed it, had not a special Providence preserved him. One Dominick Leyte, a Native of Lisbon, who had been Clark in one of the Courts, and was well descended, fled to Madrid, where, having offered his Service to that King's Ministers, he undertook upon several great promises, and some rewards in possession, to Assassinate King John. In order to it, he returned to Lisbon in May, with one Emanuel Roque, where, by degrees, he hired several Houses in the Turners-Street, next the Church of St. Nicholas. He opened Doors all along from one House to another, made loopholes through the walls to the Street, and provided feveral Fire-locks loaded with Poisoned Bullets, to Shoot the King as he passed that way in procession upon Corpus-Christi-day; that if one piece should happen to fail, another might certainly hit. The day being come, and he lying in wait, tho' he twice attempted to fire, his Heart failed him, and the King being passed, he shur the Doors, and went away to the Monastery of Our Lady of Grace, where Emanuel Roque expected him with two Horses, and they both returned to Madrid. There he framed excuses for missing of his Design; and receiving fresh encouragement, returned again to Lisbon. By the way, he discovered his Design to Emanuel Roque, who getting to Town before him, on pretence of taking a Lodging, discovered the Treason. Dominick Leyte, being Apprehended, Confessed the Crime, had both his Hands cut off, and was afterwards Hanged and Quartered.

4. The Marquess de Niza, who had been before Am- Negotiatiballador in France, was fent back this Year to follicite on at fevethe Concluding a League betwixt the two Crowns. He ral Courts. proposed to Cardinal Mazarine a Match betwixt Prince Theodofius, and the Eldest Daughter of the Duke of Orleans, which the Cardinal seemed to approve of, yet it took no effect, no more than the League at that time. However, King John sent three Men of War to joyn the French Fleet. At Rome, F. Nunho da Cunha, presented a long memorial to the Pope, pressing him to Confirm the Bishops Blected by the King, because of the great want of Prelates there was in all the Portuguele Dominions, but without any success; for three Popes fuccessively, absolutely persisted in the denial. France de Souja Coutinho, who was Ambassador in Holland, after having interposed all the delays that could be admitted to hinder the States sending a Fleet to Pernambuco, finding they had now 30 Sail ready to put to Sea, boldly made use of certain blanks he had of the King's, to affure them that Parnambuco should be restored; which done, he immediately gave the King an Account thereof, defiring he would order him to be secured, and if it were necessary to take off his Head, to satisfie the States, rather than the fraud should be imputed to His Majesty. By this wile the Fleet was kept back from June till December, when it was put out three times, and was still beat back by unseasonable weather, to the great advantage of the Portugueses in Pernambucs. The King on the other hand, always pretended he had ordered his Subjects in that Province to lay down their Arms, that they maintained the War in Contempt of his Commands, and that the faccours they had from Babia, were all by stealth. Several proposals were made for buying those places the Dutch possessed there, but they all came to nothing.

rook

m Brazil.

9. We lest Sigismund Vanscop, the Dutch Commander of the War at Pernambuco, preparing his Fleet to attempt the Conquest of Babia: All things being in readiness, he set fail from the Coast of Pernambueo called Arrecifo, about the end of Fanuary steering his course for the River of St. Francis, the better to conceal his Delign upon Bahia. There he took in what necessaries he wanted, and being joyned by Anderson's Squadron, sent thither before, put to Sea again, and toon appeared before Bahia. Fearing to attempt the City, i.e. Anchored at the Island Tapariea, opposite to it, and three Leagues distant, where he speedily creeted a Fore, and four redoubts on as many Hills that Command it, then stretched out his Fleet, fo that all the Shoar lay exposed to his Cannon. Antomy Tellez the Governour of Babia, fortified the passage, from the Island to the City, but adventuring contrary to the advice of the Council of War to Attack the Hollanders in their strength, was repulsed with great loss. This done, he immediately sent advice to the King, of the Condition he was in, who ordered him speedy relief. Twelve Ships were fitted out, under the Command of Antony Tellez de Menezes, Count de Villa-Pouca, with Orders, that after relieving Bahia, five of them should be delivered to Salvador Correa de Sá, and Benavides appointed Governour of the Province of Rio de Janeyro, and Captain-General for the Kingdom of Angola. His inftructions were to endeavour the recovery of that Kingdom, basely usurped by the Dutch, after they had overthrown Peter Cesar de Meneses, under colour of friendship, as was said before. The Fleet set fail, and the Dutch at Pernambuco having intelligence of it, and fearing it was defigned against them, earnestly pressed Sigismund Vanscope to quit Bahia, and come to their affistance, for they were much pressed by the Besiegers. The Portuguese Governours at Pernambuco, perceiving that the Dutch about Rio Grande improved that Countrey, which was a great relief to the Besieged, fent Major Antony Dies Cardoso with 300 Men, who deftroyed all he found there, driving away 200 Prisoners, and a vast number of Cattle. After this, Andrew Vidal marched with 800 Men to Ceará Merim, on the North of Rio Grande, and wasted all that Territory, killing 70 Hollanders, and bringing away many Prisoners, and as much Cattle as supplied the want of Provisions there was before in the Camp. Whillt these 800 Men were abroad, the Besieged made several Sallies, but without any success, and John Frandez Vierra to curb them, ordered that feveral Parties should continually keep the Enemy in alarm. Then the more to streighten them, he raised a Fort opposite to one the Dutch had built to cover the City Mauricia, which he managed with such dexterity, keeping them always upon their guard, that though it was begun about the beginning of October, they never perceived the work till the 6th of November, when our Artillery began to play upon the City, the Shoar and the bar, for all those places were within reach. We also Attacked and carried the Palace of Count Nafau, guarded by two Companies, which having Plundered, our Men returned without any loss. At this time time Sigismund Vanscop returned with his Fleet, having abandoned his Fort at the Island Taparica, before the Arrival of our Fleet. The Count de Villapouca Arrived at Bahia, eight days after the Enemy had abandoned the Fort; but eight of their Ships again appeared upon the Coast. Some Ships went out to receive them, and aster a long dispute, two Portugueses and as many Dutch were burnt and sunk. The Count took possession of the Government of Bahia, and Antony Tellez de Silva the former Governour remained there about his private Affairs, but with ill success, as will hereafter appear. The sive Ships designed for Angola, went away in December, to joyn Salvador Correa, at Rio de Janeyro; what they did we shall see in its place.

The History of PORTUGAL.

Anno, 1648.

The History of PORTUGAL

How things flood in Africk and India.

6. D. Gaston Continho, Governour of Tangier, never ceased to infest the Moors, and overthrew some parties of theirs that came to ravage the Territories of Tangier. This Year the Fleet of Spain confifting of 47 Ships and feveral small Vessels, and Commanded by D. John of Austria, appeared before that City, as if it were defigned to Land Men, but after some Hours Canonading on both fides, put to Sea again. D. John Luis de Vasconcellos, who Commanded at Marzagam, sent Presents to the Alcayde of Azamor, and the King of Morocco, to purchase their friendship; yet the Alcayde with 300 Horse, made an Incursion to the Walls of Marzagam, and though D. John fought with him from nine in the Morning till three in the Afternoon, he was forced to rerire, being overpowered by the number of the Infidels. In India, the King of Marava, commonly called Teveré, trusting to the strength of the Island Ramanancor, revolted from the Nayque of Madure, to whom he was tributary. The Nayque asked the affiftance of the Portugueses, for conveying his Forces into the Island. They fent a Fleet to his aid, and by their means the Rebel was reduced, and they received the Reward promised for their afsistance. Four Ships sailed this Year from Lisbon to India, two whereof perished in the Lazitude of Mozambique.

THE Count de St. Lorenzo, govern'd Alentejo, and The Spaniwith great industry disposed all things for the ards Bedesence of that Province. D. James Mexia Marquels siege Oliof Leganes came the second time to Badajoz, to Com-venza mand the Spanish Forces. His coming was the cause without that all the Portuguese preparations were redoubled, new success. Forces raised, and the Frontiers fortified. Whilst the main Bodies were gathering on both fides, the Mara quess de Leganes sent 600 Horse by the way of Albunuerque to plunder the Countrey as far as Marvao. The Count St. Lorenzo, having rimely notice of it, fent Achim de Tamericourt, the Commissary-General, with 100 Horse and Orders to fight wheresoever he should meet him. Tamericourt, executed his Orders with fo much bravery, that meeting the Enemy near Portalegre, he soon routed them, took 200 Prisoners, and recovered all the prey. This disaster provoked the Marquess de Leganez to hasten putting in execution his Defign upon Olivenza, which place, the Ingenier Cosmander (who before we faid was won by the Spaniards) had ingaged to put into the Catholick King's hands without much difficulty. On the 20th of June, he apreared at break of day before Olivenza, with 8000. Foot and 3000 Horse. Cosmander, who had the direching of the Attack, divided these Troops into four parts, ordering them to give the Affault in as many places; referving to himstelf a barrier of the covered way, where the Soldiers used to come out to work. The Spaniards advanced with resolution, and mounted two Bulwarks before the Centinels gave the Alarm. The Soldiers of the next Guards, and some of the Inhabitants hasting to the places where the danger was, maintained the Fight till the rest of the Garrison came to their relief. D. John de Menezes the Governour, at the first Alarm, ran half Naked with his Sword in his hand: into the Street, and with his example fo encouraged the Soldiers, that they drove the Enemy, forcing many to cast themselves down headlong from the Bullwarks. Yet the danger was not over, for in other places the Spaniards had turned some Cannon of the other Bullwarks

Anne, 1648.

Bullwarks upon the City, and many fell on both fides D. John, though he had received three wounds, ceased not to act, as well as give out Orders. The danger lasted till it was clear day; when Cosmander thinking to force the barrier of the covered way, was shot dead from the Wall. His death put an end to the dispute, for though the Marquels de Leganez dismounted his Horse to carry on the Assault; those that were drove out so discouraged the others that were to come on, that the Marquels was forced to found a retreat, and immediately returned to Badajoz. After this in several small rencounters the Portugueses were successful against the Spaniards; took a confiderable Convoy from them near Albuquerque; and the Count de St. Lozenco made an Incursion as far as Talavera, whence he returned with a great Booty, passing in fight of Badajuz, in hope the Marquels de Leganez might be drawn out, but he Rirred not. Some difference arising berwixt the Count and John Mendes de Vasconcellos, who had governed that Province before, the King fent the latter Prisoner to the Old-Tower, where he remained till the time we shall speak of him hereafter. In all the other parts of the Kingdom, there was no Action of any confideration this Ycar.

ons in France

King

2. On the 26th of April, was Born the King's third Son, Prince Peter, (now King) and was Baptized by the Birth of Bishop of Elvas, with all Solemnity and publick Demonttration of Joy. The Marquess de Niza, who was John's Son Ambassador in France, ceased not to sollicite the con-Peter, now clusion of a League betwixt the two Crowns, but all Reigning. his endeavours proved successless; whereupon, in February of the following Year, he left Paris, and returned home. F. Nunho da Cunha, was still at Rome, sollciting the Affairs of Portugal. Two Capucins came to and Rome. Rome with the Title of Ambassadors from the King of Congo, to give his Obedience to the Pope, and obtain of him Bishops and Missioners, for propagating of the Faith. The Pope gave them publick Audience, and appointed an Arch-Bithop, two Bithops, and 30 Minoners, Spaniards and Italians, giving them a Summ of Money, and ordering them to imbark in territ port of Spain. F. Nunho da Cunha, opposed the senting of these Bishops and Mittioners, because that the Kingdom of Congo appertained to the Conquest of Portugal, and EMARKE!

Dr. Emanuel Alvarez Corrillo, was fent from Lisbon by the King, to tecond him as well in that, as folliciting the Expediting of Bulls for the Bishops of Portugal, but all they could effect, was only to stop the Voyage of the Bishops and Missioners of Congo.

2. Whilst these things happened in Europe, the Duech Success of continued blocked up on the Coast of Pernambuco. In the Portu-Fanuary, the Portuguese Governors of that Province, re- gueses aceived Intelligence, that the Fleet under the Count de gainst the Villa Pouca, was arrived at Bahia, but that no Succour Dutch in was to be expected from thence. They were no ways Brazil. dismayed at this News, but resolved to proceed more vigorously than before. Accordingly they sent Henry Dias with his own Regiment, and some Companies of D. Antony Philip Camarao, to Rio Grande. He march'd with such Secresse and Expedition, that the Enemy knew nothing of it, till they felt the effects of his Arrival. for he Burnt and destroyed all before him. Such as could escape, retired to Gurairas, a fortifyed place in a Lake, but he attacked, and carryed that also by Night, putting all within to the Sword, without sparing Sex or Age. Thence he marched to Cunhau, which was also fortified, yet was deliver'd up, those within only compounding for their Lives. The King at last confidering of how great Confequence it was to expell the Dutch out of America, sent Francis Barreto de Menezes, with two small Vessels, and 300 Men to command there, as Camp-Maiter General. By the way, he met a Dutch Squadron, by whom he was taken, and carryed Prisoner to Arrecife, where he was kept in Custody o Months, and at last made his Eleape, with one Francis Bra, Son to the Officer that had him in keeping. Being come into the Portuguele Quarters, he joyned with John Fernandez Vieyra, and! Andrew Vidal being positively fet down to endure the utmost Extremities, rather then forfake the Enterprize they had in hand. They fent Captain Paul de Cunha, to sollicit some Succours from the Count de Villa Pouca, at Bakia, but he returned without any, at such time as a Fleet was arrived from Holland, which confitted of 44 Sail, with 9000 Land-Men aboard it, besides Sea-Men, when it came out, but some had perished in a Storm. Upon the Arrival of this great Power, the Portugueles gather'd all their Forces, quitting the most distant, and least advantagious Posts; and yet after all, they could make up but 2200 Men fit for Service. Sigismund Vanscop, who commanded the Dutch, proclaimed a Pardon to all Slaves, or Portugueses, that should come over to him, but it took no effect. On the 18th. of April, he took the Field with 7500 Foot, 500 Seamen, 300 Indians, 5 pieces of Cannon, and a great quantity of Ammunition; and marching to the Fort Barreta, the Captain who commanded there, unadvisedly went out with 80 Men, most of whom were kill'd, the Captain taken, and his Enfign furrendred the Fort. Francis Inveto, who commanded the Portugueses, having called a Council of War, it was resolved to give the Enemy Battle, though at such great odds, rather than stay to be beaten out of all their Posts by degrees. According to this Resolution they march ed, and posted themselves in a small Plain, at the Foot of the Mountains Gararapes, on the 16th. of April. They fent our Major Antony Diaz Cardoso, with 20 Men to observe the Enemy, who stirred not that Night, but appeared next Morning, being Low Sunday, upon the Mountains; Antony Dias with his 20 Men, and 40 Indians that had joyned him, skirmishing in their Van. The Enemy drawing near, our Men attack'd them with Sword in Hand, and at the first Charge disordered their Van, which retiring to the other Troops, endeavoured to rally. Henry Dias, with his Regiment, pressing hard upon them, was overpowred by the fresh Troops, and forced to give way, so that many of the Portugueses who Emanuel Pacheco de Mello, with the 5 Ships sent by the in Africk. were disordered in Confidence of the Victory, began to fly. Francis Barreto, in good time rallyed them, and charging the Enemy again, recovered the Day. Yet led a Council to deliberate about recovering the Kingthe Dutch were not soon broke, for the Fight continued dom of Angela. It was unanimously resolved to go upfour Hours very obstinate. At last the Dutch gave way, on the Enterprize, and for the carrying of it on, the Inand retired to a Hill, whether Francis Barreto thought habitants contributed 55000 Cruzadoes (which is 7333%. not good to pursue them, because his Men were spent o6 s.—04 d.) This encouraged him to hire 6 Ships, and with Travel, and fasting 24 Hours. There were taken buy 4 small Vessels. He listed 900 Land Men, and 600 33 Colours, many Arms, and a great Booty. At Night Sea-men, and having made all necessary Provision for the Enemy returned to the Shoar, leaving behind them, failed for Angola on the 12th. of May, with 15 1000 Dead, and carrying 523 wounded; of the Portus Sail. The weather proved so bad, his small Vessels gueses, 80 were killed, and 400 wounded. This done, could not keep up with him. However he arrived at Francis Barreto marched back to possess his former Quar-Quicombo, where he was ordered to raise a Fort, and fened themselves of the Fort Barreta, and Town of Olinda.

The History of PORTUGAL

linda, which last he resolved to recover. At Night he fent Henry Diaz with his Regiment, and some other Companies, who drove out the Enemy, killing 160 of them, and recovered 5 pieces of Canon. Francis Barreto ordered the Works to be rased, and his Men to rerire to their Post. Sigismund Vanscop sent a Drum, demanding exchange of Prisoners, which was refused, and they all sent away to Bahia. Some Ships of the Dutch Fleet that had been separated by Storm, arriving now, Sigismand several times artacked the Quarters of Henry Dias, but was as often valiantly repulsed by the Blacks. There was great want of Men and Provisions in our Ouarters, which was in some measure remedyed by the arrival of Collonel Francis de Figueyroa from Bahia, with 200 Men, and a quantity of Cattle. The joy of this Succour was abated by the Death of D. Antony Philip Camarao, Governor of the Indians, a good Christian, and resolute Soldier. Sigismund Vanscop perceiving Fortune favour'd him not at Pernambuco, put to Sea with some Ships, and landing in feveral parts of Basia, returned with a great Booty he had gather'd. Francis Barreto growing better versed in the Astairs of that Country, continued the War with good Conduct, as we shall see in the following Years.

4. It has been said above, that Salvador Correa was gent from Lisbon with the Title of Governour of Rio de The Dutch January, he arrived at Rio de Janeyro, and found there of Angola. Count de Villa Pouca, in pursuance of the King's Orders. Salvador Correa was no sooner landed, but he calters, hoping the Enemy was not in a Condition to de-landed to view the place. Five days after, arrived his ftroy them, and so it proved; for they had only pos-Vice-Admiral, and two of the small Vessels, but the Night following, the Vice-Admiral funk in the Bar. without the least Wind, no Man knowing what should be the cause of it. In her perished 360 Men, for only two were faved. Salvador Correa called a Council. where he proposed, that though the King's Orders were not to make War upon the Dutch, as supposing they lived peaceably with the Portugueses, yet finding on the Contrary, that they ceased not to make War upon those who were retired up the Country; he thought it was but reasonable to affist their Country Men, and expell those Usurpers. All that were present answered, they would either recover Angola, or dye. With this unanimous Consent he set sail again, and arrived at Loanda. Having taken a Black, he reported that 300 Dutch, with 2000 Blacks so streightned the Portugueses, who were fled to the City Masangano, that it was impossible to have any Correspondence with them. Having received this Confirmation of the unjust proceedings of the Dutch, he fent to summon the Governor of Loanda to surrender. This Meffage fo furprized him, that he fent to defire only & days, to resolve what was to be done. Salvador Correa perceiving this was only to gain Time to call in their Men that were Abroad, replyed he would grant two Days, after which they must expect to be treated with the utmost Rigour. They accepted of the offer, and in that time gather'd all the Force they could into the Fortof St. Michael, which commands the City, and that of our Lady on the Shoar, both which can contain 5000 Men. At the expiration of the two days, Salvador Correa sent to know whether they were ready to furrender; but they answered, they were resolved to hold out to the last. Hereupon he instantly landed 900 Men, and marched to the Town, which he entred without Oppolition, possessing himself of the Fort S. Antony abandoned by the Enemy, who had left in it 8 pieces of Canon, whereof only two were nailed. With the other 6 and 4 Demi-Canon brought from the Ships, he formed two Batteries that Night, which at break of Day began to play on the Fort of St. Michael, but not with any considerable effect. Salvador Correa displeased at this disappointment, and more at the News, that the Dutch had defeated the Portugueses at Masangano, resolved to venture upon a desperate Action, which was to assault both the Forts, joyned by a Line of Communication, and defended by 1200 Dutch, French and Germans, and as many Blacks. Accordingly at break of Day, the affault was given, and though bravely carryed on, he was forc'd to retire, leaving 163 Men killed, and carrying off 160 wounded. However he resolved upon a second attack, but the Enemy prevented him, by hanging our a white Flag, and furrendring the Forts. Five days after the Surrender, the Dutch that were abroad in the Country, being 250, with 2000 Blacks, upon Advice that the Forts were besieged, came to relieve them, but finding them loft, agreed to be fent away with the reft. notwithstanding the Queen Ginga, and the King of Congos Officers encouraged them to continue the War. The Fort of Benguela hearing what had happened at Loanda, was immediately surrendred by the Dutch that held it. Salvador Correa, having gathered all the Portugueses that were dispersed about the Mountains, repeopl'd the City Loanda, and fent some Vessels to recover the Island St. Thomas. But those Dutch that he sent away, passing by that Island, and giving an account of their ill success, their Country Men there, went away with them, leaving behind heir Artillery, and most of their Ammunition, which the Portuguese Inhabitants soon made themselves Masters of. Not content with this, Salvador Correa fent all along that Coast, to all places where the Dutch had factories, and in two Months, wholly cleared the Country of them. Being now rid of the Durch, Salvador Correa, resolved to take Revenge of Queen Ginga, the King of Congo, and their Confederates, who had affilted them. He gave the Charge of this Expedition to Barthoiomew de Vasconcellos, with whom joyned the King of Dongo, and the Jaga of Ambaca, who had always been faithful to the Portugueses. Vasconcellos, foon reduced the King of Congo, and other leffer Princes; the Island of Loando, being taken from the former, and new Tributes imposed on him, as a Punishment of his Infidelity. Queen Ginga fled 300 Leagues up the Country. This Queen was Daughter to a King of Angola, who was beheaded by the Portugueses, in revenge whereof, the gathered all the Youth the could. killing the old People and Children wherever she came, and continued a savage Life in the Mountains with these Robbers, always watching, all Opportunities of doing inten to the Portugueses. Now at length being driven G g 2.

The History of PORTUGAL

India.

up the Country, the fent an Ambaffador, and concluded Peace with Salvador Correa, who so well settled that Kingdom, that it continues ever fince under the Dominion of Portugal. 5. D. Gafton Coutinho, continued in the Government Africk and of Tangier, making many inroads into the Country in which he gained much Honour; but the Forces in that City being but small, he could not make so great advantages as might otherwise be expected, of his Valor and Conduct. De Philip Mascarenbas, the Vice-Roy of India, sent D. Alvaro de Ataide, with a Squadron, to the Coast of Coromandel, to fortifie the Town of Negapatam, which the Portugueses had lately built. The Nayque of Tanjaor, in whose Territory it stood, sent an Army to hinder the Work. D. Alvaro landed 500 Men, and after a sharp Dispute, put the Indians to flight, with much flaughter. This done, he saw the Fortifications finished, and returned to Goa; nothing more of Note happened in India, during the Government of D. Philip Mascarenhas, which lasted till the Year 1651. The War in Portugal being profecuted with small Force on both sides, and the Campaign being often spent in small Incursions, do not afford much matter worthy an History, which is the Reason, the Relations of Affairs at home are fo short; and the Actions abroad being very considerable, though I endeavour to reduce them to as small Compass as may be; yet because I would omit nothing that is remarkable, they often swell to a greater Bulk than the Domestick, and force me to infilt longer upon them then I had defigned.

Anno, 1649.

Count St. 1. TATE left the Count de S. Lorenzo, governing the away to go Governour of Brasil, and the Viscount gree of a Captain, were set at liberty on both sides. In Whilst he went to provide for the Sastey of Braganza,

The History of PORTUGAL.

April. 600 Spanish Horse driving the Cattle betwixt Fronterra and Cabeza de Vide, were resolutely Charged by the Commissary Generall Tamericourt with 16 Troops, and utterly defeated, 120 of them killed and double the Number taken. The Baron de Molinguen the Spanish Camp-Master Generall after this defeat quitted his Post, and D. Francis de Tutavilia Duke of S. German succeeded him. At the Request of the Count de S. Lorenzo the. Commissary Generall Tamericourt, was made Lieutenant Generall of Horse, and a Commendary given to the other Commissary Du Quesne. There being also great want of Horse, King John sold Crown-Lands to the value of 4000 Cruzodoes per Ann: to buy Horses to Mount the Cavalry, rather than impose new Taxes upon the People. The Horse being recruited, their Generall Andrew de Albuquerque Marched with the whole Body and the Foot of Elvas, Olivenz 1, and Campo Mayor thinking to reduce Albuquerque. He plundered and burnt the suburbs, but was repulsed by the Town and Castle and returned with loss. Neither had John Homem Cardoso sent our by him with 100 Horse, to surprize a Spanish Troop, better success, for Meeting 15 Spanish Horse he charged them and they kept him in play, till 7 Troops came up and took John Homen and 60 of of his party. Tamericoure now Lieutenant General Marched with 900 Horse to Revenge this loss, and having drawn out the Enemy from Badajoz and Talavera, tho they were more Numerous than he, put them to flight killing 250, with the loss of 40 of his own. These are the most Remarkable actions of this Year in the Province of Altentejo.

2. Count Castello Melhor, who till now Governed the Province betwixt Duero and Minhe, was called Province of Alentejo with good fuccess. This D. James de Lima succeeded him in his former Post. D. James his Astions Year, knowing that some Troops of Forreign Horse That Province scarce felt any effects of War except de Lima. in Alente- were come to Badajoz, he promised Rewards to all Sol- Two or 3 inconsiderable incursions, after which both Governour diers or Officers that should come over to him, perfor- Parties again rested, as if it were in Time of Peace. of the Proming his Promise to the full, with the first that deserted; D. Hierome de Ataide Count de Atouguia was now sent vince befo that in a flort time, the greatest part of them quitted to Command in the Province Trains Montes, where twist Duethe Spanish Service. At this time, all Prisoners on both finding the Standing-Forces very weak, he Endeavoured to and fides, as well Soldiers as Officers, not above the De- to lecure the Country the best he could with the Militia.

April the Commissary General of Horie La Morle Commanded at Chaves, but had positive Orders only to stand upon the Defensive. Nevertheless he marched with 220 Foot and 90 Horse, to plunder the Town of Umbra, which having performed and returned with the booty. he was fet upon by 1500 Foot and 350 Spanish Horse, who cut in pieces 140 of his Men and made the rest prifoners, except some few Horse with whom he fled to Chaves, where he Dyed of the Wounds he had received.

 Gg_3

D. Rode-Beira.

2. D. Roderick de Castro, who by reason of sickness rick de Ca- had been absent; Returning to his Government of part stro in the of the Province of Beira, sent Captain Francis Naper Province of with 100 Horse, and Orders to lay himself close in ambush Two Leagues from Cuidad Rodrigo, whence he was to detatch a imall party to drive the cattle about that City, that so 4 Troops which were in Garrison there might be drawn into the Snare. He Executed his Orders so successfully, that the Spaniards disorderly pursuing the detached Party, he fell in and cut off 30 of them, putting the rest to flight. The Enemy revenged this misfortune upon the poor Country People, killing many unarmed, in return for which cruelty, D. Roderick with 600 Foot and 200 Horle, marched to Sabugo a Town Two Leagues from Cuided Rodrigo, of about 300 Houses which he plandered and burnt down to the ground. The Spaniards affembling a good Body purfued him retreating, but he drawing up at their approach, they marched off. After this D. Roderick joyning his Forces with D. Sancho Minuel who Governed the other part of the Province, they both together burnt many open Towns in the Territory of Cuidad Rodrigo, and returned with a confiderable booty. That part of the Province which was subject to D. Sancho Manuel was this Year free from any acts of hostility.

ibeal.

4. The affairs of Portugal both at Rome and in France, continued in the same posture we left them the last Year. The Dutch Francis de Souf. Coutinho still continued in Holland much prepare to hated by that People, who looked upon him as a make War Faithless man, for the many assurances he had given them of the Kings quitting Pernambuco, which they faw rook no Effect. Nor was the King and Councill better fatisfied with h.m., because of the great Expence he made and small Success of his Negotiation. At length the States Ordered Francis de Soufa to depart, being resolyed to declare War against Portugal, to which purpose

The History of PORTUGAL.

they fitted up 25 Sail in Zealand, fent supplies to Pernambuco, and ordered 12 Ships carrying 2800 Souldiers for that Coast. Not long after they directed Francis Coutinho to obtain a new Commission from the King, for that they had important matters to Treat with him about. He Acquairsed the King with it, and. D. Folm de Menezes who was appointed to fucceed him dying, he continued there till the following Year. Antony de Sousa de Macedo at this time Embassador in England, was Ordered to withdraw from that Court, that he might not be a witness to the most infamous act that ever subjects committed against their lawfull Sovereign, in the unparalelled Murder of King Charles the I.

5. Whilst these things hapned in Europe, the Forces progress of at Pernambuco were not idle. Sigifmund Vanscop, as has the 101tubeen said, was Arrived at Arrecife; and now the Be-gurte fieged began to think of some Enterprize. On the o- Arras in ther fide, Francis Barreto, though weak, still lived in hopes, Brazia for he had promise of succours from Babia, and was informed from Lisbon, that the King had fettled a Meft-India Company, like that of Holland. Francis Barreto, omitted nothing on his part that could tend to the compaffing of his Defign. Collonel Brink, Commanded the Dutch, under Vanscop; and some Italians that deferted from the Portugueses, informing him how weak they were, he obtained leave to march into he Field, to undertake some considerable Enterprize, and diffeofed all things in order to it. Birreto having notice thereof, gathered all his Men that were differred, repaired his Works, ordered the Bridge of St. Burtholomew to be fortified, and all the people that attended their Plantations to be ready upon the first Alarm. On the 18th of February, Collonel Brink, marched our with 5000 Foot, 700 Pioniers, and fix pieces of Cannon, guarded by 300 Sea-men, and advanced towards the Fort Barreta, whence without halting, they departed towards the Mountains Gararapes; upon advice hereof, Barreto called a Council of War, in which, it was resolved to follow and give them Battle; and accordingly he fet out with 2600 Portugueses, Blacks and Indians. About four in the Afternoon, they reached the Mountains Gararapes, and found the Enemy posted on some of them with Guards in the Valleys. Some were for Charging them immediately, but because the Men Gg_A

Philip Mascarenhas, the Vice-Roy, was in amity with the Indian Kings.

Anno, 1650.

1. THE Province of Alentejo, still continued under the Government of the Count de St. Lorenzo. Whilst he made the necessary preparations to oppose the Enemy. It hapned that the Princes Rupert and Mau- The Prinrice, Sons to the Count Palatin, put into Lisbon, fly-ces Rupert ing before the Fleet of the English, which Anchored be- and Maufore the Bar. King John generously resolving to protect rice. At to the two Princes, ordered the Count de St. Lorenzo, to Lisbon, fend to Lisbon three Regiments of Foot, and 200 Horse. from the The want of these Troops in the Province was suppli- English, ed by the Militia. The Spaniards understanding that and are the Frontier Garrisons were weakned, sent all their Horse protested. to lie in wait for the Garrison of Olivenza, who by Night without being discovered, posted themselves in the Olive-Gardens about the place. John Homem Card so, going out in the Morning with his Troop to difcover, on a sudden perceived his retreat was cut off. However, he was no way difmayed, but closing his Ranks, and joyning Captain William Lanier, a French-Man, who supported him, he resolutely forced his way through the Enemies Squadrons, and recovered the Town without any confiderable loss. The Spaniards returned to Badajoz. Some days after, the Count de St. Lorenzo lent Tamericourt with 800 Horse, to attempt somewhat against the Garrison of that City. Giles Vaz Lobo, who led the Van with 50 Horse, Attacked the discoverers that came from the Town, and pursued them to the Gates, taking 20 of them; which done, they drew off, and the next day Tamericours routed two Troops between Badajoz and Albuquerque. Winter drawing on, the Count de St. Lorenzo, procured leave to return to Court, and the Camp-Matter-General D. John de Costa, governed the Province in his absence. He received intelligence that the Spaniards affembled their Troops, and threatned the Territory of Castello de Vide and Portalegre. Andrew de Albuquerque, General of Horse was sent to oppose them, who laying himself close in ambush at Melrisso, sent out 40 Horfe were weary, it was put off till the next day. That Night many of the Inhabitants that were dispersed about the Countrey reinforced the Camp. Morning difcovered the Enemy in the same posts as the day before. and Francis Barreto was revolved to expect they should Arrack him. Thus they continued till about One in the Afternoon, when the Dutch beginning to move, Barreto sent Collonel Andrew Vidal along the side of a Hill, to possess himself of the Top. John Fernandez Vieyra, with 800 Men advanced along the plain betwixt the Hills. Both of them met with vigorous opposition, but their example animating the Men, they put the Enemy to flight in both places. Thence they marched at the same time to beat the Enemy from the Top of a Hill which Collonel Brink himself maintained, in which place, they advanced not much till Brink being shot dead, his Men were diffnayed, and then all fled outright. The Portugueses pursued as far as the Fort Barreta, the dispute having lasted from two of Clock till eight at Night. Of the victors 47 were killed, and above 200 were wounded, of the Dutch, above 2000 were left dead in the Field, and among them Collonel Brink, the Prisoners and wounded Men were yet more numerous. The Dutch Standard, 10 Colours, fix pieces of Cannon, and a great quantity of Arms, Ammunition, and Provisions were taken. Francis Barreto having no more Men than just sufficed to carry on the Siege, undertook no other Action this Year. On the 4th of November, failed from Lisbon to Babia, the first Fleet set out by the new Company. The Count de Castello Melhor, appointed Governour of Brazil, Commanded it, and Peter Jaques de Mogallaens was to bring it back.

and India.

6. D. Gaston Continho, Hill continued Governour of Tangier, and had some small rencounters with the Moors, but no Action hapned of moment. He repaired the Walls of the City, cleared the dirch, and settled there the Redemption of Captives, which till then was managed at Couta. In November he refigned the Government to D. Lun Lebo da Sylveyra, Baron of Alvito, and returned to Lisbon. At Marzagao, there was nothing remarkable this Year, except the death of the Governour. The King appointed Numbo da Cunha da Costa to fucceed him. Neither doth India afford us any thing, because the Truce continued with the Dutch, and D.

Philip

Horse to Charge the advanced Parties of the Spaniards, which they did, and retired to their Body. But the Spaniards suspecting the Defign, would not pursue them. and the Portugues Troops rising out of their ambush. the Enemy thought not fit to encounter them, but retired leaving their prey, which was restored to the Countrey people. Of the Spaniards in the pursuit, 124 were taken, and among them a Captain of Horse and some sutlers. Not content with this, D. John de Costa marched with 2000 Foot, and 1800 Horie, sending Tamericourt before with 600 Horse, to plunder the Towns of Arroyo and Malpartida, ordering him to make his Retreat so leasurely that the Enemy might affemble their Forces. He executed it according to his Orders, and was purfued by a great Body of Horse and Foot, under the Command of D. Alvaro de Viveros General of the Spanish Horse, who perceiving Tamericourt, was supported by D. John de Costa, with so strong a Party, retired without doing any thing. D. John de Costa purfued him for some space, but to no effect; and Winter being now advanced, he had not the opportunity of undertaking any confiderable Enterprize.

Small ineur lions made by ards.

2. The Province between the Rivers Duero and Minbo, afforded not any matter for History. That of Tras os Montes governed by the Count de Atouguia, had not any considerable Action; Only the Count de St. Estethe Spani- van who Commanded the Spaniards on those Frontiers gathered his Forces, as if he defigned some considerable Enterprize; but understanding the Count de Atouguia, was in a good posture to receive him, he contented himself with burning two small Towns, and dismissed ning of this Year) having put into the River of Lisbon. his Troops to their several Garrisons. After this, a Parry of the Enemy, confifting of 1000 Men made an inmarched out with a small number, and meeting a Par-Engli|k

English, and the latter to secure the Conquests in India. Both of them had some reincounters with the Spaniards! who broke into their Territories; and they also made some incursions upon the Enemy, for the most part with fuccels. But all these Actions being performed by small Parties, and much alike to what have been already related: to particularize them all would swell to a Volume, and will only ferve to tire the Reader, wherefore I have thought fit to pass by most of them. The last expedition of D. Sancho this Year, was, the taking and burning the Town of Huelga, abandoned by the Inhabitants, who secured themselves in a Tower. Hence he returned home, with a confiderable booty, which he had gathered in the neighbouring Countrey, without meeting the least opposition.

3. This Year proved unfortunate at Sea. Antony Tellez de Menezes, Count de Villapouca, having resigned the Government of Brazil to the Count de Caltello Melbor, set sail for Lisbon, with the Men of War that had carried the latter. Peter Jaques de Magalhaens, Admiral of the West-India Company Fleer, set out at the same time with 18 Men of War, and 80 Merchantmen. Having made the length of the Tercera Islands. such a Storm arose, that four of the King's Ships were cast away, and in them Antony Tellez de Sylva, with most of the Men. The Count de Villapouca, and Peter Jaques, with the Ships under his Command, arrived fafe in Lisbon, and brought a confiderable return for the great expences the Company had been at. The Princes Rupert, and Maurice, (as was faid at the beginand Blake Admiral of the English, in pursuit of them. coming to an Anchor at Cascaes, it was debated in Councursion from Monterey, and ravaged a part of the neighboring sill, whether the Princes should be protected, and after The Princes bouring Countrey, driving away a confiderable booty. hearing all that could be faid on bothfides, the King Rupert The Count de Atouguia, upon the first notice hereof, generously resolved on the Affirmative. Blake, resolving and Mauto Attack them in the Port, the King fitted out 13 Men rice, with ty of the Spaniards, easily put them to the root, the of War, under the Command of Antony de Siqueira Va- a Porturest retired with precipitation to Monterey. D. Rode rajao, an old Soldier. The two Princes joyning this guese rick de Castre, and D. Sancho Manuel, betwixt whom Squadron, they put to Sea to meet the Enemy, having Squadron the Government of the Province of Beira was divided, Orders to Fight betwixt the two Cares, but the Ene- put to Sea, as we have feen before, were both this Year employed my upon their approach, standing to Sea, they return- and return in raising Forces; the sormer for Alentejo, to make up ed into the Port without engaging. Antony de Siqueira, without for those that had been sent thence to Lisbon, to oppose the wanted not Enemies to blame him for not Fighting, fighting.

and the King hearkning to them, gave his Command to fion. George de Melo, who had the Title of General of the Galleys. A few days after, he sailed out, and the Enemy again standing to Sea, they were surprized by so terrible a Storm, that all the Fleet was dispersed, some Ships drove to Algarve, and one falling into the English Fleet was taken. The Tempest ceasing, the English discovered, the Brazil Fleet, of which, they took 15 fail, and Winter coming on, returned home. This gave the two Princes an opportunity of putting to Sea again, after acknowledging the many favours they had received of the King, and particularly, that of protecting them, though contrary to his own interest and the Maxims of State Policy.

of several Ambassadors.

4. Since the departure of the Marquess de Niza. Christipher Soares de Abreu continued at the Court of Proceedings France, where by reason of the troubles of that Kingdom no further progress was made as to the Affairs of Poreugal, but the Friendship before Established continued firm. All his follicitations at Rome having proved ineffectual, the King now resolved not to trouble the Pope further, so that nothing new hapned at that Court Francis de Sousa Coucinho was still Embassador in Holland, and dexteroully diverted those People from sending supplies to Brasil. The States having Endeavoured to corrupt his Secretary, that they might see the Kings Letters, he improved their artifice to his own Advantage. For his Secretary having acquainted him with the overrures made to him, he ordered him to consent to them, and having filled up several blanks he had under the Kings hand, as he thought convenient, delivered them to the Secretary, who conveyed them to the States, and they supposing them to have been the Kings Letters, were thereby induced to deferr fending a Fleet they had defigned for Brazil. It was not long after this, when a Servant of his having accidentally Shor a Coachman, the Rabble rose and made 3 Assaults upon his House, and had certainly Murdered him and his whole Family had he not been relieved by the Prince of Orange his Guards. In September, Antony de Sousa de Macedo who had been Embassador in England came to the Hague, and França de Sousa went away to Rosae as Embailador at the French Court. Since the departure of Anzony de Sousa from London, there was no Portugues Mi-

The History of PORTUGAL. nister there, that whole Kingdom being then in confu-

5. We left France Barreto the Portugues General in The War in Brazil Twice Victorious over the Dutch, in the Moun-Brazil prorains Gararapes. Sigismund Vanscop the Dutch Comman-fecuted. der thinking this success had rendred the Portugueses less vigilant, made a sally at break of Day upon the quarter of Captain Antony Borges Uchoa, who having Notice of his approach, received him so warmly without his works, that he was foon Forced to retire leaving many of his Men dead behind him. The Dutch General made many other Sallies both before and after this, but none confiderable till the 7th of October, when he attempted the quarter of Captain Emanuel de Aguiar with all the Foot in the Garrison, but neither here was his Success any better than in the former Attempt. On the 15th of December, they again Marched out and lay close in ambush near the Salt-pits, but the Portugueles having intimation of the Place they lay in, attacked them there, and after a Vigorous resistance put them to flight with considerable Slaughter. In these and the like attempts the Year was Spent, the Enemy still decreasing in power, as receiving no supplies from Holland, our Embassador Francis de Soufa artificially diverting all that were designed for ing the chief support of that place consisted in the booties brought in from the Countrey, cealed not to surprize and India. the Moors in feveral parts, and brought home confiderable preys, which was a great relief to the Garrison. Nunho da Cunha did the same at Marzagao, and in one incursion killed 300 Infidels, and brought away 47 Captives. D. Francis de Noronha succeeded him in that post, and entred upon his Command with no less success than his Predecessor went off. In India, D. Philip Mascarenhas was still Vice-Roy, and this being the last Year of the Truce with the Hollanders, they seemed inclined to attempt the Kingdom of Jafanapatan before it was expired. This obliged the Vice-Roy to fend a Fleet under the Command of D. Roderick de Monsanto, to the relief of that place, but the Dutch attempting nothing, the Fleet returned to Goa. The Count de Aveyras, failed from Lisbon this Year, to be the second time Vice-Roy of India, but he died by the way. Four Ships and two Caravels, were sent this Year for India.

6. The Baron de Alvieo, who governed Tangier, know-

John da Costa, governed the Province of Alente. John da Cojta, governed the during the absence jo, as was said the last Year, during the absence till the on the Fron- of the Count de St. Lorenzo, which continued till the tiers of A- Year, 1657. Through the negligence of the Commillentejo. saries of the stores, Forrage grew so scarce on the Frontiers, that several Troops of Horse were forced to retire from Elvas, and Campo Mayor, farther into the Countrey. The Spaniards made their advantage of this opportunity, for a Party of 1200 Horse, and 600 Foot, from Badajoz, carried away a great booty from the Territory of Villaboim, there being no Troops in readiness to oppose them. To revenge this loss, D. John da Costa, ordered Andrew de Albuquerque, General of the Horse, with 1000 of them, and 800 Foot, to make himself Master of Salvatierra, which is fix Leagues from Olivenza, and where the Spanish Commissary-General John He Rozales then was with some Troops. Andrew de Albuquerque assembled his Troops at Olivenza, and marched with fuch fecrecy to Salvatiera that he had secured all the avenues before the Enemy heard of his approach. The Foot broke into the Town with little opposition, and with as little took the Castle, where they made 100 Horse Prisoners. The boory was very confiderable, the Town confisting of 400 Houses. Andrew de Albuquerque returned to Olivenza, having lest but three Men in this Action, for certain Troops of the Enemy that appeared served only to be Witnesses of the burning of the Town. Some few days after, D. John da Costa lay in ambush to cut off the Troops of Badajoz, that used to come out to Forrage between the Rivers Guadiana and Caya, but they not going out that day, his Defign was disappointed. His Florie being now much out of Case for want of Forrage, the scarcity till continuing, he studied all means how to disable the Enemies Troops. Being in-gave charge to Captain Emanuel de Saldanhi to endea-F 37 100

The History of PORTUGAL.

rwice, with only to Men to put this in Execution, but discovering parties of the Enemy both times, he was forced to return. The third time he went through, and having defeated 15 Men that guarded the Horses, kill'd most of them, and returned in safety. The Enemy now making great Preparations to enter upon Action. De John da Costa, who had neither a Force to oppose them in the Field, nor Provisions in the Frontier Towns to hold out a Siege, acquainted the King with his wants. who fent large supplies of Mony, whereby the Province was put into such a Posture of Defence, that the Spaniands thought not fit to attempt any thing on that fide. But D. John da Costa being thus supplyed, ceased not to molest them, with continual Incursions. Not to speak of other small Parties, one of 30 Men, commanded by the Cornet Stephen de Recha, came off with more Honour then Success. Being advanced in the Enemies Country, he found his retreat was cut off by 7 Squadrons; whereupon he retired to an old ruined House. he found in the Field. The Spaniards furrounded it, and offered him quarter, which he refusing, they attacked it, and were repulsed. After endeavouring in Vain to burn it, they went away, carrying with them the Horses of those in the House, and the Corner returned to Moura. a Foot, having lost two of his Men. About the beginning of November, Prince Theodofius, the King's eldeft Son, having privately stole away from Court, without his Fathers Knowledge, appeared at Elvas, and was there received with all the Respect due to his Person. The King was not a little disturbed at this Accident, being jealous of the Prince's Deligns, and therefore used. all gentle Means to draw him back to Lisbon; but that which at last prevailed with him, was want of Money. which forced him back to Court about the end of December. He positively resolved to return to the Frontiers, but was detained for some time by the King, till Death put an end to his Defigns, as we shall see in its

2. The Province between Duero and Minho, seemed The Vis formed that they had turned 400 Horses to grass near to spare it self all this while, that it might be the better count de Medellen, which is 16 Leagues from Campo Mayor; he sble to sustain the heavy burthen of the War, which Villa Pou fell upon it the ensuing Years. The Viscount de Villa ca, burns vour to delivoy them. Saldanha committed this Enter- Pouca, was still Governour there, who perceiving that two Towns prize to his Lieutenant, Francis Lobo, who let forward the Towns of Portela and Vieyra, were the Rendelvouz in Galicia.

for the Troops of Galicia, when they iovned those of Monterey, he caused both those places to be burnt down to the Ground. The Garrisons of certain Forts. the Spaniards had raised on the Frontiers of Galicia, perfwading the Country People to rebuild several Places that had been deftroyed on the Borders during the War. they began to affemble, in order to restore those Towns. Twice they attempted to rebuild them, but they were as often totally demolished by order of the Viscount, whereupon the Country defisted. The Count de Atouquia who governed the Province, Tras os Montes, lived this Year free from Action; both fides, as if it had been by Agreement, forbearing to infest one another. Nor was there any confiderable Action in that part of the Province of Beyra, which was under the direction of D. Roderick de Castro; most of the Year being spent in Incursions of no great Moment. In November, when the Prince, as has been faid, appeared at Elvas, D. Roderick, that it might be said he had insused new Courage into the Army, marched with 1500 Men, and entring the Town of Bodon, plundered and burnt it. D. Sancho Manuel who governed the other part of the Province, ceased not all the Summer to infest the Frontiers of the Enemy, and to repulse such of them, as made inroads into the Country, subject to his Command. By agreement this Summer, the Prisoners on both sides were set at Liberty without Ransom.

Negotiations in Forreign Courts.

3. Francis de Sousa Coutinho, having left the Ambassy of Holland, as has been faid, according to the Orders he had received from the King, removed to Paris, where he had Audience of Cardinal Mazarine, but nothing was concluded betwixt them, by reason of the civil Broils then prevailing in France. At Rome, the Portuguese Affairs continued in the same Posture, notwithstanding the Sollicitation of the Cardinal d'Este. Antony de Sousa de Macedo, who had succeeded Francis de Sousa Coutinho, in the Ambassy of Holland, followed the Footsteps of his Predecessor, entertaining the States with hopes of an Accommodation, to gain time, whilft the Dutch might be expelled Brazil. Having in some measure settled those Affairs, he laboured to enter upon a Treaty with the Parliament of England, which was forwarded by D. Emanuel Percyra, sent over to that exect, and afterwards commenced by the Envoy John de Guimaraens.

Percyra,

4. Francis Barreto, with unparalleled Resolution and Francis Constancy, continued the War in Pernambuco. About Barreto the beginning of March, he layed 300 Men in Ambush, presentes betwixt the Forts of Sinco Pontas, Affogados and Barre-the War in ta, hoping to cut off the Communication between these Brazili Places and Arrecife. Twelve of these Men discovering a Boat of the Enemies, swam to it, and took it, and the Dutch that came to succour their Boat, discovering the Ambulh, retired in time, so that the Portugueses had not the Opportunity of making any further Advantage on them. The Hollanders of the Fort Affogados, made a fally upon the quarter of Mendeza, but were foon repulsed with the loss of 6 Men, besides those that were wounded. Francis Barrete, understanding that the Dutch had great quantities of Sugar Canes at Rio Grande, whereof they expected very soon to make their Advantage; he sent thicker, Captain John Burboza Pinto, with 300 Men, who after destroying all the Country, and taking 18 of the Enemy, returned with a great number of Cattel. Sigismund Van Scop, the Dutch Commander, defiring to perform some Action, which might encourage the Befieged, resolved to destroy the Thicket, which tovered the quarter of Aguiar, from the Fort Affogados. To put this in Execution, he marched out with the greatest part of his Strength, but Emanuel de Aguiar, who commanded there, being in a readiness, received him so roughly, that for six Months after, he never offered to fally again. Continual Success, put Francis Barrere out of doubt of Success, and therefore he ceased not perpetually to follicit the King, and Count Castello Melbor, then Governor of Brazil for Succour, that he might with speed put an end to that War, before the Dutch now at Peace with all the World, had the leafure to fend supplies thither, which might much retard, if not wholly destroy, the success of his Labours.

5. The Baron de Alvito still governing Tangier, it Tangier happened that certain Vessels laden with Corn from Lis- and India. bon, and the Islands, sailing for that City, were cast away, which caused so great a Famine in that place; that the Inhabitants were forc'd to feed on Herbs and Roots they could gather in the Fields. The Baron generously at his own Expence, maintained the Sick, and a multitude of Children, which would otherwise inevitably have perished. This Calamity reached the Horses, who could not be maintained upon Grass alone, so that it was difficult to make Excursions, which added much to the great scarcity of Provisions. D. Francis de Noronha, Governor of Mazagam, sent an Ambassy, and Presents to the King of Moroeco, which was by him honourably received, and generously returned. D. Francis continued in this Command, till the Year 1654, during which time, nothing remarkable happened there, so that we shall not have occasion to make any mention of him. This was the last Year of D. Philip Mascarenhas, his Vice-Royship in India, and in it there was little remarkable, only the Chendarraos, a vagabond fort of People in the Country of Hidalcan, possessed themselves of the Mount or Promontory of Chaul, whence they were drove by the Vice-Roy's Order, by D. Alvaro de Atayde. This Year two Galeons and a Pink failed from Portugal to India, and the Galeon, S. Philip built there, arrived at Lisbon.

Anno, 1652.

in Portugal.

I. THE Prince who (as was faid) returned to Libon the latter end of the last Year, used all polmade Cap- fible means to perswade his Father to send him again to rain Gens- the Frontiers, but the King jealous of him, could not be worked upon. At length to conceal his own Jealouse and disappoint that Design of his Son, he appointed him Captain General of all the Forces in the Kingdom, the having the Charge of all, he might not apply himselful command in any one Province. D. John de Colta, neve ceased to harrais the Enemies Frontiers, bringing it thence confiderable Boory. In revenge, the Spanial drove a great Prey from the Territory of Telena, and though Lieutenant General Tamericourt marched after them with the Troops of Olivenza, they being far before him got safe into Barcarota. Before, that place was large Field, encompassed with a Dirch, and lying und the Cannon and small shot of the Town, which the Sp. niards believed would fecure their Prey. However Ta maricourt coming to Barcarota, difmounted part of h Horse, and breaking into the Field before day, drow away all the Cattel, without receiving any confiderab Lofs. The Spaniards fallyed our upon him, bur sudde ly retired; and he marching of with the Booty, reft red it to the Country People. Neither was he less su cessi

The History of PORTUGAL

cessful, a few days after, when engaging the Troops of Badajoz, he took the Spanish Lieutenant General of Horfe, D. Francis Hibarra, with other Officers, and 120 Horses. The Prince being now Generalissimo, sent his Orders to all the Provinces of the Kingdom, absolutely forbidding any Incursions to be made for the future, into the Spanish Frontiers. D. John de Costa, upon receibt of this Order, replyed to it, shewing how disadvantagious it was to the Kingdom, by reason of the great Benefit reaped by those inroads, for he in the space of two Years, had destroyed above 1400 of the Spanish Horse, having scarce lost 100 of his own. Besides he looked upon this as fo great a check to his Authority, that he defired leave to lay down his Command. The Prince being well farisfyed of D. John's Zeal and Fidelity, recalled his Order, and the King gave him the Title of Earl of Soure. He to appear worthy of this Honour, endeavoured to make amends by his Conduct, for what he wanted in Strength. To this purpose, he secretly gathered 1500 Horse from the Neighbouring Garrisons, which Lieutenant General Tamericour, and Commissary General Duquesne divided betwixt them. With these Troops they passed the River Guadiana, and lay close in the Wood near Badajoz. In the Morning, a Squadron of Horse issuing out of the Town according to Custom, they were drove back by some of our Troops. Fresh Troops seconded the Enemy from the City, and they kept in play, till D. Alvaro de Viveros took the Field, with all the Horse of that place, and having drawn them up, advanced further then was thought convenient for the safety of the Town. Duquesne who was nearest, thinking it now time, moved towards him with more Courage than Order. The Spanish General halted and bravely stood the Charge, in which Duquesne received three Wounds, and Captain Sancho Dias was kill'd, with feveral Soldiers; the rest of the Troops missing their Commander, retired with Precipitation. Tamericour perceiving this Disorder, charged furiously with his formost Troops, which being too open in their Ranks made but little Impression; but those in the Rear coming up, behaved themselves with such Bravery, that after a long Dispute, they broke the Enemy. The Troops of Duquesne, and part of those with Tamericour, being wholly blinded by the Dust, sled to Olivenza, believing Hh2 ra.

the rest were cut off. Tamericour rallyed the rest, marched off with above 200 Horses he had taken from the Prisoners; among whom, was a Captain of Horse, and other Officers. The Count de Soure, being a strict obscrver of Discipline, commended those that had behaved themselves well, and severely checked those that had fled, giving the King also a particular Account of the Merits of the former, and Demerits of the latter.

2. The Viscount de Villa Nova, Governor of the Province betwixt Duero and Minho, still continued in perfect Tranquility, nothing happening in his Command, but that Captain Labar, a valiant French-Man, disorderly with a party of Horse, charging another of the Enemy, was himfelf killed, and most of his Men wounded. The Province Tras os Montes, governed by the Count & Antouguia, by consent of both Parties, was for several Months free from Action. Some small Incursions were afterwards made on both fides, but none of Note. The King having now chose the Count de Penaguiao his Lord Chamberlain, to go Ambassador into England; appointed the Count de Atouguia to execute his Office, and John Mendez de Vasconcellos, was sent in his place to govern the Province. The most remarkable Action performed this Year by D. Roderick de Castro, in his Divifion of the Province of Beyra, was the burning of the Town of Martiago, which contained 300 Houses; the other Enterprizes were too small to merit any place here. D. Sancho Manuel, who commanded in the other ons in Beipart of Beyra, understanding that a Troop of the Enemies was quartered at Lobeyros, and had twice repulsed parties of the Portuguese Militia that ravaged the Country thereabouts, ordered the Cornet Dominick Homen, with 40 cholen Men to Iye in wait for them. He sent before some of the Militia to drive the Cattel; the Span so Troop backed by a company of Foot, immediately rushed out upon them, but the Enfign who was at hand, furioufly falling in upon the Foot, broke them, and with the same Success routed the Horse, killing many, and taking several Prisoners. This Success was soon ballanced by a greater disaster, for D. Sancho being informed that the Spaniards gathered a great Power, in order to break into his Province; and not being in a condition to oppose them, he though to divert them, by making at the same time an inroad

The History of PORTUGAL.

into their Frontiers, hoping he might retire to places of fafety, before they could intercept him. With this Defign, he gathered 350 Foot, and 200 Horse, and marching to Segura, sent before Captain Gaspar de Tavora with 140 Horse, to drive the Cattle about Sacravim. which done, he had orders to retire to Collonel John Fiallo, who should expect him with 60 Horse, and the rest of the Foot, at a place called Salto, near the River, Lagao. Gaspar de Tavora, executed his Orders with fuch expedition, that by Noon he had joyned John Fiallo. But the Spaniards having notice of D. Sancho's March, no fooner entred Portugal, then they turned back, and marching towards their Town of Carza, by which the Portugueles must of necessity pass, appeared before Fohn Fialho, when least he expected it, with 600 Horse, and as many Foot. He covering his Horse with the Foot, retired in good order for above a League, till coming to a Pass, the Enemy drew up before him. Necessity now obliging him to charge them, he fell with such Bravery upon the 600 Foot, that he absolutely broke them; but in the mean while, the 600 Spanish Horse charging his 200 now divided from their Foot, after some short dispute overpowered, and tally routed them. The Enemy pursued their Advantage, and John Fialho rallying his Foot, recovered an advantagious Post to defend himself. The Enemy ceased their pursuit in care for their Foot, which had been overthrown, and return'd to compleat their Victory, by destroying John Fialho and his party. He had, as was faid, gained an advantagious post; but having spent all his Ammunition, was made Prisoner with all the Officers of Horse and Foot, 140 Horse escaped, the rest with all the Foot, were either killed or taken. After this Disaster, D. Sancho Manuel retired to Idanha Nova, and garrisoned the Frontiers with the Militia, writing to the Prince for Supplies, which were foon fent him. Being recruited, and joyning his Forces with those of D. Roderick de Castro, he resolved to revenge the late Affront, by surpising the City Coria. They marched with 1500 Foot, and 700 Horse, some Petards, and other necessaries for such an Enterprize; but the distance being great, they could not come before the City till after day. However, having divided their Foot, they attacked the Suburbs in two places, which they entered, plunder'd and burnt; which Hh 3 which done, feeing no possibility of forcing the City! they retired, and each returned to his Province.

3. The troubles of France increasing, rendred all Foreign Negotiations so uncertain at that Court, that Franca de Sousa Coutinho, having obtained leave of the King. came to Portugal, leaving D. Felicianus Dourado Secretary of the Embaffy, to Reside there during his absence. At this time there was held at Park a Synod of Bishops. wours used to whose Consideration King John recommended the for obtain finding of some expedient for prevailing with the Pope ing Bishops, to precognize the Bishops of Portugal. They used their but in vain. utmost endeavours, but the Spanish Interest still prevailing, nothing could be done at this time. Antony de Soufa de Macedo, having obtained leave of the King to quit the Embassy of Holland, D. Antony Rapozo succeeded him in that employ. He made it his business to heighten the misunderstandings betwixt the English and Durch, because the latter having sustained great losses by the War they were engaged in with the former, were thereby disabled from sending succours to Pernambuco. The King at the same time confidering how advantageous the Friendship of England might prove to his Affairs, resolved to send an Ambassador thither, and pitched upon the Count de Penaguino for that employ, as we have said before.

Francis Barreto, Astions in Brazil.

4. Francis Barreto, the General of Pernambuco, continued the Siege of Arrecife, with confiderable resolution, his further hoping at length to reduce the Besieged, whose only hope confifted in the fuccours they expected from Holland. The first part of the Year passed without any memorable Action. In May, Francis Barreto, ordered Major Antony Diaz Cardozo, with 400 Men, to lie close in ambush, and send out parties to endeavour to draw the Garrisons of the Forts Barreta and Affogados, into the snare. The Major possess himself of the post asfigned him without being discovered, and sending out certain small Parties drew out the Enemy, as he had defigned, but the number of the Hollanders being greater than had been expected, the Fight continued doubtful for above an hour; at length the Dutch were roured and fled to their Forts, leaving the Field covered with dead Bodies. After this, Barreto being informed that the Enemy had laid up great store of Brazil-Wood and other Commodities at Rio Grande, in order to be transported The History of PORTUGAL transported into Holland, he sent thither the Collonel. Andrew Vidal with 300 Men, who burnt their wood; wasted all the Countrey, and returned with a great; booty and many Prisoners. The Duech had im those Seas 50 fail of Ships, from 20 to 30 Guns, but so ill Manned and Equipped for want of supplies from Hulland, that the they mer the Portuguese Brazil-Fleet and fought it, yet after a short dispute they were forced to retire without any Prize, and the Fleet arrived fafe at Lisbon, on the 26th of October.

5. We left the Baron de Alvito, Governour of Tan- The Spanigier, labouring under great scarcity of Provisions the last and try the Year. He had not as yet received any relief from Lis-Governour bon, which being known at Ceuta, D. Fohn Soares, who of Tangier, Commanded there for the Spaniards, hoping their wants without might reduce that Garrison to revolt from their King, successfent two Brigantines and a Bark thither, ordering the Commander of the Bark to enter the Port, and convey the Letters he had writ for that purpose, to the Baron, and other Men of note. This being put in execution, the Baron read the Letters, which were to perswade him to submit himself to the King of Spain, with promise of great Rewards, or else to offer him late passage to Liston. The Baron, whose Loyalty was not shaken, having in vain endeavoured to draw those in the Bark a-shoar, caused another to be fitted out, in which, went several resolute Gentlemen with Fire-Arms, and Orders to Attack the Enemies Bark, when they should approach to receive the Letter they expected. The Barks coming together they fired, killed three of the Spaniards, and carried the rest Prisoners to the City. This Action so exasperated the Spaniards, that they sent three Ships to interrupt any relief that might be defigned for Tangier, but the Baron ordering the Vessels that came from Lisbon to be decained in Algarve, till further advice from him, the Enemy quitted their station, and gave way to five Caravels with Provisions to relieve that City. The Baron being informed that certain Captive Moors in the Town, had by intelligence with those abroad, agreed to let themselves down the Wall of the old Town, near which, the others were to lie hid in order to receive them; he ordered three Soldiers habited like Moors to be let down, and when the Infidels came on to succour them, they were received Hha of India.

received with such a volley of great and small shot, as laid many dead before the Town, the rest flying with more speed than they came on.

6. D. Philip Mascarenhas, having ended his Vice-Royship in India, and obtained leave of the King to return The Affairs home, imbarked for Lisbon, and died by the way. The Count de Aveyras, sent by the King to succeed him, dving also in the Voyage, as was said before; the Sealed Patents, which are always laid up to provide for fuch exigencies, being opened, it was found that the care of the Government was committed to D. F. Francis dos Reys, Primate of India, Francis de Melo de Castro, and Antony de Sousa Coutinho. Having entred upon the Government, they fitted out a Fleet of 22 Sail, Commanded by Antony de Sousa Coutinho, one of the Governours. This Fleet set sail in order to recover Mascate; some of them entred that Bay, but receiving much harm from the Cannon of the Town, they stood out again, and came to Anchor in the River Lafette, 100 Leagues from Mascate. They had lain there but a few days before they discovered a mighty Fleet of Arabs, Commanded by one Hali a Moor. Antony de Soufa, received them with such gallantry, that after the Battle had lasted many Hours, he obtained a Complear Victory, killing above 5000 of the Infidels. Captain Antony Lobo, in this Action, being boarded by two of the Enemies Vessels, set fire to his own Powder, and blew himself up and both them. Antony de Sousa rerurned to Goa, where he found D. Vasco Mascarenha, Count de Obidos, whom the King had appointed Vice-Roy, upon the News of the Death of the Count de Aveyras, Within a very few days, the whole City running mo Mutiny, offered the Government to Antony de Soufa, who rejected their offer; then they pitched upon D. Bras de Castro, a Turbulent Man, who presently accepted of it, which done, they seized upon the person of the Count, and kept him Prisoner. But God shewed how displeasing to him this Rebellious Government was, by the Judgments that immediately attended the beginning of it, for the Dutch before the expiration of the Truce began a War, which proved the most fara to the Portugueses, of any they ever had fince the Conquelt of that Countrey. The Hollandrs resolving to break the Truce, fitted out 10 Ships, under the ComThe History of PORTUGAL

mand of John Mansucar, who coming to Tutocorim. seized all the Money laid up there to buy Pearl, and at the same time took a Ship bound from Cochim to China. D. Bras de Castro, immediately prepared to oppose them. Ceylon was the place next to danger, as being that they had always aimed at. Emanuel Mascarenhas Homem. was Governour there, who hearing of the preparations of the Dutch, sent four Companies to secure Calature, the fafety of Columbo depending on that Port. This reinforcement not coming in time, the place fell into the hands of the Enemy, and for Columbo, all the people of the Countrey flocking thither could not hold out long for want of Provisions. The News of this loss being carried to Manicravare, where Lope Barriga Commanded, the whole Garrison mutinied, because, according to the Orders received from Mascarenhas, he designed to march them to Columbo, and killing some that opposed them, sent him away and took the Field. The King of Candia thinking to make his advantage of this disorder, marched a good body of Forces towards them, and offered them large terms if they would come over to his Service. They answered him with their Weapons, and after a fight which lasted many hours, retitired to Columbo. Emanuel Mascarenbas the Governour. having gathered what Forces he could into the City, designed to oppose the mutiniers, and fired three pieces of Cannon. They resolved to be revenged, being reinforced by two Companies of Foot, which deferted to them from the City, but the Religious and Inhabitants to prevent the mischief they saw impending, opened one of the Gates and let them in. Emanuel Mascarenhas. took Sanctuary in a Monastery, and the City chose for their Governours Gaspar de Araujo Pereyra, D. Francis Rolim, and Francis de Barros da Silva, and to Command in the Field Gaspar Figueyra da Serpa, an experienced Soldier. He hearing the Dutch with some Natives were abroad gathering Cinnamon, marched to cut them off, but they having intelligence of his march, were gone before: so having reduced some Towns that had revolted, he returned to Columbo. The Governours receiving advice that the Dutch were raising a Fort at Angratota, which would Command all the Countrey about Columbo, sent Gaspar Figueyra with 500 Foot, to drive them thence. Gaspar Figueyra, marched with expedition, pedition, and having secured all the Avenues by which the Enemies might receive any relief, carried on a Trench so close to their work, that having raised a Platform and planted thereon one piece of Cannon, he so incommoded them, that after 10 days the Dutch surrendred upon discretion; 110 of them were taken, 40 Faos, and 300 Chingalas, who were severely punished, as being for the most part Subjects to the King of Portugal. At the same time John Botado, who was in the Inland with a Company of Portugueses and some Blacks. was fet upon by an Officer of the King of Candia, with 3000 Men, and though the Blacks forfook him, the Porrugueses sought so desperately that they put the Indians to flight, leaving so many dead, that those who saw them could not be perswaded they had been killed by fo few. John Botado, with his Men retired to Columbo. Four Ships and one Caravel sailed this Year from Lisbon for India, and two Ships from thence arrived in Portugal.

Anno. 1653.

The War proceeds coldly on both sides.

I.K Ing John had resolved not to make any great Efforts to carry the War far into the Spanish Territoto carry the War far into the Spanish Territories, concluding it his securest course to fill his exchequer, fortify his Towns and build Ships, whilst the Spaniards wasted themselves with their Wars in Italy and Flanders, were diverted from putting Portugal into any danger. This was the reason that he kept no more Forces asoot in Alenrejo, then served to secure the Frontiers, and consequently the actions there were of small moment and few of them worth relating. The most considerable was a party of 950 Horse, and 100 Muskeriers, Commanded by Andrew de Albuquerque Generall of the Horse, which defeated 1300 Spaniards, killing 200 of them among whom was their Lieutenant Generall of Horse, the Count de Amarante, and taking above 400 Prisoners. Neither did this Year produce any Exploits of note in the other Provinces, which continued in full Peace, bating some small Alarms given on bothfides, which only served to keep the Garrisons upon their Guard without any damage done on either fide.

2. In the midst of all his fortunate Successes the King received one Faral blow, which outbalanced many of his former prosperities. This was the death of his Eldest Son Prince Theodosius, whom for his excellent Prince qualities he entirely loved, The Prince, as has been Theodofibefore hinted, had Laboured under a tedious sickness, the Kings and tho' the Force of it was abated, he never after enjoyed perfect health, for there continued a defluxion upon dyes. his stomach, which no medicines could ever remove, but on the contrary some that were used seemed to hasten his End. On the 3d of May he took to his bed, and for 6 Days the Phisitians Employed all their Art for recovering of him, the whole Clergy and layery offering up their Prayers to God for him. All proved in vain. for the Number of his days was compleat, therefore on the Night he received the Viaricum and on the 15th gave up his Ghost. The Encomiums bestowed on this Prince are so great, they will appear incredible, and therefore I think fitter to omit than trouble the Reader with them. He dyed Aged 19 Years, 3 months and 7 days. His body was buryed in the Royal Monastery of Bêlem, being Attended thither by an incredible multitude of the People Lamenting the Loss of so hopefull a Prince. Immediately after his death the King affembled the Parliament, in which his Second Son Prince Alfonso was Sworn Heir to the Crown. The 3 Estates agreed to Support the charge of the War with the Tenth of all Temporal and Spiritual Estates, and in case the Spaniards should besiege any considerable place, then to add one Fourth part more of the faid Tax; but if it should happen the Enemy Invaded the Kingdom with fuch powerfull Forces as might bring it into danger, then they offered all they had for the Support of the Crown: Before the Parliament broke up, the King fustained another Loss, in the Death of his Eldest Daughter Joanna, who departed this Life on the 17th of September, She Lyes buried in the Monastery of Belem.

3. The Affairs of Portugal continued much in the same The Portuposture we lest them at the Courts of Rome. France and guese Em-Holland, In England the Count de Penaguiao sollicited bassadors the settling of a Peace with the Usurper Oliver, who brother, bewas much offended at the protection given in Lisbon, to headed for the Princes Rupere and Maurice. But this Embassador murder in before the End of his Negotiation met there with a Di- England.

faiter,

faster, which cost the Life of his Brother. The manner of it in short was thus. D. Pantaleon de Sa, the Embassadors Brother walking one Evening in the New Exchange, and resenting an affront which he thought he had received from one Gerard, the Night following repairs to the same place attended by the Embassadors retinue, and with Sword and Pistoll, falls upon all he meets. A great Hubub rising, the Portugueses were beat off, chiefly by one Collonel May an Irish man. One Greenway was killed in the scusse. For this Murder D. Pantaleon de Sa, as the Author of the Tumult was Tryed and condemned. Having in vain pleaded his priviledge and made his escape out of Prison by the help of the Lady Mohun, being again taken, he was beheaded upon a Scassfold on Tower-Hill.

Francis Barreto
bolds the Dutch closely befieged in Brazil.

4. Francis Barreto who Commanded in Pernambuco, tho' his Forces were much lessened and no supplies came, was not at all discouraged, but carryed on the Seige of Arrecife with a full Resolution either to Conquer or die. The befieged were now reduced to despair, and therefore determined to attempt gaining the Fort Arrayal, which Sigismund their Generall knowing to be a difsicult Enterprize, endeavoured to divert them from, but perceiving he Laboured in vain, told them, the only means to attack that Fort was by Gaining first the quarter of Aguiar. On the 11th of March, he marched out of the Fort Affogados with the greatest part of that and the Neighbouring Garrisons. Captain Alfonso de Albuquerque Commanded at the quarter of Aguiar. He not thinking it for his honour to receive them in his works, marched out and foon drove them back to their Forts. Twice after this they attempted the same Post, and were both time repulsed with considerable Loss, which caused them to forbear any farther attempts on the beliegers and employ their Men in bringing provisions from the River of S. Francis. These Men were met there by 100 Portuguefes and some Blacks Commanded by Captain Francis Barregos, who the first firing was shot through the body, Yet his Men continued the Charge with fuch bravery, that they drove the Dutch to their Fort, and thence to their Ships, without the provisions they came for. Here upon the Council sent one of their body into Holland to press for speedy releif, but the Dutch having been defeated at Sea by the English, were not then in a condition to send any. Francis

Francis Barreto having notice hereof, resolved when the Portuguese Fleet arrived to make his utmost Efforts for expelling the Enemy that Country. Accordingly he met the Admirall and Vice-Admiral to concert the measures they were to take, but the result of this Consultation and the Effect that followed belong to the next Year.

5. D. Roderick de Alencastre at the Beginning of this D. Rode-Year, succeeded the Baron de Alvito in the Government rick de Alof Tangier, which he managed with greater dexterity encaftre than many had expected by reason of his Youth. Being defeats a informed that about a place called Gibalcaro, there were party of certain Hords of Arabs come thither for conveniency of Moores at pasture, he sent the Commander in cheise of the Horse, Tanier. with 92 Troopers to attack them by Night. Being come near them some advised him not to fall on them till morning when he could do better Execution, however he obeyed his orders flew a great Number of Infidels, took 17 prisoners and returned with a great booty, in which were fix Camels which D. Roderick sent to the King. D. Roderick performed severall other actions of less note, for a Famine raging among the Moors at that time, they brought him intelligence for bread, and others brought Horses and Cattle to sell in the City.

6. The danger increased in India, where D. Bras de mar in In-Castro had usurped the Government; for the Dutch dia with threatened Ceylon, and other places were not free from the Dutch. Apprehensions. The three Governors, who we said last Year commanded in Ceylon, sent Gaspar de Figueyra de Serpa, with 900 Foot to reduce the Towns that had revolted, and bring in Provisions. The King of Candia's Forces forfook the lower Country, and entrenching themselves strongly, endeavoured to exclude him the Upper. He attacked them vigorously, and their number being great, was repulled, but they adventuring to pursue him, he rallyed, drove them back, and entred their Works with them, making a mighty Slaughter. This Success made many Towns submit, which payed their Arrears of Contributions, and a great quantity of Cinnamon, Provisions, Arms, and other Plunder was conveyed to Columbo. Soon after, 10 Companies were sent to attack a Town on the Frontiers of Candia, where there was great store of Provisions; and though 10000 Chingalas defended a Wood that lay in the way, they were defeated, and the Town taken. On the 11th les.

of May, arrived at Columbo, Francis de Mello de Castro. fent to command in that Island, by D. Bras de Castro, with 8 Ships, and 150 Foot. With him went D. Alvaro de Atayde, as General of the Forces, but his Age and Diseases rendred him incapable of that Post; whereupon Francis de Mello gave it to his Nephew, Antony de Mello de Castro, who being drove out of the Field by the King of Candia; Francis de Mello, at the earnest request of all the People, restored Gaspar de Figueyra de Serpa to that Command. No sooner had he received it. but he marched out against the King of Candia, and having worsted him in several Encounters, forced him to retire to the City Candia, near to which he encamped, and continued a confiderable time; underhand raising fuch jealousies in the King's Mind, that he caused him to behead many of his Favourites. The Dutch at the fame time had agreed with Hidalcan, to besiege Goa by Land, whilst they blocked it up by Sea, promising him the plunder of the Place. They came before it according to agreement with a Squadron, but Hidalcan failing with his Forces, they drew off again without attempting any thing. This Year two Galeons sailed from Lisbon for India, under the Command of Luis de Mendoza Furtado. The Ship Nossa Senhora da Penha de Franca, returning home from India, was taken by the Hollanders in the latitude of Pernambuco.

Anno, 1654.

1. TO begin this Year, Tamericour, Lieutenant General of Horse, by order of the Count de Soure, marched with all the Horse he could gather, and some Foot, to the Valleys of Mata Moros, and St. Ann, near the City Xeres. All the Country people was retired to those Places, and defended them the space of some Hours; but being at length defeated, the Villages were plundered and burnt; which done, the Portuguese Troops loaden with Booty, returned to their Quarters. Very few days passed before another Enterprize of more Oliva ta- Consequence had the defired Success. Oliva was a large ken by the Town, not far from the City Xerez, defended by an old Portugue- Castle, and was the Receptacle of the Spaniards, when they made incursions on that side. Thither Andrew de Albu-

The History of PORTUGAL.

Albuquerque, though not well recovered of his Wounds. marched with 2000 Foot, and 1500 Horse. By break of day he attacked the Town, and made himself master of it without any difficulty. At the Castle he found more opposition, because two Petards he applyed to the Gates, failed of the intended effect, and all the Spaniards able to bear Arms, had retired thither. However, Albuquerque lodged himself under the Wall, and began to carry on two Mines. The Befieged perceiving it, began to parley, and after three days, furrendred upon Condition, every one might take with him what he could carry. The Booty was great, because not only the Inhabitants of Oliva, but of many other Towns, had conveyed their Goods thither, as to a place of Security. This Conquest cost the Lives of 42 Men. Albuquerque added some Works to the place, and leaving a Garrison in it, returned to Elvas. The Count de Soure having obtained leave ro repair to Lisbon; Andrew de Albuquerque, was left supream Commander in the Province of Alentejo. The King expresly commanded him to forbear making any Incursions into the Spanish Territories, or driving thence any Cattle, except such Horses as were fit for Service. The Duke de S. German, the Spanish General, upon notice hereof, offered to agree, that no harm should be done on either side to the Country people; but Albuquerque representing to the King, the great Advantages that accrewed to his Army by these Incursions, the King recalled his former Order, and the War was carryed on as before. The Spaniards, to shew they had not made those Overtures, for The Spaniwant of Strength, drove a great Prey from the Territo-ards carry ry of Monfards; and the Captains, Denis de Mello, and off a great John Ferreyra da Cunha with their Troops, attempting to Booty. recover it, were defeated, and they with 34 of their Men taken, but foon fer at liberty, it being agreed that Prisoners should be discharged.

2. Scarce any thing of Note happened this Year in any of the other Provinces; both fides for the most part contenting themtelves to preserve their own, and lave the Country People from Destruction. Antony de Andrade de Oliva, who had been a Franciscan Fryer, and left that Order upon several Pretexts, had now obtained leave of the King to go into Spain upon some odd Project, as he was a Man of a reftless Spirit; returning on a false Informatien of their corresponding with Castile.

Some Per- thence, he accused Sebastian Casar de Meneses, and his Brofons appre- ther F. James Cafar, of holding Correspondence with hended up the Spaniards, whereupon they were both secured and committed to Prison, where they continued a long time. Francis de Sousa Coutinho, returned this Year to the Ambaffy at the French Court, where nothing occurred worth relating; no more that at Rome, or in Holland, things continuing still there in the same Posture. The Count de Penaguiao, not able to bear the loss of his Brother. having concluded a Peace with the Usurper Oliver, returned home, carrying with him the Ratification of the Peace.

Francis Barreto Arrecife into a for-

3. Francis Barreto, the General of Pernambuco, meeting with the Amiral Peter Jaques, and his Vice-Admiral at the Town of Olinda, to confer together about putting at end to the long Blocade they had made of the Dutch, Blocade at and having called a Council of War, it was resolved to turn it into a formal Siege. In order to it, they agreed their first attempt must be to gain the Fort called Rego, mal Siege. which was upon the Salt pits. Peter Jaquez went away to the Fleet, with a Resolution so to secure the Bar of Arrecife, that no Succour might possibly be conveyed in. On the 5th. of January, the Works by Land were advanced nearer, and the Enemy shut up within a narrower Compals, and a Battery of 9 Pieces of Cannon raised against the Fort Rego, Collonel Andrew Vidal taking up his Post there. On the 11th of January, France Barreto with 2500 Foot, marched to the Fort, raised two batteries the one of 7 and the other of 5 Pieces of Cannon, and began to carry on his approaches with great Art. That Night they came within Musket-shot of the Fort. On the 15th both the Cannon and small shot played incessantly on bothsides, the Dutch at the same time attempting to put some succour into the Fort, but were disappointed. That Night Hugh Naquer who Commanded in the Fort Surrendred, Capitulating for the Garrison to march out with their Armes, and to be sent to Portugal. Before day, he marched out with 70 Men. Two Companies of Portugueses were put into it. Hence Francis Barreto marched to the Fort Altanar, which after some short resistance was delivered upon the same conditions as the other. Before the taking of this Fort the Dutch had abandoned 3 others, and now quitted 3 more, with the same precipitation. Barreto designing next to attack the Fort of Sinco Pentas, was informed that the Enemy had secured a Post, he thought to have lodged his Men upon; whereupon he sent Collonel Andrew Vidal, with 1000 Men to dislodge them, which he did: and Fortifyed himself in the same Place. Next Morning the Canon was conveyed thither and the Trenches were opened against the Fort Sinco Pontas. The Dutch perceiving the danger to approach, made overtures for a Surrender, which were cafily admitted; and after fome days Spent in adjusting all differences, they finally agreed upon the following Articles. That the Dutch should remain possest of all their moveables. That they should have some of their own Ships with Iron Guns, to Transport them to Holland. That such as would might stay there and be Treated in point of Religion as they were in Portugal. That all the Out-Forts be put into the hands of the Portugueses with their Artillery and Ammunition. That a Garrison be immediately received into Arrecife and the City Mauricea, where the Dutch might continue a Months but without any Sort of Armes. That all Ships coming from Holland for Four months to come have the Liberty of all those Ports. That the Dutch give hostages to secure the Surrender of all other places they posseit, belonging to Portugal on that Coast. That the Indians, Mulattos and Blacks who served, be pardoned. These were the principall Articles tigned on both sides the 26th of January. Next day the Portugueses took possession of all the Posts where they found 121 brass Guns, 170 of Iron; Ammunition and provision for a Year and great quantity of Stores. The same Night that Arrecife was delivered, a Dutch Lieutenant Collonel fled over to the Island Itamaraca, and perswading the People there that the Portugueses spared neither Sex nor Age, they Shipt themselves and goods on board two Frigats, and Sailing to Paraiba spread the same Terror there, obliging Collonel Autin, who Commanded, against his will to Embark on a Ship that arrived there from India, and leaving the Fort in possession of 50 Portugueses who were prisoners there. All other places in Brazil were recovered with the same case to the great honour of Francis Barreco, after the Dutch had Tyrannically possess themselves of them for the Space of 30 years, reckening from their first coming thither which was in the Year 1624. The recovery of Pernambuco hapned 8 days after D. Hiarome.

reme de Ataide, Count de Altouguia had taken possession of the Government of Brazil at Babia, being successor to the Count de Castello Melhor. Collonel Andrew Vidal, was fent to carry this good News to the King who rewarded him and all the cheif Officers according to their Merit. 4. Our Affairs in India were not so successful as in America. D. Bras de Castro continued in the Government, no Vice-Roy being yet come to call him to account for his Usurpation. Francis de Mello, who commanded in Ceilen, fent out Antony Mendez Aranha, with 400 Portugueses, and some Chingalas to endeavour to fight the Dutch, but they avoided coming to blows as much as could be, knowing that want of Provitions would in time ruine us. He marched and in the way to Calature, found an Entrenchment guarded by some Blacks whom he defeated. Then advancing to Diago a place when he must pass the River, he found it Guarded by two Companies of Dutch, and a Number of Chingalas, upon whom he kept Firing for the Space of 10 days, and having provided boats to waft his Men over, the Duco quitted the Post and he possessed himself of it. He continued 30 days about Calasure hoping to draw out the Durch, and then finding his Defign succeeded not, marched through the Country of Alicano then subject to the Enemy, destroying all that stood in his way. Here he received orders to march up the Country, in order to furnish Columbo with provisions whereof there was great scarcity, and when he had Spent 20 days without finding any, so that his Men were consumed with Labour and want, 700 Dutch with a great Number of Chingalas lay in the way he was to pass at Tebuna to intercept him. Antony Mendez drew up his Men under cover and keep ing a continual fire upon the Enemy, who were on a riting ground, drove them thence. After this Action he received advice from Columbo that Five Galeons were arrived there with releif from Goa, yet they left the City in no better condition then they found it, for having in an Engagement near Gale lost their two Com This done, Antony Jaques, with 250 Horse, and 200 madores, the other Captains fell at odds about the ched commend and putting to Sea met 11 Dutch men of Wat by whom they were all destroyed. The Dutch now war and 19 Villages, returning with a great Booty. Soon ting men in other places abandoned Calature, which dr after 500 Spanish Foot, and 150 Horse, having gather-

The War in India unsuccessfull. to Portugal.

The History of PORTUGAL.

vao, three Leagues from Gale. His good Services being mif-represented by his Enemies, he was call'd away, and his Command given to Gaspar de Araujo Pereyra, who being foon found incapable of it, Antony Mendes was again restored. The Dutch repenting they had quitted Araujo and Calature, had battered the former, the space of 15 days, and passed the River to attack it, the fame day that Antony Mendez arrived there. He seeing no possibility of maintaining it, resolved to march off his Men to Columbo; but the Enemy having wholly cut off his Retreat, he was forced to engage them, having chose an advantagious Post, which his Men maintained with incredible Bravery, till a chance Bullet flying into the Enemies Powder, blew up all their Ammunition, killing above 50 of them; whereupon the rest fled, leaving 200 of their Companions dead upon the spot, this was the end of this Years Actions there. Three Ships sailed from Lisbon for India, one whereof was cast away upon the Bar of Goa.

Anno, 1655.

1. THE War in all parts of Portugal, was this Year carryed on with to little Vigour, that it is scarce Very small worth the mentioning; but that something must be said matter this to carry on the Series of the History The Provinces of Tear of Alentejo and Entre Duero and Minho, afford us no matter at Expleite, all. John Mendez de Vasconcellos, who governed that of Tros os Montes, and the foregoing Years had continued in perfect Peace, had now received Orders from the King, as had all the other Governors to infelt the Enemies Frontiers with Incursions, which he put in Execution. The Spaniards in revenge, drove all the Cattle about Miranda, but Antony Jaques de Payva, who commanded in that Town, fent out a party, which defeating the Enemy, recovered all the Prey, and brought away all the Cattle of the Spaniards that grazed about Samil. Foot, marched to Caravajales, and pailing by that place without Opposition, burnt the Town of Tavora, teny Mendez, possessed himself of as also of the Port Aired all the Cattle about If anes; Antony Jaques set upon them with a lesser number, yet with such Valour, that few of the 500 Foot escaped being kill'd or taken. The People of Gallicia offered John Mendez a Cessation of Arms, which he accepted of, but the King not approving of it, it was of no Continuance.

The History of PORTUGAL.

The History of PORTUGAL.

Small inbel.a.

2. John de Mello Feyo, governing that part of Beira, carsions in which was before subject to D. Roderick de Castro, refolved not to be idle. Having borrowed 150 Horse of Nuno da Cunha, who Commanded in the other part of the Province, and joyned them to Six Troops of his own, and a Regiment of Foot, he marched to Villa Vieja Nine Leagues from the Frontiers, towards Cuidad Rodrigo. After plundering Villa Vieja, he charged a body of 300 Spanish Horse and as many Foot that was gathered to oppose him, and after a Vigorous resistance made by them, in so much that at the first his party feemed to decline, he put them to flight pursuing them as far as S. Felices. Antony Soares da Costa Governour of the Castle of Salvaterra, held a friendly correspondence which is allowed of in time of War between Gentlemen, tho' ferving in opposite parties, with D. Alfonso de Sande a Spanish Officer. This familiarity increating, D. Alfonso took occasion to make proposals to Antony Soares, for delivering up that Castle to the King of Spain, promising him large rewards for that Service. Antony Soares pretending an Inclination to comply, carryed on the Negotiation, till he obtained a Letter from D. Lewis de Haro prime Minister of Spain, with a scedule under that Kings hand containing Large promises if he delivered the place. Having received these assurances he resolved to Revenge the wrong done to his Reputation, in attempting his Fidelity. He agreed with D. Alfonso to receive him with 30 more into the Castle of Salvaterra, in disguize as if they came thither to Trade, leaving the rest of the Troops belonging to Alcantara ready in a Wood hard by. The day being appointed D. Alfonso came according to agreement, and a small wicket of the Castle was opened at which the 30 entred one at a time, the entrance not being capable of admitting more at once. As every one was let in, Antony Source caused his brains to be dashed out with a Club, and in this manner cruelly butchered all the 30 reserving only D. Alfonso de Sande, whom after sending an account to the King of his barbarity, he inhumanly tved to the mouth of a Canon and giving fife to it shattered his body into atoms. Antony Soarez might have been faithfull to his King, without committing an act fo full of horror, which he himself could not but have abominated if committed by the most barbarous Infidels, and which cannot but appear execrable in the fight of all that profess the name of Christians.

3. The Portuguese Affairs in other parts of Europe continued much in the same posture we left them. For the feveral proposalls made in France for concluding a League offensive and defensive, all came to nothing. Nor could there any thing be done at Rome, the Nothing of Pope being fully bent against passing the Bulls for the moment Portuguese Bishops. The Dutch had resolved to revenue done in forthe Loss of Pernambuco upon the Trade of Portugal, but reigncourts, the plague which raged amongst them disappointed their or at Tandefigns. In England the Peace was concluded and rati-gier. fyed with the Usurper. America yield us no subject for History since the Expulsion of the Hollanders out of Brazil, where the Count de Atouguia was supream governour. Neither is there much to be said of Africk where D. Roderick de Alencastre still Governed Tangier, which was this year Three days befet by 10000 Moors under the Command of Gaylan. who did no other harm fave the spoiling of some gardens. D. Francis de Noronha Governour of Mazagao, having obtained leave to return home, left that Command to Nuno da Cunha who had held it before, and he dying, the King sent Alexander de Soufa Freyre to succeed him.

4. The Count de Sarzedas was sent this Year Vice-Roy Considerainto India, who arriving at Goa, secured D. Bras de Castro ble losses of and all those that had any hand in the imprisonment of the vortathe Count de Obides, sending them to Portugal, there to gueles in receive the punishment due to their crimes. He next ap-India. plyed himself with great care to regulating all disorders in that government, and to releive Ceilon then in diffress, but death cut him off in the midfe of his progress, which we may conclude to be the principall cause of the loss of that Island, the manner whereof we are now to declare, tho' the furrender was not til. the following year 1656. At the beginning of this Year, Gaspar Figuegra de Serpa had waged War so successfully upon the King of Candia, that he had reduced him to Pence. The Dutch layed fiege to Calature and continued before it 10 days, at the

Ii a

13. ble

Ligachery.

pirce of

End whereof finding themselves too weak to carry it, they departed. Before D. Bras de Castro was deposed from the government of India, he sent Antony de Sousa to succeed Francis de Mello in the Government of Ceilon, with Six Galliots and Two pinks laden with provisions and other necessaries. Meeting Two Dutch Men of War, these small Vessels were dispersed, Two of them ran ashore, two made their way to Columbo, and Antony de Soufa with Two more got into Jafanapatan. Thence he went by Sea to the Port Putclao 15 Leagues from Columbo, where Antony Mendez Aranha met and conducted him fafe by Land to that City, into which he was received with great joy, and Francis de Mello put him in possesfion of the government. Twelve Dutch Men of War arrived at Ceilon from Batavia, Six of them lay before the Barr of Co'umbo, the other Six made their way to Calature, where Landing their men they layed Seige to it, and the place being very ill provided, after the Garrison had endured the utmost Extremities it was at last, surrendred upon honourable Termes. Gaspar Figueyra de Serpa not knowing that Calature was loft, advanced with 500 Portugueses to endeavour to put some succour into it, but being attacked by 1600 Dutch, was totally routed and many of his men killed. The Hollanders pursuing their Victory came and sate down before Columbo, raised Four barreries, and playing continually with 12 peices of heavy Canon, ruined not only the houses but the works of the Town, and gave a furious affault to the Fort Sanda Cruz, yet without success for they were repulsed with confiderable Lois. At the same time severall other attacks were carryed on with great obstinacy, infomuch that at last the Dutch broke into the City, where they found no less opposition, than without, most of them that entred being either killed or wounded. At length they were repulled in all parts with the loss of near 1000 men. This discouraged not the Dutch who still carryed on their works with great diligence, raising new batteries and lodging themselves upon the edge of the ditch. Then they fell to mining which the befieged understanding, they countermined and drove them out of all their fubterraneous works. These losses made the Enemy alter their resolutions and change the Siege into a blockade, whereupon the Governour turned out 300 persons that were not fit for Service, whereof about 200 escaped escaped into the Mountains. The Dutch having received confiderable supplies, carry on their works anew, and again fall to battering of the place inceffantly. Embassadors from the King of Candia were conducted through the Enemies Camp into the City, where they demanded it should be put into the hands of their Master. All the answer they received was by thrusting them out of the gates. Though they shewed this resolution, the City began to be infected with the stench of the dead who were not well buried, and Famine raged so violently that it was proved that Mothers had eaten their own Children. Gerard Huld the Dutch Generall being killed by a shot in the Head, the Governor of Galé, who fucceeded him in that Command, fearing least another General might come and rob him of the Honour of taking the Place, carryed on his Works, and plyed his Batteries to briskly, that feveral large Breaches were made. On the 7th. of May, 1656. he affaults St. John's Bulwark, and carrying it, with the same hear enters a new Fort that was raising; thence the Dutch venture to break into the Town whence after a long dispute they were beat out, and the Besieged following their Advantage, recovered the Fort and Bulwark; yet fresh Enemies coming on the Dutch again made themselves masters of the latter, and lodged themselves therein. That Night the Governor of the Town being informed that two Women had eaten their own Children, caused them to be shot to pieces at the mouth of great Guns. Next Day, seeing it impossible to maintain the Place, he call'd a Council, where it was refolved to furrender. After some Debates, the Articles were agreed upon, which were honourable to the Besieged, and in pursuance to them, the Governor marched out with only 94 Officers and Soldiers, and 100 Towns-men. The Hollanders committed all manner of Sacriledge in the Town, and without regard to their Articles, plunder'd those few Towns-men and Soldiers that were left alive. But from so infamous a Nation, nothing but Villany can be expected. The Count de Sarzedas, Vice-Roy of India dying, as was faid before, upon opening the Patents of Succession, it appeared that Emanuel Mascarenhas Homem, was to fill his Place. Four Ships and one Caravel failed this Year from Lisbon to India.

Anno, 1656.

1. THE King's Differences which had long molested him, daily increased, yet he omitted not to apply ry Exploits himself to the Cares of the Government. The War was of moment still carryed on with so little Vigour on both sides, that nothing occurs this Year, but some few Incursions, more like Robberies than military Exploits, and the confequence of them inconsiderable Skirmishes, whereof so many have been already related in the foregoing Years, that to fay more of them, will only ferve to naufeate and tire the Reader. This quiet was general throughout all the Provinces of the Kingdom, and enabled them the better to bear the Storm that enfued after the King's Death; for the Spaniards then altering their measures, the following Years were full of Action; confiderable Armies appeared in the Field; Bloody Battles were fought and the Portugueses in the end, obtained glorious Victories.

Negotiati-

2. Francis de Sousa Coutinho, continued still Ambassador at the French Court, and maintained the good Correspondence that has always been betwixt that Crown and Portugal. The King being defirous before his Death, ro have his Ambassador admitted by the Pope, ordered Francis de Sousa to go in that quality to Rome. He obeyed, and though affifted by all the interest of France, and appearing with as great a Train as any other Ambaflador, could never obtain to be admitted as fuch by his Holinels. Zintony Rapose, who resided with the same Character in Holland, having received a Letter from the Arch-Duke Leopold, in king him to discover the Secrets of his Master, upon pronute of great Reward, sent the Letter to the King. The Dutch, with the goods News of their Success in Ceylon, began to forget their loss at Pernambuce, and confequently appeared more favourable to Antony Rapofo. Francis Ferreyra Rebello, who refided in England, after the Ratification of the Peace, had no Businels of moment. The Count de Atouguia governed Brazil, much beloved and esteemed by the Inhabirants, for his Generolity and good Conduct.

The History of PORTUGAL

3. At the beginning of this Year D. Ferdinand de The Count Menezes, Count de Ericeyra, was sent Governor of Tan-de Ericeyra gier. With him went 11 Caravels, with recruits of succeeds D. Men and Horses, Cloaths and Provisions for the Garri-Roderick son. D. Roderick de Castro, having put him into possession of the Government, departed, and arrived again at Lis- in the Gobon, with the 11 Caravelsthar carryed the new Governor. As foon as the Count had viewed the Garrison, he marched out against the Moors, and having drawn them within the reach of his Entrenchments, where he had placed his Foot, with some pieces of Canon, made a considerable slaughter among them. In May, the English Fleet, under the command of Montague and Blake, appeared before Tangier, and asked leave to water, which was granred them; but they going ashore disorderly. some of them were killed by the Moors. The Fleet being gone, the Count set our his Horse to burn the Corn the Moors had fowed about Tangier, which was effectually performed; but the Moors pressing hard upon those who had fired ir, recovered the Cattle they were driving to Tangier. Alexander de Sousa governed Mazagao, but that place affords nothing but the usual skirmishes with the Moers. What happened in India was related the last Year, and this furnishes nothing new, only two Ships failed thither this Year.

4. The King growing daily more and more infirm, The King's and still continuing his Custom of Hunting once a Week, Last Sickwent out accordingly on the 25th. of October, but ness and feeling a great pain in his Side, returned home be- Death. fore Noon. Some days were spent by the Physicians, in applying all forts of Medicines they thought properbut his Distemper still increasing, he at length made his Will, and received the Viaricum with great Refignation. Those few days he lived after this Preparation. were spent in Devotions for the most part, and the rest in giving advice to the Queen, the Princes, his Counfellors, Generals and others, who had any there in the Administration of the Government. At length, on the 6th. of November, being Munday, having given all imaginable Tokens of true Repentance and Christian Piety. he gave up the Ghost into the Hands of his Redeemer. The King being dead, the Lord Chamberlain dreffed him in the Royal Robes, and layed him upon a Bed; 3. A, the Bells throughout the City, and the Tears of his Subiects, equally fignifying the loss sustained by the King-ling a Woman of a haughty and active Spirit, predom. After noon the Council met, and opening his fently bent her thoughts upon making some conside-Will, found he appointed the Queen Regent of the grable attempt on the Enemies Frontiers, least they should Kingdom, and Protectress of his Children, that the Royal simagine that the loss of their King had discouraged the Chappel should be finished according to the Model by him Portugueses, or diffiparated their Councils. To the begun; that the Monastery of S. Clare, at Coimbra, should effect, and to gain her self a greater Reputation among be finished. That several Pensions should be given to Perfons there named. That 2000 Cruzados should be immediately distributed to poor Monasteries, and that his Body should be interred in the Church of S. Vincent, All the while the Body lay in State in the Guard Chamber of the Pallace, the People thronged to see it Thence it was removed, attended by all the Officers of the Houshold, and Clergy of the whole City, to the Church of S. Vincent, and there put, into the Tomb appointed for it. King John was of a middle Stature, scholen men into Barcarota, with orders to Stand upon very handsome before he had the Small Pox; his Hair fair, his Body gross, but strong. He hated gayety in Cloaths, and therefore was careless in his Dress, always an Enemy to new Fashions. His Discourse was Witty and Pleasant, his Judgment sound, but affecting by the Spaniards sallying furiously upon them, and they Eurcarotz to have all his Orders unblameable; he was often to expecting no fuch reception were soon put to flight, and are repulflow in his Resolutions. He had but one Wife, which a great number slain and taken prisoners. This rash and sed with was the Lady Luifa de Guzman, Daughter to the Duke fruitless attempt by which the Queen thought to have loss. ciosa, before their Father ascended the Throne. Alfon vigour than had been done of late years. In order thereand Isne. 10, who succeeded his Father, and was afterwards deposito the Spanish Generall the Duke of St. German having sed. Peter now reigning. Joanna, who dyed at Lisbon, been sent for to Madrid, and there fully empowered to in the 16th. Year of her Age. And Catherine Queen of act, as he should find most expedient, returned to the rugal.

1.7

His Wife

her own People, she ordered the Count de San Lorenzo, who then Commanded upon the Frontiers, with all iecreey and expedition to attempt the surprizing of the Fort of Barcarota, in which she was informed there was but a small Garrison. At this time Francis Tutta-villa Duke of St. German was Generall of the Spanish Frontiers, by birth he was an Italian, and as to his person and experience a Soldier of known courage and Conduct. He having private intelligence of the design covertly put 500 their guard, that they might surprize those who came to furprize them. The Portuguese Forces, who knew no- The Portuthing of this reinforcement, boldly making up to the gueles as Fort before break of day, were on a sudden assaulted temptine of Medina Sidonia. By her he had Issue, Theodosius, who made herself terrible to her Enemies, produced a quite dved at Lisbon, in the 19th. Year of his Age; Emanuel contrary effect, for it only provoked his Catholick Maand Anne, who both dyed in their Infancy, at Villa Vi- jefty to carry on the War against Portugal, with greater England. One Bastard Daughter called Mary, who lie Frontiers well furnished with mony, Armes, provisions, ved and dyed in the Monattery of Carnide, near Ling 20 peices of Canon, and an Army of 13000 Foot, and bon. In this City, the King dyed upon Monday, the 4000 Horse. He was at first doubtfull whether he 26th. of November, in the Year 1656, at the age of 5 should bend his Force against Elvas, or Olivenza, but Years and 7 Months, whereof he was 26 Duke confidering the dammage received from the frequent ex-Barcelos, 10 Duke of Braganza, and 16, King of Por cursions of the garrison of the latter of these two places. he resolved to attack it. Olivenza is seated in a plain almost a League from the River Guadiana, and beset on fall fides with hills that command it being within Canon shor. The Fortifications of the place were after the modern manner confitting of Nine bastions, two half Frer the death of the King, the Queen Downger wh Moons and two Forts, and was next to Elvas the stronwas also regent during the minority of her Son, begest place in Portugal. The Duke being come before the Town and perceiving the Seige would be a work of time, enclosed the whole place within his lines, posselfing himself of the hills and strengthning his lines with 21 redoubts, and four large places of Armes. Four batteries were presently raised, which played with good besieges O- success upon the Town, but whatever they cast down in the day the besieged repaired by Night. After which another was planted on the Monastery of St. Francis, which overtopping the Walls flew many in the streets, till such time as a strong work was cast up by the garrifon, which covered that part of the Town. The trenches were diligently carryed on and many fallies made by the belieged. The Duke perceiving the conquest of this place to be a work of great difficulty, thought fit to reduce it by Art as well as Main-force. Having therefore suffered his men to lye still severall days, as if he intended to starve the Town, on a sudden in the dead of Night, he affaulted the greater of the two Forts with his whole power. The belieged being at first surprized and not knowing whither to run, gave way so the Enemy, who thought themselves possest of the Fort till Emanuel de Saldanha the Governour of the Town, comming with fresh supplies drove them out, and the Duke fearful of exposing his men sounded a retreat. Twenty days after the Town was invested, the Count de St. Lorenzo came to the relief of it, with an Army of 12000 Foot, and 3500 Horse. After being four days on the Banks of the River, he moved nearer to the Enemy and planted a battery against their works, but the Duke having raifed also another, did such Execution that he was glad to withdraw and return to his Camp near Jurumenha. Three days he lay there, and then again drew near to Olivenza, to discover how the Town might best be relieved, or at least to encourage the besieged by his presence, to which purpose he sent severall Messages to the Governour, with falle promises of speedy relief. guelegene. At length the Count leing no possibility of Forcing the rall endea- Enemy without hazarding his whole Army, thought it better to endeavour to draw them from the Seige by a draw away diversion. In order to it he marched to Badajoz, hothe Spanish ping to surprize that important place in the Night, by Army from lending 3000 men who by the likeness of their habit and Olivenza Language, might be admitted as if fent from the Spanish by giving Army. These being near the gate were discovered, and a diversion.

Anno. 1657.

The History of PORTUGAL

The Dake of St. Gctman the Spanish Generall livenza.

The History of PORTUGAL

the Garrison and Townsmen running to Arms were put to flight, after leaving about 300 dead behind, besides several Officers of Note. This Enterprize proving so unsuccessful, the Count de St. Lorenzo marched towards Albuquerque, burning and destroying all the Country in hopes by that means to draw the Spanish Army from Olivenzi, and at last sits down before Valencia pressing that place day and Night, but with great loss on his fide, for it was no less bravely defended by Sebastian Granero, the Governour an old Souldier of known Valour. In the mean while the Duke of St. German had plyed Olivenca so hotly that the works of the place were all ruined, and the greater Fort almost demolished by the mines he had sprung. Emanuel de Saldanha the Governour feeing the ruin of his works; and that the Army which ought to have relieved him was marched away, obtained a truce of the Duke conditioning to deliver up the place if not relieved by a day appointed. The Count de St. Lorenzo having received this advice before Valencia, immediately raised his Siege and marching first to Portalegre came thence and incamped at Jurumenha, from which place he writ to the Governour of Olivenza in hard Terms, commanding him at the peril of his Life, to defend the place to the last extremity, and promifing to come to his relief as foon as he had received some recruits he expected. Saldanha the Governour being fensible of his own weakness, and the vainness of the Counts promises, resolved to perform the Articles he had agreed upon with the Spanish Generall, and accordingly on the day appointed delivered up the Town to him, marching our himself with about 2500 Foot and near 600 Horse. Not one Townsman remained behind him, such was their hatred to the Spaniards. It was generally agreed the Town could have held out.fome days longer, and the Governour being accused of nor having performed his duty, but to have made a halty and dishonourable surrender, was first kept prisoner at Lisbon; and afterwards banished the Kingdom for ever. The breaches of the Town being repaired and a good Garrison put into the place, the Duke marched towards his Enemy, burning and wasting all the Country before him, by this means intending to draw the Count to a battle; but perceiving this nothing moved him, he fits down with his Army before Moron. This Town is leared The History of PORTUGAL.

upon the River Guadiana, secures the passage of that River, and covers Olivenza. About the Town there was only an old wall, but the Castle was of greater ftrength. The inhabitants terrifyed by the fate of Olivenza, no fooner faw the Cannon begin to play upon their Walls but they abandoned the Town, and retired into the Castle which was well fortifyed. This success caused the Duke to alter his resolution of fighting, and now he resolved to make himself Master of the Castle before he would come to a battle. On the other fide the Count de St. Lorenzo who before carefully shunned hazarding his Army, feeing now the ill consequence of fuffering the Enemy to encroach fo far upon him, was wholly bent upon engaging, but the River being betwixt him and the Enemy who carefully guarded all the Fords, and some Skirmishes being unsuccessfull to the Portugueses, still the generall dreaded to expose his whole Army to the fury of the Enemy, and of the River at once. John Ferreira the Governour of the Castle being now fore pressed by the besiegers, and no less by want of provisions, and seeing no likelihood of releif, on the Eleventh day after the Castle was invested, delifurrendred. vered it up: all the inhabitants marching out with the garrison. After this success the Victorious Duke marched back to Badajoz, intending to return and besiege Jurumenha, but the excessive heats made him defer that enterprize for a more favourable Season. Nothing more of moment passed this year, but that the Portugueses rased the Fort of Oliva, which before they had taken from the Spaniards, as not tenable after the loss of Olivenza.

Anno, 1658.

The Queen stile.

Moron

invade Ca- defigns against Spain miscarry, and her Enemies triumphant in the taking of Olivenza, and daring of her Army the Town, and about a Musquet shot from the City; Christothe last Summer. She seared the unconstant multi-being a regular Fortification after the modern manner. D. pher near tude, who always judge of things according to the suc- Ventura de Tarrayona General of the Artillery, comman-Badajoz. cels, and when that fails immediately flye at the go- ded in the Fort. The Portugueses immediately possessed vernment. To strike a Terror therefore into her Enthemselves of two Hills, on each of which there was a

The History of PORTUGAL.

folved once more to carry the War into the Borders of Castile. To this purpose she renewed the Alliance, concluded by the late King, with France and England, and having fent to both for Supplies of Men. caused 13000 Foot, and near 4000 Horse, to be speedily drawn together. The command of these Forces she gave to John Mendez de Vasconcellos, an old Soldier, who had served under the Catholick King in the low Countries. This done, it was decreed in Council, in complyance to her Will, that Badajoz should be Besieged, because that Place if taken, would add much Reputation to her Government, and would be as a Bridle upon the Spanish Garrison in Olivenza. The Duke of St. German, who was then at Badajoz, having by his Spies, received Intelligence of these great Preparations and the delign of them, immediately dispatch'd an Express to acquaint D. Luis de Haro, the prime Minister of Spain therewith; as also to inform him of the weakness of the Garrison of Badajez, and the ill posture of defence of the Place. Whilst Relief was expected, he lost no time, but drew together all the Forces he could, and gather'd such stores of Ammunition and Provisions, as the rime and his Exigencies would permit. Few days were pafsed, before the Portuguese Army appeared on the further fide of the River Guadiana, near which Badajoz is feated. The River in Summer, is fordable in many Places, and is joyned to the Town by a good Stone-Bridge, at the Foot whereof, is the strong Fort of St. Christophers. On the top of the Hill, on whose side the Town lies, stands the Castle; but the Walls of the Town were at this time decayed and unfit for Defence. The Duke not being as yet provided for a Siege, fent out his Horse to give some stop to the Enemies sudden approach. But the Pertuguese General, who ought to have immediately past the River, and invested the Town Ueen Luisa a Woman naturally ambitious and then unprovided, missed his Opportunity, by setting Army lays haughty, was extreamly perplexed to see her great down before the Fort of St. Christopher. This Fort is Siege to feated on a Hill, on the further Bank of the River from Fort St. emics and to ftill the murmuring of the People, the re-small redoubt, on which they planted their Cannon, and thence thence battered the Fort. Next day they opened their Trenches, and carryed them on with great Application: the Besieged on their side, doing all that could be expected for their Defence, in which they made many vigorous Sallies; in one whereof, after a hot Dispute, they drove the Besiegers before them with much Slaughter, and destroyed their Works. However, the Befleged foon repaired the Works, and began to press the place, which obliged the Duke of St. German to send in all haste for two Regiments that were in Andaluzia. one of Spaniards, commanded by the Marquels of Lancarote; the other of Irish, under the command of Collonel Walter Dungan, who was afterwards Earl of Limerick. These two Regiments, the Spanish General had decreed should relieve the Fort, which began to be diffressed; but the Portuguese had appointed 60 to chofen Men to be always in readiness to oppose such Attempts, and had broke the Line of Communication be twint the Foot of the Bridge and the Fort, by which fupplies used to come from the Town, so that this same was now an Obstacle against those that were to succour the Befieged. Thus the Fort was reduced to the latt Extremity. This moved the Spanish General, to or der a Spanish Major, with two Captains, and 160 Mm to attempt breaking through the Enemies Line, which they most resolutely performed, and got into the For. No sooner were they entred, but D. Ventura the Governor, commanded them to attack the Besiegers in the redoubt they had possessed themselves of; but this and wered not their former Success, for being overpowered by the multitude of Enemies, the Major was killed one of the Captains shorthrough the Arm, and such of the Men as could escape, fled in disorder to the Fort Hercupon the Governor sent to acquaint the Duke that he could not hold out 24 Hours, unless he was conside rably reinforced, so as to be able to remove the Besse gers from the Posts they had possessed themselves of. Immediately the Duke ordered the Marquels of Lanzarote with 800 of the best Men, and some Voluntiers march to the Relief of the Fort, and to recover the two redoubts. It was a desperate piece of Service, for such a handful of Men to attempt against such a multitude yet they charged with such Fury, that having broke through the Enemies Line, and being supported by fally, from the Fort, they gained the redoubts, and drove the Enemy from their Camp. This Success cost the Marquels his Life; however, though the Portugueles twice attempted to recover their loss, they were both times repulsed, and at last forced to desist. John Mendoz de Vasconcellos the Portuguese General, having spent The Siege a whole Month before this place without any Success, raised from but with great loss, and despairing of carrying it, resol-before the ved now at last to remove and lay Siege to the Town Castle, and He had before fent over fome Troops to invest dayed to Baplace, and work upon the Lines, but now he marched dajoz. over, and bent his whole Force against it. The first confiderable Action in this Siege, was the taking of two Hills which the Spaniards had fortifyed and strongly garrisoned. John Mendez attacked them with all his Forces, and after a sharp dispute, in which he lost many Men, made himself master of them, the Desendants being all killed or taken. Next he affaulted the Fort of St. Gabriel which being but weakly Manned, was easily carryed. But he found not the reducing of the Fort of St. Michael, a work of so much ease; for Collonel Dungan who commanded there, defended it with extraordinary Bravery, till it was no longer tenable, and then surrendered it upon Articles; when the Besiegers had lost 1800 Men before it, and among them many Persons of note. Having made himself master of this Fort, John Mendez finished his Lines, encompassing the whole Town with them, which before the reduction of these Forts he could not do. Then he began to batter the Place, to cast in Bombs, and to preis the Besieged on all fides. Within the Town much harm was done by the Enemies shot; but scarcity of Provisions, and Diseases proceeding from ill Food, were more terrible then all other Dangers, and now no hope remained, but in the relief they expected from without. The News of this Siege being brought to Madrid, highly incenfed the multitude, and perplexed the Council, in which at length it was decreed, that D. Luis de Haro, the King's Favourite and prime Minister of State, should march in Person with all the Forces he could gather to the relief The Soaof the Town. Accordingly he immediately fet forward nish Army. with a gallant train of Voluntiers, and came to Merida, advances where the Rendesvouz of the Army was appointed. to relieve His Army consisted of 12000 Foot, and 3700 Horse, Badajoz.

The History of PORTUGAL.

The Duke of St. German being informed of D. Luis's A. rival at Merida, resolved to meet him at that place, and having in order to it forced the Lines of the Besiegen he broke through with 1000 Horse, and arrived safe Merida. Thence the Spanish Army marched with a possible Speed to the relief of the Besieged, but the Portuguese General, not thinking it prudent to expos his Army, now much diminished and harrassed to the B hemy, who came fresh into the Field, drew off in the Night, and retired hastily into Portugal. D. Luis de Es ro the next day, entered the Town in triumphant man ner. Having given the necessary Orders for repairing the Damage done by the Enemy, D. Lun marched with in Army, now increased to 13000 Foot, and near 6000 Horse, into the Frontiers of Portugal, burning and de stroying all where he came, as he did the Town and Castle of Villa Buim. Thence, though contrary to the advice of the Duke of St. German, because Winter dre on, he marched to Elvas, and laid Siege to that place The Town is seated on a Hill of difficult Ascent, and was then under the Government of Sancho Manuel resolute and fortunate Commander. The first attempt of the Spaniards, was upon the Monastery of St. Franci standing within Musquet shot of the Town, which though well defended, they made themselves masters of as also of the Church of Santangracia, seated on a Hi without the Town. This done, they fell to work my on their Lines, and took their Posts about the Town Nothing was omitted by the Governour that might co duce to a vigorous Defence; but the Besiegers by de grees, having cut off all their Communication abroad and possessed themselves of all advantagious Posts, the place was no longer in a posture to hold out long, he it not been speedily relieved. In order to it, all the Gar risons were drained, and the Porenguese Army rendel vouzed at Estremoz, under the command of the Com de Castagneda. Here the Count received Advice from the Governor of Elvas, that his Garrison was extream weakened through Want, Sickness, and continual La bour, for which Reason he should be obliged to su render, unless speedily succoured. Upon this Advis the Count de Castagneda set forward with 12000 dile plined Foot, and 3500 Horse, besides a consused mult

The History of PORTUGAL

tude of all forts of Rabble that followed the Army as Voluntiers. With this Force he came and drew up before the Hill of Santangracia, whither also the Duke of St. German drew up the best part of the Troops to receive him. In this posture both parties continued all that Night. By break of day the Portugueses began to advance towards the Lines, and made their first effort upon the quarter where Nicholas of Cordova commanded, the fight was obstinate for a confiderable space, and the Portugueses were twice forced to give back. Mean while the Befieged making a furious Sally, endeavour- The Battle ed to ruin their Enemies Works, that they might open of Elvas. themselves a passage to their Army. Thus the Spaniards who were the leffer Number, being charged in Front and Rear, made a desperate and bloody Fight. till their right Wing of Horse being overpowered was put to flight. The Dake of St. German feeing the Foot lest naked on that side, came himself to their Succour, with a party of chosen Horse. Hence rushing furiously upon his Enemy, he received a shot in the Head, which made him fall from his Horse. This accident of the Generals who was esteemed dead, so discouraged the Spaniards, that they presently gave way on all sides, yet so The Spanithat they carryed off their General. In the mean while the ards de-Portugueses meeting no opposition, cleared their passage seated. to the Town. Roderick Moxica who was Major General, and next in command to the Duke of St. German. lying, at this time at his post near the River Cailla, fortifyed himself, and received all that fled from the Battle, still skirmishing with the Enemy till Night, when he drew off, and faved the remainder of the Spanish Army. For the Count de Castaneda satisfyed with having relieved the place, thought not fit to hazard any more by pursuing the Enemy. Of the Spaniards, above 2000 were killed, as many wounded, but very few ken. On the Portuguese side, about 1000 sell. D. Lun de Haro, who had been a spectator of the fight, at a distance, seeing all lost, made his way to Badajoz. Thus ended this present Year.

mixt

Anno, 1659, and 1660.

A Frer the mighty efforts of the last Year, both parties No Warlibe being exhausted and wearied, asif it had been by muexploits for tual consent, kept themselves so quiet, that these two two Tears, Years do not furnish us any Military Action worth the writing. The Spaniards had bent all their Thoughts upon concluding a Peace with France, that so they might wholly apply themselves to the War with Portugal. To this effect a Treaty was set on Foot, and the whole affair managed by the two prime Ministers, Cardinal Peace be- Mazarine for France, and D. Lun de Hare for Spain After long debates, which belong not to this History, a Peace was Concluded betwixt the two Crowns; the and Spain- French renouncing their League with Portugal, upon Condition that King should quit all claim to the Crown, and be restored by the Spaniard towall his ancient Patrimony, as Duke of Braganza. The Portuguese Ambassa. dor, who attended the Cardinal, during the whole time of the Treaty, had not failed to use his utmost endeavours, to obstruct the whole Negotiation taking effect, or at least, to prevent his Master's interest being abandored. But the particular interest of France, outweighed all that could be urged in behalf of an Ally; and the Cardinal assured the Ambassador, that norwithstanding the Peace, his master's Interest should not be forsaken for that the French would be in a better Condition to support him, and could not want a pretence for so doing. This Promise of the Cardinals proved not Vain, as will appear by the Sequel. Count Schomberg, an experienced French Commander, was already in the Portuguefe Service, and had under him some French Troops, which were afterwards increased to a greater Number. The Spaniard immediately after the Conclusion of the Peace with France, began to apply himself to carry to the War against Portugal with all his Force; and to that end, several old Regiments were brought over out of I taly and Flanders. D. Folm of Austria, the King's Ba stard Son, who had commanded in the Low-Countries and in Catalonia, was appointed General, the Duke of St. German his Lieutenant General, Alonfo Poderico Ma jor General, James Cavallers, General of the Hork

The History of PORTUGAL.

and Gaspar de Cueva General of the Arrillery. On the Portuguese fide, whether through want of Intelligence of the Storm that threatned, or through want of Means is uncertain, but the War-like Preparations were not Proportionable. Since these Years afford nothing material, let us pals on to the next, wherein we shall meet with more Action.

Anne. 1661.

D. John of Austria, having received the Command of p. John of the Army and finding all things provided friends p. John of the Army, and finding all things provided suitable Austria to his Expectation, in the Spring entred the Frontiers of with the Portugal, with 13000 Foot, and above 6000 Horse a Spanish Force not so considerable for its number, as for that the Army, inwere all old tryed Troops. The Count de Castaneda vades Por-General of the Portuguese Army, could scarce gather tugal 10000 Foot, and 2000 Horse, so that he was in no Condition to make head against the Enemy. Hereupon D. John being mafter of the Field, marched his Army in light of Campomayor, as if he intended to have let down before it, but having put the place into a Consternation, he suddenly wheeled off; in his way, took and destroved the small Town and Castle of Origuela, and then unexpectedly invested Aronches. This Town is stated He takes upon the River Alegrete, contains about 500 Houses, its Aronches. chief Trade is Cloath, but at this time the Walls of it were ruinous, though it had a Castle, which was of no Strength. No fooner was the Cannon planted, and began to play, but the place furrendred upon Articles; all the Inhabitants out of harred to the Spaniards, retiring with what they could carry away. Here D. John continued, till he had strongly repaired the old Works, and cast up new ones, then having plundered all the Country about, without any Opposition, he marched back the Army to Badajoz.

This loss stirred up the Portugueses to a rash Action, The Porfor Count Schomberg, with 16 Squadrons of Horse, had tuguese the boldness to appear about the Bridge of Badajoz, as Horse unit were provoking the whole Force of the Spanish Ar-der Count my, which then lay in and about that place, to revenge Schomthis excess. D. John immediately sent out D. John Pa-berg, roucheco, Lieutenant General of the Horse, who attacked the Badajoz.

K k 3 the

Austria

takes Al-

conchel.

the Portugueses with a small handfull of men at first, yet with such resolution that they gained no advantage, till he was shot dead upon the place, but then fresh Supplies still comming from the Town, at last the Portugueses were overpowered, many of them stain, many taken, and the rest Forced to save themselves by Flight. This success was the less pleasing to the Spaniards, because of the Loss of D. John Pacheco, who was a person of tryed Valour and Conduct.

D. John being informed that much dammage was D. John of done on the Frontiers of Caltile, by the excursions of the garrison of Alconchel, sent D. James Cavallero with the best part of the Army to invest it, and himself followed soon after him. Alconchel is near the River Guadiana, has a Castle and had been lately fortifyed by the Porrugueses. The Seige was carryed on but coldly, either to draw the Portugues Army to attempt the releif of the place, or else because the inhabitants being divided in factions, it was not doubted but they must speedily furrender. Nor was D. John deceived in his expectation, for the Governour perceiving the heats within to increase, and the Enemy without to threaten the utmost extremity if he proved obstinate; was forced to submit, and accept of honourable conditions. The Fortificarions were speedily repaired and a Spanish Garrison pur into the place. This done D. John returned to Badajon and put his Army into Winter-Quarters.

Anno. 1662.

1. He Last years losses, and the present preparations of the Spaniards, had sufficiently alarmed Portugal, to oblige the Queen to use her utmost industry to be in a condition to oppose her Enemy. In order to it the Treasury being exhausted, heavy Taxes were imposed upon the People, which they did not pay without Catherine much murmuring, and reluctancy. To strengthen her Infanta of self by foreign allyances, she had concluded a march Portugal for her daughter the Princels Catherine with his Majemarried to sty Charles the Second, King of Great Britain. The Queen had Entertained hopes of Marrying this Princess the II. of to the King of France, but he having chosen the Infanta of Spain, her next recourse was by that affinity, to secure he Friendship of the Kang of England. The new Queens portion was a confiderable Sum of Money, the City of francier upon the mouth of the Streights in Barbary. and the Island of Bombain in the East-Indies. On the other fide the King of England was to affift the Portuqueles with a body of Foot, to serve as auxiliaries under the Command of Count Schomberg. The Earl of Sandwich with the Royal-Navy, conveyed the Queen into England. Upon the News of this match and that Tanvier was to be delivered up to the English, the King of spain once more attempted the fidelity of the governour of that City D. Lewis de Almeida, endeavouring to perswade him rather to betray the place to him upon hopes of a confiderable Reward, than to put it into the hands of the English; but the governour was not to be moved, who rather fearing that the inhabitants and Garrison would never be brought to consent, to their Kings orders of delivering up the place, as foon as the English Fleet appeared in fight to take possession of he sent out the greatest part of the garrison, and many of the inhabitants upon pretence to repell the Moors, who appeared then in bodies about the Town, and whilst they were abroad ingaging and pursuing the Infidels, gave possession of the City to the English.

The Lillian Market Contract of the Land

2. Notwithstanding all the Queens care and diligence, the Spaniards were first in the field, and much superiour the Portugueses in Strength. D. John of Austria D. John of took the field at the beginning of May with 13000 Foot, Austria and 5000 Horse all old Troops. His first design was burns and to lay Siege to Estremoz, but the Count de Castaneda plundersthe the Portugues General prevented him, by planting him- Country. Telf before the place with his whole Army, which then consisted of 8000 Foot and 3000 Horse. Hereupon D. John turned away as if he intended to march directly to Lisbon, which put that City into a consternation, and no less surprized the Count de Castaneda searing least the Capitall of the kingdom should fall into the hands of the Earny; and had the Spanish Army held on their march, as they began, in all likelihood they must have made themselves masters of it without any oppolition. Bur D. John spent his time in plundering and burning the Country, and having made a halt near a brook called Zapateros, he sent then D. James Cavallero with Two Regiments of Foot, and most of the Horse,

Kk4

King Ch.

He takes

and raises

The History of PORTUGAL

to attack the Town of Villabuim, a place confiderable both for it's Riches and Strength, nevertheless the Governour who was a French man, upon the first approach of the Spaniards resolved to Surrender, having privately Articled with the Spanish General, that for the saving of his Reputation, he might be permitted to fire his Cannon for an hour without ball, that so he might be thought to have made some defence. Yer the Surrender was not without blood, for some of the inhabitants encouraged by a Parish-Priest, endeavoured to make some opposition, but were soon quelled by the Spaniards. The Town and Castle were raised down to the Ground, for a Terror to other places. Hence the Army moved towards Villaviciofa, and having taken an express that was going to Elvas and Jurumenha, to encourage those governours to defend themselves couragiously, upon promise of speedy relief D. John sent him back to the Cont de Castaneda to let him know he would be with him the next day. He performed his word, but the Count who was much inferiour to him in numbers, kept himself close in his Camp under the Walls of Estremo; D. John intending to attack him in his Camp, was dif waded by the Duke of St. German, and marched away to Borba, a place of small Strength, but that had a Castle, and the governour Roderick da Cunha being i desperate man, had perswaded the Townsmen to jon with the Garrison, to defend it. Such was his Folly a rashness, that he reproached and fired upon the Trumpe that came to bring him the Summons to Surrender, whereupon the Town was affaulted on all fides and raken. The governour with a few men retired into the Caitle, which having for a while flood the shock of the Canon, and beginning now to give way to it's fury Acunha's hear being somewhar allayed, he sent out to beg he might be admitted to conditions. No intreating could prevail with D. John, who being incenfed, would admit of nothing but that they Mould Surrender upo discretion, which was accordingly done. The Sould ers were all made prisoners of War, the Town plus dered, and Burnt, the Castle Demolaned, and da Cu ha the Governour, with Two Captains were strangle in the Market-place.

Borba delivered to him.

Jurumen. 3. Hence the Spanish Army directed its course to Jun ha beseiged menha, an antient and noted Town seared upon a hill by D. sohn, a lor along the East side of it runs the River Guadiana. on the West is a pleasant hilly Country for the most part covered with Trees, Gardens and Vineyards. On the top of the hill over the Town stands the Castle which is itrong, and has 17 Towers. The Fortifications of the Town were all New, and confifted of Five very large bastions, severall half Moons, a good direh, and Trench, with other modern works. Emantel Lobato Pinto was at this time Governour of Jurumenba, the garrison consisted of 3000 men and was plentifully stored with provisions, and all Sort of warlike-ammunition, when the Enemy sate down before it. D. John posted his Army about the Town, drew his lines, whereof the excreams ended at the River, which as has been faid, waters one fide of the Town, and then opened his Trenches and began to raise batteries. The line of circumvallation was carryed on with the utmost diligence, and fortifyed to perfection, least the Portugues Army, as was expected, should find an opportunity of relieving the place. On the other fide the Governour omitted nothing, that might conduce to the security of his garrison, yet so as that he always spared to expose his men, referving them for the last extremity. The Portugues Generall understanding how Jurumenba was beset, sent thither Emanuel de Sequeira an able Commander, to affift the Governour in defence of the place. He got in by a boat in the Night unperceived by the Enemies Guards. D. John railed two strong Forts, one on each fide of the River, and betwixt them layd over a bridge of boats, by which he received plentifully supplies from Olivenza, and with his Cannon cut off from the belieged the use of the River. All things being disposed for an attack, he ordered the Spaniards and Italians upon a fignal given in two severall places, to attack the covered way. The Spaniards going on too precipitary after a long fight, were repulsed and drove back to their Trenches with the Lois of many men, among which were feveral Officers; but the Italians, whose Conduct was better, with small loss lodged themfelves on the counterscarp, and yet the next day it being thought a work of too much difficulty to force the Town on that fide, they were ordered to quit the Post they had taken. Being moved thence, they were ordered to joyn the Germans, who lay before the great great bastion, which, it was hoped, might with more ease be ruined, and four more pieces of Cannon were there planted to batter it, which played with good success and began to fill the dirch. In the mean while a French Ingenier sent from the Portugues Camp to view the Spanish Lines being taken, discovered to D. John that the Count de Castaneda had resolved to attack him in his works, having with him at that time 13000 Foot and 2000 Horse and only expecting the auxiliary English. which according to the contract of marriage with his Majesty of Great Britain would soon be with him. This intelligence caused D. John to fortify his Lines, having by the advice of the Duke of St. German, resolved, to receive the Enemy within them, tho' others advised to march out and meer them. Having disposed all things for the reception of the Portugues General, to forward the Seige, he orders a general affault to be given to all the works of the befieged, the Italians and Germans without much difficulty lodged themselves in the counterscarp, and the Spaniards upon whom lay the horrest Service, after four hours fight with great Laughter on both fides, made themselves masters of two great bastions, and all the space betwixt them; so that now the Town had no other defence left it but it's bare wall. This was the condition of the place, when the Count de Castaneda with the Portugues Army, came and encamped within a League of the Town, but after severall movements to discover the weakest part of the Enemies works, finding it a matter of too great difficulty to Force their Lines, he marched away, having before his departure sent a Letter to the Governour, directing him to make the best conditions he could for his garrison, for that it was impracticable to relieve him. All hopes of releif being Loft, and the Town now reduced to extremity, the Governour upon a fresh Summons from D. John, capitulated and delivered up the Town upon fuch Terms as he could obtain. Thus after a months Jurumen- Seige D. John took possession of Jurumenha, but void of inhabitants, who all marched away out of their hatred to the Spaniards, yet well stored with provisions and Ammunition, tho the Portugueses had spoiled most of their . Corn before they quirted the place. D. Ferdinand de Escoveds, was left Governour there after the works had been sufficiently repaired.

Having

The Title of LOUICAYT.

ha furrendred.

The Hipping I. O.K. B. C. L.

A. Having secured Jurimenha, D. John loft no time, but, immediately marched away towards Variciofa, where the Portugues Army then lay strongly intrenched used all his endeavours to draw them to a battle. Butning and wasting at the Country about, but perceiving the Count de Castanda was unmoved, he removed and planted himself betwixt Aveiro and Monforce, both which places, the well Fortifyed, being terrifyed with the success of the Spanish Arms, surrendred upon the First Summons. Both places being secured with good. garrisons he lighted thence without delay to Crato, a Town belonging to the Knights of Malea, encompassed only with an old ruined wall, and a small Trench, but very Rich and at this time filled with great Stores of Provisions. Tho' the place was not Tenable, the Count de Castaneda, searing to lose all those stores, pur out the former governor and fent to fucceed him an old rash Major. This man never regarding the weaknels of the place, answered the summons sent him by D. John with scorn and contempt, whereupon the Cannon began on all fides to ruin the old walls, and from the higher grounds to bear down the houses and kill the People in the Streets. The inhabitants and even the garrison Souldiers perceiving themselves exposed to inevitable ruin through the fooll hardiness of their new governour, being also headed by the old one, in a mutinous manner befet his house and obliged him to send to beg conditions which when offered he had flighted, He energy but it was now too late, D. John sought Revenge for Crato. the insolence of the Foolish Governor and would not hearken to any Termes. In this deplorable condition, the inhabitants fent out again two Antient-Priests, to move the Spanish General to Compassion, but whilst they were pleading for the Town, the Enemy withour expecting any Command from their Officers, broke in and made themselves Master of the place. D. John by his Authority took care that none but such as were in Arms should be put to the Sword, no woman Ravished, nor no Churches sacked. Through a mistake both the Governours were led to Execution, till D. John being informed of the innocence of the former that had been layed aside, caused him to be honourably dismissed, and the latter for his rashness was Shor to Death in the Market-Place. The Town of Crato was plundered.

upon bim

ment.

dered and burnt down to the Ground, and the Castle blewn up. From Crato, the victorious Army marched to Ornela, which at first stood out against the Summons fent in, but soon after, whilst the Governor had Tent out to treat of a Surrender, the Spanish Soldiers as they had done at Crato attacked and entred the Place. Of which dishonourable Action, when the Governor complained to D. John, he caused all their Goods to be restored to the Inhabitants, and granted honourable Conditions to them and to the Garrison. The Count de Sartinara was appointed Governour of this place, and with him were left two Italian Regiments. After which Actions, D. John put his Army into Quarters, and so ended the Affairs of this Year.

Anna, 1663.

1. DOth Crowns were earnestly intent upon renewing the War this Year, and nothing was omitted on fonfotakes either fide, that seemed conducing to a vigorous Campaign. King Alfonso being now at Age, to take upon the Govern- him the Government of his Kingdom, according to the custom of Portugal, had removed his Mother from the publick Administration of Affairs, and was therefore ambitious to begin his Rule with some important Action, which might gain him Reputation both at Home and Abroad. His first step hereto was to remove the prime Ministers and Officers of the Kingdom, and to supply their places with others more suitable to his own Inclination, or less offensive in the Eyes of the People, then the former had been. He called to him the Count de Castaneda, who had of late commanded the Portuguese Army, pretending he had need of his Counsel at Court, but in reality to ease himself of a Man, who being preferred by the Queen, was likely to adhere to her party, and the who was of a haughty proud Spirit, and had been removed from the Government against her Will, now was forming a Faction to support her Authority. D. Sancho Manuel, Count de Villassor, who had commanded in the Province of Beira, was made General of the Army, in the place of the Count de Castaneda. It was this D. Sancho M.muel who bravely defended Elvas, when belieged by D. Lun de Haro. Denis de Melo, was appointed General of the Horse. Luis de Meneses of the Artillery, Count Schomberg was continued in the post of Camp-Master General, and now was the Custom first introduced into Porcugal, of using Major Generals, which they had not in their Armies before. The Army also was considerably reinforced by the accession of the English and French Auxiliaries. The Count de Villassor having spent a few days at Lisbon to receive Orders, took a Progress, and visited all the Garrisons of his Province of Alentejo, giving the necessary Orders in all places.

The History of PORTUGAL

2. D. John of Austria had thought to take the Field very early in the Spring, but was disappointed by the lam coming of the Spanish Regiments from Milan. As soon as they arrived, he took a review of his Army, which he found to confift of 15000 Foot, and about 6000 D. John Horse. With these Forces he marched into the Fron- of Austria tiers of Portugal the same way he had taken the year in Portubefore, when he besieged Jurumenha. His design was gal, with not known to any Man, except the Duke of St. German, an Army of but it was given out he intended directly for Lisbon. At 21000 first, the Count de Villassor was in Consusion, not know- Men. ing what place this Storm would fall upon; but upon second thoughts, seeing D. John still advance into the Country, he concluded that Ebora was the place he aimed ar, because he well knewit was that Generals custom to attempt the conquest of Towns, that were of great Name and small Strength, such as Ebora was. Being fixed in this his Opinion, he threw into that City 3900 Foot, and about 1000 Horse, which with 5000 Men of the Inhabitants able to bear Arms, he thought would fo long defend the Town, till he could be in a posture to relieve it. In the mean while the Spanish Army advanced through the Countrey, burning and wasting all in their way, without the least Opposition, till at last the Count de Villafor with a small Army on a sudden fell in upon their Rear, and for the present, put all into some Disorder; but D. John having given Orders for all to halr, and then brought his Light Horse about to relieve those thar were ingaged in the Rear, he was forced to draw off and retire to Estremoz with some loss. Three days after the Spanish Army encamped near Ebora. D. James Cavallero, the General of the Horle, was fent before to fecure all Posts about it; which done, the whole Army time as they seized all the Cattle, which was then to late to be drove from the Country about into the place 3. Ebora is one of the largest, and most antient Citi

Portugal, seated in a large Plain. On the South, ing drawn our into little Trenches, fertilizes the Plan

About the Town is a Mud Wall, and at this time form other small Works-had been east up, such as the present

Exigency would permit. The Water for the use of the City, is brought from the Neighbouring Hills, up on a continued row of Arches. This Aqueduct they thought to secure by a Fort, but the Enemies sudden approach prevented them. Lux de Mesquita was now Go vernor of the Town, a Man of noble Extraction, but no Souldier, whom the Garrison disdaining to submit to, Emanuel de Miranda an old Commander, was sub-stirured in his Place. The Spanish Army having invested this place, the general Officers were intent upon fecuring all the advantagious Posts. In the mean while the Ports guese Horse made some Skirmishes to keep them off at 1 distance, but being beaten back to the Town, the Beie gers in the pursuit, possessed themselves of the Mon-stery of St. Antony, which they found but slenderly guarded, and lay commodiously to offend the Town. But the Spaniards sped not so well at the Carmelite Monastery, which lay betwixt that of St. Antony, and the City; for after fix Hours sharp dispute, they were forced to leave the besieged possessed of it. This done, D.John distributed the Posts to his Army, but thought it needless to intrench himself, not doubting to be master of so weak a place, before the Portuguese General could gather a sufficient Force to attempt the relief of it

However the Trenches were opened against the Town, and Batteries raised, but the first that gained a post were the Italians, who with much bravery stormed, and took the Monastery of the Carmelites, whence planting their Cannon, they made a great havock in the Town

The Spaniards ashamed to be outdone by the Italians, carryed on their Works with great diligence, and having with much flaughter repulfed the Besieged, who follyed upon them, made themselves master of the Church

Ebora, be- prospect is terminated by beautiful and fruitful Hills, fieged by the foot whereof is the stately Monastery of the Carthan D. John. lans. On the North of it runs a smallRiver, which he The History of PORTUGAL dren flocked to the Works, and endeavoured to make up the Breaches, but all in Vain, for more was already ruined than could be retrieved, and the continual Fire of the Enemies Cannon, rendred all their efforts unfucup the Ciry upon such Conditions as could be obtained. which were not very Honourable. On the 9th. day. marched our 2000 Foot, and 300 Horse of the Garri-deliveredto fon, who according to Articles were to be conducted D. John, into Castile, and there to remain Prisoners of War during the Summer.

4. The News of the Siege of Ebora being brought to The Por-Lisbon, caused mighty commercions and tumults in that tuguese City, whereupon the Young King by the advice of his General Counsel, sent orders to the Count de Villaflor, to releive Count de Evora at any rate, and at the same time commander the Villaflor, Count de Castaneda, with what Troops he had and ordered to could raise to suppress all Seditions in Lisbon. The relieve E-Count de Villastor received his orders the very day that Evora was Surrendred of which as yet he had no notice, and therefore having called a Council of War, the advice of the Count Sabugal was followed, which was not to hazard a battle at any disadvantage, but to cut off the Enemies Provisions. In order hereto, the Army being now 12000 Foot, and 4000 Horse, and having received intelligence of the Surrender of Evera, marched and incamped at Laondil where they had plenty of Provisions and streightned the Enemy. In the mean while the News of the Surrender of Evora, being brought to

Church of Sr. Dominick, which overlooking the Town. they planted their Cannon upon it, to the great Damage of the Besieged. D. John, seeing the miserable condition of the Place, fent another Summons, offering honourable Conditions if they surrendred in time, which all the Officers of the Garrisons, seeing no possibility of holding the Place, or likelyhood of Relief, thought it time to accept of, but Lewis de Sousa, Elect Bishop of Porto, and Administrator of the Church of Ebora, a Man fitter for the Army than the Church, croffed their design, raising Factions among the People and Garrison, and by this means obstructed the surrender that and the following day. The Clergy and Laiety, Women and Chilcessful. This Fury being spent, and the People coming to themselves, at length they capitulated, and delivered after it was invested, the City was furrendred. There Ebora

Lisbon

Ebora.

The History of PORTUGAL. A main at bon, the multitude ran headlong into all Sorts of Licenti-Lisbon for outness, and not only the vulgar rabble appeared in the fethe loss of dition, but great Numbers of the more substantial fort joyned with them. The First effort of their fury fell upon the Arch-Bishops Pallace, which they plundered, burning and carrying away all that was in it, the Arch-Bishop himself having before made his escape to Thence they turned their rage against the Count of Castaneda, whose house they ransacked as they had done the Arch-Bishops, he himself being also fled; and after him they exercised the same barbarity, towards the principal Magistrates and other great Men of the City. Whilst this passed in the City, the King consulted with the Arch-Bishop, the Count de Castaneda and other great Men, about the means of quelling this Sedition. The Count advised to fall upon the raging Multitude, with such Forces, as were in the Town, whereof the greatest part were Forreigners, and therefore would be faithful, in the performance of their duty. But the Arch-Bishop's opinion prevailed; which was to let the fury of the multirude pass over, and then of themselves they would Return to their Duty. The Rabble having raged all about the Town came at last to the Kings Pallace, where many being weary, and coming to themselves began to slink away, and a last the King Looking out of the Window, and telling them that his Army now befieged those, who had before layed Siege to Evora, they all retired with confusion to their houses, blaming one another, for what they had all done. No Notice was for the present taken, of what had hapned, but some time after, several of the Ring-leaders were punished under other pretences.

D. John. of Ebora gueles battle.

5. During these Transactions, D. John of Austria, repair marches out red the Fortifications of Evora, and finding Provisions began to grow short, having left a small garrison in the to give the City, marched out to give the Portugueses battle, tho' conurterly against hazarding a battle, till the Forces they would give him battle upon equal Terms, or elfe that he should remove them from their advantagious Posts by 17 pieces of Canon which he planted upon an Eminence. But the Count de Villaflor resolving not to quit his Advantage, and the Canon which was ill planted, doing as much Execution among his own, as among the Enemies men, D. John drew back and encamped withour Canon Shot of the River. Thus both Armies continued all Night ready for Action. At break of Day, D. John moved in order of battle, to force the passage of the River, where a bloudy dispute ensued, rill, after a considerable Loss on both sides, the Porcugueses standing their ground, the Spaniards who fought at great disadvantage, were forced to give way, and retire into the plain of Ebora. D. John discouraged at this repulse, pur 3000 Foor, and 600 Horse, under the Command of Francis Gattinara Count of Sartirane into Ebora, resolving to march back into Castile without coming to d battle, if possible to avoid it by marching over the Mountains. His first days march mer with no obstruction, because the Count de Villassor was marched before, in order to choose an advantageous Post to give battle in, where the Horse might be of small use, in which the Spaniards were much Superior to him. Some there were, who advised to march on all Night, but D. John thinking that would look too like flying, refused that wholesom advice. In the Morning he was informed; that the Portugues Army was at hand, being covered from him by the tops of the hills. It was no time now to think of avoiding a battle, and therefore D. John drew up his Army, and being possessed of a high hill, thought good to remove and make himself master of two others that lay in the way to Estremoz. At the same time the Portugueses not knowing any thing of the Enemies design, had resolved to possels himself of the fame place. Hereupon the Count de Villaffor advancing trary to the advise of the Duke of St. German, who was with the Horse, fell upon the rear of the Spaniards, whose Horse were upon the Plain, their Foor having dayly expected from Castile were arrived, and for the already gained the hill. D. James Cavallero facing about subsistance of the Army, advised the turning out of the with his Florse, received the charge and made good his inhabitants, upon whose stores the Souldiers might live ground, so that the Portugueses having spent half the many days. The Portugues Army lay within half a day and gained no advantage, began now to faint un-League of Evora, having a small River before it. This der the toil and heat, which D. John perceiving, he ther D. John marched thinking either the Portuguest speedily possessed himself of the two hills he aimed at, drew up his Horse in four bodies upon the Plain, placed his baggage in their Rear, and planted his Canon upon the hills. On the other fide, the Portugueses seizes the hill which D. John had quitted, looking upon it as The battle part of Victory, to possess the ground the Enemy had defignedly abandoned. About three hours both Armies aj Ebora. continued in these Posts, refreshing their wearied men. when D. John thinking he had given them the flip, began to continue his march, but the Count de Villassor perceiving it, resolved not to suffer him to go off, without hazarding a battle. The fignal being given, he advances, and the Portugues Left wing of Horse first charged the Right of the Spanish, who received them with fuch Resolution, that the Fight continued a long time doubtful, till Emanuel Freire one of the Portugues Generals of Horse wheeling about with some Squadrons he had referved, fet upon the Enemies flank and broke through them, whereupon the whole wing was foon put to flight, as was the referve coming to their relief, and the Left wing which was ordered to relieve the Right by reason of the distance and badness of the way, could never be brought to ingage. Mean while Count Schomberg, who commanded the Portugues Foot, refolved to attack the Enemy upon the hill. This being an Action rather rash than valiant, the English auxiliaries undertook climbing the hill upon their hands and feet, and tho' many of them fell, yet the greater part gained the top, which encouraged three Regiments of Portugues Foot, to ascend a farther way about which This extravagant rashness, of the was much easier. English, so terrifyed the Spanish Foot, that they immediately without sense of shame betook themselves to flight. In a moment their whole infantry was put to the rout, notwithstanding D. John alighting from his Horse, performed all that man could do to make them rally and face the Enemy. But now the victorious Portugues Horse, comming in to second their Foot, there enfued a terrible flaughter, for it was no longer a Fight. The Duke of St. German who had been tent before to mark out a Camp, hearing the noise of the Canon, hafted back, and finding the whole Army difperfed and routed, with much difficulty perswaded D. Forn to save himself by flight. So both the Generals haited away to Aronches, D. James Mazacan whole Iquadron had not been broke, gathering as many of the Horse as he could, made the last effort against the victors, but being overpowered, he was forced to give way to the stronger side. Of the Spaniards were slain in this D. Johns Fight about 4000, the wounded were more, and above of Austria 2000 taken, and among them the Marquess del Carpio, defeated. Eklest Son to D. Lewis de Haro. Of the Portugueses above 1000 were killed, and many wounded. All the Enemies Canon, and baggage, as also D. Folm's most splendid Equipage was taken.

6. The Prisoners taken in Fight were all sent to Lisbon. where the joy of the multitude was as extravagant, as their rage had been for the loss of Evora. The King therefore finding all was secure at home; sent those Troof the had kept at Lisbon, to bridle the Rabble. under the Command of the Count de Castanbeda, to join the Count de Villaflor, with orders to lay Siege The Count to Evora. These two Generals put their orders in Ex-de Villaecution, and femally belieged that City, yet knowing flor recono Enemy could come to it's relief, forbore any affaults vers Ebuto spare their Men. The Count de Sartirane, who as rahas been faid, was made Governour of that City by the Spiniards, defended it with much bravery, the Space of Eleven days, being ignorant what was become of the Spanish Army, but being then informed of it's defeat by a Letter from D. John, in which he ordered him to provide for the fafety of his garrifon, he then Surrendred the place upon honourable conditions.

7. D. John having gathered the remains of his broken D. John Army, and received some recruits out of Gallicia, sent attempts D. James Cavallero, with a good body of Horse and Foot, Elvas. to endeavour to Surprize Elvas, but the garrison having but is retaken the Alarm, he was repulsed, and forced to retire presed. without effecting any thing. To add to the misfortunes of the Spaniards, their great Magazine of powder which they had layed up at Aronches, was accidentally blown up, which ruined many of the new works they had made about the Town fince they took it, and killed above 2000 of the garrifon and inhabitants.

squadron!

8. Winter put not an end to Action, for the Duke of The Dake Ossuna, who Commanded upon the Spanish Frontiers, of Ossuna about Cuidad Rodrigo, tho' he could gather but a small builds. Force, yet being ambitious of Fame, he resolved to a Fort not fole a Royal Foir, not far from Almeida the Portugues far from 1 2 Frontier. Almeida.

Anno, 1664.

1. NO sooner the Spring begun to open then the Portuguese Army to repair to their general Rendesyouze at Estremoz. Being affembled to the number of 15000 Foot, and 4000 Horse, under the Command of the Count de Castanheda, they marched into the Frontiers of Castile, with a Resolution to beliege Valencia de Alcantara, a place strong by Nature, but not regularly fortifyed. In their way they spent some days upon the Banks of the River Caia, about the Bridge of Badajoz, shewing themselvesthere, as it were to provoke the Enemy to Battle. D. John of Austria, who was then in that City, had a sufficient Body of Horse, but neither Foot enough, nor any store of Ammunition to encounter the Portuguese, having lost all the foregoing Summer. However to do what the time would permit; he caused all the Frontier Towns to be strongly Garrisoned, and his Horse to attend the motions of the Portuguese Army, so as to keep them from straying to waste the Country, but not to hazard an Engagement. The Count after a few The Count days, marched and invested Valencia. This Town is de fastanfeated upon a cragged and rocky Ground, by it runs a hear berapid Stream, and on its North fide is a large plain; it fieges Va had no modern Fortification, as was faid before, howe-lenera, de ver some new Works lately cast up, added to the Natu-Acantaia. ral Scituation of the place, rendred it of a confiderable Strength. Fabritius Rossa, an Italian of known Valour and Conduct, was Governour of the Place, and had with him a resolute Garrison of Spannings and Italians. The Count de Castanbeda, perceiving the strength of the Place, and resolution of the Garrison, resolved formally to beliege it, and to that purpole, policifling hundelf of the Monastery of St. Francis, which was within Camon shot of the Wall, planted there his first Batttery, and then raised feveral others in convenient Places. Mean while D. John of Austria, being in care for the Town, sent D. James Correa with all the Horse, either to attempt putting some Succour into the Town, if he found an Opportunity, or at least by his Presence, to encourage the Defendants. Correa having marched up to the Portuguese Lines, and finding them in a posture to receive him L 1 3

Frontier. He marched to the place he had pitched upon with what ftrength he could make, and began the work which was extreamly difficult by reason of the unseasonableness of the weather, and the danger from the Enemy, to oppose whom he incamped before the work with all his Force to cover the Labourers. Peter Jaques de Magallaens, who commanded upon those Frontiers, was then fick, and Alfonso Furtado de Mendoza was substituted in his place. D John of Austria who was now returned to Bajadoz from Court, where he had been to answer to what was objected against him upon account of his late defeat, hearing of this undertaking of the Duke de Ossuna, sent him large Supplies under the Command of the Count Bouette, with which accession the Duke was now increased to about 7000 Formand about 2000 Horse. Not above a Canon shot side him lay the Portugues Army, confitting of a like Force. Mendoza perceiving the Duke was not to be drawn to a battle, his only defign being to cover his work, and it being a rashness to attack him in his Camp, thought the only way to draw him thence would be to enter the borders of Castile, and put all things to Fire and Sword. To this intent he sent out a party of Horse to Annida, which the Duke perceiving, charged and there e. . . a bot dispute; the Portugueses giving way, and drawn g on the Enemy till the rest of their Forces came up with them. Thus the Fight was protracted till the gress of both Bodies came to Engage, and then the Spanife Horie ave ground, and had been utterly routed, had not the Count de Bouette stood firm with his Troops, and given those that fled time to Rally. But the Duke perceiving there was no likelihood of finding the shock of the Portugueses, sent a Squadron of Horie to fall into their Camp, which they understanding, drew back to fecure their works, and the Spaniards defign, being no other than to discharge themselves of them, both parties as it were by content, returned to their Camps. The execution on both fides was equal, in all about 800 Horse fell, but not so many Foot. This drawn bartle was the last, neither side being desirous too far to provoke the other. However the Duke finished the Fort he had begun, into which he put a strong parriton, under the Command of D. Gregorio Tapia. Thus ended the Action of this Year, with the Year it lelf.

518

him, attempted nothing, but wheeled off again, and marched back till Night over-took him. Then having ordered his Troops to halt, he sent out Count Bouette with a Party, to bring in some Provisions for his wearved Men. The Count being departed, a sudden cloud of Dust which arose, being driven by the strength of the Wind, so terrified the Spaniards, who imagined the whole Portuguese Army was coming upon them, that they disperfed and fled about all the Hills, casting away their Arms, and leaving their Baggage, so that all their Commander Fames Correa could do, was not of any effect to bring them again into a Body. Count Bouette returning with the Provisions he had gather'd, found only the scatter'd Baggage, and marks of their flight, whereupon he went after, and having overtaken them in the Morning, they returned together with dishonour to Badajoz. But the Count de Castanheda making use of his time, and having now made several Breaches in the Walls fit for an affault, sent to summons the Governor to furrender in time, fince all hope of Relief was vanished, and the place was in no condition to hold out. The Governour to gain time, entred upon a Treaty, but proposed such high Terms that they were scornfully rejected by the Portugues, and immediately the Batteries were renewed with more fierceness than before. Then followed a furious Affault, which the befieged stood with fuch undaunted Resolution, that after a great slaughter on both sides, the Portugueses were compelled to give it over. This repulse moved the Count to carry on his Works more deliberately, and endeavour to spare the Blood of his Soldiers. But it was not long before Ammunition began to grow scarce in the Town, which obliged the Governor to hearken to a Capitulation offered him by the Portuguese, for fear least they becoming sensible of his want, should afterwards impose harder Conditions upon him. However, though the Proposal was most grateful, yet he carryed himself very high, and would not feem to comply, but upon powerful Arguments and Perswasions. At length, after much debate, it was concluded, that besides all other Honourable Conditions, the Governour should be allowed to send to D. John of Austria for Relief, and that if he were not then relieved, he should surrender the Town. In the mean while all Hostilities were to cease, and a Messenger having brought this account to D. John, he sent D. James Correa with 3000 Foot, and what Horse he had to attempt to succour the Town, but he being much inferiour in all respects to the Betiegers, thought not fit to expose his small Forces to certain Destruction. After the expiration of the four Days, the Governour delivered up the Place, marching out with his Garrison upon as honorable Conditions, as he could himself demand.

2. Whilst D. John of Austria's Credit daily decreased on account of these many losses, the Duke of Ossuma T. Dibe thought it fit to raise his own Reputation. In order of Offuna hereto, he marched to Castel Rodrigo, a Portuguese Town, at nies Caencompassed with an old but strong Wall, and several stel Bodri-Out-works; yet better secured by the Courage and Ex- go, and is perience of its Governour, John Ferreira, who had repulsed. there in Garrison a Regiment of tryed Valour. This place the Duke hoped to have carryed by Storm, but having been several times beaten off with great loss; he fate down quietly before it with 7000 Foot, fending about his Horse to gather Provisions. After a few days lying still, as if he had no further delign against the Place, he marched off, that he might the better furprize the Garrison, for in the dead of a dark Night, he returned again, attempted to scale the Walls, where the Watch was negligently kept, yet being discovered, and the Town taking the Alarm, he was beaten off, and no hope left of prevailing, either by an Affault, or Surprize. Both these Designs failing, he resolved upon a formal Siege, and accordingly raifed his Batteries, whence he shook and ruined the Walls with his heavy Cannon. Peter Jaques de Magallaens, who commanded the Portuguese Forces in those Parts, and to whom the defence of that Garrison belonged, having gathered all the Forces of that Province, marched with speed to its relief, and posted himself on a Hill, opposite to the Town, so disposing his Troops that the Enemy could not judge of their number, hoping thereby to move them to raile the Siege, which fell out as he expected; for the Duke not being able to judge of his Strength, thought not good to expose himself to uncertainties, and therefore drew off from the Place. Peter Jaques having gained this Point, resolved to pursue the Enemy, and force him to a Battle before he received the Reinforcement he expect-L 1 4

Valencia taken by the Portuguele General.

The History of PORTUGAL

ed from D. John. It was no hard matter to draw the Duke to a Battle, he being a Man that relyed more upon Chance and Fortune, then Prudence and Conduct: therefore as foon as he perceived the Portugueses were not superiour to him in number, he chose his Ground, and drew up his Men. Both parties being disposed for the Fight, the Spaniards made the first only advancing hastily and Firing; but their Precipitation them into Disorder, which the Portugueses taking the advantage of, they fell in with their Horse and Foot, and in a moment The Duke put them to the rout. The Duke, who had rather overthrown play the part of a Soldier then a General, having in person several times charged the Enemy, seeing himself Jaques de almost abandoned by his own People, and beser by his Adversaries, at last saved himself by Flight. Of the Spaniards, about 2000 were killed, and near 500 taken; of the Portugue/es,800 were lost: All the Spaniards Baggage and Cannon, with the Duke's Equippage were taken. This Action was performed about the beginning of the Summer; afterwards the Heats increasing, and both Parties being fufficiently worn and tired, they retired into quarters of Refreshment, and nothing more happened worth the relating; let us therefore pals on to the enfuing Year.

Anno, 1665.

I. TATE are now drawing to the end of this redious War, and though betwixt the death of King John, and the Conclusion of the Peace, there happened several things remarkable enough in the Civil Government; yet I have thought fit not to interrupt the Series of Marshal Affairs now drawing to a Period, but rather to put an end to the course of these extern contentions, and when I come to relate the intestine Troubles and Confusions, then at once to fum up those Accidents that preceded in order to them, that then the Reader may with the more ease to his Memory, take first a view of the whole War, and next of the strange Catastrophe that enfield, with all the previous Accidents tending to it.

2. Before the main Armies could take the Field, both parties ceased not to infest their Enemies Frontiers with frequent Incursions. But for the most part, these Actions were inconsiderable, being rather like Robberies, A Body of then publick Hostilities. The first Action of moment Spanish we find this Year, was an incursion made by 1000 Por- Horse rontuquesc Horse, towards Badajoz, plundering and burning red. all the Country before them. Count Marsini at this time, commanded on the Spanish Frontiers, who upon the news of the Spoil made by the Portugueles, commanded D. Fames Correa General of the Horse, with 500 Men to oppose the Enemy. Correa after representing the weakness of that number, having received a check for his seasonable Advice, marched out. The Portuoueles were then dispersed, but hearing of the Approach of the Enemy, affembled their Troops, and having lay'd part of them in Ambush, with the remainder charged the Spaniards, who meeting less opposition then they had expected, thought themselves secure of the Victory, rill being encompassed by those that rose out of the Ambush, most of them were either killed or taken. D. Fames Correa, with those few that could escape, fled to Badajoz, not much troubled at his loss, because he had been contrary to his Judgment and Advice, fent upon the Action with fo small a Force.

3. Whether it was that the Portugueses were resolved to stand upon the Defensive, and therefore spared their Forces; or that the Difficulties their new rifing King- The Mardom labour'd under, would not permit them to be so quels of forward as the Enemy, is hard to determine; but cer-Caracena tain it is, the Spaniards were generally the first that General of took the Field. So this Year, the Marquess of Carace- the Spanina, who with a general Applause for his good Service ards. in Italy, and the Low-Countries, had been appointed General for this War, having taken a review of his Army, which he found to contift of 12000 Foot, and about 6500 Horse, marched into Portugal, with a full Resolution to besiege Villaviciosa. This Town is the antient Seat and Patrimony of the Dukes of Braganga, and is properly called Villaviciosa, because of the pleafantness of the Air, the fruitfulness of the Soil, the beauty of its Forrests, and other Delights wherewith that Territory abounds. The Town it self is seated on a high Hill, and is divided into three parts. The first which is in the nature of a Suburb, contains feveral Monasteries, many Inhabitants, and the stately House of the Duke of Braganza. To this joyns the Town, enauels of

The Mar-

ſa.

Caracena

compassed with an old Wall, but little inhabited. Above all, stands the Castle, well enough fortifyed for that time, having a Ditch, a covered Way, a Half-Moon, and other Works. Christopher Brito, was at this time Governor of the place, and had under him feveral expert Commanders, and 1000 Garrison Soldiers. besides the Towns-men that were sit to bear Arms. As foon as Brito understood the Enemy advanced towards him, he fecured and strengthened three strong Posts without the Walls, viz. the Duke of Braganza's House, which was built like a Castle; the Fort of St. Benedist, and the Gate called No. Eighteen Companies of Spanish Musqueriers immediately assaulted these three Posts at the same time with much Bravery, but they were all Villavicio- three with no less Valour made good by the Defendants. However, Brito confidering those places were too far remote from the Town, to be kept without great hazard of weakning his main Strength, drew off his Men the Night following, and abandoned them. As foon as Day appeared, the Spaniards commanded by Roderick Moxica, entred the Houses next to the Town, without any Opposition, all that were able to bear Arms, being withdrawn into the Town. Here the Soldiers committed all the Ourrages that could be expected from the cruellest Enemy, sparing neither Sex nor Age; ravishing Women, and prophaning even the Churches, till some religious Men who had made their Escape, giving an account of these barbarous Proceedings to the Marquels of Carazena, he took Order to cure this Licentiousness of the Soldiers. Being thus possessed of the Suburb, the Marquess planted his Cannon against the Town, but being impatient of delay, he affaulted the Wall with Scaling Ladders, and at the same time applyed a Petard to one of the Gates, yet all in Vain, for he met with fuch vigorous Resistance, that he was compelled to draw off his Men. Next he applyed himself to undermining, but the Earth being unfit, this Work proved more prejudicial to him than to the Befieged. At last, having made some Breaches in the Walls, the Italian Foot were ordered to mount them, which they performed with as much Gallantry as could be imagined, but those who to divert the Besieged, were to Scale the Walls, being easily repulsed with great Loss, by reason their Ladders were too short, and all the Strength of the belieged making good the breaches, all that the Ital lians could do was to lodge themselves under the Walls. In the Mean while the Spaniards who belieged the Caffle were not Idle, but having battered it gave a most furious affault tho' with no better success than the Italians had done, yet with greater flaughter on both fides. In this Action Brito the Governour received three wounds! and loft feveral Officers and Soldiers of good Nore. After these repulses, the Marquess proceeded cautiously. vet never ceasing to batter the works with his Cannon. At length receiving intelligence that the Portugues Army was upon it's march from Estremoz to relieve the place. least he should find his Forces divided betwixt the Town and the Castle, he resolved to bend his whole strength against the Town and to leave the Castle for another time. However least the besieged should have the opportunity of relieving the Town from the Caftle, he commanded the Spanish Foor to attack the palisade of the. Castle, whilst the Italians gave the General assault to the Town. This Action was very hor, both parties being obstinately set down not to give way, but at last Valour must give place to number, and the Italians having gained the tops of the Walls and breaches, such of the defendants as escaped were forced to retire into the Castle: Nothing being now left the besieged but the Castle. the Marquess sent to Summons the Governour to Surrender, threatning the danger of delay, who nevertheless sent the messenger back with a very slight anfwer. The Marquess being now wholly intent upon taking the Castle, raised a battery against it upon the top of the Church, dedicated to the Conception of our Bleffed-Lady.

The History of PORTUGAL

4. Whillt the Castle was thus prest by the Spaniards. the Count Castanheda General of the Portugues Army, The Count de advancing to its relief, sent Francis Carneiro a Captain of Castanhe-Foor, with only two Soldiers, who with an unparallel-da the Por led boldness rode through the besiegers, to give the go-tugueses vernour an account of the approaching relief, and the General, two Souldiers with the same bravery and success, retur-advances to ned to their General with the News of what they had relieve Vildone. In the next place, the Count called a Council of laviciofa. War, to consult whether it were fit to hazard a battle, where it was unanimously decreed to Fight the Enemy. The Count being joyful at this universal agreement, tent

prelenilv

presently a Trampeter, to advertise the Marquels of Carazena of his approach, and to let him know how pleasing it was to him to give battle to so great a General. The Marquess looked upon this message only as a brayado, and sent back an answer accordingly, then calling a Councel of War, after fundry opinions had been heard, the Marquess his opinion prevailed which was to give the Enemy battle. This done he made choice of a Plain below the Castle, whether he marched with his Army, leaving 1500 Foot, which he judged a of Montefclaros.

fufficient strength to keep in the befieged. 5. Near to Villaviciosa is a Plain commonly called the The Battle Plain of Montesclaros, encompassed about with Hills and Rocky cliffs, but pleasant and diversifyed with Trees and Vineyards, and full of dirches and other impediments to Armies. Into this Plain, the Portugueses came first leading 16000 Foor, and 6000 Horse. The Spaniard was much weaker, having lost many men in the fiege besides those he had left at the Castle. The Marquels of Carazena knowing the nearer the Enemy drew to him, the more advantagious the ground was for him, because there was not Room to spread abroad, he caused his men to possess themselves of that ground, his Foot stretched out, keeping the side of the Mounrain, and his Horse marching in the Plain on the Lest This his celerity did not a little startle the Count of Castanhena, for that his Foot and Artillery were not as ver come up, and he feared to be Forced to engage before they could reach him, but Count Schomberg upon advice from him, hastning their march, delivered him from this perplexity. The Marquess drew up his Foot in two Lines, the Horse because the ground would allow no more Front were drawn up in five, the Spanish Horse had the Right wing, the Forreigners the Lett. In the Portugues Army, almost all the Horse were on the Right, and the Foot on the Left, the nature of the place not allowing the Horse to be imbattled on both wings, yet among the Horse were disposed some Companies of chosen Foot. That wing which consisted only of Foot, was in two Lines, yet all was so contrived that the Horse could speedily relieve the Foot, or the Foot the Horse as occasion required. Things being in this posture, after the Canon had played, The Marquess Commands Alexander Prince of Parma, General of the Forreign Horse, to charge the Portugues Right wing, which he performed with such Valour and fury, that he drove the first Line of the Portugueses in great disorder upon their Rear. The Spaniards having in the pursuit broke their Ranks, fell in upon the pikes of the Foot, that had been mixed with the Horse, which sorely galling them, quite changed the Face of Affairs; for whilft they Laboured to extricate themselves from that peril, the Horse who before had fled, rallying charged them afresh. They that before thought themselves victorious, being thus pressed on all sides began to give way and fall into disorder: Then Count Rabata who Commanded the German Horse, seeing them just ready to fly, rode up a in Rage, and upbraiding the cowardize of his men, brought them on to the Charge afresh. The Prince of Parma also rallying those that were dispersed, the battle was again renewed, and the Portugueses charged more fiercely than at the first onset; insomuch that the Spaniards prevailed driving their Enemies, and the Germans having made their way through the Right, were falling in upon the Left wing. The Portugues General perceiving the danger, fent Count Schomberg, the Count de St. Lorenco, and other chief Officers, to give a check to the Enemy. These having gathered the dispersed Troops, and drawn fresh succours from all sides, restored the Fight, yet so that both wings were joyned together, and so pressed the harder upon the Spanish Troops, almost tired with the fatigue of the long Service. Hereupon the Marquels of Carazena, who from a Hill viewed the Action and gave orders, seeing his Left wing born down, sent orders to James Correa who Commanded on the Right. either to come immediately to the relief of the Left, or elte by charging upon the Left of the Portugueles to draw them away to him. Correa obeyed not his orders, whether through cowardice, or Treachery, or that the ground would not permit, is uncertain. Thus the Italians and Germans being forfaken by their Friends, and befet on all fides by their Enemies, were almost all cut oil, yet dyed not unrevenged, having made a great flaughter, and amidst the multitude, slain many Officers of note, Count Schomberg narrowly escaping when his Horse was killed under him. Now at length the Spanifb Right wing came on, after their Left was utterly loft, but it was a matter of much difficulty to charge over red.

over the heaps of dead Bodies, and scatter'd Arms. Besides the Horse were gauled by the scattering Companies of Foor, who with their Pikes, discomposed and broke their Ranks, so that they were forced to wheel often, and rather defend themselves, then offend their Enemies. At length being seconded by their Foot, they gave fuch a violent Charge, that the Portugueses, who had stood long to it before with various Fortune, fainting, began again to decline, till their General, the Count of Castanheda seeing that was the last effort, coming in with his Guards and what Troops he could gather, and acting the part of a Soldier, as well as of a General, inspir'd new Courage into them, and restored the Fight. In this Heat, when the Success stood doubtful, two things concurred to bestow the Victory on the Portuguese. One was the taking of James Correa, General of the Spanish Horse, the other, that the Swiffers ferving in the Spanish Army, being discontented for want of their pay, went over to them. The Spanish Horse dismayed at these two unexpected Accidents, immediately fell off, the Portugueses pressing upon them, yet lo as not being fuffer'd to pursue, the others rather retired then fled. Nothing remained now but the Foot; who being beset, for that Count Schomberg had seized all the advantagious Posts, fought desperately, having nish Army scarce any hopes left to cicape. The Fight had lasted totally rou feven Hours, and both fides being tired, both the Spanish Horse and Foot, because the Portuguese did not pursue, marched off with Speed, and began to gather up such as had fled farther, so that they made a confiderable Body. Count Castanheda unwilling to fuffer so great a Party to escape, sent Vasconcellos and John de Silva with fome Troops of Horse, who wheeling about a Monastery, fell in with them, and stayed their March till the Count came up with the rest of the Army. The Spaniards being thus enclosed without hope of fafety, either by fighting or flying, were finally overthrown and cut to pieces. About 4000 Foot of several Nations, who before the Spaniards were enclosed, had retired to a place of Strength, feeing the whole Army Iost, surrendered upon Discretion. Near 1000 more, who had fled to the Woods, were either taken, or perished there. In all about 5000 of the Spankirds are reported to have been killed, and not fewer taken, and The History of PORTUGAL.

of both forts were many Officers of Note. Nor was the Victory cheaply bought, above 2000 of the Victors being flain, among which were several remarkable Persons. This was the decisive Battle of Montesclaros. which finally fertled the Crown upon the Head of the new King of Postagal. The Marquels of Carazena feeing all loft, made his way to Villaviciofa, where he ordered the Forces he had left there, to continue the Siege, to rife from before the Place, least they should be overwhelmed by the Victorious Army. They with all speed drew off their Artillery, and marching in good Order, though often attacked by the Portugueses, made god their Retreat, first to Jurumenha, and thence to Badajoz, whither the small remainder of the Army was fled. Thus the Marquess in his old Age, tarnished that Reputation he had gained in his Youth.

6. This great Battle was the last Action of Note, that King phic concluded the War betwixt Spain and Portugal; for lip of this Year, on the 17th. of October, dyed Philip the IV. Spain's King of Spain, leaving that Crown to his Son Charles II. Death, then but four Years of Age, and the Government being in the Queen his Mother, she soon after concluded a Peace with Portugal. Having now put an end to the War, we shall in the few remaining Years, have occafion only to treat of the Deposition of King Alphonso, which insued, and the tendencies to it.

7. However, to the end that Narration may be no ways interrupted, though this be not exactly the proper place, we will proceed without interruption to what remains. Great debates had been at the Court of Madrid, after the death of King Philip upon the subject of Peace or War. Not only the multitude, but even the most considerable of the Nobility, considering the great Expence, the many Losses, and the little Progress made in the War, were inclinable to Peace. The Queen her telf was for it, but politick feemed averse, the better to discover the dispositions of the People. Nor would the feem to comply with their defires alone, till the English Ambassador then Resident at Madrid, had signified to her, that unless the would hearken to some Propolals of Peace, the King his Mafter should be obliged to protect and defend his Brother the King of Portugal, with all his Forces both by Sea and Land. These Threats joyn'd to the general confent of her own Subiects, at length drew the Queen to affent to a Treaty. By her the King of England was chosen Mediator, and Guarantee for the Treaty and Peace that was to ensue. Commission was given to the Marquels del Carpio, then a Prisoner at Lisbon, to make the Overtures, and Treat with full Power. Not to enter into the tedious Transactions of the Treaty, or to sal up too much space with the Articles at large, the substance of them whereupon the Peace was finally concluded was this, That both Kings should reftore all Places taken during the War, which either of them possess, appertaining to the jurisdiction of the other, except Centa, on the Coast of Africk, which the Marquess del Carpio lerved to hisKing. That all Confilcations made during the War, should be restored by the Peace. That all Trade and Commerce should be free betwixt the two Crowns, and the Portugueses in Spain to enjoy the same Priviledges as the English did; the Spaniards in Portugal the same they stood possessed of in the time of King Sebastian. That all Prisoners on both sides be set at liberty without Ransom. That the Portugueses have free passage through all the Dominions of the Catholick King, either by Sea or Land. That all Controversies arifing on account of Trade, or otherwise, shall be amicably composed betwixt the two Kings, without having recourse to Arms. That the King of, Portugal, if he think fit, may be admitted into the League that is betwixt his Catholick Majorly, and the King of Great Britain. All other points to remain in the fame Condition they were in during the Reign of King Sebastian. That the King of England be Guarantee for these Articles concluded, and Mediator in all fuch Differences as may happen to arise. Upon these Conditions the Peace was concluded betwixt his Catholick Majesty, and the King of Portugal, through the Interpolition and Mediation of the King of Great Britain; this was the end of that War, which had now continued 28 Years, and thus the House of Braganza was established upon the Throne of Portugal.

The Conclusion of the History.

HAving now brought the War to this happy Conclu-fion, for the House of Braganza, it remains we A word should shew into what Troubles and Consusions they concerning brought themselves to the endangering of the new gotten the follow-Kingdom, to the ruin of their Head, the then King, to the ing Sheers. perpetal in famy of the disloyal Actors, and to the astonishment of all their Neighbours, who were spectators of their monstrous proceedings. It will not suit with the brevity of this History, to clear all the matters of lesser moment, which others have handled at large, and for the most part with more Partiality, then solid Truth. Let it fuffice, that nothing shall be omitted which is worthy of Memory, and might feem to influence, or promote those alterations that happened in the State. The account of the War with Spain has been taken from the best Authors that have treated thereof, but in the ensuing Discourse, I have not only consulted Authors, who as was faid before, are too Partial, or elfe wanted Information; but having had the advantage of living a confiderable time in Portugal, I have received great Light into those Affairs from several Persons of Prudence and Judgment, who were Eye-witnesses to all the Transactions. But because it may be offensive to some to lay the Truth too naked, I shall abridge the Relation as much as may be, giving all the respect to the Living, that the Subject will bear without wronging the Dead. Nothing of Favour nor Affection can draw my Pen to favour either side, as well in regard I am a Stranger to both, as for that I can expect no Reward or Interest from those that are deprest, but ought rather o mistrust being cryed down by the prevalent Faction. Whatever my Fortune is, I will not conceal the Truth, but to avoid all Reflection, will barely relate the mater of fact, without discanting upon it.

King Alfonso in his Infancy, when he was but three Years of Age, had been taken with a Palife, which du- The Garce ing those very tender Years, was hard to be removed; of King but as he grew up in Strength, fit Kemedies being ap-Alphonlyed, he became perfectly cured, to that no tign of it to's Mis-The emained, except some small Contraction in his Right Strunes.

M m

The History of PORTUGAL.

Hand. This fatal Palfie, may be faid to have been the very Source of all this unfortunate King's Calamities, for though, as has been faid, there was scarce any token of it left in him; yet his Enemies made their use of it, I to perswade the ignorant, that it had affected his Brain, and that he was confequently become unfit for Government. To gain their flaunders the more Reputation. they never ceased to accuse him of falle Crimes, and to blacken in the most odious manner, his youthful Overfights and Extravagancies, which in themselves were no more then what are daily seen in those raw Years, where Power is joyned to heat of Blood. The Nobility were averse to him, because he was naturally vehement, and therefore they feared he would in time crush their Pride, and make them fensible of that diffance which ought to be betwixt a Monarch and a Subject. His Mother a haughty Woman, became implacable, because being always used to rule, the must against her Will resign up the Power to him. His Queen it is most likely, bore more Affection to his Brother then to him, as is visible by the Privacies that passed betwixt them, from her sirst coming into the Kingdom. His Brother could not withstand the Temptation of a Crown, which by stretching out his Hand might be secured, and by delaying too long, might have flipt away for ever, if the King had either had Iffue, or out-lived him. And in fine, the giddy multitude were ever lovers of Change, and fo artificially prepared by the horrid Reports daily spread against the King, that many of them looked upon him no otherwise, then as a Monster, or a Fury, for so was he represented to them, and the custom of Portugal is fuch, as their Kings are but little seen by the Peo-

The Coars Ple. de Odemira Go-

King John dying, and his Queen entering upon the Regency, D. Francis de Faro, Count of Odemira, was appointed Covernor to the young King Alphonfo, who being a Man of excellent parts, and allyed to the Blood-King. Ets Royal, omitted nothing that might be conducing to the Improvement of his Charge, taking care that he should proceedings be influenced in fuch I carning, as became a Prince, and induling into him fact notions of Politicks, as his Age veas capable of. Algorito was not naturally addicted to fludy, and therefore perhaps made not to great an Improvement, as his Governor expected, who not confidering his Age, would perhaps have him to be a Man before his time, and therefore was much offended, that he would addict himself to the Company of other Boys like himself, and follow the Sports used among them. But generally speaking, the King's greatest delight was in violent Exercises, and particularly in making parties of Boys, and feeing them fight. Among the rest that used to divert him, was one Antony Conti de Vintimiglia, the Son of a Genoese Merchant, but born at Lisbon, who being crafty above his Years, by always applauding and furthering the King's Designs, so worked himself into his Affection, that he took no Delight in any pastime without him. Conti knew so well how to improve his Fortune; and the King's Favour, that at length, he became by his continual attendance upon him, an Eye-sore to the Count de Odemira, and generally to all the Nobility, who were jealous that a Man of mean extraction should have the Ear of their Prince, fearing he might in time grow up so as to cope with their Grandeur. Hereupon the Queen joyned her Authority to that of the Count, to forbid the King's farther entertaining of young Conti. He obeyed for a while, or at least saw him but by stealth, till at length impatient to be curbed, he flighted their injunctions, and fell again to his former familiarities with him. The Queen and Count who had no power to constrain, seeing their advice rejected, were forced to connive at this return of. their Familiarity, hoping that Time, or some Accident would change the King's Inclination. The King being of Age to be able to mount a Horfe, his Governour instructed him carefully in that manly Exercise, as believing this might conduce to draw him from other less honourable Pastimes, but is proved not as he expected: For Alphonfo took the advantage of the riding place, to admir not only Conti, but also many others of the meanest fort, whom he delighted to see wrestle, pitch the Bar, and Fight, not sparing at times to mix himself among them. The Count not knowing what other course to take to break the King of that Company, adventured one day to cast them all out of the Place in the King's fight, reproaching and threatening them all, but particularly Conti, to whom he denounced Death, if he were feen again with the King, who though at that time he faid nothing, yet he highly referred it, and M m 2 afterwards was mindful of this Boldness of his Governor. The absence of Conti lasted not long, for the King's Mind being wholly bent upon him, and some who thought to make their Fortunes by flattery, representing this Separation as a Diminution of the Royal Authority, he was foon recall'd. Being to return to Court the more to terrifie his Enemies, he endeavoured, and that successfully, to incline the King to mischievous Sports, such as fighting of Mastives, Bulls and Horses, and to flinging of Stones with Slings, which often flying at Rovers, did harm to People at a distance. These accidents were the cause that no Murther, or other Mischief, was committed in the City, but what was improved by his Enemies, as if Countenanced by Alphonso. But now the Count de Odemira to draw him from these unseemly Exercises, pur him upon Fencing, in which he made no great Improvement, because he would not observe Rule, but wholly put himself upon cutting and thrusting wih all his Force in such so t, as he often eluded Art it self.

Ambition. and Differences betwixt the two Brothers.

Within the same Pallace with the King, lived his Bro-The Queens ther Peter, and their Mother the Queen Regent, a Woman not so zealous for her Children, as careful to preferve the power the had got, being used to rule, and disdaining to part with it. The Infante, so all the Children of Kings are called, (except the Heir to the Crown, who alone has the Title of Prince) and his Brother were ever at Variance, nor was it possible to reconcile them, because the Elder looked upon it as a Presumption in the younger, who blamed and condemned all his Actions, and the younger being supported by his Mother and the great ones of his Party, never ceased to give him fresh provocations. Anteny Conti perceiving the King was now at those Years, that the Charms of Beauty began to work upon him, lost not this opportunity of fecuring himself in his Favour, but by all possible means endeavoured to heighten his Defire, and promore his Pleasure. The Queen Mother observing that her Son, though he carried it with great Distinulation in respect to her, could not forbear casting many amorous glances upon her I adies, and fearing least the splendor of the Crown might induce some of them to submit to his Will, found no expedient to fecure their Honour, but by taking away all Opportunity. To this purpole, she appointed him a separate Retinue, and a particular

The History of PORTUGAL.

apartment in the Pallace, which, tho' he was of Age the had forbore doing before, least he thould wrest the Government, the was so unwilling to part with, out of her hands. This fudden change for some time withheld Alphonfo, always befet with the great men of the Kingdom, from the mean company he before took delight in. But Conti fearing least if he took to a folid deportment, his favour would foon decline, never ceased till he drew him back from those grave formalities, to the practice of his former violent and extravagant Exercises. It is worth the observing, that tho' in Portugal it be one of the things the Nobility and Gentry most value themselves upon, to ride at a Bull with a spear and strike him therewith, yet, one of the great crimes objected against Alphonfo, is that as he was riding in the Plain beyond Tagus, he ran with his spear at a Bull, but so unfortunately, that his Horse being gored he was cast to the ground and taken up for dead. His delighting in unruly Horses, his liking to sierce Dogs and many other fuch youthful excesses are urged against him and painted out as the blackest infamies. Yet nothing has fince been more improved to his disadvantage, or then made a greater noise, than his attacking alone Slanders three men in a dark Night, whom for a confiderable cast upin space he fet very hard, till Number prevailing he the King. at length fell, having received at their hands two wounds and was faved from farther perill by his fervants comming in. These very Actions alledged against him, prove that he was not so Lamed with the Palfy, as was pretended by his adversaries. And as for the extravagancy of quarrelling in the street, it is a fault so habitual to Youth in all parts, that to object it to him, as a crime unpardonable, looks as if indeed there were none real to accuse him of. But it is most certain that what in the unfortunate is accounted Vice, in the fortunate passes for Virtue. However after he was recovered of his wounds, the Councel of State in the Name of the Kingdom made a remonstrance to him, upbraiding him with things past and desiring him for the future to have more regard to the fafety of his Person. Indeed as it proved a course piece of Court-ship to pray their King to spare his Life that he might afterwards End it miserably in imprisonment. This remonstrance had such effect upon the King, that tho' he did not abandon Vice, yet he changed \mathbf{M} m 3 introducing instead of the experienced Nobility, all the

foft and fecure, fuch as are the intriegues of Love, fo that now his whole delight was in Feafting and Women. He walked the streets of Lisbon at Night with a Train of bravoes, ranging to lewd houses, and sometimes those that accompanied him committed outrages upon fuch as they met: Neither was this all, for at length even by day he would slip out or suffer women to be brought to him to the Court. To divert him from these scandalous courfes, his Mother with some of the Nobility, contrived to fill his mind with business, giving him some part in the administration of publick Affairs, yet so as that the supream Authority might still remain in her hands. Thus Alphonso was brought to give audience with his Mother, and to affift in Council, and was not at all averse to it, fo that tho' he did not quite for sake his vices, yet he had not so much leisure to indulge them. Conti was not at all displeased at these proceedings, hoping this would be the means for advancing his Fortune, and therefore lost no time or opportunity, but plyed the King with immoderate suits for himself and his companions. The first thing the King asked for him of his Mother, was that he might be admitted into the order of Knighthood called of Christ, which as she durst not absolutely refuse for fear or provoking her Son, so she delayed granting it, still putting him off from time to time with several excuses. Conti perceiving her subtilty, failed not to press the King, urging how unworthy his grandeur it was to be refused that which was in his power to take, and by these and other infinuations so fiered his mind, that at length he forced the Queen to condefcend to all that was asked for him. Being thus raifed from the degree of a Merchant to that of a Minister of State, not only the meaner fort made application to him in their Suits, but even the Nobility had recourse to him in matters of moment least his interest should thwart their designs, nay even the Queen herself, tho' contrary to her haughty inclination, refused not to truckle to his greatness, fearing the could not maintain her Authority by opposing him. But he knowing all this Courtship was Feigned, used Art against Art. shewing a good countenance to all yet at the same time arming himself against all Emergencies. To this purpose he began to make a party in the Court,

Youth,

The History of PORTUGAL. youth into places of honour, and preferring some of mean parentage; till the Queen, fearing least the increase of his party should prove her downfal, began openly to oppose him. Thus the Court was divided into factions, some siding with the King, others with the Queen, and others adhering to Neither. Conti ceased not to blow the Coles, but his cheif aim was to perswade the King to take upon himself the Government, urging, as the truth was, Denis, Alphonso the 5th and Schaftian Kings of Portugal took upon them the administration being yet younger than he. That which most moved the King, was that his Mother falling fick at this time, the whole Court was made to him, which gave him to understand what a diminution it was to his splendor, and therefore he began to be inflamed with a defire of absolute command. The Queen recovering and reasuning the care of the govermenr, found the King more intractable than he had been before, as being wholly bent upon wresting the power from her by force, if the should refule to refign. This was a deadly stroke to her ambirious Spirit, which abhorred the thought of falling from that height wherein the had upheld herfelf for fo many Years; nor could the be without some care for the Kingdom, if it were wholly left at the disposal of a wilful and unexperienced Youth, beset with a croud of dangerous and unskilful favourites and Councellors. Being perplexed and tormented with these thoughts, she resolved to set up her Younger Son Peter against the King, that so he in hopes The Queen of attaining the Crown through her means might be fers up the wholly at her devotion, and at the same time Alphonso Infante afearing to lose his right might be kept in awe. There-gainst the fore to prepare the Infante who of himself was willing King, enough, the perswaded him he ought to be declared Prince and Heir to the Crown, alledging that his Brother was impotent, and consequently the Kingdom must devolve to him. For the Executing of this delign, she tampered with all the Nobility and Magistrates, intending to call the Cortes or Parliament to confirm her resolution, but finding it a matter of greater difficulty than the had expected, most men abhorring to set up two Brothers, as it were two King's, to rend the Kingdom and destroy themselves, and thinking it a rashness to condemn Alphonso as impotent before any proof were made of his Ability, she desisted from the method, but M m 4 out the Infante in the most splendid apparel, to cause him to show himself often to the People, to give him a Family composed of all such as were disaffected to his Brother. and to put him into a house the best in Lisbon built by Christopher de Moura Marquels of Castelrodrigo. Having thus fet up the Infante in opposition to his Brother, and fecured him to herfelf, her next artifice was to counterfeit a defire of quitting the regency and retiring into a Monastery of Nuns. For this purpose she drew up a subtle writing intimating her pretended defire, and yet so worded it that the great men and principal Ministers to whom the fent it for their advice, foon faw into the depth of it, which was that she defired to be, as it were, constrained to continue the Regency, yet so as she must be drawn to condescend by the removal of Antony Conti and the rest of his party from about the King. Those to whom the writing had been communicated being all her crea-The Council tures, and fearing least if she were suffered to abandon the government, they should by the King be deprived of the preferments they enjoyned, resolved not to forsake her least they should be involved in her fall. Therefore by writing they gave her to understand, that the' she were resolved to lay down the administration of the Kingdom, it was not yet time to do it, till she had removed from the Person of the King, those that seduced and led him into ill courses. Nothing could be more pleasing to the Queen than this answer so par to her purpole, fince they had fulfilled all her withes without obliging her to express them. However that all might feem to be carried by the advice of the Council, knowing they were all resolved to perform her will, she would have nothing done but what thould be there difcuffed and given under their hands. The Councel met accordingly, and, tho' fome of the gravest among them opposed the design, as too visible an affront to the King, The faction yet it was carried, that Conti and his adherents should be seize Conti seized, and sert into banishment contrary to the will of the King, for this Council fat not to serve him, but his facourite in Mother. In pursuance to this resolution, the Queen haappartment ving secured the King in her Lodgings upon pretence of

2. Throng and suspecting some danger locked himself in,

The History of PORTUGAL

but the Duke without respect to the Sacredness of the place, or to the Remonstrances of the Count de Castellomelbor who would have diverted him from that Action, offered to break open the door, whereupon Conti feeing no hopes of escaping, and the Count not able to relieve him or acquaint the King, delivered himself up to the Duke upon promise of Life. At the same time some some others of Conti's partizans were secured partly in the pallace and partly in the Town, all which were immediately put aboard a Ship that lay ready to Sail in the River and fent away to Brazil. The Queen being informed that all she had commanded was put in Execution, led the King forth into the great Hall, whither she had affembled all the Nobility, Ministers of State, and Magistrates of the City, the better to appease, and terrify the King. Here a Remonstrance was made to him in the Name of the Kingdom, full of grievous complaints against his Conduct, and against his Favourites, whom to prevent any farther ill consequences they declared they had been obliged to fend into banishment. This done having kiffed his hand they departed. It was no small surprize to the King to be brought so unexpectedly into that affembly, and therefore not rightly conceiving the drift of what had been faid, he began to ask the meaning of it. Garcia de Melo told him that to fatisfy the complaints of his People, they had fent Conti and his adherents into banishment. He scarce believing they durst offer him such an indignity, began loudly and in a rage to call upon Conti, and running to feek for him threatned to follow him, wherefoever they had fent him. Melo told him his fearch would be in vain for that he was now under Sail for Brazil, that as the case stood he must have either parted with Conti or his Crown. At this answer he seemed somewhat to compose himself. Then calling for Emanuel Antunes, who only had escaped of all his former Favourites, he shut himself up with him and the Count of Castellomelbor. These two gave him a full Relation of what had passed, and here were layed the first Foundations of the Count's ensuing greatness. After this meeting, the King appeared unconcerned at what had hapned, and rid according to custom that Afternoon, but he had learned to Counterfeir, and had other thoughts within his breast than what appeared by his countneance. This bufinels, the Duke of Cadaval with his Party Entred the him to Bray King's apartment, where Conti then was. He seeing combine with the Queen.

Count Ca-Favour.

The King

take the Govern-

biin.

This mighty act of policy which the Queen had con. stelmelhor-trived to perpetuate her Regency, was the very cause of succeeds in her speedy falling from it. Count Castelmelbor, a Man the King's above exception for his Birth and Parts, had now fucceeded in the Kings Favour, in the place of Conti, and omitted not to encourage him in the resolution of taking upon him the Government. Besides a young Lady belonging to the Queen, for whom the King had a more then ordinary Affection, made him the more earnest, discovering to him all his Mothers private Discourses. For the better carrying on his Defign, the King ordered the Count, whose waiting Week was expired to wait on another, least one might succeed him, whom he could not so well confide in. This done, he retired according to custom to Alcantara, a House near Lisbon, carrying with him his Brother and a great Train. That same day he returned to Lisbon, and visited his Mother, discoursing so lovingly with her, that all refentment seemed to be passed, but on a fudden, without acquainting her, he went back to Alcantara, accompanyed only by the Count de Castelmelhor, and the Count de Antouguia. From thence he dispersed Letters into all parts of the Kingdom, to the Officers of the Army, and Governors of Towns, acquainting them, that being now at Age, he had taken upon him the Government. Then he ordered all the Nobility and Ministers of State that were at Lisbon, to refolves to repair to him to Alcantara. The Queen astonished at this News, and fearing to be cast down from her Regency, affembles the Council of State, where it was refolment upon ved that Emanuel Pacheco, should be placed upon the Road to stop all those that should offer to repair to the King; that the Queen should write a Letter to him in fost Terms, desiring him either to delay some time his taking the Government upon him, or at least to admit her to bear a great part with him, and that in case perswasions failed, the should then use Force to constrain him. Accordingly Pacheco turned back those that were going to Alcantara; the Guards, and all the Queens Adherents, were ordered to be ready in Arms to support her, and a Letter was fent to the King from her, full of alluring and fost, but all deceitful Expressions. But before the sending of the Letter, the People of Lisbon perceiving that the Court armed against the King, began to run into rumult for his Defence, fearing least any violence might be offered him. This zeal of the Multitude was what humbled the Queen, and therefore seeing no hope left of prevailing by open force, she had recourse to Artifice and Entreaty, and therefore, as has been faid. fent a submissive Letter by the Bishop of Targa. In this Letter among other things, the Queen urged to have the Cortes or Parliament call'd, that she might there refign the Government, but the King and the Count perceiving this was only a contrivance to gain time, an anfwer was fent her by the same Bishop. The purport of this Answer was, that the King considering the great Burthen of care that attended the Government, was willing to ease his Mother, who had long laboured under it, of that Toil, and to take it upon himself. She now plainly perceiving that there was no longer hope, either by Force or Art, of retaining the Government, resolved at length to quit it, least it should be violently taken from her. However, the withed it might be done in the Pallace, that the World might believe it had been freely refigned, and not to be forcibly extorted from her. Those who were acquainted with her Subtilties, advifed the King not to trust himself to her Power, which made him delay some time at Alcantara. However, at length finding himself secured on all sides, and the Queens Interest declining, since the People of Lisbon had declared for him; he repaired to the Pallace, where in the presence of the Nobility, Ministers of State, and Magistrates of the City, the Queen delivered up the She is at Seals into his Hands, which is the usual Ceremony in length for-Portugal, when a King takes upon him the Covernment, ced to re-This Ceremony was perform'd on the 23d. of June, sign. 1662, the King then wanting but one Month of 19 Years of Age, whereas according to the antient custom of and accordingly at those Years, the Regency ought to cease. The Queen Mother thus discharged of the care of Go- She prevernment, began again to talk of retiring, but that after tends to fuch a manner, that no Body believ'd she truly meant it. retire, but For first she talked of building a new Monastery, but stays at could never find out a convenient Place, then of erecting hopes to an Apartment for her self, near some of the old ones, wrest the but none would admit her. And this it was believed power from was her desire, only to protract time, and to continue her son.

The History of PORTUGAL.

Pertugal, their Kings were always reputed of Age at 14.

in the Pallace, till some new emergency might again

call her to the Government. But now all the Court was made to the King, all the Nobility attended him, and there wanted not crouds of Flatteers and Sycophants to fawn on him. His principal Ministers and Favourites were the Counts of Castelmelhor, and Atouguia.

and Sebastian Casar de Meneses. These managed all principal matters of State, and on their Counsel he chiefly relyed. His Enemies however never ceased to slander him, spreading it abroad, that being wholly void of Sense, he only spoke such Words as they put into his Mouth. Count Castelmelbor endeavouring to establish himself absolutely in the King's Favour, eased him asmuch

as was possible of the publick cares, indulging his Inclination to Horses, Arms, and even to Women, but without any publick Scandal. At this time the Count delivered out of Prison, Henry Enriquez de Miranda, who had been confined by the Queen, and he being now brought to Court, became one of the King's greatest Favourites, and yet though he was raised to this Degree.

there never happened the least Disorder betwixt the Count of Castelmelbor and him. Much otherwise was it with the Count of Atouguia, Cafar de Meneses, and Count Castelmelhor, but the latter not thinking himself yet thoroughly established, would not attempt so soon to cast them down. At length having wholly gained the ascendant over the King, and having all things as prime Minister at his disposal, he lodged himself in the Apartment that had belonged to Prince Theodosius the King's eldest Brother. He only wanted now some charge that might always keep him about the King's Person, and there being none at that time vacant, he thought of one that of late had been suppressed, or incorporated into that of the Secretary of State; in Portuguese it is called Escrivao da Puridade, that is the private Secretary,

This employment he begged of the King, who readily granted it, and though the Secretary of State infolently enough disputed it, caused him immediately to settle him in the possession thereof. By this charge he also obtained the right to a Seat in the Counsel of State. Being thus raised to the highest pitch of Favour, he began to bestow preferments without measure upon all his Friends and Adherents, and at the same time omitted not to crush

The History of PORTUGAL

ty, and the dread of the other might be a fure stay to Those that his greatness. In the next place, he advised the King affronted to shew some resentment for the Affronts done to his Perton, during the Queen's Regency; as particularly in the Perton, during away of Conti out of his Apartment, and other the like Insolencies, which if not punished, might draw him into contempt. In pursuance of this Advice, the Duke of Cadaval, Garcia, and Emanuel de Melo, the Counts of Soure, Pombeiro, Peter Vieira, Secretary of State, who had often audaciously reproved the King, and some others, all guilty enough, were sent into Banishment. This proceeding against so many persons of Note, though but an act of Justice, ministred occasion to their The Queen partizans to revile anew the King and his Government. Infante, And now the Queen seeing her self excluded from all and their publick Affairs, began again to cherish the Infante, and party bold to hold frequent and private Consultations with him, ons against wherein it was always inculcated that the King was ftu- the King. pid and unfit for Rule. Count Castelmelbor who was not ignorant of all their Machinations, contrived all ways he could to separate them, but all in vain. For the Infante building upon the notion of his Brothers Incapacity, had more mind to be himself a King, then to be next to a King. Therefore he carryed himself with profound Diffimulation, studying all ways to elude the Arts of the Favourite. But the Count seeing he could not otherwise prevail upon him to defist from his Cabals, perswaded the King to change all his Servants, purting in their places such as he could confide in, that to he should have the less opportunity of carrying on his Defigns. The next thing was to perswade the Queen at length to retire from Court, as the had so often pretended to desire, though by her proceedings it plainly appeared nothing was more distastful to her than the thoughts of a private Life. Yet seeing the King so inclinable to have her retire, she again has recourse to her Dissimulation, and sends to ask leave to withdraw to some private House, because the Apartment the had begun to build was not yet finished. The King's Answer was, that it became not her Granedur to quit the Palace for a private House, but that if she were so desirous of a retreat, the might cause more Diligence to be used in finishing her Structure, which till then, had gone on and terrifie his Enemies, that the power of the one party.

540

Count Caftelmelhor rifes,

The History of PORTUGAL.

very flowly. Soon after, Alfonso being informed that his Mother never ceased to use all Arts to advance his Brother Peter to the Throne, being terrifyed with the danger of his Crown, which yet at last, by these same Practices, was ravished from him; he sent an absolute Order for her to depart from the Palace. This positive command preffing, and fearing to be forced away, she at length resolved to depart, and accordingly on the 17th of March, 1663, withdrew to the new Apartment she had built at a small distance from Lisbon, being attended thither by the King, the Infante, and all the Nobility. The Queen Mother being thus removed, the Infante ced to re- feemed now wholly devoted to please the King, except in one only thing which he knew to be offensive to him, and that was in frequently visiting his Mother, and entertaining private Discourses with her. Nor was she wanting often in publick to warn him of the danger of this his affiduousness towards her, whether she really meant it as dangerous to him, or rather did it artificially to make the King the more odious, and procure themselves the greater Commiseration. Thus with great difficulty, Queen Luisa was at the last not only put out of the Regency, but even out of the Palace.

Life.

tire.

Alphonso, to whom the nearness of his Mother had been a curb, being now delivered from that restraint, grows more ran more licentiously into all the Vices of Youth. Count Loofe in his Castelmelbor fearing a disorderly Life might hasten his fall, in whose Ruine he must himself be involved, studyed several means to reclaim him, or at least to conceal his Extravagancies, but it is a work of great difficulty to correct the vicious Inclinations of Youth, especially when supported by the lustre of a Crown. In short, his Vices were too visible to be excused, but to lay to his Charge all the Villanies his Adversaries have aspersed him withal, were too much to wrong his Memory; for it is certain, that no insolence was committed during his Reign, which the malice of his Enemies has not reproached him withal. However, so certainly it was, that the King-indulging his Appetites and Vicious defires, the whole burthen of the Government was in a manner devolved upon the three Favourites, that is, the Counts of Castelmelbor, and Antouguia, and Sebastian Casar de Meneses. Castelmelhor had long meditated to overthrow the other two, but as long as the Queen continued

The History of PORTUGAL

nued at Court durst not attempt it, least they having loft the King should become an accession to and strengthen her party. Now she being removed, there remained no other obstacle to the fulfilling his desire, and therefore by often buzzing false informations into the King's Ears, he first caused the Count de Atouguia to be expelled the Court and soon after to be banished the City. None remained now to cope with him but Meneses, who to support himself perswaded the King to recall Antony Conti from Brazil, Contirehoping that he being returned and restored to his for-called from mer Favour, would not in gratitude omit to stand by the Brazil. man that had been the cause of bringing him back from banishment. The Count could not be long ignorant of this practice, and therefore immediately so worked the King, that Meneses was banished before Antony Conti could arrive to support him. Soon after Conti arrives from Brazil, the Ship that brought him being received into the port of Lisbon with found of Trumpets, firing of Cannon, and all other demonstrations of joy, as if it had been the reception of some Soveraign Prince. Yet all this was but a glimmering of happinels to Conti, for Count Castelmelbor having perswaded the King, that as it was a Vindication of his Royal Authority to recal him from banishment, whither he had been sent in contempt of Majesty, so to entertain him at Court would only serve to provoke the Nobility, to whom the very But baniname of Conti was odious, for these reasons without suf- shed the fering him to Land at Lisbon, he was fent away into the Court. Country with express Command, not to presume to come near the Court. Nevertheless to the End it might be thought this exile was not the effect of his jealousie, but rather of his care both for the safety of the King and Conti, he omitted not to carels him at that distance, sending him frequent presents, and a considerable employment at Court falling, he caused it to be conferred upon him tho' absent, and bestowed a Rich Benefice upon John Conti Brother to Antony, who was in orders. Conti was not to dull, but he could Eafily feethrough these Artifices. Therefore he used all his endeavours to obtain an interview with the King, not doubting but if he once Conti prifaw him, he should be restored to his former favour. vately Such industry was used to compass his design, that at meets the length he had a private meeting with Alphonso at Alcanta- King.

cy against the King

mished.

ra the Count being then absent. At this conference the King's former affection was fo revived, that he offered to carry him immediately to Court. But Conti fearing his sudden and unexpected return might prove dangerous, desired it might be put off for the present, only praying the King, that he would recal from banishment those Noblemen who had been exiled for adhering to his Mother. This interview, and the proposal made by Conti being made known to the Count by one that had overheard their discourse, he soon discovered the design was to make a party to ruin him. To the End then to prevent his Enemy and turn that destruction upon himself, he employed several Spies to observe all his words and Actions, not sparing any expence for intelligence. By these means at length he discovered that Conti A compira. had conspired with the Noblemen to restore the Queen to the regency, leaving the King nothing but the empty name and Title without any power or Authority. Having got knowledge of this Treasonable practice, and discovered found witnesses to prove it, he instantly acquaints the and merci-King, who appointed judges to examine the matter. tully puni-Upon a full hearing and sufficient proof, several of the conspirators were convicted, and yet (tho' by his Enemies the King had always been accused of excessive cruelty) not one of the Criminals suffered death, only D. Theodosius de Melo Brother to the Duke de Cadaval was banished Five Leagues from Lisbon, Schastian Cefar de Meneses into Algarve, and Antony de Conti to O Potro. The General depositions involved the Queen Mother in the common guilt, whereupon a Secretary was fent to examine her, but she refusing to answer, the King let that fall. Count Castelmelbor puffed up with this success, removed from the apartment he was in before to another nearer the King, where it being observed by fuch as envied him, that more Court was made to him than to the King himself, his name was thereby rendred gan foon after to decline. Simon Vasconcellos Brother to Count Castelmelhor, after brother fa- serving in the Army several Years with great Reputatation, coming now to Court, so gained the ascendant ths Infante. over the Infante, that it was observed as very remarkable to see the two Royal Brothers so vastly differing other-the more odious, and he being now arrived to the highest pitch of his greatness, and capable of no increase, be-

The History of PORTUGAL

wife in inclinations, yet so addicted to these two Brothers, that they seemed not to move without them. Soon after the Infante falling fick, Vasconcellos attended him with fuch dilligence, that he not only confirmed himself in his favour, but incurred the ill will of all his other principal Servants, who upon this disgust quitted the Infante's, Service, but very few days past before they were all recalled by the King except only the Count de Ericeira. All things being thus restored the King preferred Vasconcellos not only to be Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber to his Brother, but also constituted him Superinten-This his preferment again difdant of his House. pleasing the Family they all quitted their Employments, and it being too great a condescention to recal them again, others were put into their places, for the most part creatures of Count Castelmelhor, and therefore not acceptable to the Infante, He thereupon thinking himself beset with so many Spies, resolved to alter his course of Life, so as he might become less suspitious to his Brother and at the same time more popular. No- The Infante thing could be more fit for these designs than Religion, counterfeits to that therefore he feemed wholly addicted being fe- a Religious dulous at Prayers, visiting Churches, reading pious Life to gain Books, converting with Religious Persons, and employ-followers. ing the rest of his time in other Studies. Being thus taken up he seldom visited the King, as if he had been wholly bent upon Heavenly Affairs. Some thought his change of Life to proceed from a Disafter which hapned, and was that Augustin de Couta fell suddenly dead at his and the King's Feet; but those who pretended to fee farther thought it only a politick device to gain applause, and get the Grown from his Brother. Whilit these things were in agitation, on the 17th. of March, A match 1665, arrived at Lisbon the Marquels de Sande from concluded France, where he had concluded a Match for the King for the with the Princels of Nemours, and by the Infante's order King. had made overtures on his behalf to the Duke of Bouillons daughter, which also had taken effect, so far as they were agreed in words, tho' the Articles were not figned. This Marrige was proposed in order to secure the succelfion of the Crown, in case the King as had been given out should be incapable of getting Children. But now the Infante having changed his mind, upon what account is uncertain, could by no perswasions be prevailed upon to consent to this marriage, although the King himself pressed it very home. This match being thus broke off, the Marquess de Sande having in order to conclude for the King first enquired whether the report that went of the King's impotency were true, was assured by the Count Castelmelhor, that the King had already several illegitimate Children, which was a sufficient evidence against that imputation. All things being then disposed for the comming of the Royal-Bride, the Marquels returned to France, to Conduct her to Lisbon.

The History of PORTUGAL.

The Queen

On the 25th of February, 1666, the Queen Mother motherdyes, falling fick and perceiving her End to approach, sent to both her Sons who according to custom were then at their diversion of Hunting at Salvaterra, to come and take their last Farewel of her. They came not till the ad day after when having kiffed her hand and received her bleffing they departed, and within an Hour after the expired, making a very Pious and Religious End. She was a woman of a wonderful resolution, a great Soul, and fingular wisdom which appear'd in the administration of the government both in Peace and War. It was the that pushed her husband to take the Crown, the helped to keep it on his head, and the by her induftry and care secured it to his posterity. Her skill in matters of government was above the capacity of a woman, and the was to fentible of the danger of discord betwixt brothers, that the obstructed Edward brother to her husband King John, from making his escape when he was confined by the Emperor, least returning home he should not brook the greatness of the King his Brother. But what appeared most rare in her was that being a Spaniard, a name odious to the Portugueses, yet she knew so to carry herself that she gained the Love and esteem of the whole Country. Yet all these good Qualities were somewhat fullied by her unbounded ambition, and insatiable desire of rule, which were the cause she would never quit the government, or Court, till forced from them both, and that she increased the hatred betwixt her two Sons by fetting up the younger in opposition to the Elder. In fine, to give her her due, her Verrues far surpassed her vices, and it may justly be said of her that the was the glory of her Family, the deliverer of Portugal, and the honour of Spain,

The History of PORTUGAL.

The Queen Mother being dead, the King believed himself more safe, and on the contrary the Infante deprived of her support, thought himself more exposed. Count Castelmelbor who till then had stood in some awe of him because of her power, acted now with more freedom. Thus the Infante growing more discontented, the King The Infanat the same time grew the more jealous of his reserved- te grows ness, and consequently averse to all those he saw him fa- discontentvour, or cherith. Upon these discontents, some of his ed, and Servants fearing to offend quitted him, and others were the King removed from him, so that his retinue was much below the jealous. dignity of the Brother of a King. Some days he bore with this hardship, till the News of the New Queens being set forward, obliged him to press the King, that he might appear like himfelf at her reception. The King ordered him to give the Names of such as he defired should attend him, but not approving of those he made choice off, nothing was concluded upon, tho' many debates passed betwixt them on that account. At length on the 2d. of August, 1666, the Fleet which brought the Queen entred the River of Lisbon, the News whereof being brought to the King, he is reported to have received without the least demonstration of joy, or satisfaction, which was then looked upon as an ill omen of the future success of that Marriage. The Marquess de Ruvigny who Commanded the French Fleet having fent to the Infante to beg leave to pay his respects to him, he layed hold of this opportunity, to put the King in mind how dishonourable it was to them both, that the Admiral should find him so ill attended. What could be done in so sudden an Emergency was, that the King sent his own Servants to attend his Brother during that Ceremony. This was no way pleating to the Infante, who being highly incenfed against Count Castelmelbor, as the only man that had obstructed his having those Servants he The Infante defired, forbore not openly to revile and threaten him enraged awith the severest punishment, when occasion should of- gainst Couns fer, which Vasconcelles the Counts Brother, who was Castelmelpresent resenting, went away and quitted his Service. So now there remained with him but two Servants of any Note or Quality, whereupon he fent a meffage to the King, to defire he would give him leave to retire from Court, fince he would not allow him to live in that Splendor that was due to him. Nothing could have N n 2

Strange

Throw of af-teltion be-

The History of PORTUGAL.

more incensed the mind of the King than this message did; infomuch that the Count Castelmelber, searing least the discord betwixt the two brothers should run too high, used all his interest, to obtain of the King for the Infante those Servants he desired, he could never prevail. Therefore the Infinte perceiving the King's obstinacy was not to be overcome, fince it had not yielded to the intreaties and power of the Count, when he had amidst the rest of the crowd, hid his want of attendance at the Queens folemn entry into Lisbon, he withdrew himself to Quelas a League and a half from the City, accompanied only by Rederick de Menefes. Fame having immediately spread abroad, not only through the City but through the whole Kingdom, the News of his retreat; the univertal report was that all things were preparing for a Civil War. At Lisbon Peter's party was already more rumerous than Alphonfo's, the vertues of the former were every where extolled, and the vices of the latter no less exaggerated; but above all the affection of the one, and the aversion of the other to Count Castelmelbor weighed more than all other things, with the People who bore him an implacable hatred. Many of the Nobility interposed to pacify the brothers, but all their endeavours proved in vain, for neither of them would abate any thing of his demands. When all other means failed, the Queen who then was indifposed sent for the Infante, who being come to her, they received one another with fuch affection, as feemed to be a sufficient earnest of the Love that was growing betwixt them. Here Infante, and the Queen prevailed that he should not depart the Court, and should wholly leave that affair to her management, the Queen. which he could not refuse her, being as was believed already somewhat fired with that Sight of her. At length the difference betwixt the Brothers was reconciled, the Prince chose other Servants and the King allowed of them. Yet tho' they feemed to have layd afide all animofities, the grudges betwixt them were of a highernature than to be so easily forgot. But Peter was supported with a deep diffimulation, Alphonso had little of that Art, and for the most part threatned much more than he would perform, which was the cause that he was often heard to let flip very harsh expressions against his Brother. He having long meditated how to rid himfelf of these displeasures, at last fixed upon a Method, which was to beg of the King the Post of Constable of Portugal, which is the same as Generalissimo. The more he infifted in demanding, the more politive the King was in refuting, as being not ignorant of the danger of fuch a Grant. Count Castelmeiber was astonished at this Request, and spared not to tell the King, that it was not the General's Staff, but the Crown that he aspired to, and that it were well to crush his aspiring Spirit. Nor so satisfyed, he used all his Endeavours to find out, who had advited him to demand that Post. At length it appeared to him, that Counsel could proceed from none but the Counts of Torres and St. John, who had been excellent Commanders in the Portuguese Army. Them therefore he instantly removed from him, fending them away to their Charges on the Frontiers. Nevertheless, though the abetters were removed, the causes of diffention still remaining, the differences betwixt the two Brothers, grew daily higher and higher, and at last the Queen who ought to have laboured to compose them, became her felf a Party, leaving the Interest of her Husband so adhere to that of his Brother. Besides her proper Inclination to the Infante, two things perhaps might conduce to move the Queen to this unjust proceeding, the one that the King was already grown wea- Motives of ry of her, and the other (from which perhaps his Aver- the Queens fion proceeded) that he was jealous of her too great Aversion to Propention to his Brother. Count Castelmelbor contri- the King. ving how to dissolve this knot of Affection that was betwixt the Queen and the Infante, thought nothing so effectual as marrying of him, which without delaying, he proposed to the King, who approving of the Advice commanded his Brother to make choice of a Wife. He having defired some time to consider of a matter of that Importance, returned his Answer in Writing, Remifying in substance, that he was ready to comply with the King, only praying that a Servant of his might be employed to go to the Courts of Europe to find out a Lady fit for him to match with. Neither the King nor the Count saw into the design of this deceitful Answer, which was contrived only to protract time, and therefore they approved of it, and admitted of John de Roxas, whom he had named to go upon that Embaffy.

which

About the beginning of the Year 1667, the King 1667. The Queen went to Salvaterra, according to custom, with all the and Infan- Court. There the Cabals were continued betwixt the te's Party Queen and the Infante, and now the party they had increases. gained, was more numerous then that which adhered to the King. But some time after, an Accident that happened was improved to heighten their Animolities. A French Man belonging to the Queen, was murthered upon the Road in Alentejo by a Carryer, who fled and took Sanctuary, but being forced from thence, was carryed Prisoner to Coimbra, and thence conducted to Lifbon. There he was tryed before all the Tribunals, till he came to the Council of State, none daring to pronounce Judgment against him, because he implored the protection of the Church, as having been taken out of Sanctuary, a thing never permitted in Portugal. The Queen, who thought nothing was done to thwart her, but through the Malice of Count Castelmelhor to her, being inraged, that Justice was not done upon the Murtherer of her Servant and Country-man, railed bitterly at him, laying all her discontents to his Charge. Nor yet so satisfyed, she refused to be present at the Bull Feast, usually kept at Lisbon upon St. Anthony's Day, alledging the could not thew her felf to the People, till Justice were done her. Among the rest that took upon them to vindicate the Queens cause, the Infance open-fante was the hottest, as looking upon the Injuries done

ly espouses to her, to be levelled at himself, who had wholly espouthe Queens sed her Interest. Therefore he ordered Count Castelmelber to bring the Secretary of State, who had carryed himself very disrespectfully towards the Queen, in the Affair of the Murtherer, before the Council, to answer for his Infolency. There contrary to his Cuftom, Peter inveighed largely against him, and with such vehemency, that the Council figned an Order for his Banishment, which notwithstanding all the Count's opposition, was obeyed, and he fent into Exile. This Success against the Favourire, encouraged the Infante to aim at greater things, his party daily encreasing; for besides the Queen, there adhered to him the Duke of Cadaval, who had been Banished by the Counts Procurement, D. Sancho Manuel, who after defeating the Spanish Army at Estremoz, had been remov'd from his command by thesame Interest, and many more of the Nobility, on fundry other

The History of PORTUGAL. Accounts, besides the thoughtless multitude, stirred up by the defire of Novelty, and animated with the name of so many Heads of Note. Notwithstanding the Strength of this Faction, it was yet thought too foon to attempt any thing against the King directly, and judged more proper to let the Storm fall upon his Favourite, The Falliwho being once cast down, the King would be left ex- on level aposed to all their Practises. To consult of the means gainst the of removing the Count, there was a great Meeting Favourne. held of all the Infante's Confederacy; he also being present. There most Men being averse to Murther, if the thing might be otherwise performed, it was resolved to seize upon, and send him away, either into India, or some other remote parts of the World; yet so, that if he should make resistance, or attempt to escape, then he should be killed. Many days passed not, before the Count had intire Information of the whole Conspiracy against him, and having layed it before the King, he was by him impowered to use such means for their common Security, as he should think most effectual. He present-without a sufficient Train and Guard for his Security. This sudden change at Court, alarm'd the City, so that the People ran in heaps to the Palace for Information, but finding that there was no interruption of publick Affairs, nor any thing but the increase of the Guards, they soon dispersed and returned to their Houses. The Infante finding his project defeated, to avoid all Suspition, retired to his Country-House at Quelas. Whilst he was there almost in despair for the great disappointment he had received, a Discovery was made, or pretended to be made, for the certainty of it could never appear, that the Count had hired People to poison him. Hereupon his Partizans advise him to be very circumspect in securing himself, and they on their part were not wanting in spreading abroad the danger they pretended him to be in. Having thus prepared the Multitude, and being sensible that the Count could not but study to secure himself by his downfal, the Infante made instant application to the King, to punish him according to the hainoulnels of the Offence he alledged. To this effect he wrote to the King, acquainting him that he was convin-ly doubles the Guards at the Palace, arms all his own Creatures, set his Spies, and stirs not out of the Palace, ced the Count practifed against his Life; that therefore he demanded he should be banished from the Court, or elfe, that he himself should be forced to fly into Foreign parts for Safety. Both the King and Count having read this Letter, referred the whole matter to the Council of State. There it was fully discussed, one party affirming that it was a Presumption at one time to accuse the King's Favourite, and assign his Punishment in fuch a manner as feemed to threaten the King himfelf; that if the Count were justly accused, he ought to be tryed according to the known Laws of the Kingdom, and if convicted, to be punished; but that if it should appear he was wronged, care ought to be taken, leaft the Prince's aspining practices should not be prejudicial to the King. The other fide on the contrary being devoted to the Infante's Interest, urged all the plausible Reafons they could gather to shew that he ought to be complyed with, Right or Wrong, either in regard he was the King's Brother, or for fear he might effect that by force, which he could not obtain by Entreaty. After conferring both Opinions, they came to this Resolution, That it should be put to the Tryal, whether the Infante could be appealed by Submittion, and all manner of humble Application. To this effect the Marquels of Marialva was sent by the King to acquaint the Infante, that the Count was ready to come and beg his Pardon upon his Knees. But he confidering, that to accept of this Submiffion would no way forward his End, for that the Count would still remain at Court, after two days delay, fent back the Marquess with his Answer, fignifying that nothing but the Banishment of the Earl could arisfie him. Alphonso hoping his Brother's Fury might abate in time, delayed fending to him again for the present, whereat he being the more enraged, caused a Letter to be deliver'd to the King, among other things, threatning not to appear at Court, as long as Count Castelmellior continued in it. A Cabinet Council being called upon this second Billet, some were for apprehending the Infante himself, as now grown too dangerous, others more moderate, were only for fecuring his Family and Adherents, and so leaving him naked. This latter Advice was approved off, but the Execution being delayed, and Peter having received Intelligence thereof, he stood upon his Guard, arming all his Followers, and promiting to live and dye by them. Next he summons the Counsellors of State, and Magistrates The Counof Lisbon, who being met at his House, he inveighed be-cil and fore them against the King his Brother, and Count Ca-Magistrates stellnellor, impeaching him of Practices against his Life, of Lisbon and desiring their assistance to be revenged of him, since the King would not consent to his Banishment. After having spoken to this effect, he gave them the same in Writing, to which they unanimously answer'd, they would stand by him, and support his Dignity to their utmost.

It is easie to conceive how much the King and Count were concerned at this audacious proceeding, which was The King an absolute usurpation upon the regal Authority, for it fearing the was no less in the Infante to summon the Tribunals, fastion, ofand in them it was not much less than Treason to obey fers to the Summons, but above all, to ingage to stand by compound him. Finding by this Tryal how great the strength of with the his Party was, they relolved if possible to mollifie him, infante. and therefore the King sent to him to discover, who were the Count's Accusers, that so he might be proceeded against in due form of Law. The Infante posirively, refused to discover the Evidence, unless the Count were first removed from Court. Alphonso put it to the Council and ablest Lawyers, whether it were legal and befeeming the King's Dignity, that the Count should be removed before the Witnesses were known, and it was carryed by the Majority, that the demand was unjust and unreasonable. This their retult, under their Hands, the King sent to his Brother; at the same time fending away Expresses to the Commanders on the Frontiers and Sea-ports, to fuffer no Man to depart the Kingdom. By these means the expectation of a Civil War, which till then, had gone no farther then Lisbon, was ipread abroad throughout the whole Kingdom. The Infante advising with his Friends upon the result of the Council fent him by the King, they came to this Resolution, that in case his Majesty persisted in protecting the Count, then Peter without his consent should speed into the Province beyond the Mountains, where the Count of St. John had the command of the Forces, which he should march to Lisbon, and joyning with the multirude by open Force should constrain the King to comply with all his demands. Having fixed this Resolution, he sent the King a long Letter full of invectives against

The King offers the Infante Satisfaction.

Lisbon

Nobility.

gainst the Count, and complaints that he could not obtain Justice, concluding that his Majesty made more account of the Earl then of him, and feeing both could not live together, he had resolved to quit the Court. Upon what Account he intended to withdraw, we have seen but just before, not to submit to the King's Will, but to force him to comply with his. And though he pretended privately to withdraw himself, yet the preparations for his Journey were so publick, that there was none so blind, who could not discover it. Nor was this done without caule, for the report of his removal being spread abroad, and that it was in the nature of a Flight from the Favourite, the whole City began in a moment to rife in mutiny, feveral of the Nobility openly fomenting it, and declaring that was the day, on which according to an antient Prophesie, the Streets mutinies at of Lisbon were to run with human Blood. Seven Thouthe instiga- fand Men are reckoned to have appeared that day in tion of the Arms, to stop the Infante's Journey, and to decide the Controversie betwixt the Count and him. This popular Fury being made known to the King and Count, they both perceiving themselves too weak to withstand the violence of that Storm, resolved instead of that losty Course they had followed before, to stoop to Necessity, and try what good Words could work upon the Infante. To this purpole, the King sent him a Letter, full of most loving Expressions, defiring him to suppress that Tumult, which had been raised on his Account, and to come to Court, where all things should be disposed to his Satisfaction. The Answer to this Letter, was in no less obliging Terms, only in the Conclusion, the Infante again intimated, that the King must resolve either to part with the Count, or him, and must take his choice before things came to Extremity. Count Castelmelbor perceiving, that neither Threats nor Intreaties prevailed upon the Infante, and that the mutiny in the City was grown to fuch a head, it would endanger both the King and himself, resolved at last to consent to leave the Court, the King promifing him, that as foon as that Storm were blown over, he would take a progress on pretence of visiting the Frontiers, and in his return, would restore The Queen him to the Court, and to his Favour. But least his Banishment should seem wholly extorted by the Infante, assists the he perswaded the Queen to interest her self in that affair, and beg it of the King, that he so might rather seem to have condescended to her intreaty, than to the necessity imposed upon him by his brother. She fearing to disoblige the Infante, or thwart his defigns, would not intermeddle in it, till by a messenger sent to him she had his direction how to proceed. Nor was she sarisfyed with one meffage, but fent again for more particular instructions, so great was her concern for him, and so little for her husband. Being now fully informed of his will, the concludes the business with the King and Count, who submitted to withdraw himself upon faith given for the fafety of his person. But before he departed, he would have articled that the Infante upon his removal, should clear him from the imputation of the defign of poisoning him. Whether his conscience accused him of any fuch practice, or whether he feared, being once cast down, his insiocence could not protect him against the malice of his Enemies is uncertain. Thus the Count being affaulted on all fides by the Infante, by the Queen, by the Nobility, and by the multitude, and not able to stand the shock of so many Enemies, at length withdrew from the Court, and lodged himiclf in a Monastery. The Count about Seven Leagues from the City. But as his expulsion was not the End, but rather the means to compass withdraws. the defigns then carryed on, so the divisions and distractions at Court instead of ceasing, increased, for as long as the ambition of the Infante, and the King's neglect of the Government lasted, only the pretence but not the cause of these troubles was removed. Nothing could be more grievous to the King, than The King in to confider, that upon all occasions his brother being back-ed by the multitude extorted from him, whatever he plexity. defired, which made it plain to him, that at last he would not forbear to aim at, or fail of wresting from him the Crown. His violent nature made him more open, when he should have been most circumspect, and therefore his thoughts being filled with the hatred his Brother bore him, the jealousy he had of his Wife, the perfidiousness of the People, and the disloyalty of the Nobility; he could not forbear inveighing against his Brother in publick, and even before the Queen, who he knew gave the Infance a particular account of all his words and Actions. In this perplexity, he caused the extraordinary companies that had been raised by Count Castelmelhor.

The History of PORTUGAL.

resolves to proceed.

The Kine

Castelmelhor, to be filled up for the security of the pal-The Infante lace. On the other fide the Infante flushed with success, resolved wholly to root out all that was left of the Favourites party about the King, for the' the Count himfelf was removed, yet his creatures remained at Court, and nothing of moment was Transacted without his advice, had by messengers betwixt them. Before the Infante could put his designs in practice, he was advertized by the Queen of all the words the King daily let betrayed by fall against him, and perhaps of more than ever had been the Queen. spoken. This intelligence caused him to hasten the Execution of his projects. The principal men at that rime remaining near the King of Count Castelmeloor's faction, were Henry Enriquez de Miranda, Emanuel Antunez, and Antony de Sousa de Macedo the Secretary of State. Of these the chiefest was Miranda whom therefore the Infante resolved first to destroy, and to that end sent some privately to warn him to depart the Court, before he run himself into greater danger. Despair so seized the unfortunate man, confidering the expulsion of the Count, that he attempted to kill himfelf, but being prevented, he fled fearing to be torn in pieces by the Rabble. Count Castelmelbor having received information hereof, instantly advised the King to be circumspect in all his words and Actions, for that it was easier by fair means to supplant his Brother, than by open Force. His advice being approved by the King, upon the next occasion that offered, he summoned his Brother to appear in Council where some important matter was to be debated, but no kind messages or Letters were of any Force to move him to come, till the Queen fent for him, when he appeared with a great Train of followers, and full of diffimulation. The King received him not fo coldly as before, but being no Mafter of the Art of Counterfeiting, could not so well hide his just displeasure as the other. However this feigned reconciliation might have produced some good Effects, had it not been decreed by fate that the unhappy King must perish. To hasten his ruin it fell out that Alphonso, who was not used to that continual Antony de burden of business, seeking on whom he might lay that weight, pirched upon Antony de Souza de Macedo one of the Counts creatures, who for some words spoken to the in the place Queen had been ordered into banishment, but unknown of the Count, to her lay concealed at Court. In order to raise him to

The Kine mikes Soufa de

The History of PORTUGAL. the Honour of prime Minister, the King begged of the Queen that the would forgive his offence, and consent that his banishment should be remitted, but notwithstanding his repeated infrances, and fubmiffive intreaties the remained implacable. Alphonfo thinking to Conquer her obstinacy by extenuating the crime, put into her hands the order of Council for his banishment, wherein it was expresly set down, that rather for to satisfy her resentment, than for that his fault deserved such punishment, they had for some days thought fit to send him into exile. This which should have been a motive to appeale, so enraged her, that she slew out into many extravagant speeches unbeseeming a private woman, and much more a Queen, and after venting her fury in this undecent The Queen's manner without any regard to the King's presence, she undecent flung into another Room, whence she sent a billet to him behaviour demanding to have Antony de Souza severely punished towards the The King hoping her passion would fall by degrees, and King. that she might be brought to reason, shewed not her billet according to custom to the Council of State, but she on the contrary becomming dayly more intractable, and he not able long to hide his refentment, their animolities swelled to such a pitch that the Court was almost empty, all men shunning him as declining, and she admitting none to her presence being wholly Transported with the defire of Revenge. Mean while Antony de Souza appeared more openly in the pallace than he had done before, being always well attended to prevent danger, But there wanted not those who soon spread it among the People, that he threatned the City in case he were expelled the Court, that he would repair to the Army with the which he would return to punish their Rebellion with fire and Sword. Many fuch like discourses were framed and given out on purpose to incense the People against the King, and fix their affections upon his brother, as their deliverer from Tyranny and oppression. Things being thus disposed the Infante to requite the Queens Favours and raise himself one step nearer to the Crown, resolved by open Force, if other means failed, to expel Antony de Sousa from the Court. In order hereto on the 5th of October, 1667, he went from his House to the Pallace accompanyed by a great Number of the No- The Inbility, and all the Rabble of the City following in a fante heads most Tumultuous manner. Being come to the Pallace, the Rabble.

could

he stayed rill all the Councellors of State summoned by him the day before, were come, that the foulness of the Action might be somewhat disguized by their presence, They being all come, he enters with them the King's Bed-Chamber before he was awake, who was not a little furprized to see such a croud Rush in upon him at so unseaso. nable an hour. Then the Infante, told him, that his Crown and Person were in extream danger, the multitude being in Arms about the Pallace, demanding, Antony de Souza should be delivered to them, to receive condign punnishment for the affront he had done to the Queen. To these words he added more threats in the name of the People, but as he would have run on, the King in a rage interrupted him, calling aloud for his Sword. The Infante according to his usual diffimulation calmly offered him his, which he would not accept. The Noise of the Multitude filling the Pallace, brought the Queen to the King's apartment, where she found him in a violent passion, and enquiring, as if she had not known, what the matter was, he told her that Antony de Souza in malice and despight to his Authority had been murdered, and that now they came in Tumultuous manner to force him to pardon the murderers. But she who knew better, replyed that Souza was living, which the King would not believe till the Duke of Cadaval having dragged him from his lurking place, brought him into his presence. At his fight he was somewhat appealed, and then the Queen, Infance, and the rest of their followers left him abruptly. When they were gone, the King said he forgave them, who had so undecently urged the expulsion of Antony de Souza, to which the Count de Sabugal then present insolently answered, they stood not in need of pardon bur deserved praise, and this he repeated till the King told him, he would bestow pardon and praise where each was requisite. So much is regal Authority depressed, when faction prevails. Antony de Souza, this Tumult being over, continued still in the Pallace, which the Infante observing, consulted with his Friends what was next to be done. One among them hotter than the rest, said the next thing was to assume the Crown, whilst the Peoples affection stood for him, but he took him up very short, being unwilling as yet to have the secrets of his heart pryed into, as fearing an Action done in that Tumultuous manner could not be durable. It was resolved that Antony de Antony de Souza and Emanuel Antunes should be threatned with Sousa, and death, unless they departed the Pallace. They percei- Emanuel ving no power was left in the King, or their friends Antunes to protect them, stole away privately, without the theremain-

King's knowledge by Night. Next Morning the King missing them, ordered search of the King Next Morning the King mining them, ordered learch forced to fly. to be made for them, but in vain, for his orders were The King wholly neglected. In this Condition, finding himself abandoned forsaken by his Friends, and oppressed by his Enemies, by all Men. he knew not which way to turn himself, or of whom to ask Advice. His Council fided with the Infante, his Queen favoured him, the People followed, and the Nobility adhered to him. Thus all things being in extream Confusion, even the moderate party began to think no way was left to settle Peace, and restore Tranquility; but the affembling of the Cortes or Parliament. The Magistrares of Lisbon, and the Common Council, were the first that petitioned the King to summon the three Estates, but he being sensible, the only design was to dethrone him, put them off from day to day, without any politive Answer: Whereupon they took the boldness to write to all the principal Towns of the Kingdom, exhorting them by importunate peritioning to extort the King's Consent. A few days after, the Council of State, at which were present, the King, Queen and Infante, unanimously made their Application to him, to the same effect, but he being the more convinced it was a defign lay'd against his Person, became the more obstinate in refusing, so that nothing was done for that day. But the next day the Council meeting again, and fending him a most audacious remonstrance full of invectives against his Conduct, and urging the necessiry of affembling the three Estates; and besides not only the Magistrates and multitude of Lisbon, but generally of the whole Country preffing upon him with Threats and open Violence, he was at last constrained contrary to his Inclination to comply with their demands: For it was now come to that pass, that the Council did not advise but command him, wherefoever he went, the clamours of a Parliament followed him, and from all parts Letters were brought, urging the same thing. It was now equally dangerous to him to refuse, or to call the Cortes, for the intent was not to do justice, by calling them,

The King forced by his Enemies to call the Assembly of the States.

by bis Bro- his Design. ther.

knowing the King mould be to a Monastery.

them, but to palliate disloyal practices under that Name. Not content to have extorted a complyance to the meeting of the States, though the King defired it might be delayed till his return from Salvaterra, which would be about the middle of February, they obliged him to fend out the Writs of Summons, for the first of January, 1668, so impatient is the desire of Rule. After this Violence committed upon him, the King finding himself beset on all fides by his Enemies, and no hope left of safety among them, his Crown, Liberty and Life being all in eminent danger, he refolved to fly to some other place. To this purpose he caused Horses to be provided, and He designs Boats upon the River, thinking to try his Fortune in to fly to the the Province of Alentejo, but his Brother who wanis prevented ted not Intelligence, having all the Power, prevented

The time appointed for the meeting of the Cortes or Parliament being come; the Queen, who well knew the King The Queen would be deposed by them, disdaining to appear her self in a less Sphere than that she had been raised to, resolved before Hand to separate her self from him. Accordingly on the 21st. of November, 1667. she retired to deposedsies the Monastery of Franciscan Nuns, called Esperanca, into which, when she was entred, she gave out she was a Maid, as being untouched by the King, and that she came thither for refuge amidst thole Confusions that embroiled the Kingdom. Presently after, she sent the King a Biller, writ with her own Hand, to this effect, That she had left her Country and Friends, to become his Wife, but finding the was not acceptable to him, and fearing the dangers that threatned on all sides, she had resolved to return into France. That she desired his leave, and the restitution of her Dower, since the Marriage was void for mant of Consummation. Having read this Billet, the King was fo enraged, that he immediately took Coach, with a resolution to force her from the Monastery; but the Infante who was privy to the whole matter, was there before him with a vast Company, and withstood him, so that he was forced to return without doing any thing. Amidst all his Misfortunes, and the Affronts put upon him, nothing so nearly touched Alphon/o as this last offered him by the Queen. As foon as setled, the sent for the Infante and conferred with him in private, private, as was then given out about her return into France, but the more received Opinion, and approved by the Event, was that there they agreed to be Marryed; as foon as her Marriage with the King could be made void. Her next Care was to fend to the Chapter of the Cathedral Church of Lisbon, to defire their Judgment for the dissolution of the Marriage, then she sent for all the Nobility, who being come into her Presence, she demanded their Affistance and Protection; and lastly, she fent an Express into France, to acquaint the King and her Kindred with what she had done.

Mean while King Alphonso overwhelmed with such a continual stream of dilasters, following one upon the Neck of another, being infulted by the Commonalty. contemned by the Nobility, deluded by his Brother, and forfaken by his Wife, stood as one amazed, and almost stupisfied, not knowing what course to take. Nor was there any left to extricate himself our of this Labyrinth of Confusions and Miseries. But now approach ed the last act of this Tragedy, and all that had been before acted under a mask, must appear bare-fac'd to the World. Therefore the Council of State being afsembled together with the Magistrates of the City, it was resolved the King should be layed aside, and the Government put into the hands of his Brother. Yet that the Action might appear the more juttifiable, they agreed to endeavour to perswade the King to resign up the Government to his Brother, but in cafe he refus'd, then it was concluded be should not only be deposed. but imprisoned. However that it should be left to the determination of the Parliament, whether the Infante should be enthroned as King, or the King restored to his Liberty. This Decree being passed in the morning by break of day, the whole Council went without the Infante, to acquaint the King with their Resolution. Amongst them the Marquels of Cascaes more insolent then the rest, being told by the King's Servants that he was still asleep, bid them awake him, at thesame time fell himfelf a knocking rudely at his Door. The King being thus disturbed; ordered the Council to be admitted. words of Then the Marquess of Cascaes, with a loud Voice ac- the Marcosted the King'in these very Words, without the least quess de respect or common Civility. Thou lyest wallowing in Cascae-Sloath and Pleasures, when the ruin of the Kingdom threa- "

Alphonio

resolutely denies to resign the Crown.

tens thee and us through thy Fault. Therefore since thou art unfit to Rule, or get Children, pass from thy Self willingly that Burthen, which thou art not able to bear, to thy Brother Peter, least the Kingdom be deprived of a King, and the Royal Family of an Heir, and least thou be forced to that against thy Will, which thou wilt not freely consent to. The rest of the Council spoke to the same effect, though not altogether in such audacious Language. The King, tho surprized at so trayterous a Proposition, answered, That he was a lawful King, and brought to that pass, by the Malice and Perfidiousness of his Enemies; but that however, no Fear or Danger should force him to refign the Crown as long as he had Breath to draw; yet if they would use Violence to him, that then he would appeal for Justice to the supream Tribunal, which is above all Kings, against those that violated his Authority, and wrongfully inarched his Crown. Being thus disappointed of their first attempt, the Council repaired to the Infante, where they protracted their Debates till late at Night, for being resolved to use force, they feared least the People, who before took their part against the Favourites, should be of another Mind, when the matter came to touch the King's Person. However, after much time spent in fruitless projects, they came to this Resolution, That the King should be forcibly deposed and imprisoned, that for the better palliating that odious Action, and involving the People as a party in it, the Infante himself accompanyed by all the Nobility and Magistrates, should put it in Execution, that the King's confinement should be at first concealed, till by spreading abroad several rumours, the People were prepared to allow of it; and lastly, that either by Art or Threats, the King fhould be obliged to fign an Act of Renuncia-The Infan- tion, to the end, it might be thought, the King had voluntarily given up the Government to his Brother. All the multi- things being thus disposed, at break of day the Infante repairs to the Palace, attended by an infinite multitude. There he fet a Guard upon the King, and having locked all the Doors that led to his Apartment, he sent Antony Cavide to notifie to him, that by the general consent of the Kingdom he was deprived of the Government and his Liberty, and also by the most terrible Threats Resignatito extort from him the figning of the Instrument of Refignation prepared for him. The unfortunate King seeing ing himself wholly in the power of his Enemies, and fearing the utmost effects of their Malice, signed the In-Arument which was immediately made publick as a justification of the Treasonable Practice. It contained in substance, that he freely resigned the Government to his Brother Peter and his Heirs, referving only to himself Three Hundred Thousand Cruzados a Year, with the Mansion House of the Family of Braganza. A Cruzado is Four Hundred Reis of Portuguese Money, and Three Thersand Reis, is just Twenty Shillings English, so that 100000 Cruzados, makes the just Sum of 37500 %. Sterling. But how well even this miserable Composition for a Crown was observed, may appear by his being kept ever after a Prisoner, with only a few Servants of no Note, such as his Brother thought fit to allow him, fo that in all probability his Expence could not amount to the tenth part of that Summ.

The unhappy King being thus dethroned, and made The Cortes Prisoner, the Cortes or Parliament summoned by him meet. met soon after at Lisbon, about the beginning of February, 1668, to destroy him by his own Authority. At first there were great Debates amongst them, whether it were at all lawful to take an Oath to Peter as Regent. and next Heir to the Crown, or whether the Crown should also be transferred to him; some doubting whether the first were justifyable, and others more violent, urging the latter ought to be done. At last the Majority agreed to the fetling the Regency and Succession upon Peter, but were generally averse to his usurping the style of King, thinking it enough, that he who was judged unfit for Government, was removed from the Helm. Peter after having put it to the Vote, whether he should assume the Crown, finding his Pretension rejected, endeavoured to have it believed he was averse from it. But the Queen who intended to make him her Husband, and could not endure to think of losign any part of her Title, or abating any thing of her Pride, and The Queen being a Woman, that knew not how to diffemble her presses to Vanity, urged the matter more home to the Stares, who have Peter nevertheless decreed, that he should exercise all the re-declared gal Power, without affuming the stile. The Controver-King. He fie being decided, there arose another, which was whether the King should be allowed his Liberty, or consi- as Regent. ned, but in Conclusion, it was determined he should There undergo perpetual Imprisonment, 002 te kads rude, and fers upon the King, and extorts from him an inliru ment of Spain.

There had been a League offensive and defensive, con-

Peace with cluded betwixt France and Portugal, at the beginning of the Year 1667, against Spain, by which the French were obliged to give the Spaniards a powerful diversion in Flanders, which they performed with great Success. After that some Overtures of Peace being made by the Spaniards, the Portugueses began readily to give ear to them, and though the French Ambassador pressed that the Negotiation might be in common with his Master, as in justice according to the League betwixt them, it ought to have been; yet the Prince who now hat the Government, more mindful of the peculiar Interest, which was to secure the Power he had newly gotten, then of what in Honour was due to France, entered upon a separate Treaty of Peace with Spain. His Majesty of Great Britain was the Mediator, and in his Name the Earl of Sandwich affisted at the Conferences. At length the Peace was concluded betwixt the two Crowns, on the 13th. of February, 1668, and published 10th. of March following. This Peace was highly cryed up among the Rabble, as an effect of the Government of the Prince, when all Men plainly faw, and were sensible that in reality the victories obtained by King Alphonso, were the only motives that obliged the Spaniards to propose it, and that the Overtures had been made while he was yet at the Helm, which must have had as good a fuccess, had he remained time enough in the Throne to bring things to Perfection, and perhaps he might have done it without the dishonour of abandoning his Confederates the French.

On the 13th. of February 1668, the Chapter of the Cathredal of Lisbon, with others, they had culled out all prepared for the defign, pronounced the Marriage betwixt King Alphonso, and the Princess Mary Francis riage of the Elizabeth of Savoy null, and that therefore both of King and them were left at Liberty to dispose of themselves. Then the three Estates and Magistrates of Lisbon, as they clared null, had been before directed, moved the Prince and Princess, that fince the former Marriage was declared null, they would confent to match together, on pretence it was for the good of the Kingdom. This they were moved to, in regard they were unwilling to restore her Dower, and the Parties were no lels ready to confent to what themselves had before contrived and agreed betwist themThe History of PORTUGAL.

themselves. However the there had been care taken for the difanulling the former marriage by fuch persons as were wholly in the interest of the cause, there was yet started a scruple, that it was not Lawful to proceed to a new match, especially with the Brother of the former husband without a dispensation. But the Prince, though pretending only to comply with the Cortes had not been negligent in that Affair, for not long after the Publication of the nullity, arrived in Pertugal the dispensation from the Cardinal of Vendosme the Popes Legate a Latere in France, by which it appears the dispensation was granted by one that was a party interessed in the Affair, and precedent to the tentence of nullity. Upon these grounds they made no difficulty to The Inproceed to the Nuptials, the Ceremony whereof was fance marperformed at Alcantara by the Bithop of Targa, Ad-ries the ministrator of the Arch-Bishoprick of Lisbon, on the ad Queen. of April 1668. After the marriage, fresh instances were made that the Prince might be declared King by the Cortes, but this attempt also proving ineffectual, he notifyed to them that on the 9th of June following, he would take his Oath to maintain the Laws of the Realm, and receive from them theirs of fidelity, which was accordingly performed. The three Estates continued their Selfion after this till the first day of August, 1663, when they broke up. Several months being passed after the confummation of this marriage, when the thing done was not to be retrieved without horrid scandal, and embroiling the whole State of the Church, then atlast the Prince bethought himself of sending to the Pope to confirm the Cardinal's dispensation. Pope Clement the 9th who fate in St. Peter's chair, feeing no possibility of recalling what was past, and relying upon the information of the Chapter of Lisbon, did expedite a Brief directed to James de Sousa Chief Inquisitor, Antony de Mendega commissary for the Bull of the Croifade, Mirtin Alphenso de Melo Dean of Evora, Lewis de Soufa Dean of Porto, and Emanuel de Meneses Arch-Deacon of Evora, impowering them to dispense in his name with the said marriage. This Brief was dated December the 10th. 1668. These persons so authorised accordingly in the Popes name, delared the marriage of King Alphonso null, that of his Queen with the Prince to be good and valid, and all the Children that were, or should be gotten between $O \circ 3$

The History of PORTUGAL.

them to be Legitimate, which sentence they pronounced upon the 18th of February 1669.

1669. King Alphonfo

He is brought back and confined to the Caft.s

of Cinera.

When the unfortunate King had been detained a confiderable time Prisoner in the Pallace of Lisbon, it was thought necessary to remove him, least the People comfent prisoner ming to themselves and commiserating the sufferings of to the Island their Sovereign, should make some commotion that might endanger the present government. It was therefore refolved to lend him into the Island Tercera, whether he was conveyed by the Count de Prado, then Commanding the Portuguese Fleet, and there continued several years under a strict Guard. At length not only the People of Lisbon, but throughout all Portugal understanding by those who came from that Island, that he led a most miserable Life in that remote Island, and was almost reduced to the last extremity through sufferings and anguish of mind, there was cause to apprehend they would in time be moved to refent his calamities, and perhaps be stirred up to revenge them upon those who were the canfe thereof. Besides it fell out that the King of Spain at the same time fitted out a Navy at Cadiz without declaring for what intent, which being known at Lisbon, those who dreaded the Return of the King, as having been the promoters of his Ruin, presently imagined it was to take him from his banishment. For these reasons he was sent for with all possible speed, and brought back into Portugal, where he was lodged in the Castle of Cintra upon the Sea Coast not far from Lisbon. In this place he was not only observed and Guarded, but as closely confined as if he had been a common Malefactor, the very Windows of his lodgings being made up, so that he could not look out, but that what Light he had, came from above his height. This account of his usage in that place I received from Dr. Reis a Phisitian at Lisbon, whose Son was Phisitian to the King, and who had feveral times the opportunity of feing him, being fent for by his faid Son to aiffit his Majefty when indisposed, for scarce any body else was admitted to see him. In this deplerable condition the wretched King continued till his death.

But before we give an account of his End, it will be fit to fee down those few matters of moment that preceded it. And indeed there are but few things that can furnish matter for History. Portugal ever since the conclusion of the Peace with Spain, having been ingaged in no War, nor furnished any other important subject to treat of. Warlike Kings, and turbulent governments are the properest for swelling of Histories, the great accidents and Councels then occurring giving great variety to dilate upon; but in a peaceable and quiet State, there is little to be found more then the fettled and regular proceedings which being always in a manner the fame, are not worth the writing because they neither delight nor instruct in the reading. Some few things remain, which being of no mighty consequence shall briefly be fet down, that we may at length put an End ro this History. The new Prince regent, as has been said, was Marryed to his brothers Wife, Mary Frances Birth of the Elizabeth of Savoy on the 2d. of April. By her he had Infante before the End of the same year a daughter named Mary Mary Frances, the only fruit of that surprizing marriage. And Frances. tho' at first it was looked upon, as a great token that God approved of their proceedings by giving them issue so suddenly, yet afterwards those very persons who cryed up this providence, could not but be undeceived when they perceived, that these Princes living together about 16 years never had any other Child, and even the dyed without being marryed. All things having fucceeded prosperously to that Prince, as he that had established himself in the government, secured his Brother, gained his Wife, and now got a Daughter, his only care was how to continue in amity with all the World, that so he might firmly Establish his new artained power. He preserved Peace both at home, and abroad in such Tranquility, that for several years there will remain nothing else memorable of him to posterity. In the Year 1677, the Portugueses of the continent of Brazil in America seeeking to extend their borders, which A Portureached to the great River called de la Plata, passed over guese the faid River and Planted a Colony at Buenos Aires, Colony at which the Spaniards looking upon as an incroachment Rio de la upon them, they gathered to a body in those parts, and Plata in falling upon the Portuguese Planters, put them all to the America, Sword. Advice hereof being brought into Portugal, the destroyed by Prince Regent expressed his resentment by his Embassa-the Spanidour at the Court of Madrid, demanding Reparation of ards. dammages. The thing was long in debate, both parties arguing for their Right to the place and protracting tune.

O 0 4

conclusion

to let fall some threats of a War, but with so little prepa-

The difmsted.

168o.

A match

Savoy.

concluded

ration to it, that the Effects were not to be feared. However the Spaniards being more inclinable to compose the difference amicably, than to enter upon a War on fo flight an occasion, sent into Portugal the Duke of Gioveference ad-nazzo their Embassadour extraordinary, who after several conferences with the Portuguese Ministers, concluded the matter to the satisfaction of both Parties. The Infanta only Daughter to the Prince, being now almost marriagable, and her Father despairing of having any more liftie by his Wife, he thought of disposing of her, and having cast about to all parts for a fit match, at last pitched upon the present Duke of Savoy, then a youth under the tuition of his Mother. Embassadors were sent on both fides to Treat in the Year 1680, who so managed the affair, that all things were concluded and agreed upon. And to remove the only obstacle which was the Law of betwixt the Lamego, whereby it is enacted, that the heiress of the Infanta and Crown Marrying a Forreigner, she shall forfeit her Title, the Duke of to provide I say against the obstacle of this Law, the Cortes were summoned and met at Lisbon the same Year. There they passed an Act for dispensing with the faid Law for that time, provided it should not be a prefident for any other. This impediment being taken away, there seemed to remain nothing to obstruct the happy conclusion of the Nuprials but the distance of the Parties. the Duke of Savoy, who according to contract was to come into Portugal, fent before over Land a confiderable Number of Coach and saddle Horses. On the other fide the Prince Regent fitted out a squadron of 12 men of War, to Conduct the Duke to Lisbon. All the Ships were gilt and painted, but above, all the Admiral was gilt from frem to frem, the poop and prow down to the surface of the Water, and the sides down ro the gunwale. The great Cabin was painted by the best Masters in Lisbon, and the floor layed in squares of Ebony and Ivory. The Bed was most Rich, and the Royal Standard all of Cloath of tiffue, with the arms of Pertugal in the highest raised Embroidery. Portuguese Seamen being at that time scarce, especially able ones, great encouragement was given to all strangers that would criter into the Service. When all things were prepared, this fightly Squadron fer Sail in the Year

1681, and arrived fafe at the Port of Villafranca in Savoy expecting there to take the Duke of Savoy on board. The Match In the mean time all things were preparing at Lisbon, broke off. with the greatest splendor imaginable for his reception. Triumphal Arches were built, extraordinary bull Feafts contrived, and all the Gentry strove to outvie one another (even to the ruin of their Estates and empoverishing their Families) in Gallantry. Yet all these mighty preparations were cast away, for when it was thought the Duke would have gone aboard the Fleer, he at first began to delay and prorract time, and after deluding them in this fort as long as he could, he at last positively broke off the Match. His subjects had always been averse to it, and that with good cause, as being unwilling to part with their Soveraign without hope of ever feeing him again, as going to leave them for a Crown; and then if he should return, it must be with dishonour. as being disappointed of the End for which he left them. These considerations had at last prevailed upon his Mother, his Council, and himself, to alter their resolutions, so that tho' the Articles of the marriage had been ratified on both fides, and so great an expence made towards the comfummating of it, all that had been done was dissolved and came to nothing. The Fleet returned to Lisbon with small satisfaction, and found as little there either at the Court for the affront put upon it, or in the City for the extravagant and useless expence it had been put to. This was the End of the defigned marriage of the Infanta with the Duke of Savoy.

The year, 1683, put an End to the long sufferings of the most unfortunate Alphonso the 6th King of Portugal. Death of He dyed on the 12th of December, at the Castle of Cin, Kine Alera, in the Fortieth year of his Age, and 16th of his phonfo. imprisonment. It is impossible to give a just character of him, fear of offending the prevailing party having stopt the mouths of his Loyal Servants and Friends, who best knew and would speak honourably of him, and there being no credit to be given to the flanders of his adversaries, whose chief care it ever was to reproach his person, and blacken his Actions. And this perhaps is the greatest of calamities Kings are subject to, that their misfortunes do not terminate with their Lives, for never Prince, was yet dethroned tho' never so barbaroufly, but his memory was also rendred odious to posterity, prosperity, by all the Arts that malice could invent. because prevailing wrong could not sublist but under the colour of Right, and to defame justice oppressed, is to flatter and support iniquity Reigning. To say King Alphonso had no vices, were to say he was not man, yet to make them so enormous, as some would have them believed, were only to vouch for malice, and countenance difloyalry. Through the course of his Reign, that is, whilst he was in power, there appears none of his actions that have been urged against him, tho' aggravated with the most malicious circumstances, which have not been feen in thousands of Subjects and yet passed unpunished, either as without the reach of the Law, or excused as the effects of extravagant Youth. For his judgment, as it could not be expected to be so folid at his Years, as in a riper Age, so neither can it be found by his words, or deportment that he was any way defective therein. And lastly as to his impotency in regard to procreation, that, if true, could have been no lessening of his personal right to government, but it is so far from being certain, that I have heard several persons affirm they knew his illegitimate issue, whose mothers if they durst, would upon Oath confirm the affertion. But there is nothing so certain, as that Portugal never was more successful both by Sea and Land than under this government, for under him were obtained four of the greatest victories against the Spaniards, which produced the Peace, the glo ry whereof was ascribed to his brother, who had done nothing to purchase it. And if any object that those Triumphs were due to the Generals, we must deprive all King's of the glory of warlike Exploits, who do not actually Command their Armies in person, besides that it is no small honour to him that he chose such Counsellors as could direct, and fuch generals as knew how to act so much for his advantage. And as for the maritine affairs greater Fleets came home yearly from India and Brazil, and far lesser losses were sustained by Ship-wrack during his Reign than in many years after. This may fuffice in some measure to do right to the memory of this unhappy Prince. 'Yet it may not be ungrateful to add one word more, touching certain words reported to have been spoken of him just before his death. The closeness of his confinement, and the danger of reporting his words abroad by those who heard them, is the cause that we cannot

571

cannot be so positive in this particular therefore I do not avouch it for a certain known truth but as a rumour whifpered about where People durst speake. It is said of him that when he was in the last agony, and as it were breathing his last, he should say, I am now going, but it will not be long before the Queen shall follow me, to give an account before the dreadful tribunal of the wrong the has done me. As I do not averr this for a certainty, fo it is very observable the said Queen outlived him but The Oueens a very short time, that is, only three months and a few death days. Her death was on the 27th of December, of the same year 1683, and since there is little to be said in her commendation, it will be better to be altogether filent than to make reflections upon the dead.

King Peter II. now seared on the Throne of Portugal, Kine Peter by the Death of his Brother, received the Compliments upon the of all Forreign Princes upon his accession to the Crown. death of his In the Year 1684, and the first of the new King's brother, Reign, D. Francis de Tavora, being Vice-Roy of India, succeeds in the City Goa, the Capital of all the Portuguese Con-bis Throne. quests in those parts was besieged with a mighty Army _ 1684. by the Raja Savagi an Indian Prince, who took part Goa besiewith the eldest Son of the Great Mogul, Aurenge Zeb, ged by the then in Rebellion against his Father. The Inhabitants Indians, defended themselves with Resolution, and sent to acquaint Aurenge Zeb, with the danger they were in upon his Account, praying Relief. He presently commanded his fecond Son to march with an Army of 100000 Foot, and 80000 Horse, and a great Train of Artillery to their Succour. Upon the approach of this mighty Army, the Raja raised his Siege and departed, in his The siege. way destroying all the Country about Goa. The Siege raised. being raised, the young Prince sent to assure the Portugueses, that his Father would be always ready to affift them against their Enemies. They in return, sent a folemn Ambassy to the Mogul, by whom a settled Friendship was established with that great Monarch. The King having long continued a Widdower, and having no Issue, but only one Daughter, was earnestly pressed by his Subjects to Marry to secure the Succession. Hereupon, by the advice of his Council, he refolved to demand in Marriage one of the Daughters of the Elector Palatine, and accordingly in the Month of October 1686, he named the Count de Villar Mayor, his Ambassador of Newburg.

Ambassador Extraordinary to that Elector upon this occasion, who set forward in December following, for Heydelberg, where he arrived in the beginning of the Year 1687, with a very splendid Retinue. In June he made his publick Entry, which was extraordinary magnificent, and the next day after he had Audience, in which he demanded of the Elector, his Daughter, the Princels Mary Sophia in Marriage, for the King his Master. At the same time, in complyance to the Request of the King of Portugal, a Squadron of Men of War was fitted out in England, and failed under the command of the Duke of Grafton to Rotterdam, there to take aboard the new Queen, and conduct her to Lisbon. On the 8th. of July, the Ceremony of the Marriage was performed at Heydelberg, on the 10th. the Queen set out on her Journey towards Rotterdam, on the 27th. she went aboard the English Squadron, at the Briel, and on The Peter the 11th. of August, arrived in the River of Lisbon. That fame day the King went aboard to receive the Queen, the Princess and conducted her ashore, where the Marriage was confummated the same Night. The exact Neutrality which Portugal has observed during the late Wars, which have hatraffed and exhausted the greatest part of Europe, is the cause there is nothing worthy our Observation to add relating to that Kingdom. Only this may be obferved, that as the War has impoverished other States, fo they by continuing in Peace, have vastly enriched themselves, and so improved their Maritime Strength, that they have at this Present, near 100 Sea-Men, for one they had 20 Years ago, for now they Trade in their own Vessels to all parts of Europe, whereas at that time, all their Commodities were transported upon Forreign Bottoms. And moreover their own particular Trade to their Plantations in America, and to India is vaftly augmented. Such are the Fruits of Peace, especially when other Nations fink under the Calamities of War. To conclude, there remains nothing more, but to set down the Royal Issue of Portugal. The Present King Peter II. on the 11th. of August, 1687. as was said before, marryed Mary Sophia, Princels of Newburg. He had iffue by her, first John, born in 1689, and dyed the same Year. Secondly, another John, born in 1690. Thirdly, Francis born, 1691. Fourthly, Louisa, born in 1694. And laitly, Emanuel born in 1697.

FINIS.

An Alphabetical Table, containing the Principal Matters in this History.

Α.

	•
A Bidis exposed, brought to Court, teaches the Peryoke Oxen, Plow and Sow,	opic to yoke Oxen, Plow and Sow,	page 13
He Reigns.	h. rdi
Actions of the Lusitanians in Africk.	p. 31
Actions in the Province of Alenteio.	p. 426
Actions of John Fernandez Vieyra in Brazil against the	Dutch,
	p. 420
Actions in the Province of Beira, P. 4339	ind 468
Actions betwixt the Rivers Duero and Minho,	P• 439
Actions in Africk,	p. 305
An account of the Pertuguese Conquests in India.	p. 319
Adrian the Emperour.	p. 78
Affairs of America.	P. 425
Of Caffile.	p. 290
Of Africk and India.	p.438
Of India.	P. 47 3
Africans invading Spain destroyed.	p. 104
Africk and India.	P. 452
L. Agnes de Castro cruelly murdered.	p. 228
Alans and Suevians in Lufitanta.	p. 83
Albertus the Cardinal, Governour of Portugal.	p. 367
Alcazer and Tangier on the Coast of Africk taken.	p. 287
Alliances in Africk and Asia.	P. 413
Almanzor again makes great Spoil.	b. 132
K. Alonso the I. of Leon successful against the Infidels	. p. 114
K. Alonso the II. of Leon called the Chaste. His Co	onquerus.
	p. 117
K. Alonso the III. of Leon, called the Great.	p. 122
King Alms the IV. of Leon, refigns the Governme	nt to his Brother Ramiro. He repents and raifes War.	p. 127
K. Alonfo the V. of Leon, under tuition. p. 137 Is flair	1. p. 139
	King

Inc Indic.
Moors. After his Brothers Death returns, and ved by the People as their King.	on of the is recei-
His Wives and Iffue.	= •
	P. 149
K. Alonfo the I. of Portugal, his Birth.	P. 158
He Knights himself. Besieges his Mother, takes her into Irons.	P. 159
Being himself besieged by King Alonso of Castile,	he articles for his Deliverance, and breaks his Fairt	i. Wars with the Moora Then with Castile.	P. 160
Is faluted King.	p. 162
Defeats the King of Castile.	p. 163
Takes Lisbon. Particulars of the Siege.	p. 165
Overthrows the Moors with a handful of Men. Ano
Exploit of his.	P. 166
Wars with Leon.	-
Doing now as disky breaks his Too Cifiling his	p. 167
Being put to flight breaks his Leg, fulfilling his	Motners Curse when he put Fetters upon her. Besieged	i in Santarem by the Moors, sallies out, and descats them
His Death.	P. 172
His Armes, Wife and Issue.	p. 173
K. Alonfo the IId. of Portugal his Birth.	p. 180
He attacks the Towns given by his Father to his Sif routed by the King of Leon.	p. 181
Recovering, defeats the Army of Leon. Is reconcil Brethren.	_
	p. 182
Laws enacted by him.	p. 183
His Death, Wife and Issue.	p. 184
K. Alonfo the III. his Birth and Actions, till his Ass	nubtion to the Crown.	p. 192
He is received as Regent. Puts away his Wife and	marries another.	p. 193
Conquers Algarve.	p. 194
His Cruelty towards his lawful Wife.	p. 196
Resumes his former Gifts, and opposes the Clergy.	p. 198
His Description, Death and Issue.	-
His Arms, Men famous in his time.	.p. 199
Along the IV mhells addited to his Diegens	p. 200
R. Alonso the IV. wholly addicted to his Pleasure.	p. 219
At variance with his Bastard Brother.	Ibid.
Marries his Daughter to the King of Caffile.	p. 220
Enters Castile with an Army.	P. 225
Aids the Castilians against the Moors in Person.	. 226
The two Kings overthrow the Infidels.	p. 227
His eldest Son privately marries the Lady Agnes d
, , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , ,	p. 228
His Death, Wife and Issue.	p. 229
His Arms.	p. 230
	F. +30

King Alonfo the V. his Birth. His accession to the Cro	wii, and
Tides and hereixt the Unicen and Nobility	V. #79
at marine the Pegents Daughter. 12kes 1100n l	aim the Government, and confirms all that had been done	my the
Regent.	V. +05
Takes Alcazer on the Coast of Africk.	P. 287
Takes Amile and Tangier Changes his Hilles	p. 289
Wages War with Caffile, in defence of the rightful	Heinels.
Mages wat with onlying to	p. 290
Profecutes the War.	p. 29#
Sails into France.	p. 294
Resolves to end his days at Hierusalem.	P. 196
His Death.	p. 497
His Issue and Discoveries during his Reign.	p. 298
K. Alon so the VI. takes upon him the Government.	p. 500
The source of his Missorrunes.	p. 529
Slanders cast upon him.	P. 433
Resolves to take upon him the Government.	p. 538
Those that affronted him in the person of Coati B	anished
wasten dange office and an arrange of a	p. 54E
He grows more loose in his Life.	P. 542
A Match concluded for him.	P. 545
He offers the Infante satisfaction.	p. '552
Fearing the Faction offers to compound with the	Infante.
•	P. 553
Is in great perplexity.	P. 59$
Betrayed by his Queen. Makes choice of Antony	de Souja
de Macedo, in the place of Castelmelbor.	p. 550
Is abandoned by all Men.	P. 599
Forced by his Enemies to call the affembly of the	ne States
Designs to fly to the Army, but is prevented by his	Brotner
	p. 500
Resolutely desires to resign the Crown.	p. 562
Is sent Prisoner to the Island Tercera. Brought	back and confined to the Castle of Cintra.	p. 566
His Death.	p. 569
P. Alonso marries Elizabeth Daughter to the K. and	e or ca-
Hile and Aragon.	p. 300
He is kill'd by a fall from his Horse,	p. 307
Alonso Son to K. Edward I. that had the Title of I
Portugal.	p. 275
An incredible Relation.	p. 131
An Astrological Prediction.	p. 275 p. 78
Antonius Pius Emperour.	his Cka-
D. Antony de Ataide Favourite to K. John the III.
racter. Autony de Sousa, and Emanuel Antunez, the remainin	p. 331 o Friends of the King forced to Hy	P. 559 of the King, forced to fly,	Anto-221144

Antony the Baffard, declared Protector by the Rabble His Birth and Education. He enters Lisbon, and	. p.356
ted King	D. 257
His Army routed. He is forced to fly and ablcot	ıd. p.360
He arrives at the Terzeras With a ricct from France	e. p.361
His Fleet destroyed by the Spaniards.	p. 362
He flies into England.	p. 363
Dyes in France.	p. 364
Arian Herefie first spread in Lusitania.	p. 92
Arms of Porto.	P- 34
Artilius again overthrows the Lusitanians.	p. 31
Augustus Casar comes into Spain.	p . 69
Is acknowledged Emperour of the World, and	temples erected to him.	P. 70
Azamor on the coast of Africk submits to the King of	Pertugal.
and miner on the court of the	p. 303
ts taken by force.	p. 323
-

B.

Abel-Tower built.	p. 3
Bacchus in Spain.	p. 11
Badajoz Besieged.	P. 497
Baia recovered.	P. 379
Barbarities of the Rebellions Rabble.	p. 255
Barbarous Sacrifice.	p. 17
Battle betwixt two Kings.	p. 292
Betwixt private Men and their Forces	p. 199
Of Ourique and Resections upon it.	p. 162
Of Elvas. Spaniards defeated.	P. 499
Of Evora.	P. 514
Of Montesclaros.	P. 524
Beatrix Daughter to K. Emanael marryed to the Dul	e of Savoy.	p. 326
Bemoy an African Prince flies into Portugal. Is murd	lered by
Peter Vaz da Cunha.	p. 305
K. Bermudo advanced to the Throne, overthrows th	c Moors.
He refigns the Crown.	p. 117
K. Bermudo the II. lobses many places, and is routed	by Al-
manzor.	p. 134
K. Bermudo the III. succeeds.	p. 140
Betwe the VI. King of Spain.	p. 5
Birth of our Saviour.	p. 71
Of King Emanuel's fourth and fifth Sous.	p. 320
Of Camaen the great Portuguese Poet.	p. 32 t
An ammen are Breas a street At a street	Qí

Of King John's Son Peter now reigning.	P. 446
Of the Infanta, Mary Frances.	D. 567
Bishop of Lamego going Ambassador to Rome, take	n by the
Spaniards.	P. 402
Blanch Divorced from the Prince.	p. 221
Body of Spanish Horse Routed.	P. 521
Begud the African ravages the Coasts.	p. 65
Both fides cease from Hossilities.	P. 434
D. of Braganza Beheaded for High-Treason.	p. 301
Brigus IV. King of Spain.	P. 4
Brutus the Consul takes the City Lacobrica, and dest	TOYS CHE
Countrey about Braga.	p. 42
He destroys near 60000 Galicians, Conquers Lustra
Galicia and Triumphs at Rome.	P· 43
C.
Acus chosen General.	p. 12
Cadiz Assaulted by the English.	p. 380
Cafar comes into Luftania.	P- 57
Subdues the Herminij, and routs a vast multitude.	P.58
His remaining Actions in Spain.	P. 59
He returns, and expels Pompe,'s party.	p. 62
Overthrows young Pompey at Munda.	p. 63
Conquers the Lusitanians and setting Peace at Bejasci
City Pax Julia.	p. 65
Cains Caligula Emperor.	P. 74
Carthaginians come to relieve the Phanicians.	p. 15
They are defeated.	b" 19
Expelled by the Romans.	p. 26
M. of Caracena General of the Spaniards.	p. 521
Befreges Villaviciofa.	P. 522
	P. 517
Advances to relieve Villaviciofa.	P. 523
Caffile separates from Leon and erects a Governmen	p. 126
two Judges.	p. 253
Castilians enter Portugal. C. Castelmelbor succeeds in the King's savour.	p. 538
He rifes.	P. 540
His Brother favourite to the Infante.	P. 544
He withdraws from Court.	P. 555
Catherine Infanta of Pertugal married to King Charles	II. of England.	P. 502
Celta settle in Portugal.	p. 14
Ceffation of Arms betwixe Spain and Portugal for three	Years.
	p. 267
With the Dutch.	P. 403
Charity of the Spaniards to the distressed Portugueses.	P- 277
Charles V. the Emperor marries Elizabeth, Sister to	K. John
III.	p. 332
K Charles I. of England, then Prince of Wales, in Spain	p.376
P P	hindaju.

The Table,

2.55 2.55
Chindasuindus possesses himself of the Kingdom by force	.p. 100
K. Chinila holds two Synods.	p. 100
	p. 346
Christian Dominions in Spain divided betwixt the two	sons of
K. Alonfo.	p. 123
Church feeled	p. 80
Church of Sr. James the Apostle in Galicia Dedicated,	p.123
Cincinnatus succeeds Casar.	p. 60
City Braga founded by the Carthaginians.	p. 19
City Mirtiry built by the Tyrians.	p. 21
Civil Broils.	p. 132
Civil War in Portugal.	p. 282
Citadel taken from the Spaniards.	P- 397
Conspirators incense the People against the Spaniards	p. 392
Resolve to put their designs in Execution.	p. 387
Meet and execute their defign.	P. 395
Their Deputies confer with the Duke at Almada.	p. 388
Claudius and Aurelianus Emperors.	p. 80
Claudius and Nero Emperors.	P. 75
Clergy joyns in Rebellion with the Laity.	p. 189
Cneus and Sextus the two Sons of Pompey in Spain.	p. 62.
Coimbra taken by the Advice and Affiliance of the M
	p. 144
Lorvan. Columbus after discovering America arrives at Lisbon.	p. 308
Combat betwire two Women.	p.267
Common complaints when subjects will rebel.	p. 186
Complaints made to the Pope and all things adjusted
	p.381
Condition of Portugal. Confiderable Iofles of the Portuguese in India.	p.485
Conspiracy against the King of castile, discovered.	p.258
Against the Protector.	p. 261
Against the Notetton. Against the New King John.	p. 403
To seize Cartagena.	p. 416
Against King Alonso VI.	P. 544
	p. 80
Constantine the Great. Conti seized by the faction and sent to Brazil.	p. 536
Is recalled from Brazil, but Banished the Court,
	p. 543
Meets the King. * Conversion of Lusitanians from Arianism.	P. 94
Corocota a famous Robber.	P. 71
Corres meet, and instead of settling Peace widen the Corres inect, and initial of ictoms react wider the	p. 280
Meet again. p. 415, 436,
	p. 83
First Council of Braga. Council and magistrates of Lisbon combine with the Connent and makinitates of with combine with the	P. 553
Counterfeits personate King Sebasilan. p. 348	367
	P. 452
Count S. Lorerco his Actions in Alentejo.	p.452
Crassus destroys near 40000 Spaniards.	Croisade
	e rughac

Croifade brought into Portugal.	p. 287
Customs of the Inhabitants.	p. 17
Each of Prince Philip, the Empress, and others.	p. 333
Debates about proclaiming the Protector.	P.26 E marries
Elizabeth, Daughter of Peter, King of Aragon.	p.209
Has differences with his Brother Alongo.	p. 210
Enters Caffile the second time. Is chosen mediator betwire the King of Caffile	p.211
Hwful Heir then banished.	p.213
An unjust sentence given by him against the right	ful Heir.
	P.214
He is at variance with his Son.	p.215
His structured and other Works. His Wife and Issue.	p, 217
Benis Son to R. Peter enters Portugal with an Army.	p.218
Defign to murder K. John.	p. 441
Differences betwixt Castile and Portugal, composed	by the
Pope.	p. 195
In the Cortes about ransoming Prince Ferdinand.	p.278
Adjusted. • Discoveries in North America.	p.568
Dolabella again subdues the Lusitanians.	p. 319 p. 44
Double Treachery.	p.484
Duke de Alva with the Spanish Forces draws near to
He passes the River Tagus.	p. 358
The Forts upon the River taken by him.	P-359 te Gene-
Duke of Lancaster invited by the Portuguese, Lands i	p·364 n Galicia
with 2000 Horse and 3000 Archers.	p.26g
He meets K. John. P. Henry of Castile marries hi
ter.	p. 26 6
Duke of Medina Sidonia being suspected in Spain, C	hallenges
K. John.	p. 408
Dutch contrary to Faith given, take several places	P. 425
In Brazil receive succours.	p.437
Beaten out of Angola in Africk.	P-449
Prepare to make War upon Portugal,	P-454
In Brazil	P. 370
They take the Capital City called Baja.	P. 377 P. 378
Other Actions of theirs after taking Baja.	F-5/4
E.	e and ane
Arthquakes. Earthquakes, Inundations, and Storms, for 8 ye	7, and 332
Ecliple of the Sun.	P. 245
P p 2	K

R. Edw. holds a Parliament. His Expedition to Tangier	.p.276
He dies of the Plague.	p. 278
His iffue.	P.279
P. Edward his Birth.	D.274
P.Edw. contracted to Ellenor Sifter to Alonfo, K. of Arago
Edward Brother to K. John IV.	P-435
Effects of love.	p. 142
Egica King.	p.106
Q. Elizabeth's provocations, and K. Philip's design	againft
her.	p. 369
Ellenor II. Daughter to King Alonfo, married to Peter
Aragon.	p. 227
Q. Ellenor flies to Caffile.	p. 256
Princes Ellenor contracted to the Emperor Frederick
Rincers Buenor contracted to the Emperor Frenchted	p.286
Thus and other places delivered on K. Philip	p. 356
Elvas and other places delivered to K. Philip. K. Emanuel his Birth and descent. He is proclaimed Kin Marries Elizabeth Widow of the late Prince Alonfo.
Then Mentine the Siden of his left Queen Sends fi	p.315
Then Marries the Sifter of his last Queen. Sends si	p.316 to the Venetians against the Turks.
Founds the Monastery of Belem.	P-317
His Queen delivered of a Son.	p.318
He receives the Order of the Garter from K. Hen	y VIII.
of England.
Punishes his Lord Steward for his Cruelty to a Serv
	p. 322
His Eighth Son Born.	p. 323
Birth of his Tenth Child, and Death of his Queen.
He Marries again.	P.325
His Death. His Structures and other Works.	p. 327
His Wives and Islue.	p. 328
Embassadors sent to all Courts of Europe.	p. 401
Embassadors of Castile sent away without Answer.	p.281
Emerita Augusta, now Merida, Founded by Augustus.	p. 69
Endeavours used for obtaining of Bishops, but in vain	P.470
Endeca Usurps the Crown of Portugal.	p. 96
He is Deposed and shorn a Monk, by Leovigildus the	c Goth.
· -	P. 97
Engagements by Sea. p. 172, a	nd 337
English and Portugueses take Towns in Castile.	p. 248
Enterprizes on the Frontiers of Alentejo.	p. 462
C. Ericeira succeeds D. Roderick de Castro in the Gover	rnment
ot Tangier.	p. 489
Ervigius sücceeds Wamba.	p. 105
His Actions.	p. 106
Exploits in India.	P. 342
F.
Abius Maximus defeats the Spanish Army, and kill	Curius their General.
Fitcis Activitate	р 38 Fabu -
	A HUM"

= 170 = NV100
Fabulous's relation.	p. 161
Faction levelled against the Favourite.	P.551
Faithless proceedings of the Dutch in Brazil.	p. 429
Falle Sebastian executed.	p. 368
Famine in Portugal.	p. 318
Famous Battle of Aljubarata.	P.263
The Account given of it by the Spanish Historians.	p.264
Favila succeeds Pelagius.	p. 1:4
K. Ferdinand of Navarre, kills K. Bermudo, and becor	ne fole
Monarch of Castile, Leon, Portugal, Galicia, and I	Tanarre:
Monaton of Chine, wond I amagar Canteta, and I	p. 141
He is called the Great. His Conquests over the Infide Dying, divides his Dominions.
	P.145
Ferdinand King of Portugal, his Birth. He engages in gainst Caftile.	p. 236
Enters into League with the Moorish King of Granad	a. p.237
Marries the Lady Ellenor divorced from her Husban	d.p.241
Joyns in League with John of Gaunt against Castile.	p. 242
Enters into League with the King of Castile against Aragon.	D. 244
Underhand treats with the Dukes of Lancaster and	Y∍rk, a= bout subduing Castile.	p. 245
After the Peace he again submits to the Antipope.	P. 249
He falls fick.	P. 250
He dies. His Character, and Issue.	P. 251
Fifteen Thousand Spaniards slain by Mummius.	p.30
Five persons appointed to govern after the Death of the	re King.
and Cardinal Henry; the same to decide the Cont	roversie concerning the fuccession.	p. 352
They rule Portugal.	P. 354
Flavius Gundemarus Reigns.	p. 99
Flavius Suintila Reigns. He utterly expels the Roman
Fleet of Castile worsted by the Portugueses.	p. 211
Fleet of Castile ravages the Coast,	p. 248
Fleet of French at Porto.	p. 163 Fleet of English, French, and Flemmings, in the River of rice of English tenon, and a seminary, in the server of	p. 164
Fleet sent against the Dutch.	-
Forces of Caffile Overthrown by those of Portugal.	P. 377
Foreign Alliances concluded.	p. 146
Fort S. George on the Coasts of Africk.	p. 410
Francis Barreto prosecutes the War in Brazil.	p. 300
His further Actions in Brazil.	P.465
	P. 470
He bolds the Dutch close Besieged in Brazil.	P. 476
Turns his blockade at Arrecife into a formal Siege.	P.480
Francis de Lucena the Secretary put to Death upon ac
a supposed Conspiracy.	P. 419
Froila a Portuguese Count, rebels. His submission.	b.132
K. Fruela kills 60000 Moors.	p 115
P p 3	Fruela

The Table.
Fruela II. Usurps the Crown.	p. 126
Fulvius overthrows the Spaniards,	P.29
Funeral Pomp of the Lady Agnes de Castro.	P. 232
Further Discoveries in Guinea.	P. 307
G.	E. S.
Alba governs the Province.	p.32
Galba Emperor.	p.76
Galicians overun the most part of Lusitania.	p. 66
Galienus Emperor.	D.70
Garzia has for his part Galicia, and the North of Por	sugal.
Mark Control of Mark	P. 124
Gargoris finds the use of Honey.	p. 12
Gascons come into Portugal and assist the Christians.	p. 136
General Council.	p. 276
Gerion comes into Portugal.	P. 5
He becomes King. Introduces Idolatry. S. German Duke Besieges Olivenca.	P. 6
Goa Besseged by the Indians. The Siege raised.	P. 492
Gonzalo Hermigues his Actions.	P- 57 L
Gubs who they were.	p. 169
They enter Spain.	p.82
Great and bloody Battle.	P.85
Dearths and Scorms.	p.111 p.20
Famine.	P-177
Fleer from Lisban for the Conquest of Centa.	P-27 I
Floods, Storms, and Sickness in Spain.	p.65
Preparations in Spain and Portugal.	P-422
Guimaraens betrayed to the New King.	p.262
н.	- /
Hannibal fettles in Spain. Marches into Italy.	D. 22
Hannibal lettles in Spain.	p. 23
Marches into Italy.	2 - 7
Henry the Count, marries the Bastard Daughter of K	ing Alon-fo of Castile. Opinions concerning him.	p. 149
His Original of Burgundy.	p. 151
His coming into Portugal. He gains the Affection	P. 153
MISTIGN WILL HATTIES HIS ABOT. HE talee to this of
THIS MAIN A MAILENA DAUGHLES AND DAY IN HOUSE .	he Ciev
TOLOG MEET TO TOTALINE A
Overthrows the Infidels, and takes Almanzor Prifor	non lie his good Services, receives other Territories of Kin	g Alonfo.
	p. 155
Another Overthrow given by him to the Moors.	A 34
if King reftored by him. He performs other great	Actions.
His Death, Character and Issue,	p. 150
Henry K. of Caftile in Fortugal.	P. 157
Ad a second said and a second said	p. 238

He invades Portugal.	p. 242
Quarters in the Suburbs of Lisbon.	p. 243
Henry Prince of Portugal marries Blanch Annt, to the	King of
Caltile.	p. 220
He contracts with the Lady Constance, Daughten to	10. John 12. 1
Emanuel. Henry the Cardinal Regent.	p. 221
His Birth. He is declared Protector, and crowned Ki
His Death. His Eulogy.	P. 353
Henry Son to the King of Congo, comes into Portuge	al. p. 222
Hercules governs Spain, and leaves the Crown to Hefpe	rus p. 10
Hercules the Theban in Spain, everthrows Cacus.	p. 12
Hesperus deposed, and Atlas set up in his place.	b. ro
Hostilius Mancinus overthrows 30000 Spaniards.	P. 37
How things flood in Africk and India.	P. 444
Hypocrific of a Nun.	p. 367
I.
C. James the Apostle in Spain.	P. 74
D. James de Lima Governor of the Province	pstwixe
Duero and Minbo.	P. 453
Therus II. King of Spain.	p. 4
Jews conspire against the King, and are punished.	p. 106
Fly our of Castile into Portugal.	p. 304
Banished the Kingdom.	P. 314
Ingratitude of certain Gentlemen.	p. 350
Inhuman Murder.	p. 140
Infolent Words of the Marquess de Cascais to the Kin	p. 11 •
Interregnum of an Hundred Years.
John, Bastard Son to K. Peter, aspires to the Crown Before assuming the Crown, he murders Count J.	obn Fer-
Defore antiquing the Clown, he markets country	p. 253
nandez Andeyre. He is declared Protector of the Kingdom,	p. 254
The Castle of Lisbon taken by him.	p. 255
His Contrivances to usurp the Crown.	p. 256
He fails Sick.	p. 272
He dyes, his Character, Wife and Islue.	p. 273
His Arms, discoveries in his time.	p. 274
Nic Wageral	p. 275
John II. proclaimed King, his Father arrives 4 days after	er.p.290
His Birch.	p. 299
He is again proclaimed King.	p. 300
Stiles himself Lord of Guinea.	b. 303
Is poyloned. His Death.	p. 309
Is reputed a Saint, his Virtues.	p. 311
More of his good Qualities. His Islue, Discoveries during his Reign.	p. 312
John the III. King, his Birth.	p. 329
The in proclaimed KINO	D. 330
Marries Catherine Siffer to the Emperour Cb. the	7. p.331
P P 4	Sends

The Fadic.	2 700 2 700000
Sends Succors to the Emperour. p. 333 Ordinances	Lusitanians revolt, and are reduced. p. 44
made by him. p. 335 He dies. p. 338	Lusus ascends the Throne. p. 19
	M.
Actions abroad during his Reign. 7. Actions abroad during his Reign. 7. Actions abroad during his Reign.
John the IV proclaimed King in India. He rewards those that suffered for the Conspiracy at Car-	Agellan discovers the streights of his Name. p. 325 Manner of lamenting the death of a King. p. 174
	Many places in Portug, taken and defiroyed by the Moors.p. 133
thagena, p. 420 His last Sickness and Death, p. 489	Many places in Portag. taxetratic demoyed by the history, p. 133
His Wise and Issue, p. 490	Recovered. p. 137 Marcus Aurelius Emperour. p. 79
John Prince of Portugal, privately marries Mary, Sifter to Q.	Margaret of Savoy, Dutchel's of Mantua, governs Portugal.
Elenor. p.244 He murders her. p. 245	D. 388
John Prince of Portugal, marries Joanna Daughter to Charles	Mary Francis Blizabeth, Wife to King Alonfo the VI. affifts
the V. He dies. His Princess delivered of a Son. p. 336	the Infante. P. 554
D. John of Austria with the Spanish Army, invades Portugal.	Motives of her aversion to the King. P. 549
Takes Aronches. p. 501 Takes Alconchel. p. 502	Her undecent Behaviour towards the King. p. 557
Barns and plunders the Country. p. 503	Knowing the King would be deposed, she flies to a Mo-
Takes Villabuim and Borba. Besieges Jurumenba. p. 504	nastery, p. 560
Takes Jurumenha. p. 506 Enters Crato. p. 507 Comes	She preffes to have Peter declared King, p. 563
again into Portugal with an Army of 21000 Men. p.509	Her Marriage with the King declared null, p. 564
Besieges Evora.p.510 Evora is delivered to him. p.511	Her Death, p. 571
Marches out of Evora to give the Portugueses Bartle, p. 512	A match concluded betwixt the Infante and D. of Savoy, p. 568
Is defeated. Attempts Elvas, and is repulsed. p. 515	It is broke off. p. 369
Mands of Bayona in Galicia.	Mauregatus the Bastard usurps the Crown. p. 116
Jubelus III. King of Spain. P. 4	Mauritanians ravage Spain. p. 79
Julian the Count Favourite to King Roderick. p. 108	Maximin Emperour: p. 79
Is sent Ambassador into Africk. p. 109	Means proposed to reconcile different pretensions: p. 351
Meditates Revenge. Brings the Moors into Spain. p. 110	Meeting at Lisbon about K. Ferdinands Marriage. p. 241
K.	Men famous for Learning.
Ings of the Alans and Suevians. Ring of Castile obstructs the Marriage of the Lady	Mezerbal subdues Portugal. P. 17
King of Caltile obstructs the Marriage of the Lady	Michael Prince sworn Heir of Castile, Aragon & Portugal, p.315
Constance. p. 222	He dyes.
King of Castile marries the Daughter of K. Ferdinand. p. 249	Military Action in the Province of Tralofmontes. p. 413
King of Castile invades Portugal, Is at variance with Queen	Monks of Claraval come into Portugal. p. 159
Ellenor. P. 257	Monte Mayor taken and demolished. P. 145
Kings of France and Portugal meet. p. 294	Moors to the Number of 200000 Foot, and 40000 Horse lan-
King of Spain's Favourite disgraced. p. 421	ded in Spain. p.111 They over-run all Spain. p. 112
King bent upon publick Rejoycing for Peace. p. 270	Ravage the Country, p. 177 Vanquished at Elvas. p. 183
Kingdom of the Suevians united under Remismundus. p 91	Morificoes banished Spain. d. 372
1	Morocco King Hain. P. 347
Foreigildus the Goth wars upon his Son Herminigildus, on	Moron furrendred: p. 494
Account of Delining	Mountainous People descend into the Plain. p. 12
He persecutes the Catholicks, but dies one himself. p. 97	Murderers fly to Castile. p.229 They are racked. p. 231
D Tamés de la c	Mutiny at Lisbon for the loss of Evera. p. 512
	On account of a supposed Miracle. p. 320
The Siege maifed	No.
Murinies ar the indigation of the Nalillian	Nabuchodonofar in Spain. P. 15
Plundered by the Spanished	Negotiation abroad.
Most of it harny, no ago life a made wi	At several Courts. p. 441 In Forreign Courts. p. 464
Most of it burnt, p. 243 Listas made King. p. 12 Limini three Sons of Gerian.	in France and Rome. p. 446 Nerva Emperor. p. 77
Lulitania governed by Lieurenanes	E NCW COID.
P 39	New Governors placed in the Frontiers.
Lufita-	New Queen gains Friends by her Generosity. p. 242
	37a - h 2 n

The Table.

p. 40E p. 242 Noah's

Ine I adie.
Notable Example of Loyalty: Number of Infidels, and greatness of Booty. O.	p: 132 p: 132 p. 193 p. 227
Biervations on the Rife and Fall of Portugal. Odémira, Count Governour to the young K. Alonso His manner of proceeding. Of 18000 Men only 50 escapedi Oliva taken by the Portuguese. Only the Duke of Braganza could give the Spaniards je	p. 530 p. 348 p. 478
(Irdono the 1st. King of Castile rebuilds many Towns. overthrown by the Moors. (Irdono the II. K. of Castile succeeds Garcia. He twist throws the Moors. Being vanquished by the Insidels, recovers and specific statements.	p. 382 He is p. 121 ce over- p. 124 oils, the Country. Ordono the III. King of Castile disturbed by Rebels them. p. 130 He takes Lisbon. Ordono, sirnamed the Wicked, advanced to the Crown Orus Libicus, or Hercules comes into Spain, kills the and makes his Son Hispalus King. Osiris comes into Spain, kills Gerion, and gives the Country of the Country o	p. 130 : p.131 Laminij, p. 8 his three Sons. He returns into Egypt. Offuna Duke builds a Fort not far from Almeida, Attacks Castel-Rodrigo, and is repulsed. Is overthrown by Peter Jaques de Magalhaens. Other Conspirators punished.	p. 6 p: 7 p. 515 p. 519 p. 520 p. 302
Other military Actions. Other War like exploits. Otho Emperour. Overtures of Peace rejected. Out-laws furprize Evora.	p. 412 p. 407 p. 76 p. 259 p. 167
P. Particular Affairs of Portugal. Peace after the Birth of Christ. Concluded betwixt the Kings of Castile and Port 212, 230, 243. Confirmed with mutual Alliand Concluded at the instance of the Pope. p. 240.	Conclu-and Spain. p. 500. With Spain. 564 Concluded out the knowledge of the English. p. 249 Conclude p. 266 Not observed. p. 269 At length of p. 269 Ratified.	ed with-
Pelayo, or Pelagius the first that opposed the Moors. People of Braza subdue Porto. Averse to the Queen: p. 281 Of Evera mutiny	p. 68 p. 283 Per -

	•
Perpenna chosen General of the Lustianianes	F- 54
Vanquished by Pompey, and put to Death.	200 A.S.
Perfecution under Galienus:	F2 53
Peter the Ist: King of Pertugal his Birth:	P. 79
Peter the in: ning of ranagar ins buttas	P. 230
Begins his revenge while Prince. p. 229 He	punishes.
the Murderers of the Lady Agnes de Castro. p.
Death, Justice, and Magnanimity. p. 234. L	aws Effablished by him. His Person, and Interment, p.	235. His
Iffue.	p. 236
Peter King of Castile flying from his Rebellious S	ubjects, refused protection in Portugal.	p. 233
Peter the II. now King of Portugal, while Infante at	nd Brother to K: Alonso, counterfeits a Religious Life to g	ain follows
ers. 545 Grows discontented, and the Kin	a hie Brother jestous. Is enraged against Count Caste	lmalbar m im and the
547. Strange thew of Affection betwire h	un and tic
Q. 548: His and the Q. party increases.	ne openia
espouses her quarrel: p. 550 Resolves to p	rocced. p.
556 Heads the Rabble, p. 557 Heads the	winitings again. Sets upon the K, and extorts from him	an infiriiment of Relignation, 562 Is received as Re	genc, p.563
Marries the Queen, p. 565 Upon the D	eath of his Brother succeeds in the Throne, d. 571	Marries the
Princess of Newburg.	P. 572
Peter. Baffard Brother to K. Alaska the first of Day	COLUMN THE
Peter the Infante made Regent, by a Cooper and	d a Taxior heads the Rabble.	p. 282
Takes up Arms and is declared Rebel, 284	Omes to a Battle with the King. And is killed.
Philip Prince of Spain, marries Mary Princels of Por	p. 285
Philip the II. of Spain, and first of Portugal, arme	engany,334
the Crown of Partied while they proved	es to lecure
the Crown of Portugal, whilst they prepare him.
	P. 355
His Birth, 364 He enters Portugal. Grants at	1 Ambelly,
Holds a Parliament, 365 Grants Priviled	ges to Porta-
gal. His publick entry into Lisbon, p. 366	Holds another variament, Keturns to Caffile, p. 269	He dyes,
P: 370 His Description, Wife and Isine.	D. 271
Philip the III. of Spain and II. of Portugal his piref	L He comes Into Portugal, His Reception, D. 272. He hold	s a Parliament, His itay and return to Madrid, p. 274	His dearli.
Wife and filue.	n 234
Philip the IV. of Spain, and III. of Portugal, his Bi	rth no and
His accession to the Crown. p. 376 Rewards	the Partuguese, p. 380 His Death.	D: #0/#
Pinto the D. Agent conspires with some of the No	P: 527
Piso kills 5000 Lustanians,
Plague.	p. 56
	p: 228
At Lisbon, ps 277, 301. 353: In Portugal,	pr 306 in
Lisbon where the Queen dyes of it,	P. 270
	Pompey
- 1	,

The Table.	The Table.
Pompey fubdues many places,	Of the War in the Province of Alentejo, p.412 Of the Portuguese Arms in Brazil, p.456
Pope Alexander grants the Inveftiture of the Kingdom of Por- tugal to Alonfo under a Tribute, pr 171	Bunfacution of the TTP in Du Cl Protection of the war in Braju. Protector proclaimed King. P.442
Porto rebuilt, Its Armes, p. 84 Portugal, how divided by Augustus, p. 71	O C. C.
Governed by Commissioners, p. 370	Ucen Luifa prepares to invade Castile.p.494 Her Am
Portuguese Fleet wastes the Island of Cadiz, p. 240	Oucen Luja prepares to invade Cajtile.p.494 Her Ambition. p.432. She fets up Peter the Infante against
Portuguese Army destroyed by the Moors, and the King's	King Alonfo.p. 537 The Councel combines with her. p. 536
Standard taken, p. 277	She is forced to refign the Government. Pretends to retire.
Portuguefe Ambassadors Brother beheaded for a Murther in England,	but stays at Court in hopes to wrest the Power from her Son
Bentumas & American annual	Pi 537
Portuguese General endeavours to draw away the Spanish Army	She, the Infante, and their party hold Consultations against from Olivenca, by giving a diversion. D. 492	the K.She is at last forced to retire.p. 542 Her Death.p. 546
Portug. Army lays fiege to Fort S. Chriftoph: near Badaioz. D. Act	R.
Portuguese Horse under Count Schombergh routed near Badajoz,	R Amire I. King of Leon, his Actions. p. 119
P. 501	Ramiro II. of Castile and Leon, destroys a great Army of Insidels.
Portuguese Colony at Rio de la Plata in America, destroyed by the Spaniards.	Ramiro III. Succeeds under the tuition of his Mother, and
Portug: Fleet all but one Galley taken by the Castilians. p.246	Aunt. p.132
Double and A and a Callen and S.	Rebels feize the Queen.
Not being admitted, returns home. p.409 p.422	Recaredus succeeds. He becomes a Catholick. p. 97 He dies, p. 98
Portuguese Army in Estremadura. p.423	Kemarks upon the number eight.
Portuguese Affairs at Rome. p.434	Upon some conceits of the Portuguese Authors. p.152
Portuguese Fleet flips up the River to Lisbon. p.259	Remissionalus marries the Daughter of Theodoricus. p.92
Portuguese Nobility insult their King on account of his Favou-	Ricciarius his Reign. P.88 He is overthrown by Theodoricus, King of the Goths. His end.
Portugueses attempting Barcarota repulsed with loss. p. 146 p. 491	p.89
Portugueses attempting Barcarota repulled with lois. p. 491 Portugueses ravage the Frontiers of Estremadura. The same in	Richila makes himfelf mafter of Lufitania and Andaluzia. p.88
the Province of Beira. They take Codiffera. p.431	Robert Labril and Richard Cambil English men, with a Fleet
They attempt Badajoz. p. A22	or 03 Snips, arrive at Lisbon, and affift the Portugueles a-
Preamble to the Conclusion. p.529	gainit the Moors.
Presents of the first fruits of India sent to the Pope. p, 2113	Roderick last King of the Goths. p.108
Prime Ministers of Spain resolve to draw the Duke out of	He ravishes Florinda the Daughter of Count Julian. p.109
Portugal. Princes Brings and Maurice fly no Links from the Karliff.	His Army of 120000 Foot and 10000 Horle. p.111 Roderick de Alencastre descats a Party of Moors at Tangier. p.477 are protected	Acaerice at Bivar commonly called Cid. his Right not an
They put to Sea with a Portuguele Squadron, and return	Roderick de Cajtro in the Province of Beira.
withour fighting. P.459	p. 25 Deteated by the Spant-
Prince proceeds in his disobedience. p. 216	ards. p.27 Twice defeated. p.28
Prince marches off with the scattered Army. p.293	Romantick Story of King Ramiro. Rout of the Christians. P.347
Princess governs Spain. p. 337	P.347
Principal Conspirators seized and punished. p.405	S.
Priscilian the Heretick Condemned. Proceedings ordered to run in the name of D. John of Portu-	Saguntum destroyed.
gal. p. 397	Sancho I. of Calife an Hurper called the Kin Royans and Sancho I. of Castile an Usurper called the Far. Returns and expels Ordono.
Prodigies seen in the Sky. p. 128, 223, 375, 345	Sancho II. overthrows his Brother Garcia and takes him pri-
Produgious Dates.	foner. p. 747
Progress of the Carthaginians in Spain, p. 21	After of the state of th

	The Table.
The Table.	with the state of
After Subduing Portugal, he Conquers Leon and become	Small incurrious in Beira.
fole monarch.	Small incursions in Betra. P.484: B.210:
Sancho I. King of Portugal, succeeds his Father Alonfo. p. 17	Some performs apprehended upon a falle information of their corresponding with Spain. P.479
His Actions under his Patner, p. 174	corresponding with Spain. P-479
To Carrier Plant Culdings Alemen Will	Bowin divided by the Romanta "V-20" adds that Title to Portugal. p. 176 His Death and Mine	Shein and Portueal divide the World betwixt them. P.308
- Printer at Comment of Comments blog Thomas	They gry the Governor of Langier Without Incocis. V.4.17
He entirely defeats the Moors at Elvas, p. 186: His Subjects ripe for Rebellion, tho' he is blameless. They cavil at	They carry off a great Booty. p. 479 They beliege inde sine for Rebellion, tho' he is blameless. They cavil at	Olivenze without success. p.445 Overthrown. p.111
all his Actions. p. 188 He is betrayed by all his mini-	Spanish Army advances to relieve Badajoz. P. 497
Garage Vicar Or William Report Alonio Made Vicar Or Will	Plantin and Lourded rivers give as provide his lab
Ringdom by the Rebels. He flies to Capile. His Death	EXECUTE POLICES DELEGICAL
m 100 His perion deicribed.	Shaula trul at the riomicisor rounding
Sappho the Carthaginian gathers Gold in Spain. P.18	Storms. Strange Action of a jezious Woman. p. 239 p. 197
Schilm in the Church.	The same of the sa
Sebastian King of Portugal his Birth. P.340
His accession to the Crown. Odd Actions of his. P.341
He prepares for an expedition into Africk.
Passes over into Africk. Descats the Moors, and returns to Lisbon. p. 343 Has an interview with the King of Spain makes preparations for a second Voyage into Africk, p. 344	Suevians, Alans, and Selingi, joyn in League against the Ro-
Not to be moved from his resolution. p.345 He and the Nobility embark in a Fleet of 1000 Sail, with 18000 Pand	Suppression of the Knights Templers. p.214, men, they land at Arzila. p.346 His Character.p.34	P.70
Contribute his origin	4
He comes into Iulitania. his Dractices, his Warlike Che	Agus V. King of Spain. P.5
whoire to act the is worthed by Pompry aud meletims. Pier	B. Laking of Santarem. B. 104
Routed by Melenia D. Co. 1 DC Romans Interest State In	in talent bled in Portneal . U.175
fes by him.p. & Is again overthrown by meteries and	Tangier and India. p, 450, 401, 405
Pompey, p. 52 Recovers, and worits the Romans. P.)	Tairalus commands the Luptamans. P.41
Is murdered. P.5
Several people plant new Colonies. Presented
Great Battles, p. 19 Towns founded. p.20 Pretender	Theodoricus having Conquered Spain, puts it under Governors.
to the Crown. p.350 Military expeditions. p.239.40 Persons suffer martyrdom in Japan. p.421 Enterprize	Theodofius Prince of Portugal, made Captain-General of all the
on the Frontiers of Alentejo. p.438 Synods. P.9	Forces in the Kingdom. p.466 He dies. p.475
Carrie Pomber annears again and makes great commotions.	Three Brothers fall at variance.
p.6	Three Spanish Galcons secured in the River of Liston. 2.293
Sham Conspiracy. P.42	Tiberius succeeds Augustus in the Empire. p.74
Sicanus succeeds in the Throne.	O Titus and Domitian. p.75
Sicceleus refions.	Total Ecliple. P.177
Siculus the next King.	Trajan Emperor. p. 77
Sidonians in Spain.	He reduces the Lusitanians revolting. p.78
Signs of our Saviour's Birth in Spain.	Truce for a year.
	Truce not duly observed.
	Tryal of Ordeal in use.
Sif tutus chosen King.

		31
	The Ta	fl _e	* • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •
		W. A. Walley	و کا پوستور
Tubal Lands in Por			/ - P:
He is tiff Li g	of Spane.
Tulga, succeeds.
Tumules against th		7 Page 1
Two great loffes to	gangal.	•	P-300
Two Kings let up	n Enjoiants.	7.	p.9 0
Two Kings meet in	tricualy manne	r.	P-244
Two Synods held b	y Kecejumaus.		p : 101
	V.
T.7 Alencia de Alca	intara taken by t	he Portugues	e Gener.p. 518
V Vasco de Gam	e lent to discove	er India.	D.314
Very fmall matter	of martial explo	its in the ye	ar 1655, p.48 3
Vespasian Emperor.			P.76
Vice Oucen and or	hers feized.		P.396
Villaflor Count and	Portuguese Gene	ral marches	to relieve E-
TOTAL DISTI	Recover	s Evora.	p. 155
Viriatus. his Origina	i, p.33 He i	s worked b	Metelber p.34
Routs Vetilius, d	efeats Plancius,	and overthi	OWS CL. V mma-
##S. D.35	Vorits Nigidius.	D.26 IS	Confer to Le-tire by Fabius E	milianses. p.37	Routs	Popilies and is himself put to fl	ight by Pompey.	p. 38	He again defeats the Romans	, makes Peace wi	th them. I	The Peace Dia-
ken. p.39	He is killed by	1 reachery.	nis runciai
Pemp.	The second second in	rama in Ge	p.40 licia. p.463
Viscount de Villa Par	uca burns two	owns in U	s Ashhed by
Viseo Duke conspire	s against the Ass	Rarne.	p.302
the King himfelf.	• .		D.67
Vitellius Emperor.	i		p. 13
Vlyffes in Portugal.		oy =	24.3
•	W.
TA 7 Amba his i	strange advances	nent to the	Crows. His
Wars in F	rance and Spain.	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	p. IOZ
The Art to the Windows	Subdued by bim	١.	D.103

Wars in France and Spain.

Rebels in France subdued by him.

War betwixt the people of Braga and Porto.

Betwixt Castile and Portugal. p. 250, 224

In the Provinces betwixt Duero and Minbo, and Tarlos Montes.

Prosecuted in Brasil., p. 461

Betwixt the Christian Kings of Stain... p. 140

In India with the Dutch. p. 477

In India unsuccessful to Partugal. p. 482

Proceeds coldly on both sides. p. 474

Renewed with Castile.

Prosecute Usurps.

Wetericus Usurps.

Witise Son to Egica Reigns in Portugal. After his Fathers Death the is Monarch of all Spain. His cruelties.

Y.

Tork Duke arrives at Lisbon with 3000 Men. His Son contracted to the Princess Beatrix.

The End of the Table.